4. THE SCHOOL OF LAW (The L. Q. C. Lamar School of Law). Will open next September in the most beautiful and imposing law building in the United States, and with the best library of any law school in the South. The method of instruction will be what is known as the "Case Method," and the course of study will extend over three years, leading to the degree of LL.B. An able faculty, consisting of men who have won with distinction their law degrees in the greatest law schools of the world, have been engaged. In Atlanta every court known to the American judicial system, except the United States Supreme Court, holds regular sessions. "The Lamar School of Law," therefore, offers unsurpassed advantages for the study of law.

WANTS THE PREACHING SERVICE PRESERVED.

Dear Doctor Meek: Will you allow an old-fashioned Methodist to thank you most heartily for publishing the editorial in the first column, first page, of the Advocate for June 1? As I understand the words spoken, and the thoughts of the Master, as recorded by his companions, and the clear-cut comments of Saint Paul, it seems to me that it is the duty of the pastors to "feed the flock," to "feed my lambs," to "tend my sheep," and how hungry God's children do get for the Bread of Life! Some of my ministerial friends think I am "cranky" for objecting to the use of the 11 o'clock hour for various anniversaries, Easter cantatas, children's services, etc. I feel that I am not different to the plain, ordinary church-goer, and when I leave my comfortable chair on Sabbath morning, it is because I am hungry for the gospel, and thirsty for the water of life. When this is not forthcoming—as is now too often the case—I feel that I have lost something out of life. I have asked bread, and been given a stone!

Doctor Meek, please hammer along that line somewhat harder. The pew is not patient now—it simply stays at home oftener than it should. The pastors do not seem to see the needs of the hour, and do not comply with the requirements of the spirit of the law of the Church.

No objection is offered to "children's day," and other special things, if held at some other hour. But we want a real message at the 11 o'clock hour that will enable us to meet the many strains and struggles of the long, hard week that is before each of us.

With the prayer that the pastors will see the needs of the pew, and meet each demand with the full gospel as proclaimed by the Master himself, I will sign myself, what I really am—

AN OLD-FASHIONED METHODIST.

WINONA DISTRICT NOTES.

Our district conference at Itta Bena, Miss., was a great affair, and the spirit of fervor and enthusiasm was truly an evangelical tonic. Brother Shipman was an ideal host, and his fine people vied with each other in their warm hospitality and gracious treatment of the itinerants and the delegates and visitors to the conference. No district within our knowledge can boast a liner lot of wise, earnest, and efficient laymen in the Lord's work.

Brother Shipman is doing a noble work and putting sunshine and heart into it, which always make a fine combination.

Brownlee has Belzoni by the ear and heart. They are warming on the new church idea and the whole body seems to be a unit for a new brick church of handsome and commodious proportions, not to cost less than ten to twelve thousand dollars. They need such a plant to house the Sunday school and take care of the growing interests in that community.

Brother Mitchell is faithfully and energetically doing a fine work at Indianola. They have recently raised and spent on the parsonage nearly a thousand dollars, which makes it one of the prettiest and most comfortable homes for the pastor to be found in our borders.

Brother Ingram has gone into his new church at Doddsville, which is a beauty and a joy, and was finished at a cost of about $2500. There are only a few people in that little city, but the folks are a whole lot bigger than the town. They do things on a broad scale.

Brother Lagrone, at Drew, and his people have a mutual brotherhood and general warm time co-operating and pushing the Lord's cause in that great country. Now, when things get a little cool and chilly, just go down to Drew and get into the summer heat and evengelical spirit of that town. It will help you to thaw up and feel like a May morning.

Brother Ruff is planning a $10,000 church at Moorhead, and expects to begin construction soon, as such a plan has just about materialized. The parsonage there, which was well-nigh destroyed by fire, has been rebuilt, and is better than it was before. Moorhead is a strategic point and of great importance from the railroad crossings there; it has one of the largest and finest cotton mills in the State in full blast of operation, and, in addition to these and other local interests, there is located in the town the Sunflower County Agricultural High School, which is an attractive proposition of the kind, and brings lots of young people there who need religious help and inspiration in that formative period of their lives. We must have a great church there, and it is soon to be a glorious reality under the leadership of Bob Ruff.

Brother Hall is having his wonted success at Greenwood, preaching to large and interested congregations, and everything is moving with life and enlargement of vision and hope. There is mutual confidence and love between him and his flock, without which there can never be a high score of brotherly reciprocity or efficiency. There are some fine, big men in that great church, and the resources of that congregation, when it is deeply conscious of its power and possibilities, are simply beyond computation.

Rev W. N. Duncan is doing a noble, radical, subsoiling tillage at Winona. His people are in love with him and co-operating with him in a deep, effective effort to save what in our right and God-given power we may save—all of the sources of life and happiness and moral perfection of being.

Our good and fine friend, Dr. J. W. Price, has not recovered yet from his afflictions, but we trust he will continue to improve till he is himself again.

Bishop Murrah transferred G. W. McLain from Sunflower to Lambert, and L. W. Caine was placed in charge of the Sunflower work. Both of these, who have recently gone to their new fields, write encouragingly and hopefully of their outlook and prospects.

Brother W. J. Wood is building faithfully and surely on the Winona Circuit. His people love him cordially, and if they did not, it would be a case for suspicion as to how they are made up.

At Sehlater, Brother E. B. Sharp is leading the battle, and his people are in love with him to a pleasing degree.

I do not think I have ever observed more rapid moral and religious changes in any section of the country than those which have taken place in the Delta. Years ago, when I was fresh from the hill country and the schools, it seemed that there was a vast ignorance and indifference in nearly all the sections of the Delta I knew with regard to the wide-open, outrageous, body-killing, mind-slaying, soul-slaughtering sins and immoralities that ate up the happiness and sunshine and joys of living, and spread darkness and disease and misfortune and shortness of daylight everywhere. Now the people are finding out that the devil is the devil, and that he is black, too. If a man will read and think he will most surely give the devil the slip, for he will get on to his business and see what sort of a devil the devil is. No man that has a pretty good bunch of brains will follow the devil to his own death and utter ruin. No, sir; it is ignorance, or selfishness, or lust, or passion, or avaris, or some other abnormal, noxious, depraved, enervated tendency, taint, or faculty, bereft of healthy, positive potencies and longings, that blind a poor creature to his own needs and best in being.

Mr. Editor, I congratulate you on the strength of your editorials and the fine make up of the old New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 200% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a well known Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: If you were to make an actual blood test of all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In some cases it is worse than foolish to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, may-be at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's digestion upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

REVIVAL AT EPLEY, MISS.

Rev. P. H. Howse, of the McLain charge, has been assisting me in a few days' meeting at Epley. Brother Howse is a strong gospel preacher and one of great spiritual force. He held his congregation, and, in spite of interruptions, they became larger and larger as the days went by. Those who have been serving in this part of the State realize that Methodism has never had a very strong hold at Epley. We received eleven members. They were the most prominent people of the community. God blessed us in our efforts and to him be the glory and the praise. We will be glad to have Brother Howse with us again. The community as a whole was delighted with him and his preaching. While the renumeration for his work was nothing to compare with the value of his work, we feel that it indicated the deep interest of the whole community.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS, P. C.

FROM BROTHER McINTOSH.

Dear Dr. Meek: My helpers and I are here in a revival that promises big things. This city is situated near the Brazos River and is surrounded by as rich country as can be found anywhere in Texas. This is one of the leading places of South Texas and famous for its hot wells. There is no doubt that this mineral water has in it much of curative power. This is called the "Carlsbad of America." Thousands and thousands of people come here every year to be treated for rheumatism, sciatica, catarrh, blood and skin diseases, malaria, and nervous troubles. I see people come here on crutches and in a short time they have laid their supports aside and are walking all over town. Dr. J. W. Torbett, one of the prominent physicians of this place, a splendid Christian gentleman, and a leading Methodist, has a large sanatorium right near the main well and he treats with great success thousands of people annually.

If any of our people suffer with rheumatism or sciatica by all means let them come to Marlin. These baths will do them good. More about the meeting later. Success to the Advocate.

Yours fraternally,
W. M. McINTOSH.

THE ROAD TO HAPPINESS.

Not when we are determined, come what may, to have a pleasant and a happy life; not then, as the reward of that insistence, does God bestow the music of the heart. He gives it when there is forgetfulness of self, and the struggle to be true to what is highest, though the morning break without a glimpse of blue, and the path be through the valley of the shadow. The one sure way to miss the gift of happiness is to rise early and sit up late for it. To be bent at every cost on a good time, is the sure harbinger of dreary days. It is when we have the courage to forget all and to lift up our hearts to do the will of God that, like a swallow flashing from the eaves, happiness glances out with glad surprise.—G. H. Morrison.

FROM A VINE.

On the back porch there is a vine which is giving me much pleasure. From a number of seeds, it alone "came up." But so luxuriant did it become that I have been training the vine and its numerous branches to form a screen clear across the porch. To accomplish this the vine has been forced along a lateral string for many feet. And I am sometimes a little conscience-stricken at this. For every morning I find that vine and branches have left the level string, and tried to climb upward. God teaches everything to struggle toward the light.

The same is true of man. But with man it is more than a beautiful instinct. It is the presence of the Holy Spirit. More than all forms and systems, more than all human preparation and the multiplying of days, we need the indwelling Spirit. Pentecost comes by prayer. Prayer is a preparation of the heart to receive God, and a committal of oneself to God's plans. R. H. H.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

There is a disposition on the part of some to be indifferent to, or superior to, our established forms and the dignity of worship. And they may hurry through with the "preliminaries" (to reach the sermon), and sometimes wound the sensibilities of a congregation, who have come to worship as well as to be instructed.

Any hymn will do. After the manner of the good old brother, who began by saying, "Sing, brethren, sing 'Come Thou Fount,' or 'Alas! and did'—I don't care which;" the first hymn thought of is announced. No wonder there was quite a little adverse criticism of the Hymnal two or more years ago. But it is unwise to condemn something simply because it is little known. From that Hymnal may be brought forth treasures new and old.

Then there is the Order of Worship. Men should have a care how they come into the presence of God. And uniformity is necessary when many worship together. If a form is useful at all, its usefulness is not increased by its mutilation.

As an example of a disposition on the part of some, take the word Amen. Was ever a word used with varied pronunciations? Sometimes the accent is placed upon the first syllable. Sometimes it is Aman, and again, Amon.

Consider also the benediction. Sundry additions are made, as the Father; sweet fellowship; rest and abide; now and forever. Sometimes the minister seems to forget that he is pronouncing a benediction upon the people, for he concludes with the words, "be with us all," instead of, "be with you all." The same liberty is sometimes used in abridging or changing our beautiful Ritual.

It would seem a very simple matter to avoid error by following the plain directions, and also the language, which is none the less clear because it is dignified, chaste and beautiful. R. H. H.

THE POWER OF FAITH.

Faith is the measure of our condition to-day and our hope of the future; for the Master said to the Syro-Phoenician woman, "Great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

So man finds that in himself lies the possibility of all good or all evil. In himself is the making of a man, or the degradation of a being created in the image of God. Persian Omar, perhaps in doubt of the future, wrote:

"I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell:
And by and by my Soul returned to me,
And answered, 'I Myself am Heaven and Hell.'"

Doubting, he wrote: believing, we may form his striking lines into a law of life. In the heart of every man is the making of heaven or hell. Looking downward, his eyes are darkened by shadows of earth. Lifted above, they reflect an image of heaven.

"O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt." These words may not be of universal import in all the relationships of life. There is often a ministry in suffering, and adverse things may come upon the faithful now rather for the furtherance of the gospel. Since the founding of our Republic, scarcely more than a score of men have dwelt in the White House. It is idle to say that every man can be President. It is useless to say that, beyond a doubt, he can be and do a great many other things, if he will. But in that realm where all is high and beautiful in character, he can be what he wills to be by faith in God.

R. H. H.

MYTH OF THE SUNFLOWER.

According to that beautiful system of the ancient Greeks which sought to explain the origin of things and the vast powers of nature, each day the rosy-fingered Aurora flung open the gates of dawn, and the golden-haired god, Apollo, drove the flaming car of the sun across the heavens.

And as he passed daily over the earth, Apollo was loved by a fair young maiden, named Clytie. But all in vain. And in pity the gods turned her into a sunflower. Since then, in every warm clime the sunflower has mutely turned her face to the sun—a fact alluded to by Mr. Moore:

"As the sunflower turns on her god when he sets
The same look that she gave when he rose."

Only a myth—but through the ages the sunflower has gathered into her own golden heart something of the glory of the sun himself.

We become like that on which we look. Beautiful pictures and stained glass windows have a mission. Some parents are careful to hang good pictures in the rooms of their children, for they are influenced by them. A certain lad wanted to go to sea because, all his life, he had looked on the picture of a full-rigged ship sailing the great ocean.

We become like that on which we think. It is not sufficient to ask if there be any harm in this or that. Is there any good in it? This is the better question to ask of some of our diversions and pleasures. Paul said of a number of things of good report, "Think on these things." Think on the things that be of God. Look up to Him, and some day you will be like Him, and see Him face to face. R. H. H.

WATERS FROM ABOVE.

Beginning with the pure melting snows of the highest height, joined by bubbling springs and gurgling brooks, a crystal stream pours swiftly down the mountain-side. At times it leaps in cataracts that send up a silver spray, that glitters in the sun; at times it glides in such glassy smoothness that it mirrors heaven.

And as the swift stream ripples over its million vari-colored pebbles, it sings to the shore, and to the birds overhead, of the great part it is going to play in the world. It is on its way to bring life to thirsty beasts and men in the valley below; it is hurrying to turn the groaning wheels of big mills, and at last to give something to the great sea itself.

Alas for the mountain stream, with all its high hopes! For, when the valley is reached, it is all but lost in a dark stream of the lowlands. Oozing out somewhere in gloomy swamps, making its muddy way through boggs and fens, the latter becomes the ugly sewer of the country-side.

But in that dark hour the mountain stream remembers the melting snows of its birth, the thousand crystal springs that flow into it, and the momentum gained in mile after mile of its swift descent, and the waters from above gain the mastery—the larger stream flows on, pure and clear, all the way to the sea. And as it winds on its peaceful way through broad fields and by great cities, it murmurs thus: "Remember the Source, and be true to the best you have known.

CONCERNING CHURCH REGISTERS.

It is a regrettable fact that many church registers are badly kept. Sometimes no record is made as to the manner in which persons are received. Sometimes no record is made of the loss of a member, by certificate or otherwise. A certain pastor was still trying to locate a family whose names were on the register of his church when the family moved back to the town, and the pastor was asked to secure their church certificates from elsewhere.

The register of the first church may have been at fault. But sometimes quite a liberty is taken in such matters. Persons are received upon their own statement, without securing certificates. And the church from which they come is not notified, and confusion results.

But censure in such cases should not be too severe. For ofttimes it is well-nigh impossible to obtain church certificates, though the Discipline plainly directs pastors to issue them to persons removing elsewhere. What wonder, then, that other pastors are inclined to receive persons without certificates, when they are convinced that such persons have every right to the certificates which they have not been able to secure.

In many instances the records of baptisms and marriages are badly kept. Those whose duty it is to keep these records should do so faithfully and accurately. R. H. H.

proceedeth out of the mouth of God." must not be interpreted in any narrow sense; by it is meant whatever expresses a thought, whatever presents an idea, or sentiment of the divine mind, whether it be an object of nature, an event of history, a combination of articulate sounds that make up the spoken word, or of arbitrary signs that set before us the printed word, or aught else, all are entitled to the name word, and since God, and God only, is the ultimate and absolute author of all truth, all words must be viewed, in so far as they express truth, as words that "proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Now what growth intellectual, aesthetic, moral, or spiritual, could a finite being know though endowed as highly as an archangel, if brought into being in dark, empty, echoless space, where no light could reach the eye, no sound the ear, no flavor the taste, no odor the smell, no object the touch? I mean that if the present experiences which we have through our senses were impossible, could we wake to life or know living, unless other agencies, at least measurably effective, took their places? I answer emphatically, no, and affirm that the powers of our being, however marvelous, would remain unrealized.

Yet mere existence in the presence of objects, events, articulate or printed words, or anything else that embodies divine thought and sentiment, cannot of itself give life or an experience of living. Just as ores must be crushed and smelted before yielding up their precious metals, so these forms must be mentally, morally and spiritually analyzed and appropriated before yielding to the soul their treasured nourishment. Thoughts and sentiments are immaterial like the soul itself, and require physical embodiment in order to affect the sensorium and reach the soul. Talleyrand uttered a great truth when he said, "Language is a means of concealing thought." Every student of a dead language sees at once the truth intended to be conveyed. The Greek and Latin, for instance, are tombs more marvelous than the pyramids of the Nile, in which lie buried the thought that pulsed the brain and quickened the heart-throb of the noblest men in two great civilizations of the past, and now, when uncovered and grasped, stir the pulse of elect spirits in every foremost land. In life's beginning all language is dead to us. When infants, we did not know what our mothers meant by their first avowals of love, given in caresses and then in words, until attention was called to each again and again. Attention, then, we may conclude, protracted and ofttimes painful, must be given to the forms, events, sounds, characters and all else that embodies God's thoughts on which our souls are appointed to feed in any true experience of life as living or as true development.

Our practical need then is to demand of our mammon-worshiping spirits and bread-seeking natures time in which to stoop down and read the testimony of the rocks, to handle the shining treasures of the mineral kingdom, discerning the laws and marvels of crystallization; time to analyze the very substance of the rocks and name the elements into which they may be resolved; time in which to enter the vegetable kingdom and classify its myriad forms of beauty, touching the tender petals of its flowers, and thinking of the life force that clothes them with such beauty of form and delight of fragrance; time to become naturalists by entering the kingdoms of life in the orders below man, and go through them, noting the habits and instincts of their various gradations; thinking in this realm, as in all others, God's thoughts after him; time in which to acquaint ourselves with the world of human history and literature that has not vanished with the forms producing it; time in which to study man, through whom God has brought his creation to its climax, and revealed most concerning himself, except what we find in the Book of books, and named the Bible. This Book, a copy of which I hold, should be not only ever in our hands or close to hand, but carried in our hearts. It is not something simply to be read, but to be constantly studied, to be habitually and profoundly pondered.

Demand of yourselves, I beseech you, time in which to study its story of creation and the fall, its record of the flood, its call of Abraham, and the sojourn of the patriarchs in the land of promise, the going of Israel into Egypt, and his bondage there, his deliverance and the wilderness wanderings, the Mosaic institutions, the settlement of Canaan under Joshua, the periods of the judges, and kings, the captivities, the prophets, major and minor, and their great messages, and especially should time be given to the New Testament scriptures, which bring to its culmination what God has been pleased to reveal to man through those who wrote and spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. The good news in its fourfold setting as given in the gospels cannot be too thoroughly considered. The Acts of the Apostles, which is also the acts of the Holy Spirit and of our risen Lord! the Epistles written by Paul and other apostles to the churches of their founding, and the Revelation of John, the best beloved disciple, all claim our most diligent and constant meditation, and are given to minister nourishment in the strength of which we may go and grow through immeasurable duration.

If, as we well know, thoughts are awakened in the mind of him on whose attentive ear there beats daily and nightly the rhythm of ocean's tidal minstrelsy that are vaster than the ocean itself, and if he who surveys the expanse and splendor of the heavens receives an inner illumination greater than is found in all its boundless reaches, what must be the measure of enlargement and light that shall come to him who esteems as more than his necessary meat contact with the contents of this which is pre-eminently "the Book of God and the god of books?"

Now, the words of our great Book are not simply words for the nourishment and inspiration of our being, but many of them are words of express command, and all in their innermost significance are for the guidance of life. In the earliest Scriptures you come upon what we know as "the Ten Commandments." Throughout these sacred writings there are numerous special commands and doctrines that imply specific duties, such as repentence, faith, and love. Obedience to these is essential to righteousness, and the righteous teachings of the book are not by precepts and commands alone, but by examples. Herein is revealed holy characters and holy living, and the supreme example is given in him whose character was without a flaw and whose living was perfect. He was "the Word made flesh" that "dwelt among men," and men beheld "his glory as the glory of the only begotten Son of God, full of grace and truth."

All the commandments of the Book bear the impress of infinite wisdom, and have in them the warmth and pulse of the Infinite love. To disregard the commands of this Book is to realize in ourselves atrophy, corruption and death. Where they are disregarded, whether by the individual, family, community, state, nation, or humanity as a whole, the inevitable results are a miscarriage of life, reporting itself in moral stench, anarchy, and all that goes to make a hell of human society in all the orders of its units.

Obedience to these commands produces the just and righteous man whose path is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. That we may have light and life, God breaks the silence of eternity to speak. "I am come," saith Jesus, "that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." We should view ourselves as not simply in God's universe, but university, as called upon to move up and out from under tutors and governors in the basement story of life's mansion into higher and wider rounds of life and living. If it were possible for the nourishment, inspiration and guidance that is now to be found in the words that proceed out of the mouth of God to become exhausted, we may be sure that his purpose in our creation and his delight in our life and living would lead to yet higher and fuller expressions of the infinite fullness of the truth that is in him. He is infinite and we are finite, but it is his will that we, the finite, should steadily increase in the fullness and perfection of the infinite.

Let us take each to himself and for himself the exhortation with which Oliver Wendell Holmes closes his poem on the Chambered Nautilus

Build thee more stately [illegible] of thy soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past
Let each new temple nobler than the last
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast
Till thou at length art free
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea

FEDERATION OF THE METHODISTS

By James Callaway

The movement on foot for the federation of the two great branches of Methodism into one as prior to 1845 sounds like the day of brotherly love has dawned in America

"The parliament of man, the federation of the world," is a poetic idea, betokening a utopia. The movement is urged in the interests of the contracting parties, with the view of a more efficient spread of the gospel

Will the unity of the two great Conferences effect this? As it is each great Conference acts as a harmonious whole. Can such harmony exist in one huge religious body the General Conference? Consider the temper of the two peoples. The peoples of the South are as much unlike those of the North as the English are unlike the French. The two civilizations are unlike

In the huge Conference composed of delegates from every State, the Southern representation will be in a hopeless minority. The majority will impose on the minority. It has always been so. The restraining power of godliness will not prevent. Selfishness and graft will intervene

The split before was because of injustice to the minority Offices of profit, in the home and missionary field, were handed out as the majority desired. The South, the minority, was largely ignored. Human nature is too imperfect yet not to expect the majority to feather its own nest.

If the combine of the two into one, the South will hold the same relation to the majority as it does in Congress.

When the European war burst like a sudden storm upon the world, we of the South were just ready to handle our cotton, and there was no market It was confusion and ruin. It was a new and unexpected situation. In their distress the cotton growers asked of the general government no gifts, but a loan, placing cotton as security, the best security in the world, to tide them over the sudden disturbance of trade conditions.

What was the answer of Congress?

Every member of Congress from the non-cotton growing States mocked the idea, saying they wanted cheap cotton. Self-interest controlled their conduct. We did not ask for alms, only a temporary loan, based on cotton as security Now this is referred to simply to show what majorities will do. Human nature is the same, unfortunately, in religious bodies as in the political world Sectional interests sprang up in Congress as to the cotton proposition. Self-interest will control the actions of the huge "Conference." It did so in post-bellum days; it will do it again

In the huge federation of women's clubs it was a part of their constitution that the organization be non-political, yet two years ago at Chicago the majority let in the suffrage question and endorsed woman's suffrage. The Southern members protested vigorously, reading the clause of the constitution made to govern the convention What result? The majority were Northern and Western women and they hooted at the protest of the Southern minority. Women claim to be better than men; yet these women violated their own agreement to carry a political point. In politics all are alike.

The General Methodist Conference of the Southern States, like the Southern Baptist Convention, is too unwieldy as it is. The delegates from the South in the General Conference will be proportionate to representation. That puts the South in the minority, that means wrangle, continual wrangle. The removal of slavery does not stop the wrangle. There are other rocks and a plenty of them upon which to split. In the first place, we are a different people. In the next place, those Northern people will inject the negro question. All the kaiser's horses and all the king's men could not prevent them from doing it. Why, now in all the suffrage meetings in the North the affections of the members center around the negro. He is the pet—for the present it is the negro woman who is the pet—waging a war to give her the ballot.

Why, just send one of our Southern girls to a Northern college and she returns not the "Southern girl" of yore, but a little "teched" with anti-South ideas, and she comes home to "revolutionize" things, to prate against State government, and declare the apostle Paul was an old fogy, not to be accepted as orthodox in these "progressive" days.

Better bear the ills we have than stick our minority-heads into the jaws of a grasping majority. Let the South remain the South.—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

In closing the session of 1915-16, Whitworth College has added another splendid chapter to the history of her educational career. The session just closed was one of the most successful in the history of the institution.

Sunday, May 21, at 11 o'clock, Bishop James Atkins preached the Commencement Sermon to a large audience. Though fatigued by travel and the pressure of business matters, the Bishop preached a great sermon. The service scheduled for the Y. W. C. A. Sunday evening was estopped by a downpour of rain, but the student body, with a few visitors, assembled in Cooper Hall for a vesper service conducted by that princely Christian gentleman, Dr. E. H. Mounger. One of the thrilling features of this service was an old-time "experience meeting." A large number of the young ladies spoke touchingly of what the College had meant to them religiously. Their intelligent expressions of a definite experience, "born from above," and infused with a passion for things that are "just, holy, pure and of good report," vindicate the high ideals for which Whitworth College as a Christian institution stands, and her work of training for "the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

Monday morning was given to class day exercises. It was a brilliant affair. The fine program was so splendidly executed as to furnish unusual entertainment for the audience.

Graduating exercises were held Monday evening at 8 o'clock. After the rendition of an excellent musical program, Hon. J. S. Sexton, of Hazlehurst, Miss., in his usual forceful style, delivered the Baccalaureate Address. The address was of a high order, and timely. The brilliant array of historical facts, showing the progress of female education, and the vivid illustrations of the position and influence of woman in our modern life, won the favor of the entire audience. Then, with emotions of joy and sadness, the graduating class responded to a very pleasing address by President I. W. Cooper in the presentation of diplomas. Eighteen young ladies, having graduated from the Literary Department, were awarded diplomas, as follows: Johnnie Byron Bailey, Rebecca Blanch Cox, Sydney Roberta Gale, Jessie Frank Greer, Lena Hunter, Ruth Audrey Kellogg, Delaney Myers, Lottie B. McRaney, Vivian and Alma Sauls, Ruth Libby Sharbrough, Mary Maud Ainsworth, Mollye Elizabeth Baker, Bettie M. Henry, Delle Davis Johnson, Francis Jeanette Leggett, Mable Claire Potter and Leslie Vaughan Rush. Diplomas in Shorthand were awarded to Ethel Crosby, Letha Hodges, Dorothy Hart and Sylvia Winborn. In the Music Department, Cora Brister was awarded a diploma in Voice, and Ary Carruth, Carie Clark and Edna Cooley, in Piano. Nell Levern Van was awarded a diploma in Expression.

In the Domestic Science Department, Mary Weston and Fern Elarton were awarded diplomas. Certificates were given as follows: In Shorthand, Margaret Calvit, May Patton and Nancy Travis. In Bookkeeping and Shorthand, Rosetta Seals. In Piano, Mary James Germany. In Expression, Evelyn Harn. In Art, Irene Brazil. Class medals were awarded as follows: Senior, Leslie Vaughan Rush. Junior, Flora May Grafton. Sophomore, Mary Hinton. Freshman, Mildred Cooper. Preparatory, Alma McMillan.

To those who are looking for a Christian college, with modern equipment, healthy surroundings, a home-like atmosphere, and refined and cultured influences, Whitworth College offers exceptional advantages. Dr. Cooper is doing a great work, and should have the co-operation of the Methodists of the Conference in his untiring efforts to build a greater Whitworth.

J. T. LEGGETT.

WHY THE PREACHERS SHOULD ATTEND.

Every Methodist preacher within reach should attend Seashore Divinity School, because:

1. Of his need of relaxation and rest. It is still true, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." The most strenuous workers would no doubt be more effective, as well as add some years to their ministry, if they would sometimes unstring the taut bow and allow it to relax. "Rest a while," said Jesus to His disciples. (Mark 6:31.)

2. It will help the preacher to sometimes occupy the pew. He needs to learn sympathy with the listener who is hearing his pet theories assailed, and the one who is hard to convince. He is in the habit of being the "speaker." He is in danger of getting so he'll not enjoy the meeting where he cannot "speak." I have known preachers to leave an assembly where great leaders were giving most inspiring messages merely because they were not "on the program." Providence saved the program and the audience. Such gentlemen would have abandoned the upper room when the disciples tarried for the Holy Spirit had they not been "put up to preach," and themselves, not the disciples, been the losers.

3. Every preacher needs to take the measure of himself by the side of big men. He is so accustomed to measure himself by his estimate of those to whom he preaches and by other preachers of meager attainment near that he fails to realize the possibilities of his own development. To come into the presence of great souls and bear the wisdom of great minds is to be spurred out of fatal self-satisfaction and set on the way to all personal enlargement.

4. And how we need the re-charging of the exhausted or exhausting batteries of power! The preacher is of necessity somewhat isolated. True, he has his Bible and closet, his good and wise laymen and his instructive books—thank God for them all! But meditation and books cannot take the place of the living personality. God speaks most effectively through men who have been led to fuller light, richer experiences and devoted ministries. An angel sped from heaven to Cornelius, but only to tell him his hope lay in the message of Peter. The handclasp, the play of features, the sparkling eye give truth an insistence and power as nothing else can. And the preacher who scorns this best way of the Almighty for revealing fuller light and larger power deserves to have men turn away from him, as one unaccustomed to God's methods and incompetent to teach his will.

5. The preacher must keep up with the best methods of applying the old power. The world was never so astir. New inventions for performing old tasks and accomplishing old desires crowd on each other's heels. The best teachers are eagerly seizing every aid for imparting the old truths and the best physicians and surgeons are wide-eyed for every new diagnostic and remedial help. They go far and spend much for increased personal efficiency. Surely the preacher, with the greatest of all responsibilities, cannot afford to be less eager and vigilant in seeking the best methods of bringing the old sin-smitten and heart-hungry humanity to know the old, redeeming grace and power.

Those who have attended Seashore Divinity School for the purpose of receiving its help testify most heartily that it is filling, in a large degree, all these, and other needs of the Methodist minister.

Church News

The Southern Baptists raised, in their fiscal year just closed, $1,996,986 for home and foreign missions. This shows an increase of $192,457 over the previuos year.

According to their last statistics, the Methodist Protestant Church in America has 2181 ministers, 239,598 members, 1300 churches, church property valued at $2,375,607, and 750 parsonages valued at $959,545.

Rev. George H. Miller, D. D., is the Secretary-eleet of the General Board of Education of the Methodist Protestant Church, and Rev. Crates S. Johnson, D. D., is the Secretary-elect of the new Forward Movement Commission which was established by the last General Conferenee of that Church.

The Southern Presbyterian Church has enjoyed unpreeedented spiritual prosperity in the last several years, and especially in the last year. In 1914 the aeeessions by profession of faith were 16,149; in 1915 they were 20,156, and in 1916 they were 21,804. This shows an increase of 35 per cent in the number of conversions in two years.

Something seems to be wrong with Presbyterian theology of the North. Occasionally, reports of rank modernism of the elergy of that denomination, espeelally in New York, are heard. A newspaper report says that Rev. G. A. Andrews, Assistant pastor of West End Presbyterian Church, has declared that the Bible was not inspired.

In Japan, Kimura San, the "Billy Sunday" of that eountry, preached to 5000 people per night in Tokyo, and in two weeks 1300 people had "hit the sawdust trail." One hundred and fifty thousand people are on the church waiting list in India, for the Churches are not adequate to receive them at present. There has been an average of one convert in that country every hour since Korea became a mission field twenty-five years ago.

Dr. James A. Anderson, Commissioner of the North Arkansas Conference for Vanderbilt University, has issued a volumnious report to that Conferenee in whieh he openly states that it is his intention to throw his weight on the side of reopening the whole Vanderbilt question at the next General Conference. We are of the opinion, however, that he will be very mueh in the minority in sueh a poliey.

On April 6, 1916, the members of the gradnating class of the United States Military Academy at West Point were formally presented with Bibles by the American Tract Society. Rev. Percy H. Silver, chaplain of the Academy, conducted the devotional exercises, and Rev. Harlan G. Mundenhall, D. D., New York, made the presentation address. Nearly six hundred men in full uniform, the entire cadet corps, were present. This was the forty-sixth annual presentation of Bibles at the Academy.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, Editor of the Central Methodist, does not look with favor upon the proposed union of the two Methodisms of this country according to the scheme outlined by the Northern Methodist Church. Dr. Mann is wise and farsighted; his judgment is always superior. Of the fact that some of our brethren visiting the Northern General Conference seemed to be swept off their feet by the enthusiasm manifested, he states: "That hilarious tumult and premature shouting at Saratoga Springs must have carried some of our garrulous brethren away from base."

CRESCENT TYPEWRITER EX.

THE BURDEN OF KEEPING UP APPEARANCES.

Human nature has no trait more marked than the desire to "be like other folks," espeelally in society and in the tokens of domestic prosperity. There are people who can not bear the thought of being eclipsed in any way by a neighbor's show of material advancement.

In some respects this spirit is commendable. No one wishes to attract attention by being peculiar, or by showing contempt for fairly good examples set by other folks, yet it were better to be overly independent than to be hurtfully subservient to social custom.

"There is," as one writer observes, "a dreadful ambition abroad for being 'genteel.' We keep up appearances, too often at the expense of honesty; and, though we may not be rich, yet we must seem so. We must be 'respectable,' though only in the meanest sense—in mere vulgar outward show. We have not the courage to go patiently onward in the condition of life in which it has pleased God to call us; but must needs live in some fashionable state to which we ridiculously please to call ourselves, and all to satisfy the vanity of that unsubstantial genteel world of which we form a part. There is a constant struggle and pressure for front seats in the social amphitheater, in the midst of which all noble, self-denying resolve is trodden down, and many fine natures are inevitably crushed to death. What waste, what misery, what bankruptcy, come from all this ambition to dazzle others with the glare of apparent worldly success we need not describe. The mischievous results show themselves in a thousand ways—in the rank frauds committed by men who dare to be dishonest, but do not dare to seem poor, and in the desperate dashes at fortune, in which the pity is not so much for those who fall as for the hundreds of innocent families who are so often involved in their ruin."

Illustrations of the foregoing truth can be found in almost any daily paper. The instances are not few in which men "dare to be dishonest, but do not dare to seem poor." The exposure of their frauds and dishonesties has brought heartache to many loved ones, some of whom, possibly, by ungovernable social ambition may have unconsciously contributed a share toward the fatultous impulse to do wrong.

We wish some effective means could be devised of ridding society of this unnecessary burden.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

THE BEST PREPAREDNESS.

That the country is to be put in better fighting trim, if only for defense in a foregone conclusion, no matter how the European war clips back or the party political "safe guard."

But there is another preparedness besides that of a material character and that is the preparedness for citizenship, for a development of a spirit of civic and national pride that is founded deep in a respect for law and order.

When a citizenship of a country measures up to the highest ideals of law observance that country is not likely to lack eager, earnest defenders when the call comes. "To your tents, Americans!"

And this sort of preparedness is to be done at home, in the school, and in the church, and the keynote to it has got to be "parental control." The poison in our civic veins is lack of home government; it keeps our juvenile courts full and is largely the backward reaching cause of the long dockets in the upper courts.

The American motherheart must lose, not its tenderness, but its softness, and take on something of the Spartan element if the men and women of the future are to have the best preparedness for the national good. The first requisite of a soldier is obedience to orders, and the first requisite to good citizenship is respect for the law that governs the community.

This is the other phase of preparedness that the Democratic party should preach to its adherents. Training camps to learn to handle a gun and dig trenches are all right, but they should have their parallels in such private training as will give a wholesome respect for authority at home and in the community. The political party that does not overlook this preachment is the one that will show the sincerest patriotism and stand the best chance of ultimate triumph.

The best way "not to raise your boy to be a soldier" is to raise him to be a law-abiding citizen.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANS' HOME.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Mississippi Orphans' Home (Methodist Orphanage) was held on June 6 at the Orphans' Home. The manager's report set forth the following facts pertaining to the Home: On June 1, 1915, there were 217 children in the Home. From June 1, 1915, to September 15, 1915, twenty-two were received, fifteen adopted or placed in good homes, one was taken out by relatives and five went out for themselves. From September 15, 1915, to June 1, 1916, eighty-eight have been received, five returned to the Home, thirty-nine adopted or placed in good homes, forty-six taken out by relatives and six have gone out for themselves. For the entire year, from June 1, 1915, to June 1, 1916, 110 have been received, five returned to the Home, fifty adopted or placed in good homes, forty-seven taken out by relatives and eleven have gone out for themselves, leaving 224 in the Home on June 1, 1916, making a total of 332 children cared for during the year. We have had an average of 220 in the Home for the entire year.

Spiritual Life.

The spiritual interest of the Home seems to be good. We have a good Sunday school, also a good Epworth League which meets every Sunday, and we also have preaching in the Home every Sunday. In good weather the children are permitted to attend the churches out in town at the morning service, and sometimes at the evening service. Forty-two have been received into the Church on profession of faith this year. We have prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, chapel exercises every evening and boys' prayer meeting on Saturday night.

Teachers and Helpers.

The following teachers have been selected for next session: Miss Georgia Brumfield, principal and teacher of Eighth and Ninth grades; Miss Corinne Avery, teacher of Sixth and Seventh grades; Mrs. J. B. Randolph, teacher of Fourth and Fifth grades; Miss Amanda Howell, teacher of Second and Third grades; Miss Susie Robinson, teacher of Primary and First grades; and Mrs. Mary Williams, teacher of music.

Realizing the need of practical training for the children, we have organized two classes in sewing, one for the large girls and one for the small girls; a class in shorthand and typewriting; a class in nurse training and also a class in domestic science. The two latter classes are small consisting of six or seven girls each. These departments have done well. Miss Ora Bacot of Pelahatchie has been elected teacher for the Garland Community School at Warmack Farm. The following helpers are employed in the Home at present: G. L. Lauderdale, Assistant Superintendent; Mrs. Rosa Greely, Head Matron; Miss Claudine Curtis, Office Assistant; Mrs. H. W. Neal, Boys' Matron; Mrs. Z. M. Barr, Kitchen Matron; Mrs. Carrie Cochran, Baby Matron; Miss Maggie Loyd (one of our large girls), Laundry Matron; and J. L. Ferguson and wife, Warmack Farm.

Health.

The health in the Home has been good. We have had about five cases of appendicitis requiring operations, all of which were successful. We have been trying to build up our dairy herd in order to supply a sufficient quantity of good, wholesome milk for all of our children, which the experts say is very essential, and in response to appeals, Mr. J. H. Minor of Lumberton and his Sunday school class there have donated a 100-ton capacity silo. Mr. J. N. Dantzler and his company of Biloxi have given an 8-16 horse-power Mogul International Harvester tractor engine. To complete our dairy equipment, we need a cutter with which to cut ensilage to fill the silo, and a new sanitary cattle barn at the farm, where we expect to keep the dairy herd and to build the silo. We expect to plant some corn, peas and sorghum to fill the silo after the oats have been harvested.

Repairs.

Some needed repairing has been done and some more improvements have been made. Some work has been done in patching the roofs on all three of the buildings, the main building and boy's dormitory have been screened, two new washing machines have been bought for the laundry, a good engine has been donated by Brother J. H. Sherard, the president of our Board; the old boiler has been repaired and the small boiler at the laundry has been overhauled completely, putting in new flues throughout. A boiler shed has been built over this boiler and the screened kitchen is in process of erection. Other repairs are very much needed. The front porch of the main building needs repairing, the buildings all need painting, new gutters are needed, and valleys, together with further repairs on the roof of the main building and on the inside where the plaster has fallen, caused by the leaks in the roof. A new boiler will be needed before the coming winter.

Fire Protection.

In order to protect the children and the Home in case of fire, we have bought and installed fire hose in the basement and on each one of the other three floors of the main building. A special donation was made by Mr. W. M. Lampton, of Magnolia, to cover this expenditure.

Happiness.

The helpers in the Home all seem to be loyal and efficient and the children all seem to be happy and contented. We need your prayers and cooperation.

Rev. J. B. Randolph was unanimously re-elected superintendent of the Orphanage.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Dear Mr. Editor: The writer wishes to give a few facts in regard to the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference, which will be of interest to our North Mississippi readers. The Conference delegates began to arrive about noon on Monday, June 5, and upon arrival were assigned to their respective homes. At 6 p. m., the delegates and friends of the Conference were delightfully entertained at a formal reception given by Mrs. Mauldin. This was a very pleasant hour, as many new friends were met and many others met again who had not seen each other since the last Conference.

The opening exercises of the Conference began at 8:15 at the First Methodist Church. Quite a large number of visitors and friends were present, at which time the visiting delegates were fully assured in welcome addresses that their coming and presence was a delight and that they were welcome to the hospitality of Water Valley's homes. There were about 40 visiting delegates, representing twelve different chapters. This does not show much for figures, but what shall be told in the next few lines will probably convince the reader of the tone and spirit of the Conference. We had two sunrise prayer-meetings, at which we had about 60 each. The writer considers these meetings the "backbone" of the Conference; they were very strengthening and inspirational. Another thing that needs to be told is that the sum total of all pledges for missions and divisional secretary was $500. The hour for taking pledges was one of the most interesting and enthusiastic of all the Conference. Rev. Paul Powell of Cloverport, Ky., was the Conference visitor. His advice in the Conference institutes and his evening address were things long to be remembered by all who heard him. The absence of Dr. H. G. Henderson, president of the League Board, was a source of much regret to everybody.

On Wednesday afternoon the good citizens of Water Valley took the visitors out in cars to enjoy a delightful "spin" over the good roads around Water Valley. This little social function added much to the delight of the visitors and was more than was necessary to convince the delegates of the hospitality of their hosts.

The officers elected for 1916-17 were as follows: E. F. Puckett, President, Nettleton; Rev. J. H. Holder, Vice President, Sardis; Miss Mabel Fulmer, Secretary, Water Valley; V. H. Stephenson, Treasurer, Booneville; Miss Myrtle Furr, Junior Superintendent, Pontotoc; Rev. E. H. Cunningham, Conference Reporter, Leland.

The following district secretaries were elected: Aberdeen District, Miss Mamie Hyde, Pontotoc; Columbia District, Miss Mildred Neal, Starkville; Corinth District, Mr. C. D. Daniels, Booneville; Durant District, Mr. Ray Lyons, Durant; Greenville District, Miss Vera Salmon, Shelby; Holly Springs District, Prof. R. B. Scarborough, Holly Springs; Sardis District, Rev. J. H. Brooks, Senatobia; Winona District, Mr. Joe Lipscomb, Winona.

The Conference is indebted to Brother Dorman for his kind advice, his convincing testimony, and for his presence throughout the session. Brother Dorman is very proud of his League and says that he does not know how he could do without it; it is such a help to him in all his work.

The Conference goes to Starkville next year.

THE NEW BABY.

There came to port last Sunday night
The queerest little craft,
Without an inch of rigging on;
I looked, and looked, and laughed.

It seemed so curious that she Should cross the unknown water
And moor herself right in my room,
My daughter, O my daughter!

She has no manifest but this,
No flag floats o'er the water,
She's too new for the British Lloyds—
My daughter, O my daughter!

Ring out, wild bells, and tame ones, too!
Ring out the lover's moon!
Ring in the little worsted socks!
Ring in the bib and spoon!

Ring out the music! ring in the nurse!
Ring in the milk and water!
Away with paper, pen, and ink—
My daughter, O my daughter!

—George W. Cable.

A GOOD SAMARITAN.

A lady was traveling from Providence to Boston with her weak-minded father, who became possessed of a fancy that he must get off the train while it was in motion.

His daughter endeavored to quiet him, but found it difficult, and she was about giving up in despair when she noticed a very large man watching the proceedings intently over the top of his newspaper.

Of course this man might have kept on reading. He might have said to himself, "This is no affair of mine." He might have thought, "I need every minute of this journey for to-night's preparation." But he was a Good Samaritan, who thought of others first; and so, as soon as he caught the lady's eye he rose and crossed quickly to her.

"I beg your pardon," he said; "you are in trouble. May I help you?"

She explained the situation to him.

"What is your father's name?" he asked.

She told him, and the large man, leaning toward the troubled old man, had addressed him by name, shaken hands cordially, and eugaged him in conversation so interesting and so cleverly arranged to keep his mind occupied that he forgot his need to leave the train, and did not think of it again until they were in Boston. Here the stranger put the lady and her charge into a carriage, received her assurance that she felt perfectly safe, had cordially shaken her hand, and was about to close the carriage door when she remembered that she had felt so safe in the keeping of this noble looking man that she had not even asked his name. Hastily putting her hand against the door she said:

"Pardon me, but you have rendered me such a service, may I not know whom I am thanking?"

The big man smiled as he answered, "Phillips Brooks," and then turned away.—Baltimore Christian Advocate.

AS THE YEARS ROLL BY.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

How merciful is Providence that we do not, as Rip Van Winkle, sleep twenty years and then suddenly awake to find ourselves old. Picture the horror of all at once seeing the hair gray, the sparkle of the eye gone, the blush of the cheek faded, the shoulders stooped, and the step slow! Yet this is what comes to all who live to reach their three-score years and ten. None of us want to get old. We cling to youth. We never fully realize that it is gone from us. When we were children, we thought forty a ripe old age, and for fifty and sixty—why, people who had lived that long should not care when death claimed them. But ah, what a different view-point comes with maturer years! Forty is the prime of life, and who would ever think of being classed as old at fifty? Absurd! Did any one ever hear of a woman of sixty declaring herself an old lady? Why, women of seventy look pityingly on those of eighty and speak of "when I get old," and the men walk with a swinging stride as if to defy nature. No, the day never really comes when we are convinced of the fact that we are old and when we do not resent being called old by others. There are always others who are older and so much more decrepit, that we are young in comparison.

Nevertheless it is true that we do grow old, but there is where the wisdom and loving kindness of Providence comes in. We grow, and so we do not realize the change any more than a growing child is conscious of his added inches. Do you remember the day when you were combing your long, brown tresses and you discovered a few silver hairs? You laughed and pulled them out, humming a bar of "Darling, I am growing old; silver threads among the gold," but in a few months too many appeared to pull out and then you told your friends that it "runs in your family to turn gray early." You reminded them that your mother was prematurely gray, and you had an aunt that had more white hairs than black at twenty, and you feel that you are inheriting the family trait.

Another day comes when you feel the strain of your eyes as you work button-holes or when you read. You lay aside your work or your book, thinking you are tired. You have abused your eyes with so much embroidering or the electric lights and of course you must pay the penalty. You can not reconcile yourself to the thought of wearing glasses, and so you put off the evil day, but the eyes continue to run water, and when you are reading aloud, suddenly the page blurs and the children wonder why you do not go on. The glasses must be bought and your husband or mother laugh at your reluctance and remind you that almost as many young people and children wear glasses as old people, and it is no evidence of age. Boldly you go to the oculist and tell him how you have abused your eyes, and, of course, you will not consider spectacles—just nose glasses, that make you appear intellectual, whether you are or not, even if they do pinch your nose and leave a crease, or fall off every little while. The optician takes all the starch out of you when he says: "It will not take long to have this prescription ready as it merely calls for the first glasses—simple magnifiers—no defect whatever in your vision." After that blow you hesitate to put them on and determine that they shall only be worn in the privacy of your room, and you laugh a great deal over the adjustment and get them upside down, but gradually—oh, so gradually—they become such a necessity that you forget to take them off, and, after the first criticism, it is not so bad.

How much pleasure it affords you to introduce your youngest child to a stranger and have him say, "Surely you have not a child this old!" Then you laugh and bring forth others and watch the surprise on his face. But by and by you realize that no more surprise is evinced and you have made up your mind not to patronize your old dressmaker any more because she dared hint that your last dress was too gay for a woman of your age. How glad you are that bonnets have gone out of style, for they used to be such a line of demarkation between youth and old age. Now, there is so little difference in dress that other signs must be well in evidence for one to judge. And these signs are coming—but they are not cruel; they come slowly.

Will you ever forget how you hated to give up the low-necked dress and the short sleeves that were so comfortable in summer? You clung to them longer than you should, but you made excuses by saying that your neck and arms were plump and you felt a choking sensation in a high collar; but, after a few blunt reminders from your friends that you were trying to be girlish, you martyrize yourself. Dresses that fasten down the back were once so stylish, and, really, women who were quite old wore them, but you remember that the time came when you felt that even that day was past, so you rejoice that they open down the front now for old and young alike. It now seems a long time since you so wistfully laid aside those pretty pinks and blues and began selecting dresses with lavender and little black dots. You are thankful that Dame Fashion has decreed that no one is ever too old to wear white.

You awake one morning to find that your dearest friend is a grandmother and you have a queer sensation when the posibility of such a thing dawns on you. True, she married young, and so did her daughter, but you did likewise, and, if your big boy were a girl, he too would very probably be married and no doubt you would be a grandmother. "Am I really getting old?" you ask yourself. But here comes the reassuring thought that women are grandmothers at such an early age that it means nothing at all.

It is not the women alone that cling to youth. Did you ever notice how the old men pride themselves on their ability to run for a car, and how indignant they are when a conductor puts out a protecting hand? Rudely, they brush it aside, and not for worlds would they ring the bell and wait for the car to come to a full stop. They endeavor to leap off, never realizing how awkward they are nor how they make the passengers hold their breath for fear of an accident. Many an old man, instead of being grateful to the youth who will offer him a seat, annihilates him with a look and would rather drop than to take the proffered seat. If the hand grows tremulous you hear a great deal of his nervous trouble.

Oft-told tales are a sure sign of advancing years, and when you catch yourself telling the same story to-day that you told yesterday, and to the same person, you may well sigh and feel that youth is leaving you.

None of us will give in to the fact that we are old; we may look it, we may feel it, the family Bible may bear witness to the fact, our schoolmates and companions may drop off and leave us, but still we are young and it is good that it is so. In an effort to keep young we associate with young people and our hearts are kept young. God meant it to be so, and therefore he willed that the approach of old age should be so gradual as to be unnoticed. He is kind in all of his dealings to his children, and just as he tempers the wind to the shorn lamb, so he takes care that the crowning honor of old age shall descend upon us gently, gradually, imperceptibly. If our lives have been spent in the service of the Master and in bettering our fellow-man, old age is beautiful, and, with thankful hearts, we can say to our kind Heavenly Father, "Thou doest all things well."

SOMEWHAT SUGGESTIVE.

A minister who had received a number of "calls," and could scarcely decide which was the best invitation to accept, asked the advice of a faithful old African servant, who without hesitation replied: "Master, go where is the most devil!" Judging on this basis, it might be difficult to determine which one of several fields really contained most of evil within it. There are Nazareths out of which, according to popular opinions, no good can come; but there are also Jerusalems which, priding themselves on their exalted piety, stone the prophets, and even crucify the Christ. There is plenty of evil in every section of the country, and among any class of men, and the determining reasons which should guide a Christian worker in making choice of a sphere of labor are not simply objective considerations relating to others, but also subjective factors found in his own education, mental make-up, temperamental peculiarities, degree of experience, and adaptability for intelligent co-operation with other laborers.—Zion's Herald.

Editorial

SHALL WE CAPITULATE?

On June 10, 1844, the most famous General Conference in the history of Methodism adjourned. According to constitutional rights it had divided the Methodist Church into its two present great sections. On May 1, 1845, the Southern Methodist Church continued its autonomy by its general convention at Louisville, which rounded out matters for the regular meeting of the General Conference at Petersburg in 1846. Thereafter the Church, South seemed content to pursue the even tenor of its way.

But in 1844, when the first General Conference of Northern Methodism met, a program of attack upon Southern interests was begun the like of which has never been equaled in Church history before or since. While this spirit has been modified, still it may be seen that the present tendency of the Northern Church to absorb the Southern branch began at this early date. The first act of the Northern General Conference in 1844 was to pronounce the division of 1844 unconstitutional, in spite of the fact that its own leaders had made the division essential. The far eastern section of the Church had threatened schism, did not the South capitulate. Dr. Lovick Pierce, who represented the Southern Church as a fraternal delegate, stated in a note to the Northern General Conference that his mission was one of kindness and love, but he was not accorded the privilege of a reception as a fraternal delegate from the Church, South. Dr. Pierce refused to be received on the strength of personal courtesy, and as he withdrew he stated that never again could the Southern Church renew the offer of fraternal relations between the two bodies, but that the proposition must come from Northern Methodism. This concession was not made by the Church of the North until after many years. Suits had to be entered by the Church, South, in the States of Ohio and New York for its rightful share of the publishing interests. In New York the Southern Church won; in Ohio it lost and carried the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, where it was won. This was followed by a period of attack upon the Southern Church by the Northern Methodist press, which represented that organization before the people as the "Mother Church," or the "Old Church." This was done in spite of the legal division of territory and interests in 1844, and in spite of the winning of our rightful property in the Courts. A sad page in the history of the relationship of the two organizations was written during the Civil War. "After the Federal forces had occupied," McTyeire says, "large sections of Southern territory, Bishop Ames, with preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, followed the victorious army with an order procured from Secretary of War Stanton, and took forcible possession of Southern Methodist pulpits, even to the exclusion of ministers appointed by the Church authorities and desired by the congregation. These violent paroxysms died out after the war ceased and had to be ousted, repeatedly and reluctantly."

In 1866, however, the Northern Church seemed to have been in no endeavor to take over the Southern Church body and soul, through the courts and through ruinous strife. Bishops Janes and Simpson appeared before the Southern Bishops in St. Louis, at their annual meeting, with sentiments of union. They expressed themselves as believing the division of those Churches of the same faith and order to be productive of evil, and they believed reunion would be productive of good. In 1870 two commissioners, representing a commission from the Northern Church, found their way to Memphis to attend our General Conference, and to treat with a similar commission from our Church on the subject of union. In 1874 their first fraternal messenger appeared at a Southern Methodist General Conference. The same General Conference appointed a commission to meet the one of the North; and in May, 1876, the Joint Commission met at Cape May. However our General Conference did not authorize its commission to formulate plans for union, but to adjudicate any outstanding problems. Accordingly, all property claims were settled, the territory of each Church was mapped out, and all seemed to be in harmony. The Cape May Joint Commission became famous because it was thought to relieve the difficulties of the two great Churches by assigning to each its territory, thus preventing useless erecting of "altar against altar." Evidently, Northern Methodism was disappointed in the outcome of its overtures. It must have acted under the impression that union would be ultimately consummated, and so allowed the commission to proceed. And, indeed, for a little time perhaps harmony prevailed.

But since it had registered failure in three lines of procedure to gain back the holdings of the Church, South, viz: by keeping property through the sanction of the Courts; by occupying churches behind the Federal lines; and by proposals of union; the subtle scheme of throwing its mighty phalanxes into the South, and thus making it capitulate, was the next effort. It seems that much has been done to bring about this end. The Cape May Commission's rulings have been ruthlessly set aside, money of the Northern Church has been spent in setting up its churches among white people of the South, its preachers have informed immigrants from the North, and others, that the Southern Church—referring to its name—is merely a sectional organization; some of its Bishops who have lived in the South have adopted a very cordial aspect to Southerners, praising themselves at being entertained in Southern homes and bringing about the spirit of harmony; and the Church, North, has done all it could to throw its line of progress across the whole section, among the white people, with the great end in view of attaining the territory. And it seems that some of our Southern brethren are ready to capitulate. When a minister of the Southern Church who favors union is approached on the matter he usually answers that all this friction is wrong—in unity there would not be the wasting of money in the maintenance of two like denominations in the same community. But who is doing this? Are the Southern people carrying its Church into the North? Not so. It has some organizations in Illinois, but they were with it at the disruption and were so recognized by the Cape May Commission. As to the West, it seems that the two Churches have never been fraternal enough to settle the territorial problem. It belongs to one as much as to the other. The Northern Church, ever since the failure of union in 1874, has consistently thrown its forces into the South with the end in view of gaining the territory. The Southern Church, a few years ago, maintained St. Mark's Hall on Esplanade Avenue in New Orleans; the Northern Church at once proceeded to establish itself in a block of it. In Atlanta, Bishop F. D. Leete has in recent years built a Church in the heart of the city, which move can have no other construction but one of effort to supplant the Church, South. From Georgia to the western bounds of Texas, from northern Kentucky to southern Louisiana the Northern Church has thrown its bread net to catch the white people, and the more frenzied that arises the better it seems it like it, because this brings to the public mind its benevolent activity in the South. Having failed in all other ways, the Southern Church, the North seems to feel, must be forced to the point of raising "to keep down friction." Why does not Northern Methodism invade the Dominion of Canada and help the Canadian Methodist Church in its work—if the invasion of the South is done under the pretension of assisting its people. Why does it not try England? That country certainly needs it for the Wesleyan Methodist Church has been steadily losing ground in the past decade, when last year the Southern Methodist Church showed a gain of 9,711 members. The New York Christian Advocate recently published a telegram to the Atlanta Constitution from Bishop Leete which he sent when he was returned to Atlanta at Saratoga for another quadrennium. This sentence was included. "I shall strive to turn the minds of one hundred fifteen thousand members of our Church in the above States (Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida) into harmony with the end sought: union." When we contemplate the past policy of that Church and how it has striven for that very end with all its might, such words appear ironical. Certainly, the uniformed Southern people of those States who have been beguiled into supporting that institution, and the Northern people who have moved in and who have been told that the Southern Church is a sectional affair as advocated in its very name, will not need overmuch "striving to turn their minds." If that be the whole of the Bishop's mission in the South, we are sure the money for his salary for the next quadrennium will be wasted.

Further, we would like to ask: Why do not the Presbyterians and the Baptists keep themselves continually stirred up by the question of union? In the few decades before the Civil War the questions dividing the sentiments of the North and South split up the former organization: to-day the two great bodies of Northern and Southern Presbyterians lie alongside of each other without friction, each harmoniously doing its great work. In 1845 the Northern and Southern Baptists began their separate careers; they enjoy the confidence of each other without friction. The truth is, these brethren have not tried to invade each other's territory; therefore the matter of union is not a consideration. The Southern Church can never afford to be persuaded into organic union. It would be ruinous. Let us not be driven into the matter through the aggressiveness of our Northern brethren. If the South is not our rightful territory, then we have had no business being a Church at all.

THE NEW COURSE OF STUDY.

The College of Bishops, according to the authority vested in them by Paragraph 729 of the Discipline for 1914, has revised the course of study for the itinerant and local preachers of the Church. The new course was published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of June 8.

The studies for those who desire to be admitted on trial have been augmented by three good, solid books. The course for the whole four years has sustained a decided improvement. No book has been introduced of a radical nature, and many of the new texts will add largely to the essential knowledge of a well-equipped minister. It is pleasing to note that the undergraduate is to be examined upon the "text of the Scripture itself." The lack of a working knowledge of the Bible in a preacher is a weakness that cannot be overcome except by learning it truly. We may know how to philosophize about the Bible, we may be acquainted in a general way with its contents, but unless we really have a grasp of the Scripture itself we will ever be hampered in our preaching. Higher criticism, we are taught, means a study of the history of the books, characters and setting of the Scripture. Such an approach to Biblical knowledge cannot but prove to be of lesser use in administering the truths of the Word of God as they are needed. Indeed, one may be well informed in the history of a book of the Bible, being able to give exact dates and details relative to the origin and occasion of the writing of the book, and at the same time know nothing of the vital message of the Scripture contained to a soul that is sick or to a people who need to be spiritually fed. We want a textual knowledge of the Bible itself; we do not just want to know about the Bible.

Further, this course of study should be well prepared by the undergraduate. The Correspondence School is a great institution, and is capable of proving of inestimable benefit to the student. If the young men of our Conferences would register early with the School and take the course through the year leisurely and with thorough preparation of the lessons, the benefit would near equal a course at college itself. No young man can do the work properly by "cramming" for his examinations on six or seven books just before Conference. If the examinations are taken at Conference the books should be prepared during the whole of the year, and not just in the last month or two. The careful and prayerful attention to the Conference course will usually spell success to the young preacher. To neglect this important duty is to indicate the chief characteristic of a whole life-work. C. A. B.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. E. Gray, of Logtown, Miss., called at the Advocate office last Tuesday. His visit was much appreciated.

The 1916-17 catalogue of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., is just off the press. It is well arranged and excellently printed. Dr. R. H. Wynn, the President, will be glad to send catalogues to any who write for them.

Rev. E. G. Wood, our pastor at Standard, La., reports that he is having a good meeting at that point; that fifteen new members had been received, and that probably next year Standard would be made a station.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., the pastor of our church at Dubach, La., has just closed a series of meetings. Rev. J. W. Lee did the preaching. Brother Doss is one of the best equipped ministers of his Conference, and we predict that the work of the Kingdom will ever advance under his leadership.

Mrs. J. S. Summerlin, of Georgetown, Texas, in remitting to the Advocate for her subscription, sends a dollar for the Helping Fund. As our readers know, the Fund is for the purpose of putting the paper in homes where it is needed and where hardship would be worked if pay were demanded.

Rev. C. H. Strait, of Rocky Springs, Miss., who is now on the Honor Roll of the Advocate, had Rev. T. J. O'Neil, President of Port Gibson Female College, with him Sunday, June 18. Brother Strait is doing a good work on his present charge, and his desire is to make this year the best of his ministry.

The secular papers report a great meeting of the Epworth League organization of the State last week at Alexandria, La. Dr. H. M. DuBose was one of the principal speakers. Rev. Paul S. Powell, of Cloversport, Ky., also addressed the Conference. Rev. Mr. Powell stated that in some lines more progress had been made than any like Conference he had attended.

Rev. L. I. McCain, a young minister of the Louisiana Conference, superannuated on account of his health, called at the Advocate office last Saturday. Brother McCain has been in Texas over a year, and he states that he has regained his health. He expects to take work next year. His friends of the Louisiana Conference will rejoice to know of his restoration to health.

Rev. J. A. Poe, of Sidon, Miss., says: "Our work moves on nicely. The Children's Day exercises were splendidly carried out. A protracted meeting will be begun at Sidon on July 1. The collections are being raised. A new organ has just been placed in the church here. The people of the church at Cruger have purchased a lot for a new church, and are now raising funds to build it."

Rev. W. L. Linfield, presiding elder of the Newton District, Mississippi Conference, has sent us his third round for publication. His communication reached us too late for its appearance this week in the proper place, hence the first four appointments are given as follows: Laurel, Second Avenue, June 24, 25; Laurel, First Church, June 25, 26; Laurel, Fourteenth Avenue, June 26; Jasper Circuit, at Holder's, July 1, 2. The full list will appear next week.

The new 1916-17 catalogue of Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La., is being sent out by President Bobbitt. It is a beautiful booklet with a deckled crash cover. The fly-leaf has a half-tone cut of the main building of the college, and the pictures of the 1916 graduates appear on the front pages. Other illustrations from scenes of college life decorate the booklet. We take pleasure in saying that the catalogue is one of the handsomest that has come under our observation.

The following friends have sent us new and renewal subscriptions, for which we thank them: Rev. A. H. Williams, Strongs, Miss., 2; Rev. S. E. Flury, Philadelphia, Miss., 7; Rev. W. W. Murray, Pelahatchie, Miss., 3; Rev. Jas. V. Bennett, Monticello, Miss., 2; Rev. R. A. Tucker, Grenada, Miss., 4; Rev. W. A. Bowlin, Cedar Bluff, Miss., 2; Rev. T. J. Embree, Slidell, La., 5; Rev. B. F. Jones, Moss Point, Miss., 6; Rev. J. D. Harper, Opelousas, La., 2; Rev. W. V. Shearer, Shannon, Miss., 5.

"The Ackerman and Eupora, Miss., Sunday schools have just completed a contest that, in point of numbers and results accomplished, has never been equaled in this section. The spirit of friendly rivalry was good, and did much to cement the already existing friendships. Many additions were made to the Sunday schools and churches. Twenty-four people joined the Bible Class at Ackerman on the last day of the contest. The attendance at Ackerman has never been equaled in any kind of religious work; 1575 represented the total for the four Sundays. Eupora had the fine total of 1150. The efforts of the contest have been conserved and the Sunday schools have greatly increased their average attendance."—Sunday School Worker.

Rev. Robert Selby, our live and splendid Commissioner of Emory University for Mississippi, is greatly encouraged in his work, as indeed he has a right to be. He says: "The interest in Emory University is very stimulating to me, and makes me have faith in the speedy success of the work committed to me. The following letter is from one of our leading laymen: 'My Dear Brother: Your letter of the 27th to hand and noted. I saw Brother ———, who informed me that he had given a date in June to represent Emory University in ———. Every Methodist should answer this call that comes to us through the Church as liberally as he can. It means so much to our future advancement. Very sincerely, ———.' I go to this place with a light heart, assured of success. How delightful it would be to receive replies from many more to whom I have written relative to this great enterprise."

Immediately following his recent visit to Jackson to preach the Commencement sermon of Millsaps College, Bishop Hoss returned to his home at Muskogee, Oklahoma. There is a possibility that he may attend the Seashore Divinity School. The Bishop has charge of our work in the Orient, but will not go abroad this year. It is not unusual for our Conferences in the Far East to be presided over by some missionary on the ground, the actual presence of a Bishop not being considered a necessity. Bishop Hoss has already begun to get the work in Louisiana on his mind and heart, and he expects to be considerably in touch with it before the meeting of the Annual Conference next fall. He is not physically as vigorous as we should like to see him, but he is keenly alive to all the interests of the Church and continues to keep very busy in the Master's service. He has lately held a district conference and filled a number of engagements within the bounds of the Holston Conference.

Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., who is now completing his fourth year at Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, is in high favor with his people. Brother Hill is leading his congregation in making extensive repairs upon the church building, which was partially destroyed by the storm last September. A new floor of inlay work is being put down; new windows of stained glass, bearing pictures representing various Biblical scenes, will be put in; a new pipe organ of modern architectural beauty is being installed; handsome pews will ornament the church; the costly filigree work upon the walls will lend great attractiveness; the lights are hidden, and will cast a soft glow over the auditorium, and the outside of the historic building is being finished to match the interior. We do not believe any church auditorium in the city will present as fine appearance when the workmen are through at Rayne Memorial. Brother Hill has rendered the Louisiana Conference excellent service. He was for two years pastor of Noel Memorial, Shreveport, before coming to New Orleans. Needless to say, his accomplished wife has been of great assistance to him in his important fields of service.

Obituaries.

On May 3, 1916, we laid to rest the body of little JOHN LESTER GREEN, the seven-year-old son of Ira and Addie Green, consecrated Christians. John Lester was a remarkable child, above the average in mind, and a very devout Christian. He showed every mark of good training. He had won to himself a host of friends, young and old. He was buried in the midst of a great throng of weeping friends. His grave was overlaid with a profusion of flowers. Our sympathies and prayers are for the bereaved. His pastor,

D. H. CROWSON.

Mr. J. W. STRONG was born in Hinds County, Miss., on Oct. 18, 1847, and died at his home in Hinds County, Miss., on Jan. 28, 1916. Brother Strong was married twice—first to Miss Mary Jane Ritchey on Nov. 22, 1871. Of this union 13 children were born, 9 of whom are living. On Nov. 15, 1894, this union was severed by the angel of death, who came and took away the wife, who had been his close companion for 23 years. On Jan. 1, 1896, he was married the second time to Miss Mary Elizaheth Ross. Of this union there were no children, but his second wife proved to be a true companion and a faithful matron to this large family of children. Brother Strong leaves a large family to mourn his death and a host of friends. Brother Strong was the father of 13 children; he had 56 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren. He was a good man, a good neighbor, and a consecrated Christian. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church in August, 1890, in a revival meeting at Hickory Ridge, conducted by Revs. V. D. Skipper and N. J. Roberts. Brother Strong lived a consecrated Christian life from the time of his conversion to the day of his death. He served as steward in the Church for a number of years, and was very active in Sunday school and prayer meeting work.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, Rev. P. H. Swan, for thirty-five years an honored and esteemed servant of Christ and the Methodist Church within the bounds of the Alexandria District, has been removed from our ranks by death; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we his fellow-laborers of this District Conference, hereby express our keen sense of the great loss that has been sustained by the Church in the death of Brother Swan. We shall ever cherish the memory of his faithful service and pure life. We are grateful to the Great Head of the Church for the precious heritage of faith and example that Brother Swan leaves to his Church, his family and his country.

Resolved, That we assure his family of our deepest sympathy with them in their sorrow, and pray that the God of all comfort shall abundantly supply all their need in Christ Jesus.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Conference be requested to furnish the family of our deceased brother with a copy of this resolution.

THE REVIVAL AT LEESVILLE, LA.

We have come to the half-way station of the Conference year of 1916, and, therefore, we wish to present to the general public a resume of the work accomplished since the session of our Conference.

After reaching Leesville at the close of the Annual Conference, we began an investigation and careful study of our church and its activities in this field relative to forming plans for the development and extension of the kingdom of God and the strengthening of our beloved Methodism.

We began to plan a forward movement designed especially to the work of increasing the efficiency of our Sunday school. Rev. W. H. Coleman, our Conference Sunday School Secretary, was with us in a two days' institute in the beginning of the year. Our plans for the enlargement of our Sunday school work were carried out as nearly as we could expect. Then the Missionary Society was reorganized with an efficient and effective officiary, and a forward movement plan set in operation which has resulted in the awakening of a larger interest among the ladies of the church.

The Junior and Senior Epworth Leagues were then reorganized, and the departments placed upon a more aggressive basis, and the young life of the Church put to work, in a sense of utility and conservation as never before.

In this connection, I will mention the fact that the Woman's Missionary Society during the year has purchased two fine lots, upon which the new Methodist Church in the future will be erected, and we expect to have the parsonage here in first-class repair by the time the Annual Conference meets.

We have been working from the beginning of the year, looking with an expectancy that the Lord would pour out his Spirit upon the people; to that end, we have prayed and we have preached. We arranged with Rev. D. L. Coale, one of our general evangelists, and Prof. Spindler, his singer, to conduct a revival for us beginning Sunday, May 28. Up to the beginning of the revival, the pastor had received into the Church since Conference at Leesville 78 members in various ways. Brother Coale came to Leesville and opened the campaign and remained with us two full weeks, and Leesville never in its history witnessed such a religious awakening, there being more than 400 conversions and reclamations during the meeting. Our church will get about one hundred new members; up to this writing more than 75 have been received, and there are several other applicants. The other churches of the city will get a goodly number.

I wish to add a few things concerning the evangelist. Brother Coale is one of the strongest evangelists in the field to-day. He is one of the sanest men in that particular work; he not only has a message for the unsaved, but he tones up the church. His closing sermon, "Why I am a Methodist," is worth any expense in any meeting. When he had closed that sermon in Leesville, more than fifty persons were received into the church. At the great closing service of consecration several young people gave their lives for special Christian work—three to the ministry, one to special Sunday school work, one young lady to missionary work and one for special Christian work at home.

Our cause in Leesville has been advanced and the Spirit of the Lord is here. Christians have been built up and united as never before. The spirit of optimism and service prevails.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL,

June 27-July 6.

The following letter is from a presiding elder, one of the leading preachers of his Conference, within the territory of the Seashore Divinity School. It is strong, and speaks for his estimate of this institution.

"Dear Brother Selby: Your recent communication to hand. I will be present to take in the whole of the Seashore Divinity School and am doing all I can to get every man on the District to be present.

"Hope we may have a most delightful session. I am in hearty accord with the school and think we ought to make as much of it as possible.

"With best wishes,

Yours fraternally."

Every presiding elder in the four Conferences has recently had a letter from me regarding the coming session of the school, and it is to be hoped that all of them can be with us.

Bishop Hoss, in charge of the Louisiana Conference, will be with us if possible. Bishop Murrah, who has charge of the Conferences in Mississippi, assured me the other day that he was making his plans to be present. Bishop Denny, in charge of the Alabama Conference, would be with us if it were possible.

It is expected that this will be one of the very best sessions we have had.

Let all of the undergraduates of the four Conferences be present to study and pass their examinations.

Remember the date: June 27-July 6, 1916. ROBT. SELBY,

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The Fourteenth Annual Session of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League met at Biloxi, June 8-11, 1916, with President W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian, presiding. In the absence of the Secretary, Tom Peebles of Meridian was elected Secretary pro tem. The first day was devoted to the following: 5 a. m., sunrise prayer meeting on the beach; 9 a. m., devotions at Methodist Church by Rev. J. L. Neill; 9:30 a. m., business session conducted by W. D. Hawkins. The President delivered his annual address, in which he set out plans whereby the Epworth League of this Conference, with the assistance of the Sunday School Board, provide a suitable place, along the coast where a summer vacation ground could be fitted up for the Methodist young people. In accordance with these suggestions, the Plan of Work Committee outlined more materially the work that they would propose and further recommend that the President, Secretary, and Treasurer of this Conference confer with a like committee from the Sunday School Board, and that this committee be empowered to act as they saw fit toward securing this ground, etc.

The discussion that characterized the first day was along the line of the Devotional Department, the Literary Department, and the Knights of Ezelah, the latter being handled by Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Meridian. Dr. H. M. DuBose of Nashville, Tenn., was present and delivered several masterful addresses on the Epworth League work. Rev. Paul S. Powell, of Cloversport, Ky., gave added inspiration through his well prepared discourses; he proved to be an able League worker. Round tables were conducted on the Missionary Department, Recreation, and Culture Department, and things essential to efficient administration.

The Millsaps quartet being unable to attend, Rev. J. S. Duke headed an improvised quartet composed of himself, Tom Peebles, Seth Pool of Meridian and Otto Porter of Rose Hill, who rendered special music throughout the session of the Conference. Rev. J. S. Duke, of Jackson, favored the Conference with solos.

The sunrise prayer meetings were of an inspirational nature. These were conducted every morning on the beach in a pavilion donated to the use of the Conference by the Riviera Hotel owners. At one service twelve young people gave themselves as volunteers to special work.

The visitors were favored with a boat ride on the Gulf Saturday afternoon. A devotional service was conducted on the boat by Rev. J. L. Neill and a general expression service followed in which every person aboard had something to say. The quartet furnished music for the occasion, assisted at intervals by the entire company. One afternoon was given to automobiling. The Annual sermon was preached Sunday, the 11th, by Rev. Paul S. Powell.

Sunday evening at seven o'clock a rally service was held at the Methodist Church which was participated in by all the visiting Leaguers, the local Leaguers and the Christian Endeavors. Mr. Hawkins led the meeting, which consisted of testimonies, songs, prayers, etc. At the close a call for volunteers resulted in three young persons stating that they had already made the decision previously and were in preparation at the present time; one was preparing himself for medical mission service.

The Conference came to a close Sunday night, with Dr. H. M. DuBose the principal speaker. The Conference adopted a resolution favoring unification of the Methodist Church in the United States, said resolution being previously published in the Advocate.

Officers were elected to serve the ensuing year, as follows: President, W. D. Hawkins, Meridian; Vice President, Thos D. Hendrix, Jackson; Secretary, Tom R. Peebles, Meridian; Treasurer, Rev. L. F. Alford, Saucier; Era Agent, Miss Georgia Jordan, Hattiesburg.

Secretary.

CATARRH A BLOOD DISEASE

Because Catarrh affects the nose and throat, it has been common practice to treat it with salves, washes and sprays applied to these parts. This mode of treatment cannot give permanent relief, and if overdone may aggravate the trouble. Catarrh cannot be trifled with. It is caused by mpure and diseased blood. The one treatment that has proven effective in the treatment of Catarrh is S. S. S., the greatest blood purifier and blood tonic known. It relieves the cause of Catarrh by giving new life to the red blood corpuscles and stimulating the flow so that it has the vitality to throw off the poison and germs from the system. Get S. S. depends largely on the sufferer's ability to upbuild a weakened system, and thus hasten a return of normal body functions.

In this effort much depends on fresh air—night and day—and rest and good food. The patient should refrain from work that overtaxes, and all sanitary precautions should be taken. These commonsense measures do not always achieve the desired results unless aided by proper medication.

It is here that Eckman's Alterative has evidenced its worth, for in many cases it has effected lasting benefit. And often such troubles seem to yield to it.

FERNWOOD, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our uniou evangelistic meeting is over, and is a thing of the past. Taking everything in consideration, it was one of the most pleasant meetings it has ever been my privilege to participate in. Everytbing was in readiness when the time came for the meeting to start: the preacher was on time and everything moved off without a hitch. The preaching was of the very highest order from start to finish, and the singing, which is always a very essential part of a revival meeting, came up to expectations. Dr. Thacker and Mr. Jelks make a very strong force, and their services will be a benediction to this community for many years to come. Such seed sowing can only prove fruitless where the soil is faulty.

The whole church life of the community was lifted to a higher vision, stronger conviction, and fixed purpose to live a more consecrated life. The total results as to membership will be about 51 in all, something like 18 or 20 coming into our church.

There are less objectionable features about Dr. Thacker than any evangelist with whom I have ever worked. In fact, it would be hard to pick an objection, while there are many of the very finest marks of the very best preaching. He will always do it a little better than you will expect. His sermons are models, and are not overdone in any respect. His aim from start to finish is tbe truth. Mr. Jelks is a good soloist and a good leader, and is very good with the young people.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, the Alexandria District Conference, now in session at Alexandria, La., is the fourth and last Conference over which the Rev. H. W. May, our beloved presiding elder, will preside, such being true by the law of limitation of our Church;

And whereas the said Rev. H. W. May, during the four years of his encumbency in tbis relation, has unstintedly invested his whole life iu the responsible position in which he has been placed;

And whereas be has labored botb day and night with prayers, painstaking and untiring zeal for the welfare of the great Church of our Redeemer, therefore be it

Resolved, first, That we, the members of tbis District Conference, do hereby most heartily endorse the work done by him, and we do fully appreciate the brotherly spirit and wise council of our efficient presiding elder.

Be it resolved, second, That we most beartily commend Brother May to whatever field to which he may be assigned after the completion of his quadrennium as presiding elder of the district.

Be it resolved, third, That we are not unmindful of the significant fact that the Alexandria District has bad four years of unprecedented success under the wise and able leadership of Rev. H. W. May, and for this and many otber important reasons we sincerely regret that under the law of the Church his relations to us, in this capacity, shall so soon come to an end.

And be it resolved, fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the journal of this Conference, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

"FRUIT IN OLD AGE."

"I have just come in from my farm," said an old citizen to me recently, "where I have seen a wonderful sight. I saw some old fruit trees just loaded with fruit, that I have never known to bear before." The farm had been in his family since pioneer days, over one hundred years.

I clutched the lesson for myself, and for my people. There are slumbering possibilities in all of us. Some of these unresponsive Christians are going to wake up some day.

There are people who never did anything for the church who are going to surprise us with fruit-bearing, and some of these dry, withered branches, "bare, ruined choirs where once the sweet birds sang," are going to burst forth into fruit and singing again.

"MY DAUGHTER!"

In these words is reflected a mother's pride. In the joy behind them is her reward for the pain and sacrifice she so willingly gave and the loving forethought she so wisely exercised.

Her daughter—now a woman—noble in character, pure in heart, charming in personality, sensible in mind and cultured in her accomplishments.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT MEETING.

At ten o'clock on the morning of May 23, 1916, the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Shreveport District, was called to order in the chapel of the Noel Memorial Church by the district secretary, Mrs. Ben Johnson.

After prayer by Miss Gatewood, the devotional services were conducted by Mrs. Munday. The subject was "Watch and Pray," and a number of pertinent Bible verses were read containing those key-words to success. The devotional program was closed with a silent prayer, followed by the Lord's Prayer in concert.

Mrs. Bliss, our Conference President, made a good talk on "The Whirlwind Campaign, Its Success and Failures." Interesting reports were given from the various auxiliaries on their "Campaign Week." The most inspirational report came from Greenwood. While a number of auxiliaries have tried to "win one" during the campaign, Greenwood is the only one that has succeeded in landing hers, and presented to us Flournoy, a real live auxiliary with twelve members. It was suggested by Mrs. Holt that an account of this "Organization in a Box Car," which was so interesting to all, be sent on to Mrs. Lipscomb for use as inspirational literature. Mrs. Sexton and Miss Gatewood reported a Young People's and a Junior Society at Longstreet.

Mrs. Sebastian gave a beautiful song as a fitting close to the morning session.

The meeting adjourned to assemble in the main auditorium, where a plea for "a missionary society in every church in the district" was made to the preachers of the district. The plea was made in a forceful and appealing manner. The work of the Missionary Society in its various phases and forms was presented to the preachers, and our prayer is that this call for their help will ring in their ears throughout the years.

The morning session was closed around the altar in Holy Communion, after which the assembly was invited into the dining hall for a tempting lunch prepared and served by the ladies of the Noel Memorial, Queensborough, and Texas Avenue Churches.

The meeting reassembled at 11:30, and, after a devotional service led by Mrs. J. C. Foster, Mrs. Bliss gave to us the inspiration that she had received at the Council Meeting as she so charmingly presented to us our needs in Latin America and told us about the consecration of our deaconesses and missionaries, and gave to us Dr. Mary Stone's message to the Council.

Each auxiliary represented took part in the discussion of "Our Auxiliary Aim for 1916." We are glad to note that our auxiliaries are fast learning that the only way to accomplish much is by having definite plans for the year and working all through the year to carry out these plans.

Mrs. Sexton made a call for supplies and met with such hearty cooperation that a number of boxes of jellies, preserves, flowers, and table linen were promised without hesitation.

The institute on Young People's work conducted by Mrs. Holt was most helpful—there were only three Young People's auxiliaries represented—Shreveport (First Church), Greenwood, and Mansfield. Mrs. C. K. Sheppard, of Mansfield, has charge of the Young People's work in the Shreveport District now, and she made such a strong appeal for a Young People's auxiliary in every church in the district that before the meeting had adjourned there were those that had determined to organize young people's societies in their own churches. We feel sure that through her zeal and untiring efforts the young people's work, which is so important and has been so neglected, will go forward now in our district as it has never done.

Miss Gatewood, in her usual pleasing manner, told us of her work with the Juniors, and, with her as guide and "Jack and Janet" as companions, we took a hurried but very interesting trip around the world in the fifteen minutes that had been assigned to her.

There were twelve auxiliaries represented: First Church, Adult, Young People, Juniors, and Gleaners; Greenwood, Adult and Young People; Grand Cane; Mansfield, Adult and Young People; Logansport, Leesville, and Noel Memorial.

We adjourned feeling that the district meeting had been worth every effort that had been put into it and that the auxiliaries represented had received great good from the fellowship and instruction of the day.

The next meeting will be held in Mansfield, unless we shall be so fortunate as to be invited to meet with the preachers again.

SUE NABORS LOGAN,
Secretary.

SARDIS DISTRICT MEETING.

The W. M. S. of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, met with Charleston Auxiliaries on Tuesday, May 9, at 3 p. m., with Mrs. D. B. High, District Secretary, in the chair. Ten adult, two young people's, and one junior society were represented by eighteen delegates and fifteen visitors. The reports showed an increase in finances, new organizations and new members. The papers and discussions were spirited and helpful during the entire Conference. We were very fortunate in having our Conference President, Mrs. J. W. Conger, with us during the entire Conference, whose broad knowledge and wise counsel assured the success of the sessions. The evening hour was filled by her and the messages she brought from the recent Council Meeting were filled with spirit. Each one present caught a vision of the life of service for our King.

We were sorry, indeed, that Mrs. T. W. Woodward, our capable second vice president was detained at home on account of illness.

Many were the expressions of gratitude by the visitors and delegates for the hospitality and untiring efforts of the pastor, Brother Mounger; Mrs. O. H. Brown, the Conference hostess, and the Charleston people, who royally entertained them. Coldwater was unanimously selected as the place for holding the Conference in 1917.

TWO ITEMS OF IMPORTANCE.

First, the second quarter is fast drawing to its close, and there should be $150 in the treasury for our Mississippi Wesley House pledge. We gave such a magnificent (?) sum ($9.55) the first quarter.

Children of the King, is this the way to show our love and allegiance? These women at our Wesley Houses are working among Christ's less fortunate ones; they are giving their time, strength, themselves, and is it asking too much of us to help them do their work in a more efficient way, so that they can reach and help larger numbers?

It is a great privilege to be allowed to help in advancing God's kingdom, and all who do will be richly blessed. "Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom." That is the promise of the blessing which comes to us. Now, cannot we make our offering such a blessing to the Wesley Houses this quarter? Let's give "good measure," even to "running over."

The second item we call attention to is the holding of the quarterly executive meeting. It is of great importance, for, by systematically observing it, each quarter all reports will be properly filled out and will reach their destination on time. One suggestion we would make: Where you can not fill out a report for some good reason, sign and return same to the Conference officer. It will prove to her that you are at least interested enough in the work to try to do your part. Conference officers sometimes feel, and rightly so, that a long silence from an auxiliary means it has died and passed out of existence. If you are alive you have no desire to be classed among the dead.

JACKSON DISTRICT NOTES.

Our "beloved," Brother P. D. Hardin, has completed his second round of conferences, and has some encouraging reports from the charges.

In assessments made for the support of the ministry, there is an increase over the district of about $500 above the assessments of last year.

The general spiritual condition of the district is encouraging. There are practically no complaints from any of the brethren about coldness and indifference among the members, but rather reports of growing interest and faithfulness.

Our district is moving forward in the work of the Epworth League. Four or five new Leagues have been organized, and some of the older ones have taken on new life and energy. The League and Madison Station is doing a fine work, and is being well attended by the young people.

One of the local deacons of our church, Rev. B. L. Spruill, is at the home of his son in Canton, critically ill. He is one of the purest and best men we have in the Church.

The recent revival in Yazoo City bore splendid fruit. The work accomplished was deep, quiet and spiritual, and of such a serious nature as not soon to be forgotten. The Sunday school, Woman's Societies, prayer meeting and family religion, all received wonderful impetus from it. Between 30 and 40 were added to the Church.

Like a Boy at 50 Bubbling Over With Vitality—Taking Iron Did It

Doctor says Nuxated Iron is greatest of all strength builders—Often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks time.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fifteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctored for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M.D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

THE TRUNK LINE RAILWAYS OFFER TO ARBITRATE.

New York, N. Y., June 15, 1916.

Settlement of the National Railway wage controversy either by arbitration under the present law, or preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, for a thorough and speedy investigation was proposed by the railways to-day at a conclusion of the conference in New York with the train service Brotherhoods and refused by the Brotherhoods chiefs, who announced that they will go back to the men immediately for a strike vote. The railways point out that the Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control by rate regulation of the income of the railway situation, is in a position to avert a national strike and settle the controversy with justice to the employers and the public.

The National Conference Committee of the Railways, in making this proposal to the Brotherhoods, states:

"The National Conference Committee of the railways has carefully considered your proposals and your explanations of their meaning and intended for application. In our judgment, no reasons developed during our conferences to justify the extraordinary changes in operating methods and practices and the large expenditures for additional facilities which your proposals involve, nor was anything presented to justify your requested radical revision of the established basis of compensation for men in engine, train and yard service. The present rates and rules are largely the result of recent arbitration awards, and in our judgment now provide for the liberal compensation and favorable working conditions; moreover, the best obtainable estimates indicate that your proposals would increase the cost of operation of the railroads approximately one hundred million dollars a year, all of which must eventually be borne by the public.

"We are confident that you and the men you represent appreciate the responsibilities of this Committee to three substantial interests, viz:

"1. (a) To the employes here involved, whose effcient service is acknowledged and with whom the railways have no difference which cannot be considered fairly and decided justly by some impartial body.

"(b) To all other employes of the railways whose material welfare should not suffer because of the preference of any particular group of fellow-workers.

"2. To the owners of the railways, who have a right to participate in the earnings of their business on a fair and equitable basis.

"3. To the public, who are vitally interested in the maintenance of uninterrupted and efficient transportation service and whose ultimate control of the situation we all recognize as fundamental.

"We reiterate the statement given by the railways to their men and repeated to you by this Committee. The railways have no desire to change either the existing rates of pay or working rules, nor to reduce the earning possibilities of the employes under the existing schedules, but your proposals in connection with the interpretations given during our conferences are so inherently and fundamentally opposed to the views of this Committee that we feel constrained to decline and do hereby decline them.

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and distinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals (consisting of articles 1 to 4 inclusive, referred to during our conferences as Form 35) and the proposition of the railways, viz:

"That in connection with and as a part of the consideration and disposition of your proposals, there shall be open for consideration and disposition those provisions in the schedules or practices thereunder governing compensation in the classes of service affected by your proposals, or those in conflict with the following principals as they apply to such classes:

"(a) No double compensation for the same time or service.

"(b) The same classification for the purposes of compensation to be applied to all members of a train and engine crew.

"(c) Two or more differently paid classes of service performed in the same day or trip to be paid proportional rates according to class of service.

"These points are to be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

"1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable, or in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or,

"2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Law, entitled 'An Act providing for mediation, conciliation and arbitration in controversies between certain employers and their employes,' approved July 15, 1913, and commonly known as the Newlands Act. This Committee urges the most careful consideration of the proposals herein made for submission of the controversy to a Federal tribunal to the end that a peaceable and equitable adjustment may be brought about."

SHANNON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Yesterday (Sunday) was a red letter day with us in Shannon. I was in only five services during the day. I went out three miles east of town and held nine o'clock preaching service and organized a Sunday school in a fertile missionary field section. At 11 o'clock I preached here; at 3 p. m. I preached to a congregation of some 200 or more, some four miles from Shannon, in another fine country section. Then, at 5 o'clock we had a decoration service at the cemetery, and at 8 o'clock p. m. I preached to another large, appreciative congregation. I hold regularly three services every Sunday but on special occasions, such as above referred to, I hold four or five services and quite frequently I hold those extra services, for I believe our surrounding country territory ought to be looked after. Every section has a missionary field that ought to be developed, and I feel that it is not only my duty, but it is a great opportunity to accomplish something. I get great blessings out of the work.

FROM AN APPOINTED SCRIBE.

Called to be a scribe by the Presiding Elder, to the scattered saints in the Port Gibson District, greeting.

The job is honorable, and dates back to antiquity. I am in company with such fellows as Seraiah, Sheva, Shaphar, Shebna, Shavsha, Shemaiah, Shimshai, and others in Old Testament times; in company with Lazarus (?), Gamaliel (?) and Saul (?) in New Testament times, and in fraternity with a fellow like Dr. Holloman in modern times, a lucid writer of nigh altitude.

One objection to writing is that it fills up space which Dr. Holloman, or the Editor, could use to great advantage. It also puts additional burdens upon a patient typesetter down in New Orleans. "Great Caesar," said the compositor when he looked at the copy furnished by a new Editor, "if Belshazzar had seen this writing on the wall, he would have been more terrified than he was."

If the Presiding Elder would seige his pen and write like he preaches, he would not need to say to a nondescript like me, "Send a few squibs to the Advocate." It is likely, however, that he is too busy to write, and needs time to rest after preaching in mid-week, and on the Sabbath, holding quarterly conferences, and dealing with the onerous affairs of a big district. Moreover, he is milking, and trying to make gentle a new Jersey cow. When be was in these parts recently he was not only mistaken for W. W. Hopper, but he preached at a country place on Saturday at 11 a. m., refused a piece of pie at the noon hour, and in the afternoon held the quarterly conference. The next day he preached three times, rode twenty miles in an automobile, and when supper-time came he was orthodox enough to pass his plate for another piece of chicken. Once recently, in the southern end of the district, he reached a good country home after dark, ate supper at 9 o'clock, went to bed at an unsanctimonious hour, and got up for an early breakfast. It was Josh Billings who said: "Rize arly, work hard, live on wheet you kant sell, give nothing awa' and if you don't die ritch, and go tu the devil, yu ma sue me for damages."

Occasionally the presiding elder rides as many as fifteen miles behind a lazy mule, over a rough road, to a country appointment, and then back again to the railroad, where he catches the train for some other appointment, or back to headquarters where accumulated duties await. If a presiding elder gets to hear the birds sing at mid-day, he also gets to hear the chickens crow and the dogs bark at daylight. If he lives off the fat of the land, the bedbugs occasionally live off of him. If he gets to ride in an automobile, he also rides behind a tired work-horse, or a superannuated mule. If the high-steeple church pays him in advance, 'Possum Valley Circuit makes him preach on a credit. If he gets to see the landscapes, he also 'scapes being with his family much of the time. To an onlooker, the office has its pleasant features and furnishes many opportunities for doing good. Yet, there are concomitants which a man may overlook who covets the job.

A recent quarterly conference at Cool Springs was largely attended, and some of the stewards present came from a distance of twelve or fifteen miles. That looks like old times being restored.

N. S. Loftus, though only a supply, is making good in all respects. He is a bright, active, enthusiastic young fellow, and is reputed by his people to be a good preacher.

R. F. Harrell is in his fourth year at Centerville, and is wondering where he will land next December. Harrell is a faithful, self-sacrificing pastor, and preaches well. The man who follows him will not find it easy, because he does many things besides preach. If Dr. Sharbrough should wish to trade Harrell at Conference, the presiding elder who makes the swap will get a "good, all-round work-horse just nine years old."

The Methodists at Roxie have bought desirable lots in town, and are preparing to build a new church, under the leadership of T. J. O'Neil, who towers high as college president and pastor. This scribe heard him preach the Commencement sermon at Woodville recently, which greatly pleased and edified the people. O'Neil is already tall beyond the average and still growing.

C. H. Herring, of the Woodville Circuit, is kept busy serving one of the largest charges in the Conference. He meanders over hills and valleys, meadows and glades, the Switzerland of Mississippi, and where at certain seasons of the year may be seen every color of the rainbow. Several places within the bounds of Herring's circuit would do to hold the General Judgment. He often hears the birds sing, and saucy squirrels perch themselves upon bending bows, as he rides along, or scamper across the road ahead of him. Some of the streams abound in fish, and partridges buzz through the air, or cry "old Bob White" from every direction. Herring catches a fish occasionally, fails to do so semi-occasionally, and will punish the squirrels and quail this fall for their summer impudence.

A Woodville preacher said recently that there will be no marrying in heaven, because there will not be enough men up there to go around!

I wonder if Dr. Holloman can write poetry?

Mary had some little shoes:
They hurt at heel and toe,
But everywhere that Mary went,
The shoes were sure to go.
She tripped in them to school one day,
As was her daily custom:
Now she has some blooming corns,
Like other girls in Christendom.

"Brethren," said a preacher at the close of an effort, "I had a great subject, but it caved in on me."

Inasmuch as my job is about to do some caving toward the ridiculous, I'll close with this truth:

A Wilkinson County layman affirmed recently that "some preachers can take up a great deal of time to say mighty little." The presiding elder was within earshot, and I cautioned him against speaking too loudly, as the Elder might hear him.

DISCUSSION IN ORDER.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, in last week's issue of his paper earestly deprecates the discussion in the Church press of the difficulties in the way of Methodist unification and writes vehemently in favor of having the Church at large remain quiet for a time, awaiting further developments. We agree with Dr. Ivey to the extent of feeling that it is very unfortunate that the Church must be agitated and torn up over this unification question; but, in view of the situation, we can now see no safe way to escape a thorough sifting of the whole matter to the very bottom in the public prints and other such forums as may be open to our preachers and people. If the union movement had been allowed to take the natural and expected course—if the action of our General Conference had been permitted to go to the General Conference of the Church, North, as officially communicated to it, and if that body had been let take such action as it might have pleased to do, without interference by the ultra-unionists from the South who found their way to Saratoga, and the whole question had then come back in a normal manner to our representatives on the Federal Council of Methodism, according to the provisions of our General Conference—it might have been possible for the negotiations to have gone forward to a more advanced stage without any great agitation and excitement throughout the Church. But unhappily this was not done, and Dr. Ivey is one of the gentlemen who has contributed largely toward a very different course of events, resulting in the development of a situation which he now deplores and would like to remedy.

In order to make this clear, let us briefly note what took place at Saratoga and in the weeks immediately following the Conference session there. When the Northern General Conference adopted the paper that had been prepared by the Special Committee of Sixty, our Senior Bishop, representing one of the co-ordinate departments of our Church government and emphasizing expressly his official position, declared both from the platform and in the Daily Advocate published at Saratoga that the union of American Methodism had virtually been effected, that only a few minor and unimportant details remained to be worked out; and he even went further and influenced the Northern General Conference to adjourn subject to the call of their Bishops that the finishing touches might be put upon the assured linking together of the two Churches with the least possible delay. The whole tenor of his utterances was that everything of consequence had been settled by the Saratoga action. Other ministers of the Southern Church spoke or wrote in the organ of the Conference in a similar strain, and even Brother Ivey declared on the ground that unification was "at our very gates." Nor was this all. He sweepingly endorsed in our General Organ the course of Bishop Hendrix at Saratoga, who, he said, had "proved himself so ready for every demand and opportunity." And he also printed on the cover page of the Nashville Advocate a large picture of Bishop Cranston and Bishop Hendrix, with an inscription underneath as follows: "THE HANDCLASP OF A UNIFIED METHODISM." Mark you, not in contemplation of the unification of the Churches, but of a "UNIFIED Methodism."

It was but natural under such circumstances that Southern Methodists at home should scrutinize eagerly the paper setting forth the Saratoga scheme of union, which we had been told by our eminent volunteer leaders had so related the long separated Churches that nothing could stay the full completion of the happy merger. But when we turned to it, what did we find? We found that nothing had really been definitely endorsed except the abstract principle of unification by reorganization, the application of this principle being left to be worked out as to every essential point at issue. More than this, two adverse recommendations were made: one which insisted on keeping the Negroes in the Church, and the other declaring for one General Conference supreme in all legislative, executive, and judicial functions—the same two hobbies that the Church, North, has been hanging to ever since American Methodism was riven in twain. Yet we were told that we were already practically united with the Church, North. Not one of our volunteer leaders who had figured at Saratoga seemed to regard these recommendations of the Northern Church, made so explicitly, as obstacles of serious consequence. Not one of them uttered a word as to the necessity of safeguarding the delicate interests of the Church, South, at these challenged points, upon which our General Conference had been so emphatic. On the contrary, the most conspicuous of them declared that we had been wandering in the wilderness and playing the fool for forty years, and he broke clear away from the Oklahoma City plan of preserving the essential integrity of the Church, South, and affirmed that the chief benefit of the union assured would not be in the doing away of "overlapping" and competition, but in bringing the North to the South and carrying the South to the North—in a general intermingling.

What was left for those of us who could not stand for the Saratoga plan of union, taken as its face value, to do under these conditions except to hold it up before our people and show them what would be involved in its acceptance? This we proceeded to do, and we are now emphatically reminded that everything is "tentative" and that we should wait for the Commission yet to be appointed to ascertain what the Church, North, really stands for and to see if they cannot work out some kind of a plan of union. Pray tell us, then, what were the Southerners celebrating and shouting over at Saratoga? For five years this matter has been in the hands of Commissions and General Conferences (including two of the latter bodies of the M. E. Church), but it seems that we have not yet succeeded in really getting a single thing beyond the "tentative" stage except a mere abstract resolution that unification by some sort of reorganization is "desirable and feasible." We rather suspect that the warring nations of Europe could easily agree on a declaration that peace by a readjustment of territory and the assumption of indemnities is "desirable and feasible," but the real crux would come, as everybody knows, in the concrete application of these principles to existing conditions.

To be sure, the discussion of the various aspects of the union project that has been going on is stirring up interest and some feeling among our people, and if this is to some extent harmful, the blame, we think, should rest upon Dr. Ivey and the gentlemen (whom he has endorsed) that were not content to let the negotiations proceed through the prescribed channels, but who have sought to commit us in a precipitate manner to a scheme of union vastly different from that for which our General Conference has spoken. These gentlemen broke into the arena and raised the issue; but now apparently they do not want the other side of it presented.

But there is another reason why we do not think that this effort to hush up discussion comes with very good grace from our connectional Editor, and that is, that he has never during the past four or five years given Southern Methodists a chance to express their convictions concerning this momentous issue through his columns. When the Joint Commission on Federation completed its labors in May, 1911, by adopting its well known plan of unification, although it was published all over the North, and though we printed it in the New Orleans Advocate, he took the position that it would be improper for him so much as to even publish it until our members of the Joint Commission had submitted their report to our General Conference of 1914 (so the general Church knew very little of what was in contemplation when that body acted); and after our General Conference had approved the plan, he kept his columns closed to discussion on the ground that it was wise to wait until after the Northern General Conference had gone to record. And now he insists that there should be no adverse utterances in the public prints until the Joint Commission has met again and threshed out matters. Who knows when that body will meet, or whether its conclusions will be made known to the public before our General Conference of 1918? Even if its findings were available, if our confrere should adhere to his former course, he would not print it until then. We think that discussion of the question of union in all its ramifications is now eminently proper. We believe in appointing a commission to confer with our Northern brethren, thus giving them another opportunity to state their position plainly and unequivocally—a thing that, after two trials in a General Conference, they ought to have done at Saratoga. But in the meantime we think it is well for our people to express themselves and let our commissioners know what their sentiments are. If we should sit silently

INTERVIEW WITH BISHOP HENDRIX AT SARATOGA SPRINGS.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix, the senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and ten years longer in the Episcopacy than Bishop Cranston, the Chairman of the Commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church, consented to an interesting and authentic interview concerning the certainty of union between the two Churches.

He was asked, "Why has the union of the two Churches been delayed so long?"

"The old sectional differences brought about by the Civil War seemed irremovable, but gradually the older men have died, and the younger men have grown up without these prejudices. The Spanish-American War finally removed ill feeling between the North and South and cemented the people together as one nation. They found it easy to fight together under one flag, although old General Joe Wheeler forgot himself in Cuba and cried out, 'Give it to the Yankees!'

"Furthermore, the fellowship of recent years has proved the commonality of our interests and spirit. We have also had many issues in common, such as that of temperance. The Southerner realized that the negro must be protected from liquor and was able more promptly to bring in prohibition because he was not hampered by an influx of immigrants, and thus he had a more homogenous population. Common interest in the Spanish War and an increasing recognition of common moral interests brought us together."

"Was there any former effort made to combine?"

"We both have played the fool for forty years, like the Israelities in the wilderness. The Cape May Commission in 1876 proposed almost the identical basis for union as that which we are about to adopt, but in 1876, when it was proposed, too many men who had been in the war were still alive and held the bitterness of the battle days. We were so widely separated by the acrimony of discussion at that time that it was not possible until recently to get together. The Southern Church has every reason to be a part of the general Church, because we founded the work in Ohio, Indiana and New England."

"What are the differences between the two Churches?"

"They are very minor. In the first place, the Bishops in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have the power of veto over any unconstitutional legislation passed by the General Conference. They have only exercised it two or three times: once when the General Conference stipulated that ministers should be tried, not alone by ministers but by laymen and ministers, the Bishops believing that this was not fair to the ministers, except their tryers should be of their own kind. The other was when an effort was made to change the name of the Church to simply Methodist Church, and the Bishops believed that lost power could not be thus wasted. We also have lay delegates in our Annual Conferences, each presiding elder's district being allowed to elect four, who sit with the ministers on all questions of the Church in the Annual Conference, save that of ministerial character. We also have a time limit of four years for pastors. We do not require a two-thirds vote for the election of Bishops, only demanding a majority, but there are advantages in the two-thirds rule. We made an effort a few years ago to restate the Creed, but that was dropped in anticipation of a coming union, when all Methodists could co-operate. The colored members in the Methodist Episcopal Church also checked our negotiations, until we agreed upon the plan to set them apart in a district where they could elect their own Bishops and officers and still hold representation in the greater Quadrennial General Conference."

"Will polities create friction?"

"No, for increasingly, both in the North and South, the independent voter is being recognized. Once the South was Democratic and the North Republican, but recently some unsatisfactory Democratic administrations and unusual independence in voting have removed political prejudices."

"Will the Church be made stronger by the union?"

"Yes, we will save an overlapping, although that does not exist to any great extent. Our greatest benefit will be in being able to mix the unique gifts of each branch of the Church. The South needs the vigor and the energy of the North, while the Northern Church needs the fervor and emotionalism and warmth of the Southern Church. Bishop Foster was wont to say that the only way to save Methodism was to combine these two forces and intermix the gifts so that the whole would be benefited. Old Benjamin Butler said once that the Union would never be absolute until the Methodist Church was again united."

"Do the two Churches have common difficulties?"

"Yes. Southerners once went to Church regularly, but they are now getting as careless as the North. We have much difficulty in securing Sunday night audiences. The automobile has injured the city Church, while to some extent it has helped the country Church. We also find it difficult to make our Church periodicals pay. Our Church has not had the strain of materialism upon it through working in the great Eastern industrial centers as has the Methodist Episcopal Church. If we can combine the ingenuity and modern-method spirit of the North with the stirring spirituality and possibly somewhat more of the evident simplicity of the South in its religious life, we are almost certain to take this country for Christ. When the union is effected, one in every three persons in the United States will be a Methodist adherent."

"Do you think it is possible for the union to fail?"

"I do not know of a single outstanding man in the Southern Church opposed to it. We are agreed in our plans down to a few trifling details. It will now only be necessary for the Commission to work much like a conference committee between the Senate and House in the United States Congress. It is possible for our General Conference to adopt the basis of union in two years and for the authorities in the Methodist Episcopal Church to call a special session of the General Conference, which could appropriately meet at Baltimore, where the Methodist Episcopal Church was first organized, a few months afterward and make the union official, so that in 1920 the General Conference which will meet would represent the Methodism of America as a single and compact body."—Texas Christian Advocate.

BISHOP HENDRIX VS. BISHOP HENDRIX.

(In view of the fact that Bishop Hendrix belittles and treats as trivial the differences between the governments of the two Episcopal Methodisms in the United States in the foregoing interview, it is interesting to note the following utterance which he (himself) incorporated into the Episcopal Address to our General Conference of 1910, which was written and read by him.—Editor of the N. O. Advocate.)

Methodism Under the Constitution.

This being the completion of a century of Methodist history under the constitution which our fathers so wisely adopted in 1808 (the same year that they gave us our first American Bishop—McKendree), we are reminded that for a hundred years the Bishops have been following the example set by him of presenting a formal address at the opening session of each delegated General Conference. We may fitly pause to consider to what extent we owe to organized Methodism the strength and efficiency of our system. Our very growth has determined largely our history and our government and polity. The most democratic of all the Churches, recognizing chiefly the paternal oversight of Thomas Coke and Francis Asbury (who were chosen superintendents by the whole body of preachers), the superintendents or Bishops were first members of the General Conferences, with all the rights and privileges of members, making motions and voting. This continued even after the actual membership in the General Conference was limited to ministers of four years' standing. When the rapid growth of the Church, now so widely extended, made necessary a delegated General Conference in 1808, they delegated to it all their power and authority under given restrictions, which Restrictive Rules could only be changed by vote of the body of the preachers in the Annual Conferences. Membership in this delegated General Conference was determined either by seniority or election, as each Annual Conference might determine for itself; but for a hundred years it has been invariably by election. This became the legislative department of the Church, restrained only by the Restrictive Rules. In doubtful legislation Bishop McKendree sought the judgment of the Annual Conferences, and so held in check what seemed unconstitutional acts. Bishop Soule, who drew up the constitution, took the same view as Bishop McKendree as to what powers were delegated to the General Conference, and these views of the two great framers and interpreters of the constitution early and fully prevailed in that part of American Methodism which for two generations has been known by the legal style of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The So-Called Veto Power of the Bishops.

In 1854 a majority of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, gave the Bishops authority to interpose their objections to any legislation that was deemed by them unconstitutional until finally passed upon by the whole body of traveling preachers. This majority action appeared in the Discipline from 1854 to 1870, but without the authority of law until it was finally adopted by the necessary two-thirds vote of the General Conference of 1870 (there being only four negative votes), followed by the necessary three-fourths vote of the Annual Conferences (there being only nine negative votes), and thus for forty years has been the recognized law of our Church. On nothing have our preachers and laymen been more unanimous; for it was adopted by the first General Conference where laymen were members. While this law has been invoked only once, and that twenty-four years after its adoption and in the same city where it was adopted by the General Conference of 1870, it has given dignity and stability to our ecclesiastical legislation which has called forth the just admiration of other Churches. Some of the strongest commendations have come from some of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, living and dead. The supreme and unlimited General Conference ceased to exist after a delegated General Conference had been provided for under the Six Restrictive Rules, and assertion of the power of a General Conference as unlimited provides a legislative body which is at the same time judge of the legality and constitutionality of its own acts—"an intolerable state of affairs," as Bishop Merrill strongly declared in print. Before his lamented death, Bishop Merrill, the ablest legal mind of the Methodist Episcopal Church, writing of the well-defined differences between the two Churches, said:

"The most serious difference between the two Churches, the one which will be the hardest to overcome, has respect not to the episcopacy or its power, but to the General Conference itself. With us the General Conference is supreme in that it is the judge of the constitutionality of its own acts. We have no supreme court, no tribunal of any sort aside from the General Conference to which can be referred questions of the legality of the legislation of that body. This is the lame point in our system, and it is a serious defect. In State, National, or municipal affairs, such conditions would be intolerable. The Southern Church has provided a check upon hasty or inconsiderate legislation by requiring that when the constitutionality is questioned the Bishops pass upon it and submit it to the judgment of the members of the Annual Conferences, according to the plan of amending the constitution—without allowing the Bishops to veto General Conference action till it can be passed upon by the Church in her constitution-making power and form. That may not be the best possible way of meeting the necessity of judicial opinion of the legislation of the General Conference, but it is better than none, and, of course, better than anything we have, as we have absolutely nothing. Some of the leading ministers of the Southern Church have remarked that they could never submit to belong to the Church governed by a body made up as is our General Conference, without some sort of judicial body to pass upon the constitutionality of its acts. It is not an easy thing to answer the objection or justify the position in this regard which we are forced to occupy. Of course, in the negotiations we could confess our weakness and accept their regulation in the absence of a better provision." (A proposal to vest the Bishops of the M. E. Church with a veto power has just been voted down in the Annual Conferences of that denomination, and the recommendation of a similar character, made by the Joint Commission on Federation and approved by our General Conference and that of the Methodist Protestant Church, has just been set aside by the Northern General Conference at Saratoga. —Ed. Advocate.)

Our Church stands for the government of law rather than the government of men, as in the days before the constitution of the Church was formed and adopted. Bishop McKendree put himself in accord with the spirit of American institutions by his statesmanlike views in the General Conference of 1808, which gave us at once our constitution and our great American Bishop, who was also justly recognized as our great Chief Justice, our John Marshall, in interpreting the constitution. Our Church was also fortunate in being the chosen field of labor of Bishop Soule, the author of the constitution, the Senior Bishop of American Methodism in 1844, who cast his lot with us because WE STOOD FOR THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH AS INTERPRETED BY BISHOP McKENDREE AND HIMSELF. These two great legal minds held that the general superintendents as elected by the General Conference are repositories of executive power, and are held responsible as overseers of the whole Church, being accountable to the General Conference for their administration. The several Annual Conferences are not independent bodies, as in Churches with a congregational form of government simply, but are under the control of general rules and even an order of business in the form of questions adopted by the General Conference, to be enforced by responsible superintendents. Should an Annual Conference dissent from the doctrine or Discipline of the Church, the Bishop should enter his protest and bring the case before the ensuing General Conference as well as give an account of his own administration.

Thus the better to carry out the ends of legislation the Bishops are held responsible as the executive officers of the Church for the faithful administration of the government of the Church according to the provisions of its Discipline, as well as for their moral conduct, the doctrines that they preach, and for all decisions which they make on questions of ecclesiastical law. As executive officers they safeguard the Annual Conferences against any attacks on their constitutional rights by the legislative department of the Church, and the General Conference against departures either in doctrine or discipline on the part of an Annual Conference. Our Church has been greatly indebted to such legal minds as Bishops Paine and McTyeire in following up the interpretations of Bishops McKendree and Soule, who gave us our constitution. The episcopacy existed before the delegated General Conference, and the delegated General Conference was brought into being under certain Restrictive Rules, one of which is that "They shall not change or alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away with the episcopacy or destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency." It was made both general and itinerant that it might the better serve as the executive department of our government, as the General Conference afterwards became the legislative department of the Church. Its creation was that of the whole body of preachers before they created the General Conference with its delegated power and authority. For this view of our government the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has uniformly stood as it stands to-day. BISHOPS EXIST FOR SOMETHING ELSE THAN MERELY TO REGISTER APPOINTMENTS ALREADY PREARRANGED. * * * (Is this a thrust at the episcopacy of the Church, North?—Ed. Advocate.)

Diversities of Gifts and Administrations.

Having so much in common with our fellow-Methodists throughout the world, we rejoice in the honorable part which each has to bear in maintaining at its best the great religious movement of three centuries. Any undue laxity as regards either teaching or discipline on the part of any sister Methodism should make the other representatives the more careful to maintain the standards of life and teaching that God has so signally blessed. If "God made men that they might help one another," perhaps the priceless heritage of our fathers is thus being the more sacredly guarded by MORE THAN ONE METHODISM. It is conceded that the best in the Church of England is safeguarded by the Northern and Southern convocations of York and Canterbury. It needed the varied gifts of the Wesleys and Whitefield alike to inaugurate and perpetuate Methodism, although preaching substantially the same doctrines. Had either Whitefield or Charles Wesley survived John Wesley in sole leadership, it is doubtful whether Methodism would have survived its first century. "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" Now, there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are diversities of ministrations, but the same Lord.

God Has Honored Our Leadership.

As a distinct Methodism, while prayerful observers of what other Churches are enterprising and doing, we have never been content to be mere imitators or followers. The power of initiative has led us to make important changes in our polity when it seemed wise. THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, THUS FAR IS THE ONLY METHODISM THAT HAS CORRECTED THE CONFESSED WEAKNESS OF MAKING A GENERAL CONFERENCE THE SOLE JUDGE OF THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF ITS OWN ACTS, thus leaving unlimited authority unchecked by responsibility. (Apparently this was not regarded as a "minor matter" by the "Senior Bishop" in 1910.—Ed. Advocate.) We first dispensed with a fixed probation of six months, an example followed forty years afterwards by the Methodist Episcopal Church. The most complete example of lay representation, alike in General and Annual Conferences, was set by us both to the British Wesleyans and to the Methodist Episcopal Church, which they have followed only in part even after years. Our General Conference was the first to establish training schools for missionaries—one under the Woman's Foreign Board and the other under the parent Board of Foreign Missions. The work of our women as promoters of parsonage building, early recognized by our General Conference as a distinct society, has since become the Woman's Home Mission Society, with its scores of deaconesses and missionaries. We were the first through our Board of Missions to recognize and welcome the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which has given new inspiration to all the Churches. (Manifestly Bishop Hendrix did not think our "God-honored leaders had been "wandering in the wilderness and playing the fool" when he wrote these eulogistic lines. It remains only to add that these excerpts may be found on pages 12 and 13 of The Daily Christian Advocate issued by the General Conference of 1910, and that the italics we have used are ours, the sub-heads, however, being the Bishop's own.—Ed. Advocate.)

AS GULLIVER SEES IT.

Our dear good Bishop Hendrix is not if not dramatic. Had he chosen the stage for the arena of his operations he should have rubbed out Rocius, grubbed up Garrick, and made the Booths, McGreadys, et al., look like thirty cents. There seems to be some great loadstone of personality about the man. When on the sea, the captain of the ship seeks him out; when on the land, the American consuls hunt him up. If during his visit to any foreign capital there is a grand soiree among the highbrows of the land, if one will take his station at the court gate he shall soon discover our Bishop's beaver waving and nodding among the blue-bloods there attendant. Say what you please, brethren, our "Lord Bishop of Melrose" is right there with the fireworks.

But the biggest stunt he has yet pulled off was when, the other day, he clasped the hand of dear old Bishop Cranston, of the M. E. Church, on the platform of the General Conference at Saratoga Springs, bridging, in symbol, the bloody chasm, as it were, and heralding the union of the two great Methodisms, amid the shouts and screams of a sympathetic audience! As Bishop Candler would say, "It was a plumb sight!" One instinctively, almost, thinks of that pageant staged in the vale of Ardren, by the great Lord Cardinal, between Henry VIII and the young French king. Pray God this Saratoga show may not prove to be as abortive as Woolsey's trick!

Some years ago there was current in this land a bit of clever doggerel, purporting to interpret the patriotic pretensions of the recently emancipated negroes of that period. It ran something like this:

"Oh, de hamfat pan, de hamfat pan'
De gravy am a-billin' in de hamfat pan!
Git into de kitchen as quick as yo' can'
I'm fo' de union an' de hamfat pan!"

Well, I am for the union of all the Methodist bodies under proper and honorable circumstances; and if there be any "hamfat" addenda, why, then, please pass the gravy!—Texas Christian Advocate.

THE CLIMAX.

By Rev. E. G. B. Mann, D.D.

The most emotional manifestation of all, at Saratoga Springs, was the appearance of Bishop E. R. Hendrix, approaching the platform at the psychological moment, just as the vote had been announced approving the report of the committee concerning Methodist unification. Our Senior Bishop was escorted to the stage amid wild manifestations of joy and enthusiasm, because the men of the North seemed to really believe that organic union had been practically accomplished by the adoption of a paper containing only "suggestions and plans, all tentative," as Dr. Goucher had just said in his speech. Bishop Earl Cranston, senior Bishop, was presiding, and dramatically took the hand of Senior Bishop Hendrix, and the two stood long with clasped hands before the applauding crowd, and some thoughtful camera artist happened to think of getting a picture of the two senior Bishops thus typically uniting the two great branches of American Methodism, which picture is being systematically used by the church press of the Methodist Episcopal Church as a campaign illustration of organic union. Selah! Central Methodist.

A CHARITABLE VIEW.

H. G. H., in the Texas Advocate.

In the same issue of the Advocate came two other articles upon which I beg to say a few words. Hill's "take off" of Bishop Hendrix (you know what "Gulliver" means) was a little out of order, considering the superlative dignity of the subject. If ever J. W. Hill gets a vote in General Conference for the Episcopacy, and by any mis-

[illegible] I should be present, I shall rise up and [illegible] the time be not consumed.

But the last article in the Advocate of June 1 surprised me. It was an assumed "interview with Bishop Hendrix at Saratoga Springs." That "interview" may or may not have taken place. From beginning to end it reads like a "doctored" or assumed interview written up by a secular newspaper correspondent. Some things in it I imagine Bishop Hendrix would not have said. The interview gets out with the seeming statement that Bishop Hendrix is the Senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. That sounds like an ignorant secular newspaper correspondent. But the correspondent puts into the lips of Bishop Hendrix the statement that the union of the two Churches has been delayed by sectional differences brought about by the war; that gradually the older men have died and younger men have grown up without these "prejudices." I don't think that Bishop Hendrix could have used any such language. The word "prejudice" means "judgment beforehand," "judgment without knowledge." These grand old men of the past—history-makers—coming to conclusions without knowledge, ignorant of the ground of their conclusions—no, sir, that is the language of a secular newspaper correspondent misconstruing the meaning of Bishop Hendrix; for Bishop Hendrix knows that is not true.

And then this unguarded newspaper correspondent puts into the mouth of Bishop Hendrix this vulgar language: "We both have played the fool for forty years, like the Israelites in the wilderness." Now, as there is no parallel between the two cases, the newspaper correspondent should have had profounder respect for Bishop Hendrix than to make him say such things. Lovick Pierce, George Pierce, Bishop Andrew, Warren Candler, John B. McFerrin, E. E. Hoss, and the whole crowd, North and South, East and West, including Bishop Hendrix's great admirer, "Gulliver," all, at one fell swoop, playing the fool!

Mr. Editor, when you read that article you should have seen from the earmarks that it was written by some one who judged men "without knowledge."

THE SARATOGA ACTION ON METHODIST UNION.

Bishop E. E. Hoss.

In the General Conference that met at Memphis in 1894 a motion was introduced by Dr. David W. Carter and Rev. J. F. Corbin, calling for the appointment of a committee to consider the subject of Methodist Federation. This motion was promptly passed, but by a curious oversight of parliamentary proprieties, neither one of the original movers was put on the committee. It so happened, however, that I was named, and it also fell to my lot to be one of a sub-committee and to draft the report which was accepted by the whole committee, and later adopted by the Conference itself without the alteration of a word. In 1896 a certified copy of this report was sent to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which met that year in Cleveland, and was likewise approved by that body.

The Joint Commission on Federation followed. At the special insistence of Bishop Charles B. Galloway, and against my urgent written protest, I was made a member of that Commission, a position which I have held by successive reappointments for the past twenty-one years. Nearly all the good men with whom I began to serve are now in heaven. It is a matter of great comfort to me that nothing has ever happened to mar the perfect friendliness of my intercourse with them; and I joyously anticipate the pleasure of meeting them again in the better world.

When this Joint Commission, by its own act—the Northern brethren leading the way and asking the Southerners to follow—resolved to consider the feasibility of union, I was absent in the Orient, but got back in time to be present at the first session held for that purpose, at Baltimore in 1911, and I have been present at every session held since that time. It is not presumptuous in me, therefore, to say that I am thoroughly familiar with the whole course of the negotiations that have been had on federation and union. To claim anything less would be to acknowledge myself guilty of gross stupidity, and I am not yet ready to go so far as that. While I do not think it would be quite seemly in me to enter into a full discussion of the subject at the present time, nor at all, till I have conferred with all my colleagues; yet in view of the unreserved utterances of our Senior Bishop, from some of which I most respectfully but earnestly dissent, there are a few things that I crave the privilege of saying through your columns.

1. First, then, there is no reason at all for our getting into too great a hurry to act. Our Northern brethren have certainly been very deliberate. When the "suggestions" of the Joint Commission were sent up to their General Conference of 1912, it did not dignify them with the slightest consideration, but waited four full years before taking any steps. Nor do I believe it would have done so then but for the fact that our General Conference of 1914 showed it the way. In view of this long delay nobody can justly complain of us if we shall now take due time to weigh the brand-new "recommendations" which have been presented for our endorsement. If any one really supposed that this could be done "before the June roses were in bloom" he must be a born optimist. Nor do I think it at all likely that the Northern General Conference, which, on the suggestion of Bishop Hendrix, adjourned to meet on the call of the Bishops to ratify the finished work of the new Joint Commission, will find any occasion for coming together as early as 1918.

The two Churches stand to each other exactly as they did five years ago. One or the other of them, before any union can be effected, will have to recede from its present position on some matters of supreme importance, and that is a thing which men of real principle always find it difficult to do. For example, the Joint Commission, whose work has been heartily accepted by our General Conference, said: "We suggest that neither the General Conference nor any of the Quadrennial Conferences be invested with final authority to determine the constitutionality of its own actions." Over against this suggestion, which surely deals with things fundamental, our Northern brethren set the following "recommendations": "We recommend that the General Conference be made the supreme legislative, executive and judicial body of the Church, under constitutional provisions and restrictions."

Could two propositions be more contradictory in character? It is not possible to reconcile them. One or the other of them must give way. As I see it, a General Conference with "supreme legislative, eecutive and judicial" functions is a despotism pure and simple, just as much so as our Federal Congress would be if it possessed the functions of the Supreme Court and the President in addition to its legislative authority. What is the use of talking about "constitutional restrictions and limitations" to a body that is the final judge of the constitutionality of its own actions? For all practical purposes, it can make anything constitutional by simply declaring it so. I mean no disrespect to my brethren who are asking us to adopt such a measure when I say that they might just as well ask us to adopt outright the "Croton" speech of Bishop Hamline in the General Conference of 1844, and turn it into organic law.

If any of our brethren is in danger of being caught in this trap, let him go back and reread the great state paper, ad rem, presented by Dr. Leroy M. Lee to our General Conference of 1870, and then follow that up by studying the cogent remarks of Stephen M. Merrill, a born constitutionalist, on the same subject. No, a General Conference, sitting to-day to enact laws, and to-morrow to pass upon their constitutionality, is an anomaly not to be thought of.

2. I do not think that any considerable number of influential Southern Methodists will be willing to admit that for the past forty years we have been "wandering in the wilderness" or "playing the fool." If any man chooses to make such a confession on his own account, I shall not seriously object, but I shall not give him a commission to make it for me, and I shall earnestly protest against his making it for the great and wise men who have been our leaders and guides since the Civil War. Our policies for the past forty years have been substantially the policies of Enoch M. Marvin, Holland N. McTyeire, George F. Pierce, John C. Keener, and Alpheus W. Wilson. The wisdom of them has been demonstrated on a magnificent scale. They have secured our solidarity, saved us from breaking up into miserable fragments and enabled us in all our dealings with other bodies to bring our full force to bear wherever it was needed. More than that, they have brought us a vast increase in numbers, in wealth and in influence, for which we ought to be profoundly grateful to God. No Church in the whole world has had a more glorious history. God has been with us of a truth. We may play the fool in the future. I sometimes gravely fear it, but in the past we have been wise men, as our fathers were before us.

The thing to do now is to meet our Northern brethren with their fresh proposals in a Christian spirit. If they should stoutly insist upon impossible conditions of union, let us tell them so, frankly and kindly. In the past we have never lost anything by taking care of our self-respect, and we shall not do so now. While these grave issues are pending, I beg all our people to give themselves heartily to prayer for divine guidance. God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. He has been a pillar of cloud and of fire to us for many long, tumultuous years, and he will not desert us now unless we should turn fool, and play false to him and to the men whose sons we are.

DISCUSSION IN ORDER.

down and say nothing, and our representatives should agree to something which we considered impossible for us to accept, we do not doubt that the plea would be put forward and pressed, that we ought to submit because our commissioners had agreed to it.

So far as we can see, there is no reason why the obstacles that stand in the way of unification should not be mentioned in the papers as well as the things that are considered helpful to it. To fix the boundaries within which the negotiations must be kept is no unimportant work in such proceedings. And Dr. Ivey's declaration to the effect that a Methodist who is against union has no right to speak at this hour is, in our opinion, utterly illogical and unsound. Any and all forms of unification are, in the very nature of the case, constitutional questions, which require for passage a two-thirds vote of the General Conference and a three-fourths vote of the Annual Conferences. The latter bodies have not yet acted; hence the question of union is yet an open one, concerning which any member of the Church has a perfect right to speak his mind. We are talking loosely when we state that either the Church, North, or the Church, South, has declared for any vital feature of the pending union negotiations. That can be true only so far as their General Conferences can commit them on a measure constitutional in character.

In clearing up this point, we do not desire to be understood as opening the way for our own personal opposition to the plan of unification approved by our General Conference at Oklahoma City. We did not vote against that plan when it was brought forward there and have never written and published a line that was designed to be in opposition to it. We understand it to be the plan of our Church, to the extent that General Conference action could make it so; and we hold that it embodies the essential features of the only kind of unification that Southern Methodism can afford to think of accepting.

Dr. Ivey's bland assurance that we may feel certain that the interests of our beloved Church will be safe in the hands of any commissioners who may be appointed is hardly adequate to quiet the apprehensions of loyal Southern Methodists, in view of some things that have taken place. They cannot be blind to the fact that the power of naming these commissioners has been taken from our College of Bishops, where all the precedents would have lodged it. They cannot be oblivious of the fact, as we are showing elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, that the Northern papers are repeatedly stating that "leaders from the South" have been advising them contrary to our Oklahoma plan of unification, and the fair inference is that if such leaders have been at work they have not yet ceased to be active. So far from assuming an easy complacency as to what will happen, we think that if there was ever an occasion when the rank and file of our ministers and members needed to be on watchful guard and to demand open dealing, that time is now. They should insist upon having a large part in the settlement of the great pending issue of union, and upon being taken into the confidence of those appointed to lead in the negotiations before it is too late for the untrammeled will of the great body of our people to register itself effectively and in full measure. It was just such a passive trustfulness as that for which the Editor of the Nashville Advocate now pleads that led to the loss of the ownership and control of Vanderbilt University.

The Negro membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church is stated to be 351,952.

COLLEGE WEEK.

At the last session of the Louisiana Conference a motion was adopted that a week be set apart as College Week, during which especially to solicit patronage for Mansfield College, and that the executive committee of the Board of Education designate the time. The week from July 9 to 16 has been designated in accordance with this action as "College Week."

Inasmuch as the Discipline requires the preaching of a sermon on "Christian Education," which by implication should be done before the third quarterly conference, this "College Week" is a very fitting time for the preaching of such a sermon. Will not every preacher in the Louisiana Conference preach a strong sermon on the importance of Christian Education and give the second week of July, as ordered by the Conference, to seeking patronage for Mansfield College?

If every preacher can find one girl during "College Week" for this excellent institution, the patronage of the school can be about doubled. But the best result of such work will be that every girl thus secured will become better fitted for useful Christian womanhood than she could possibly be in any of the State institutions.

And while we are seeking girls for Mansfield, let us keep our eyes open for boys, and try to send a boy to Centenary. Don't forget "College Week!"

Major-General George W. Goethals has communicated to President Wilson his desire to retire from the governorship of the Panama Canal Zone. He has well earned a rest, but his retirement would be a great loss to the public service.

New designs for silver half-dollars, quarters, and dimes are to be issued soon. The figure of Liberty is to be simplerons on the new coins. They are to be, it is announced, somewhat simpler in design than the ones now in circulation—and hence, perhaps, more artistic.—The Outlook.

Rear Admiral Caperton, commanding the American expedition to Santo Domingo with a view to establishing order there, has issued a proclamation that his forces will occupy the cities of Santiago, Moca, and Laveza, and calling upon the natives to assist in suppressing rioting and lawlessness.

The Aero Club of America has appealed to American aviators serving in Europe under the colors of France to return home to serve their own country in case there should be war with Mexico. It is declared that the present acute situation finds the United States Army with only 15 aviators.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune calls attention to the fact that the campaign for a "sane Fourth of July," which has been in progress for the past few years, has been a decided success. In 1903 the number of persons killed on the Fourth of July was 486, and 3983 were injured. Last year there were 30 fatalities, and 1135 sustained injuries.

It has been stated by Mr. W. W. Marsh, treasurer of the Democratic National Campaign Committee, that $1,000,000 will be raised for use in the Presidential campaign now beginning by small popular subscriptions. We believe that this is the proper way to secure campaign funds. A political party ought not to be under obligations to multi-millionaires or great corporations.

The New York Independent thinks that but for the Progressive National Convention some other candidate than Justice Hughes would have been nominated for the Presidency by the Republican politicians. According to the view of The Independent, the situation was too acute to name any but a strong and well equipped man, which led to Mr. Hughes being reluctantly chosen.

The cotton crop of the United States for 1915-16 was 11,191,320 bales of standard 500-pound weight. This was the smallest yield since 1900, every State in the belt showing a decrease in production. Only two counties produced more than 100,000 bales: Ellis County, Texas, with 317,337 bales, and Bolivar County, Miss., with 102,832 bales. Bolivar is easily the greatest agricultural county in the Magnolia State, having far outstripped Washington County, its former rival.

From the Watchman-Examiner we take the following: "There are 840 daily papers, with a circulation of nearly 6,000,000, that absolutely refuse liquor advertising. The States of Alabama, Washington, Oklahoma, Oregon, West Virginia, North Dakota, Colorado, and Maine, absolutely prohibit liquor advertising within their borders, some even prohibiting the sale of periodicals coming from without the State if they contain liquor advertisements. Georgia, South Carolina, Kansas, and Mississippi recently passed anti-liquor advertising laws which have not yet become effective."

METHODIST UNION.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I.

Judging from the trend of several articles from the editor, and excerpts from other Church organs, there is a strong trend of opposition to the proposed union of the three leading Methodist Churches of our country. The present status of the question seems to be as to the right or legitimacy of leading churchmen to speak before public bodies, or to express decided or preferential views on so momentous a subject, except those so delegated with the power and authority of a commissioned few from the General Conference. Believing, as I do, in a full, fair and free discussion of all questions affecting the welfare and polity of the Church, I must confess that I fail to see anything like an undue assumption of authority on the part of Bishop Hendrix in his recent course before the General Conference of the Church, North, at Saratoga nor to the sentiments so clearly expressed in a subsequent interview with a prominent churchman of the same ecclesiastical body. May I not modestly affirm that it is an established custom for a Methodist preacher to declare his convictions, and frequently so to do without fear or favor? Does he have to be commissioned by a General Conference so to do? May I not also ask whence comes my authority to write this, and my preceding article, on the subject? Or Dr. Mead's, or Dr. Spencer's, or any other doctor's authority to declare his convictions on the subject either pro or con? Does a man need delegated authority to speak before a great council of the Church when courteously invited to do so? Moreover, many of us think that Bishop Hendrix is a fairly good representative man. He is a Bishop, a scholar, and some have even called him an ecclesiastical statesman. I am not especially defending his course, only as it is related to the principle involved. Living, as he does, in Kansas City, where the continent tides of the two great Churches ebb and flow, surely he has an excellent opportunity for observation, and the forming of opinions of value and weight. Let us, at least, give him the credit of common honesty and sincerity. Again, why lug in the Vanderbilt affair and the Bishop's attitude therein? I do not see that it is germane to this question. We have more schools now than we can take care of, and, if I were of the men who now control Vanderbilt, I would not want to come back to a Church that kept eternally knocking me on any and every occasion. Possibly some of the wisdom from the cooler climes north of the Ohio might calm our troubled vision and win back to the fold this earnest prodigal. Who knows? Yes, let us be united. Fill the chasm; don't bridge it. Let the editors and Bishops keep on writing and speaking; let us keep on filling. Fill the chasm; fill it with forgiving love, fill it with forgetfulness of past differences, fill it for the sake of perishing, distraught humanity, who need our gospel of "free grace and full salvation." Let the press teem with letters and articles filled with brotherly love, and husk with swelling notes of joy every discordant cry that makes for dissension and strife.

Again, the terms of proposed agreement, as outlined by the General Conferences of the two Churches are referred to as though it were unalterable as the Medo-Persian law. These may, and can, be modified to suit problems and conditions as they present themselves. If not, where is our boasted adaptability? If the Southern man and the Northern man, combined and united, cannot take care of the negro, and give him a proper and self-respecting status in a great Christian Church, there is something radically wrong somewhere. But I feel assured this can be done, and I [illegible] United Church can not do it, can it [illegible] Church to do? Surely the experience of a half-century has taught us some wisdom.

There are no doubt great questions to be settled, but a united Church under divine guidance need fear no evil, but can and will meet every issue in the spirit of the Master.

MEMPHIS METHODIST HOSPITAL

Approval of the plans for the Tri-State Methodist Hospital has been given by the building committee and it is practically assured that a portion of the institution will be erected the coming fall and winter.

The building will be so arranged that as in the case of the Baptist Memorial Hospital, it can be constructed in units, each complete in itself.

The plans prepared by John Gaisford, architect, call for a main building seven stories in height with four wings, each five stories in height. The ground dimensions of the various wings will be the same, 60 feet by 100 feet. Brick, stone and terra cotta will be used.

Physicians who have inspected the plans state that the hospital embodies the most modern and convenient arrangements of any in the South. There will be eight operating rooms, arranged on the top or seventh story of the center wing. These will be served by two elevators, and so convenient are the operating facilities that a physician can complete one operation and pass to another room where a second patient is waiting.

The hospital is to be located on the site of the old Mallory home, on Lamar Boulevard. The Mallory home will be used for a nurses' home.

The committee in charge of the building has $160,000 in cash and pledges. In the fall a campaign is to be put on in the tri-State territory to raise $200,000 additional. The erection of the central building and at least one wing is contemplated the coming winter. When completed the institution will have about 300 rooms. There will be about 200 in the portion to be built this year.

The building committee is composed of J. H. Sherard, chairman; the Rev. T. W. Lewis, J. R. Pepper, the Rev. H. M. Ellis, Mrs. St. John Waddell, M. C. Smith, of Moorehead, Miss.; Rev. J. R. Jones, Gulfport, Miss.; T. J. Boston, Earle, Ark.; T. K. Riddick, P. H. Enochs, Fernwood, Miss.; L. M. Stratton, Rev. W. S. Lacrone, Drew, Miss.—Commercial Appeal.

A MORNING PRAYER.

By J. D. Cronbach.

Pray help me, Lord, to do my best
To lead a pure, unselfish life
To help those who by sin oppressed
Are battling on in ceaseless strife.

And may I by a smile or word,
Or by a sympathetic ear,
Give some poor, weak and lonely heart
Some words of comfort and of cheer!

May I by act, or look, or word
Show the true spirit in my breast
Prove that my heart with love is stirred.
For prayer, with works, is always best!

A CRADLE SONG OF THE SOUL.

Now I lay me down to sleep,
In Thy shadows soft and deep,
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep.
I lay me, Lord,
Among Thy shadows soft, and dark, and deep,
I pray Thee, Lord,
A helpless soul that leans on Thee to keep.

If I should die before I wake,
For Thy unfailing mercy's sake,
I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take.
If I should die
In some deep dream and never here awake,
If I should die,
I trust Thee, Lord, my sleeping soul to take.

THE BOY THAT STAYED HOME

"Oh, mother, please let me go!"

The tears that he was bravely holding back made Robin's voice sound husky. A boy of ten ought not to cry just because he couldn't go to help put out the fire. That was what Robin would have done a week ago, when he had been nine; but a boy of ten was supposed to have self-control enough to choke back a few tears, even if it did sting his throat a little to do it.

"Mother, why can't I go?" he pleaded. Zenas Parsons passed the window on a run, waving a beckoning hand.

"I have told you why, Robin," his mother answered in a firm tone.

"Luther always gets the best of everything! He doesn't have to ask, either; he just pitches in and goes," the boy passionately burst forth.

"Why didn't Robin 'pitch in and go?'" the mother asked, with a tender note in her voice.

"Because—because, well, because I knew you didn't want me to. Luther just went, as he always does, without asking," Robin stammered, as if almost ashamed to confess his loyalty to his mother's wishes.

"Luther is nearly four years older than you are, my son, and will be of great assistance to the men who have gone to the rescue of lives that are in danger. Besides, the fire may spread; should it do so and reach our wood lot I should be alone but for you. Do you care to listen to a story?"

Robin's brown eyes answered by their sudden look of interest.

"Once, very long ago," began the mother, "there was a great war. Young men were enlisting by the thousands. The son of a village blacksmith felt his young heart burn to join the little company that was forming in his own village; but the father had already joined, and the shop must be kept open. Horses must be shod to be of service; and this little lad, by a little practice, had learned his father's trade well enough to keep the business going during the latter's absence. So, smothering his own longing, this brave youth donned the blacksmith's apron and presented a cheerful countenance to the customers who daily brought their horses to be fitted with new shoes.

"One morning, in great haste, a man in a splendid uniform dashed up to the door of the humble blacksmith's shop and begged this young boy to use all possible speed in shoeing the animal that he rode. A great battle was to be fought, and he, a general, must be on duty to lead his troops.

"You can imagine the feeling of pride with which this lad took in his hand the hoof of this restive charger and went immediately to work. Perhaps his father might be in this very battle—who could tell? He put forth his best efforts, and in a very short time the horse was made ready to continue his onward hurried flight.

"Had this little village shop been closed, the battle that ended so victoriously would have been lost, for a limping horse could not have covered the distance required to carry this brave general to his post of duty. So the boy who stayed at home that day and kept his father's shop open, in a way, served his country as well as the father who had left his work to join the ranks."

As the last words were spoken, from the window near which he was standing Robin's eyes caught sight of a lurid flame that suddenly shot up into the sky, and discovered that the fire had already reached a wood-lot very near their home.

Rushing to the door, the boy was met by sparks that at first caused him to shrink back; but only for a moment. Springing across the threshold, he shouted back to the mother who was watching him, "Mr. Hanson and Mr. Rhodes both have cows out in that wood-lot!" and he was dashing down the road before her answer could reach his ears.

The timely warning and the aid of Robin in helping to get the cows home in all probability was the means of saving their lives, for nothing so terrifies animals as fire.

Hard and prompt service on the part of the citizens prevented the fire from gaining further headway.—Christian Guardian.

MAKING HOME PLEASANT.

A Washington woman on a visit to a toy shop recently noticed a small girl who was eagerly looking at a mechanical mouse.

"Although we had never been introduced," said the woman, "the child spoke to me. Holding up the mouse, she inquired anxiously, 'Do you think it looks real?'

"I said I thought it did.

"'It is very expensive,' said the little girl, 'and I've been saving up for two weeks to get it. I want it to look real.'

"'Why not get a doll?' I suggested.

"'O,' said she, 'It isn't for me. It's for our cat. We brought him home from the country, and he isn't very happy in an apartment. I thought if he had a mouse that would run, to play with, it might make it seem more like home.'

"And the dear little soul's pennies went over the counter. I wondered what she had for herself."—Washington Post.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S ADVICE TO BOYS.

I dare say you think that schoolmasters are often a bit hard on you in requiring you to do things in order that you may pass the tests of the school, but I want to warn you that when you get out of the school you are going to have harder schoolmasters than you had before. For the world requires that we make good, no matter what happens, and the man that does things amounts to a great deal more than the man who wishes he had done things and who promises he will do things. The men I am sorry for are the men who stop to think that they have accomplished something before they stop at the grave itself. You have got to have your second wind in this world and keep it up until the last minute.

REV. J. R. ROBERSON.

Rev. James R. Roberson, son of James H. and M. A. Roberson, was born in Lauderdale County, Ala., on June 1, 1846; and died at his home in Pontotoc, Miss., on June 5, 1916. His father moved to Mississippi when he was quite a small boy and settled in Panola County, near Batesville, where he grew to manhood. Here Brother Roberson was educated in the common schools. He was converted at Wesley's Chapel and joined the M. E. Church, South, in the year 1867. He was licensed to preach on the Batesville Circuit on October 14, 1871; was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference at Aberdeen, Miss., in 1874, and was received into full connection at Sardis, Miss., in 1876, where he was ordained a deacon by Bishop Pierce. He was ordained an elder by Bishop Paine at Macon, Miss., on December 15, 1878.

Brother Roberson was twice married; first on October 1, 1884, to Miss Mattie Naugle. Of this union one child was born—a boy, who died in infancy. His wife died on May 16, 1889. His second marriage was to Miss Mary Ann Bigham, which took place on May 7, 1893. Of this union were born five children, of whom four, with the mother, are left to mourn the going of Brother Roberson, who was seriously afflicted for seven years. He has six brothers and one sister living, and a large connection, most of whom live in Panola County, Miss.

Brother Roberson's ministry was in a high degree evangelistic. The old-time revival was his glory. The testimony of brethren whom he helped in meetings uniformly declare that they never had better help. Evidently his ministry and work in revivals were far above the average. His gifts and power in prayer were very striking. Those who have heard him pray in revivals for penitents at the altar, or at the funeral of some good saint, can scarcely forget his fervent petitions. Many are the men who speak of prayers they heard him pray years ago. His last pastorate, which was at Toecopola, was a climax in the gracious influence of his ministry. He was pastor at Pontotoc in 1887, where he came to live after he was superannuated, and his name and influence here were like "ointment poured forth." He grew in patience and grace under his afflictions. He greatly rejoiced that he had lived to see most of his children grown and educated. He never lost interest in preaching, in the Conference, or in the Church up to the last. His soul would glow with enthusiasm when the subject of the old-time revival came up. He died in great peace. A worthy veteran has gone to his reward. We commend his interesting family to the love of the Conference and to the keeping of our Heavenly Father.

W. M. YOUNG.

REV. G. H. GALLOWAY.

I was very sorry to read in a late issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate the announcement of the death of Rev. G. H. Galloway. I feel very keenly my loss of him as a personal friend. I first met Brother Galloway when he was appointed to the Columbia charge in 1885. We were very intimately associated together then for three years and I learned to love him as a true brother in Christ. It was during his pastorate at Columbia that I was licensed to preach and led to dedicate my life to the ministry. His godly example and brotherly counsel were very helpful to me in those early years of my Christian life. It was through his advice that I was induced to go to Centenary College to prepare myself for the work to which God had called me. His manifest interest in me while in school and his words of encouragement from time to time inspired me with a holy ambition to be the best man and the strongest preacher possible, by the help of the Lord. I am painfully conscious of the fact that I lack much of having reached the ideal which I set for myself in those days, and I have little hope now of ever attaining to it; but what I am as a servant of Christ I partly owe to his warm, sympathetic, brotherly friendship during the days of my boyhood ministry. Through all the years that I was a member of the Mississippi Conference, I had in him a true and helpful friend. I shall never forget the meeting which he and Rev. C. N. Grace held for me at Fayette while I was pastor there. This was my last association with Brother Galloway, save during the three following sessions of the Conference prior to my coming West.

A faithful pastor, a strong preacher, and, above all, a good man has gone from among us. Peace be to his ashes, and blessings upon his sorrowing loved ones, with whom I deeply sympathize and upon whom I pray God's blessings.

It affords me great satisfaction to pay this brief tribute of respect to the memory of my departed brother, whom I expect to meet in the better world some glad day when my race on earth is run.

THE GROUND OF OUR CRITICISM.

Under the caption, "Methodist Union," Brother S. J. Davies courteously dissents from our criticism of Bishop Hendrix' course at Saratoga, New York, as he has a perfect right to do. His suggestion, however, that we object to any man, speaking as an individual, expressing his convictions concerning the question of union is unwarranted by anything that we have said at any time, and is misleading. Our criticism of Bishop Hendrix, for which we have no apology to make, was based on other grounds entirely. Negotiations involving vast issues, some of them of the most delicate nature, were proceeding between two great organizations. Our Church had expressed its mind, communicating it officially to its Sister Church, and had definitely mapped out its course of procedure. It had not seen fit to name Bishop Hendrix as one of the commissioners to handle the pending negotiations. He happens, however, to be the official head of our episcopacy, one of the co-ordinate departments of our Church government. So emphasizing that official position, he presumed, in effect, to speak for our Church and even to shape legislation in the Northern General Conference, which we may have to consider. This he had no right whatever to do. His course is utterly without precedent in the history of American Methodism, and it may hurt us along the border and before the public if the union movement should fail. His bearing and deportment were in marked contrast to that of Bishop Matt S. Hughes, of the Northern Church, at our last General Conference, where a unification measure was adopted. He was courteous and fraternal, but he did not presume to speak officially for his Church or tell us what to do.

It may be a desirable thing to hasten union, but not until it is known that things are in such shape that our Church wants to have it hastened. Some of our leading men who heartily favor union do not hesitate to condemn Bishop Hendrix' wholly unauthorized interference at Saratoga, to which he gave weight by parading his official position.

Our reason for adverting to the Bishop's course in the Vanderbilt controversy was because we think that when one seizes the reins and wants to guide the way in movements which involve interests of the largest and most sacred character, the question of the wisdom and trustworthiness of his past leadership is legitimately a matter for consideration.

The hope of having "the prodigal" rehabilitated as a nominal (not a real—that can not be, because the courts have now irrevocably fixed its status) Methodist institution is perhaps playing a larger part in the effort that now seems to be on to have the Northern Church take us over bodily than our brother is aware. He is, in our opinion, likely to hear a great deal about this suggestion which he has brought so gently forward before the union issue is finally settled.

We do not at all except to the high appraisement placed upon Christian love by our worthy correspondent, but we cannot concede that organic union into one ecclesiastical body is the only medium of expression. We think that we should be Christlike enough to love Christians of every name; but we do not believe that with their variant views it would be wise to gather them all into one religious organization. The Christian denominations have not come into existence as a result of prejudices and hatred, but because of profound intellectual convictions revered in the souls of men. A love that cannot reach across denominational boundaries is piteously weak and defective. The great men who made the Methodism of the South and of the North did not hate one another.

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN?

In an editorial in Zion's Herald of May 24 appeared the following statement: "We rejoice that the Church (meaning the M. E. Church) did not hesitate to speak out plainly concerning the position of the Negro. The Methodist Episcopal Church desires him to be a part of the reorganized Church. As we have said several times, so does the Church, South, AS INTERPRETED BY ITS LEADERS." As will be remembered in our issue of June 1, in an open letter to Dr. Parkhurst, the Editor of Zion's Herald, we called his attention to the fact that with this proposition to retain the Negroes as a part of the reorganized Church before it, our General Conference rejected it and declared for placing them in a separate Church, maintaining fraternal relations with the white Church, and courteously requested him to state who these leaders were whose views he had preferred to hold up before the public as representative of our Church rather than the declared will of our General Conference. But up to the present time neither publicly nor by private correspondence have we heard a word from Dr. Parkhurst.

In the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate of June 15 there was an extended editorial which contained the following utterance: "The tentative plan (the one formulated by the Joint Commission and which, with a single modification, was approved by the Southern Church) which was regarded by many as rather a hindrance than a help toward real union, has been TRANSFORMED in the interpretation put UPON IT BY SOME OF THE LEADERS OF THE CHURCH, SOUTH, and by the report of the Committee of Sixty, adopted with unanimity and genuine enthusiasm by our General Conference—that plan has been TRANSFORMED into the basis of such a complete reorganization of the Churches as will show to the Christian world that Methodists are not only one, but are awake to the opportunities for world-wide service which the times have set before them." Let the reader note carefully the words: "Transformed in the interpretation put upon it by some leaders of the Church, South."

Furthermore, comes Editor Spencer in the Central Christian Advocate (Kansas City) of June 21, saying, "The modification of the tentative plan (our Oklahoma plan) is only such as many leaders of the Church, South, have already come to recognize as best for the South herself."

What is the significance of these statements from these three high sources that there are leaders in our Church who have been giving the Church, North, to understand that we need and desire some plan of union different from that outlined in the paper adopted by our great law-making assembly at Oklahoma City? Has there been at work a secret clique in the Church, South, that has not dared to come into the open, and have some of our Northern brethren been in league with it? Was our Oklahoma City plan of union reached around by these Southern leaders (under cover) and virtually nullified before it had even been considered by the Northern General Conference? The language of these distinguished editors certainly seems to imply something of the kind. And some of the happenings at Saratoga undoubtedly looked very much as if they had been planned and staged in advance.

Who are these "leaders" that have been "interpreting" the sentiment of Southern Methodism as somewhat different from that voiced by our General Conference? Let the curtain be lifted upon them that we may look at them. Surely if there was nothing improper in what has been done, there can be no good reason for keeping them hidden out. Since they have displayed the fact that there have been at a variable distance and workers, it behooves our Northern contemporaries to go further and give by name these chosen authorities to whom they have referred.

It is vain, as some of our Southern editors are doing, to urge the people of our Church to keep quiet and await developments when such evidences of secret manipulation are clearly in view.

AN HONOR WORTHILY BESTOWED.

At the recent Commencement of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Dr. F. N. Parsley, of the Louisiana Conference, by the Faculty and Trustees of that excellent institution. In announcing the conferment of this degree, President W. P. Few referred to the distinguished minister upon whom it was bestowed as follows:

"Franklin Nutting Parker, 4 years Professor of Biblical Literature in Trinity College, now Professor of Systematic Theology in the Candler School of Theology, life-long and devoted preacher and teacher with wide knowledge and experience of the truths by which men live and the fine gift to make others sharers with him in this knowledge and experience."

LOOKS LIKE WAR WITH MEXICO.

The assumption by the de facto Government of Mexico of the responsibility for the attack upon United States troops at Carrizal makes the Mexican situation exceedingly grave. Indeed, it is now difficult to see how war with that country is to be averted. President Wilson has certainly been extraordinarily patient and forbearing in his dealings with the various Mexican authorities, and if at last he should feel it necessary to advise our Nation to draw the sword, no doubt it will be generally felt that he has reached such a conclusion because it could not be avoided. And if war does come, regrettable as may be the task, we trust that our Government will not think of anything less than the restoration of peace and good order in our torn, bleeding, and distracted sister Republic. There are times when the strong hand only is merciful and saving.

THE PASSPORT VIRTUE.

Fidelity commands the approval of God and will be the measure of one's eternal reward. To be faithful in the fullest sense is to make the utmost possible of one's capacities and opportunities, and nothing more than this does the Heavenly Father expect of any human being. In his dramatic description of the Judgment recorded in the Twenty-fifth Chapter of The Gospel According to St. Matthew, the Master emphasized faithfulness above all else, and bade those who had achieved it to pass to higher things, to "enter into the joy of their Lord." And this crowning virtue is within the reach of every one. All cannot be intellectually great and accomplish famous things; but all may be true, steady, and devoted. And this is enough to secure for one the favor of our reigning Lord and an abundant entrance into the Everlasting City.

MAJOR MILLSAPS STILL SERIOUSLY ILL.

We regret to state that at this writing (Tuesday) the condition of Major R. W. Millsaps, who was stricken with illness about June 1, continues to be very grave. This announcement will be received with sadness and anxiety by Major Millsaps' large circle of friends throughout Mississippi and in other States. Let the readers of the Advocate remember this great and good man before the throne of grace. He has wrought most nobly, and we cannot but pray that his valuable life may be spared to be a continued blessing to both Church and State.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Seashore Divinity School is in session, having had a good opening.

The National Anti-Saloon League began its annual convention at Indianapolis, Ind., last Monday with a great attendance.

Rev. Paul M. Brown, of Natchitoches, La., paid our office an appreciated call last Tuesday. He was en route to the Seashore Divinity School.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge, of Bush, La., is pleased with the trend of things in his charge. He has recently organized a new Sunday school and a new prayer meeting.

Rev. W. L. Graves, of Montpelier, Miss., is remembering the Advocate in his rounds, as is attested by the mailing files in our office. Brother Graves is bringing things to pass in his charge.

Rev. C. T. Floyd gives us a club of 6 subscriptions from the Tremont charge (North Mississippi Conference), for which we extend to him our thanks. He reports that his work is still moving along nicely.

Rev. Briscoe Carter spent last Sunday in New Orleans and preached a forceful sermon in the Carrollton Avenue Church at 11 a. m. He was en route to the Seashore Divinity School, which opened Tuesday of this week.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, of Homer, La., passed through New Orleans last week, on his way home from Kentucky, where he had been on a visit, and favored the Advocate office with a call. He was looking well, and was in fine spirits.

Rev. J. M. Guinn, a member of the North Mississippi Conference and a student in the Candler School of Theology last year, has been appointed pastor of Centenary Church of McComb City, Miss., by Bishop Murrah, to succeed the late Rev. G. H. Galloway.

A Negro Sunday School Congress of considerable interest was recently held in the Mount Heroden Church at Vicksburg, Miss. Among the speakers was Dr. T. B. Holloman, the pastor of our Crawford Street Church, who gave the colored workers a helpful message.

We are informed that the contract of the Wisdom Sisters, the well known gospel singers, with Evangelist G. A. Klein has been canceled and that they are now open for engagements with pastors who may desire their services. They may be addressed at Macon, Mo.

From a letter from Rev. J. F. Foster, of Shreveport, La., we extract the following: "My health is good and my work is moving on nicely. I am being used by the brethren at many other points in one way or another and am enjoying it. Wynn and Atkinson are both doing well."

It is stated that at a meeting of the Protestant Preachers' Association of this city last Monday it was decided to accept Billy Sunday's terms and have him come to New Orleans. It will probably be a couple of years or longer before the noted evangelist can reach the Crescent City.

Brother F. N. Sweeney, of Franklinton, La., sends us a report of a great meeting recently held at Angie, La., which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which will appear next week. He was assisted in this fruitful series of services by Rev. R. A. Bozeman, who is conducting a meeting this week at Varnado.

Mrs. L. Clisby, of West Point, Miss., and her daughter, Mrs. Ethel Moody, of Meridian, Miss., have recently spent several days in New Orleans. Mrs. Clisby is the efficient teacher of the Wesley Bible Class in the Sunday school of our church at West Point, which numbers 115. A choicer Christian worker would be difficult to find.

We regret very much to learn that Rev. A. P. Leech, of Columbus, Miss., one of the honored superannuates of the North Mississippi Conference, has been far from well for some time. We pray that the Heavenly Father may have him in his tender keeping, and we hope to receive better news concerning his physical condition at an early date.

If there is any presiding elder who keeps up more closely with his work than Rev. W. W. Woollard, of the Columbus (Miss.) District, we do not know who he is. His free bulletin for the second quarter of the year shows that no detail of Church activity is too small to escape his attention and discloses a healthful state of affairs in his "diocese."

Our efficient Church Extension Secretary, Dr. W. F. McMurry, writes: "I am sending you a set of Church Extension charts. They are for your use. We are prepared to supply Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, and churches with the same." Write Dr. McMurry, at 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky., and secure, free of cost, a set of these charts.

Rev. R. S. Walton, of Bunkie, La., gives us some subscriptions from his pastorate, and adds the following note of interest concerning his work: "We are planning to open our Sunday school rooms on the third Sunday in July. We have eight new rooms which have cost us a little over $2,000. Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Alexandria, will preach the opening sermon.

Rev. G. A. Morgan, of Jonesboro, La., writes as follows: "We are making some progress on the Jonesboro Circuit. We have had two genuine revivals, in which there were several conversions. I have received 23 people into the Church since Conference. We have organized one Senior Epworth League which is working beautifully. Our finances are well up."

Rev. J. R. James, our pastor at Abbeville, Miss., writes: "With sadness we announce the death of our beloved Dr. W. S. Banks, of this place, who passed to his reward yesterday morning, June 24. His demise was not altogether unexpected, as he had been afflicted for a great while." We regret to chronicle this sad news, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved.

A note from Mrs. H. G. Henderson, written on June 20 from Georgetown, Ky., where she and Dr. Henderson are visiting relatives, states that Dr. Henderson's health has greatly improved. We are delighted to have this good news, and we trust that this gifted minister will soon be in his pulpit at Holly Springs again, dispensing the Word with his accustomed eloquence and power.

Rev. C. M. Crossley, of Forest Miss., sends us the following note: "Dr. I. W. Cooper will dedicate our church at Morton, Miss., on the second Sunday in July. We extend to our presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Linfield, and all former pastors an invitation to be present. Especially are we anxious to have with us Rev. J. T. Abney, to whom the credit is largely due for the building of this church."

Brother Melville Johnson, our popular pastor at Hernando, Miss., has lately had at that place a gracious revival, in which he was assisted by Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Tupelo, Miss., one of the Conference evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference. A fuller account of this fine meeting, written by the pastor, will be published next week. Brother Johnson's letter brought us a club of 6 subscriptions, 3 of which were new.

It was our pleasure while passing through Durant, Miss., last week, en route to New Orleans, to meet and have a brief season of fellowship with Col. J. G. Hamilton and Dr. R. C. Elmore, both noble Methodist laymen, and Rev. W. W. Mitchell and Rev. T. M. Bradley, brethren beloved. Echoes of the recent session of the Durant District Conference, which was said to have been up to the high-water mark, were everywhere in the air.

Through the courtesy of Mrs. J. W. Conger, of Valden, Miss., we have received a copy of the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society, which was held at Clarksdale, Miss., February 23-27. It is in every respect a highly creditable publication and shows the woman's work in North Mississippi to be in a highly gratifying condition. Mrs. Conger, the brilliant young Conference President, is magnifying her office.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. W. J. Dawson, Bolton, Miss., 3; Rev. H. E. Carter, Magee, Miss., 5; Rev. W. M. Commander, West, Miss., 5; Rev. R. T. Nolen, Williamsburg Ct., 4; Rev. J. T. McVey, Lorman, Miss., 2; Rev. H. B. Thomason, Winnsboro, La., 3; Rev. J. G. Sloane, Gibsland, La., 4; Rev. B. W. Lewis, Utica, Miss., 2.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., our capable pastor at Dubach, La., writes: "We are getting along very well on this charge. There are some difficulties here, however, as there are everywhere. In one of our country churches out some distance from the railroads we have organized a Sunday school home department with something like 70 members. The Sunday school membership in the charge is far in excess of the membership of the Church." We have in hand an article on Methodist union from the pen of Brother Doss, which will appear next week.

One of the safest and most effective evangelists in Southern Methodism is Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Tupelo, Miss., who is in great demand. His engagements for the year have reached into six States and will cover 106 weeks, 54 of which have been pledged to the North Mississippi Conference. And still this gifted worker is receiving calls. He does not advertise or carry with him a singer, but leaves all the local arrangements in the hands of the pastor and his helpers. The preacher who secures Brother Bowen's services may count himself fortunate.

We acknowledge our great indebtedness to Rev. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans, and Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, for the fine work which they did for the Advocate during the recent absence of the Editor from his office. Both of these brethren are workmen with their pens that needeth not to be ashamed. It was our only opportunity to secure a brief season of rest during the summer, and the generous kindness of these friends made it possible for us to avail ourself of it. The fact that we have been away will explain to our personal correspondents why their communications have not fared better at our hands.

Dr. S. A. Steel, of Columbia, S. C., was an appreciated visitor in New Orleans last Sunday. He occupied the pulpit of the Rayne Memorial Church at the morning hour, delivering an informing and impressive discourse on "The Creation and Mission of Woman." At night there was a rally of all the Methodist Churches in the city at First Church, where Dr. Steel gave his famous address on "The Pioneers of Methodism." The Doctor was once appointed pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, but before he could take up his work a readjustment was made which carried him to Virginia and sent the renowned Dr. W. E. Munsey to serve the Rayne (then called the St. Charles Street) congregation. Dr. Steel went from New Orleans to Rockdale, Texas, where he had an engagement to address a great gathering of Confederate soldiers.

A brother asked us a few days since if the Advocate was open to a discussion of the question of Methodist union. Certainly it is—all phases of it. The Editor thinks any form of union that does not place our colored brethren in a Church of their own and preserve the substantial integrity of the Church, South, giving an adequate and indestructible autonomy, such as was provided for in the Oklahoma City plan, would be disastrous to Southern Methodism; but if there be those in our patronizing territory who favor union of another kind they may be heard through the columns of their Conference organ. We do not promise, however, to carry contributions from all over the Church, except as we think proper; and we must be excused from carrying notices of premature efforts to mix up our Church work with that of our Northren brethren. We think that such efforts are liable to result in harm if the present union movement should fail of consummation, and we do not desire to encourage them by giving them publicity. The Advocate is yet a Southern Methodist organ.

J. S. MORRIS, who recently died in New Albany, Miss., was born in Spartanburg, S. C., on August 13, 1836. In his childhood his parents moved to Georgia, where his young manhood was spent, except the years that he served in the Confederate Army. At the close of the war between the States, completely broken up, he came to Mississippi and engaged in farming. Few men have achieved the success that crowned his efforts in agricultural pursuits. Industrious and a man of business judgment, he was able to leave his family in quite comfortable circumstances. But during these years of temporal prosperity he was not unmindful of the necessity of a preparation for the future state. Trusting in Christ as his Savior, he connected himself with the Methodist Church and served much in the capacity of steward. The writer was his pastor for four years and always found the assessment on Brother Morris' church worth one hundred cents on the dollar. His pastor ever found him ready to help in every church enterprise. Though under the weight of nearly eighty years and seriously afflicted the last months of his life, he was never heard to murmur. The wife, his companion in the conflicts of life, now past four score years of age, and his two consecrated Christian daughters survive in sorrow, but not as those who have no hope.

A. W. LANGLEY.

W. C. McCRARY was born on April 20, 1854, at Collierville, Tenn. At the age of 14 years he came to Byhalia, Miss., where he spent the remainder of his life. On April 13, 1881, he was happily married to Miss Wilma Myrtle Ingram. God blessed them with six children, and prolonged their days on earth to train these precious children into noble manhood and beautiful womanhood. On October 15, 1913, Sister McCrary was taken from their happy home here, to live forever in the home prepared by our Heavenly Father; and on May 8, 1916, Brother McCrary left them to be reunited with his sainted wife. He joined the M. E. Church, South, twenty-five years ago, and was a loyal, consistent member, taking great interest in all affairs of the church, both spiritual and financial. He was an untiring contributor of his time and money to any need of the church or his pastor. His soul was filled with music—he loved to sing the songs that told of God's love and the beautiful beyond. It was a source of much joy to him to see all his children take their stand on the Lord's side and connect themselves with the Church. Brother McCrary was a man of great and strong mind. He spent much time in thinking out safe and right paths in life. He was a devoted husband, tender and loving father, a kind and thoughtful brother; and made himself a brother to one whose Christian life has been spent in his home—a beautiful life and one that is greatly appreciated. He was also a dependable neighbor, a warm and companionable friend to his pastor, a firm Christian, and a citizen of great worth. His body has passed from our sight. We miss his face, our hearts are sad, and there is a loneliness about all of us, but his influence for good is yet with us, shining brightly, and will live on and on, bearing fruit here while his soul lives in heaven. My prayer is that his children, who were ever devoted, confiding and obedient, will follow the example of their sainted parents and at last compose an unbroken family in the City of Light. Surviving him are six children: Mrs. J. I. Burrow, Mrs. J. T. Myres, Mrs. P. M. Boyce, W. C. Jr., Ingram, and Miss Katherine McCrary; a cousin, Miss Emily Scott, one sister Mrs. Virgie Hays, of Byhalia, and three brothers John McCrary of Oklahoma, Robert McCrary of Asherville, Miss., and Boyt McCrary of Senatobia, Miss.

L. A. McELROY'N Pastor.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God in his infinite wisdom has called the gentle spirit of our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Harry McKenzie, to her heavenly home, therefore be it resolved,

1. That the members of the Methodist Sunday school at Homer, La., individually and as a whole, express our deep grief over the loss of one who so faithfully discharged her duty in all the relations of life and that we do hereby express our love and appreciation of her Christian character. It was not how long she lived, but the way she lived that will ever influence the lives of those with whom she was associated, to strive for nobler and better things.

2. That we tender to the bereaved husband and other loved ones our sincerest sympathy in their sad loss, and pray that God's grace may sustain them.

Signed: Mrs. McCranie, Mrs. Hefley, Committee.

Rid yourself of an aged appearance by giving the hair correct treatment and proper food. There can be no life without food, and unless you give your hair the proper attention you cannot expect it to retain its lustre and beauty. Use "La Creole," the best of all hair dressings and see your gray hairs disappear. This dressing was discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana many years ago, who were famous for their beautiful hair. Since then it has worked wonders, banishing gray hairs and restoring the hair to its original lustre. As a hair dressing it has no equal, keeping scalp in a clean, healthy condition. It has stood the test for over fifty years. Don't use strong alkaline soaps as they do more damage than good. Use "La Creole" hair dressing, the natural preservative. For sale by all dealers. WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y.—"For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation."—Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

If Threatened With Tuberculosis

you must pay proper attention to diet and living conditions, and get plenty of rest and fresh air and good food. Sunday School

LOUISIANA NOTES.

The New Orleans, Lafayette, and Shreveport Districts have their district organizations, and by the time this paper goes to press the Alexandria and Monroe Districts will be organized and officers elected for the purpose of getting right down to the needs of our Sunday schools; and when we have found the needs, with the help of God we want to forge on toward the accepted standard of efficiency.

Correct Your Records.

I am continually reminded by pastors and layman that our minutes are incorrect as to printed statistics in Sunday school matters. Yes, they are to some extent incorrect and misleading, but these are the only statistics we have and we must resort to them until we obtain more accurate figures. Please go over your enrollment, and when you report to district superintendents, quarterly conferences, district conferences, the Annual Conference or your Conference Field Secretary, know that your report is correct, showing neither less or more than you have in the various departments of your school. One of the first things we will have to get in the Conference Secretary's office is correct data as to your Sunday schools in order to do intelligent work through the district officers throughout the State.

Answer Letters.

If you were the only school to refuse to give us information when we write for it, it would not be so bad; but when you stop to consider that there are over three hundred schools in this State, that it required a great deal of time to write to the proper officer of each school just one time, and that instead of writing three hundred letters, we usually have to write from two to four in order to get what we ought to get at first, you can see how postage mounts up, and how time is lost and unnecessary labor is required. Let me beg you to please answer letters from your district officers as promptly as possible. They are written for the sake of the Master and the advancement of the Kingdom.

House-to-House Visitation.

Rev. W. F. Roberts, of the Alexandria District, has just told me that he had increased his attendance 300 per cent by having a house-to-house canvass two weeks ago. We have reached the season of the year when attendance upon Sunday schools usually drops off. I can think of no better plan to keep the attendance up to what it has been through the spring, and, in some cases, make it larger for the three summer months which are on us, than to get right out and make a house-to-house canvass. Get those who are going off, where they will perhaps miss the regular school, to take a home department quarterly along with them. In so doing you will furnish them with daily Bible reading and keep them on your rolls throughout the year as active members of the school.

Absentee Superintendents.

You might do well to have some one appointed in your school to look after those who do not answer to roll-call during the sizzling days that are to come, and when they are absent to know why before the next Sunday rolls round. This plan will work admirably, I am sure, where the classes are not organized so as to take care of themselves. Each teacher who cannot get in touch with each absentee can have the Secretary furnish the absentee superintendent with a list of the class marked absent then he or she can get in touch with them before the next session of the Sunday school. Rev. J. G. Snelling used this plan in New Orleans while pastor there and stated to me that he found it good in keeping up attendanee in his school.

Lets work and pray through heat or cold, and get Louisiana Sunday schools up nearer to our accepted standard of efficiency. "We can do it—and we will."

THE GREAT PROBLEM OF FATIGUE.

Has it ever occurred to you that practically every adult person, who works, is an habitual drinker of some beverage other than water? Physicians have explained the reason. They tell us that mental and physical work inevitably produce "Fatigue," which is nothing more nor less than Nature's call for refreshment or for stimulation. Under modern conditions of life (which we call civilization) it is impractical for most of us to drop our work simply because we are tired, and yet the scientists tell us to continue our work during fatigue is absolutely injurious to our nerves and muscles.

They explain that under such circumstances the judicious use of refreshing beverages relieves the fatigue by removing the resistance to the nervous and muscular impulses, making our work easier and lighter, in very much the same way that oiling a machine reduces the friction and prevents its becoming overheated.

Nature has provided us with the ideal lubricants to overcome the injurious effects of fatigue. They are the xanthin (pronounced zan-thin) beverages, including beef tea, cocoa, coca-cola, chocolate, tea and coffee. The scientists tell us that the xanthin beverages refresh the nerves and muscles by a process similar to actual lubrication and without affecting the will in the least, therefore without exciting one to over-exertion as is the cast with artificial stimulants.

In the case of beef tea and other meat extracts the refreshing principle is an animal product called xanthin; in cocoa and chocolate, a vegetable xanthin known as di-methyl-xanthin, or caffeln. When these beverages are digested they are all converted into the animal form of xanthin, which is a normal and constant ingredient of the flesh and blood of all animals and is essentially abundant in the tissues of young animals and children. Many scientists regard this xanthin as the natural stimulant and as the explanation of the remarkable freshness, alertness and activity of children and young animals. As we grow older the quantity of xanthin in our bodies gradually diminishes, we become less alert and active, and feel a great need for the xanthin beverages.

Coca-cola is therefore the same as tea and coffee except that it is carbonated, is flavored with ripe fruit extracts and contains no tonic acid or caffeol. The carbonation of the fruit flavors combine with the caffein to give a delicious and refreshing beverage that quenches the thirst and relieves fatigue more perfectly than tea or coffee, in spite of the fact that coca-cola contains only about one-half as much of the active principle, trimethyl xanthin.

In their desire to give the public a thorough understanding of their product, The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet containing the scientific opinions of the world's leading authorities, explaining the composition and the refreshing qualities of the drink. Write for a copy, read it carefully and you will understand why Coca-Cola is the nearest approach to a perfect solution of the world's greatest problem of fatigue. A copy of this booklet may be had by addressing The Coca-Cola Co., Department "C," Atlanta, Ga.—Adv.

Can You Write a Letter Like This?

Mrs. Theo. Kuker, Florence, S. C., writes us under date of Aug. 23, 1915, as follows: "I have ordered 'RENWAR' for several people and many others come to me for the name and address. As my recovery has been so wonderful I am happy to recommend such a sure remedy. It has never failed to relieve those who used it." This is only one of such letters received by us almost every day. You, too, can be well, if you will. "Renwar" relieves rheumatism by removing the cause, uric acid, from the blood. For sale by all druggists, 50c per bottle, or sent postpaid on receipt of price if your druggist cannot supply you. WARNER DRUG CO., Nashville, Tenn.

GOD'S HAND IN KOREA.

Rev. C. T. Collyer, a veteran Southern Methodist missionary in Korea, writes: "As of the harvest that has been gathered in during his service there of nearly a quarter century

"I have just completed twenty-seven years of service in the Orient. I was forty in China for eight years and from there in company with the late Rev. C. F. Reid was transferred to Korea to begin the work of the Southern Methodist Mission. I took part in the first service of our Church in Korea, which was held in April, 1897. Our first convert was baptized May 1, 1897. Contrast this with the figures we published last year. We organized societies, 1911 baptized members, and 4,016 probationers and adherents. Surely this is an indication that God is at work in Korea."

EXCHANGE YOUR OLD BODY FOR A NEW ONE.

You can do it in three weeks and thereby renew your health. This article is written by a physician who has seen it demonstrated in numerous cases and explains how it is done.

Listen: If your weight is one hundred and thirty-three pounds your body contains eighty pounds of water, for, according to standard medical books, the human body contains sixty-seven and one-half per cent of water. Now, disease is invariably caused by impurities which we call poison, and these are readily dissolved by the right kind of natural mineral water. Drink ten gallons (eighty pounds) of Shivar Mineral Water (use no other water) for twenty-one days, and you will have exchanged your old body for a new one, so far as the soluble part of it is concerned. The impurities will be dissolved and pass away. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, gall stones, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other conditions due to impure blood, accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer which appears below. Read the following letter carefully; then sign and mail it:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17 G, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

YOUR BOY IS YOUR ALL—IF HE IS LOST, ALL IS LOST.

What are your boy's associates? The character of a boy's associates is a most powerful factor for good or evil in the shaping of his life. Your boy's greatest danger is local associates. They teach more than you. If they are bad, what is the remedy?

Mr. Robert R. Morgan, of Fayetteville, Tenn., has given this question profound study during the 31 years in which he has built up the Morgan School, a training school for boys, of which he is principal. Mr. Morgan has devoted a long career to the training of boys. He knows boy nature. The close personal association which he has fostered between his boy students and himself, his carefully chosen faculty, his careful attention to the boy's work, his thoughts, his talents and his special needs, are some of the features which have given his school its high standing.

Mr. Morgan is a man of inspiring, wholesome personality and deep Christian character. He has built his school to give the boy thorough mental, physical and spiritual preparation for an honorable, manly life. He is a proper man to train your boy.

A postal card to Mr. L. L. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., will bring a catalog and full information of this school.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM, - Asheville, N. C.

BROAD STREET, HATTIESBURG, MISS.

Dear Doctor Meek: The membership and community of Broad Street Church have enjoyed one of the most refreshing and helpful protracted meetings that they have had in some time. One good sister said it was the best they have had in twenty years. Brother Terry conducted the meeting himself and began planning for it at the beginning of the Conference year. He and his official board began at the outset praying and working for a revival. There was a manifest interest from the very beginning of the meeting, and, as the days came and went, interest became more tense until the men, boys, women and girls organized severally into prayer meetings. I do not recall that I ever saw the men and boys take such a lively interest in church matters. However, these boys did their good work through the efficient and self-sacrificing leadership of one of our young lady teachers and one of our men who loves the boys. The boys met at this man's home from time to time before the revival began. Their meetings were social, and yet much time was given to prayer and study of God's Word. From time to time during the meeting, opportunity was given the congregation to testify. I wish that you could have heard these boys and girls testify to the saving power of Christ. Their faces literally shone with their enthusiasm and love for Christ's work.

Three of our young people have volunteered for service in the foreign field. May God open the way for them and use them! One of our stewards testified at prayer meeting last night that he had been praying for his family and for every one of the boys that had been converted. His daughter was one of the number that was led to Christ and offered herself for the foreign field. There were over fifty conversions and reclamations. Twenty-three united with the Church on profession of faith. Among this number were nine children ranging in age from about seven to ten years of age. We trust that the good effects of the meeting will run all through the year and that every service will be a revival service, in that more souls will be won unto the Lord Christ.

In recognition (partly) of the service rendered by our pastor, the church made up a purse to send Brother Terry to Biloxi to enjoy the Seashore Divinity School soon to be in session there.

With love and success to the "dear old Advocate." L. E. W.

From the Field

Petal, Miss.

Dear Doctor Meek: Please allow me space to speak for the people of Petal, Miss. Some time ago we made an appeal through the Advocate for help to build a church, and now we are worshiping in one of the prettiest churches, not only in Hattiesburg District, but in the Mississippi Conference. And we are glad to say we are almost out of debt. Among the strongest outside givers was Mr. James Hand, of Purvis, Miss. Oh, that we had more such "Hands!"

This church is not only attractive from the outside, but is equipped with Sunday school rooms, elevated floor, and is a beauty. We are all in love with our pastor, Brother W. A. Terry, who comes out twice a month from Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg, and preaches for us.

Thanking the Advocate for its service and the many who contributed to this church, in behalf of the Petal people, I am, yours truly,

H. C. NORSWORTHY.

June 17, 1916.

Oak Ridge, Miss. Conf.

Dear Advocate: On June 17, Brother Sharbrough held the quarterly meeting for Oak Ridge charge, which in some respects was a good quarterly meeting. Brother Sharbrough preached a helpful sermon Saturday on faith, and his text Sunday morning was John 1:29, when he preached another good sermon. We were glad to have with us for the Saturday's sermon Brother L. L. Roberts and his wife and two children, from Vicksburg. Brother H. P. Lewis, Sr., gave us a good sermon Sunday afternoon, at the conclusion of which the Lord's presence was sensibly felt. On Saturday evening of the quarterly meeting, at the home where I spent the night, I was "pounded" most "severely." After supper different ones came in, and just before leaving, my hostess led the way to the dining room; on the table I beheld things which made my heart glad and brought tears to my eyes. It seemed that the people knew just what was needed in the parsonage pantry. I tried to tell them how much I appreciated such practical kindness, but I couldn't express my feelings; so Brother Sharbrough came to my assistance with some appropriate words, and then he read and expounded the 4th Psalm, prayed an earnest prayer, and the crowd dispersed. But it was in the "wee" hours of the night before I slept, being so touched by this manifestation of kindness. I will endeavor the more earnestly to administer to the Porter Chapel people in spiritual things, since they have so graciously and kindly administered to me in temporal things. Such acts always cause the true pastor to live better and bring him closer to his people. May God graciously bless every one who was concerned in this happy affair! In Jesus' name,

J. A. WELLS.

Enterprise Methodist Church.

Brother John W. Chambers, who is now in eternity, after four years service at Enterprise, Miss., prevailed on his Presiding Elder, Brother T. L. Mellen, to secure me as his successor, as he subsequently informed me. He had striven during his time at Enterprise to build a new church, but the brethren there would not agree to anything but to repair the old church. This he stoutly refused to do, and so his time there expired without building the new church, and, hence, knowing of my success at Hattiesburg, Decatur, and elsewhere; and, too, that I was on the up-to-date order, he felt easy in having me to succeed him. After reaching Enterprise and having familiarized myself with church matters, I began to agitate the building of a new church, despite the fact that I was succeeding one of the best money collectors, if not the best, in our Conference. I soon found, however, that no one thought a new church was possible since the town was on the decline financially; and, too, that some of my own members would see to it that I did not build a new one; but, knowing that "all things are possible to him that believeth" (Mark 9:23), I applied for a building committee, which, after appointment, to make sure our failure in building, certain ones of said committee determined that nothing should be done until all of the money for a new church was in the treasury. I informed them that certain brethren who were trusty would not pay anything until we needed it, and therefore a decision to do nothing towards building till the money was in the treasury meant no church at all, but like an immovable stone, they would not move, and hence I said: "Brethren, if you will get out of my way and turn me loose I shall build." To my great delight they did so, and hence I became agent in general, agent at large and agent in particular—the sole manager of all affairs. A Baptist brother and physician, Dr. George, who is now in eternity, said: "Brother Peebles, if you build that church I shall say, "The Lord is with you." In reply, I said, "I think you will be able to say it."

I began at once to collect, after securing a new lot given by Sister Davis. I collected from every one possible or secured subscriptions. Some subscribed liberally with the understanding that they would not pay until sure of a church, feeling as sure that they would not have to pay it at all, for one brother in particular said when the certainty of a new church was undeniable: "If I had at all believed you would build I never would have subscribed $100." I helped to unload the cars of lumber and unloaded a flat all alone loaded with 2 by 12 inches, by 32 feet pieces, and helped to haul it to the church lot. Not only did I work myself but I paid $220 of my own hard-earned money by lecturing at different places on the Bible. Finally the church was finished, being valued at that time at $3500, and the brethren there, appreciating what I had done, would not agree for any one but me to dedicate it. This I did, and I am thankful to God to be able to say that I saw rigidly to it that every cent due on it was paid before I left Enterprise. I never have built a church yet and left it in debt for my successors to pay. I would not desire the honor, neither would I allow myself to have the honor, of building a church that my successor, or successors, had to pay for. Every one who has seen the Enterprise Methodist Church building, knows that in 1895 (and even now) it was a creditable building. Captain Grant was its architect, and he favored me with his time and skill as his part toward the building. Thanks to God and these people for such success as that!: ISAAC LOCKHART PEEBLES.

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of Iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a well known Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: If you were to make an actual blood test of all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In some cases it is worse than foolish to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, may-be at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

LAFAYETTE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lafayette District Conference convened at Lake Charles, La., on May 30, 1916.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, our presiding elder, presided with grace and ease.

Brother K. W. Dodson and his good people, with whom he is completing his quadrennium, had everything arranged for the comfort and entertainment of the preachers and delegates. At the close of the Conference, when a resolution was offered to the people of Lake Charles for their kind hospitality, Brother Dodson stated that he had not heard a complaint from either preachers or people. A Christian spirit prevailed during the Conference and business was transacted in a systematic manner.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. Wm. Schuhle, of Lafayette. The others who preached were Rev. A. I. Townsley, Rev. Briscoe Carter, and Rev. N. E. Joyner. These pulpit messages were spiritual and uplifting.

Another interesting feature of this conference was the devotional services led by Brothers McPherson, McCoy, Bryson, and Breithaupt. A resolution favoring the unification of Methodism was introduced by four of the leading laymen of the district and was passed unanimously.

The district superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church was introduced and addressed the Conference, after, which "Blessed be the tie that binds" was sung. The hope was expressed that the day will soon come when we will be united in a greater Methodism.

The reports from the various works were encouraging. There was not a despairing note sounded during the entire Conference. All were optimistic and enthusiastic in their work. In addition to the organization of Epworth Leagues, Sunday schools, and Missionary Societies, 250 members have been added to the Church in this district.

The Laymen's meeting on Wednesday afternoon was profitable and timely. Our district lay leader, H. G. Gilbert, presided.

Brother W. S. Holmes, who is Conference Lay Leader, gave a stirring talk on the finances of the Church. Thursday morning the chairman of the Sunday School Board, Rev. H. N. Brown, told of the plans of the Sunday School Board. Brother Breithaupt spoke of the Sunday school as a missionary and evangelistic force.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the Conference was on Friday morning when the Woman's Missionary Society took charge. Mrs. A. P. Holt and Mrs. Buchanan took an active part in the discussions. The reports of the French Mission, Lafourche Mission and Houma Mission were given by Brothers Martin Hebert, Starnes, and Martin, and by our Deaconess, Miss Walker. Quite a number of conversions were reported.

This being Brother Hoffpauir's last year as presiding elder, a resolution of thanks was offered for his services. He responded by assuring the preachers that the measure of success that had attended his efforts was due to their co-operation and that of the church people of the Lafayette District.

Methodism is waning in this French speaking section. The Methodist Church, however, is easily in advance of any other Protestant church in this part of Louisiana. There is no greater field in the South for real missionary work than is found in the bounds of the Lafayette District. Our church has a great task to perform. The fields are white unto harvest. Many are calling for the Gospel and God is being honored.

DEATH OF MAJOR R. W. MILLSAPS.

In his home at Jackson, Miss., at about 10:50 o'clock on Wednesday night, June 28, 1916, the immortal spirit of Major R. W. Millsaps passed peacefully away from earth. The deceased was stricken with the severe malady which terminated fatally about June 1, and was unable to be present at any of the exercises of the recent Commencement of Millsaps College, a circumstance which caused him keen regret. The Editor of the Advocate was a guest at his residence at the time and saw him every day during his brief stay there, his condition not then being considered dangerous. Though he was remarkably preserved physically for one of his years, his advanced age was against him, and, instead of responding to treatment as was expected, his case gradually grew worse until much alarm was felt by his relatives and friends. He rallied a number of times, however, and some hope of his recovery was entertained at intervals, but for several days before the end came what the result of the struggle would be was evident to the anxious watchers by his bedside. So finally "the weary wheels of life stood still," and the news was flashed forth over electric wires that Mississippi's greatest financier and philantropist had ended his remarkable earthly career, these messages carrying sorrow into every part of his native State and into many other commonwealths of the American Union. All day Thursday there was a stream of visitors to the residence of the deceased, to show their esteem and affection for the distingnished man who had lived and wrought so nobly, many of them, with tear-hedimmed eyes, taking a farewell look at the familiar features which soon would exist only in memory.

The obsequies were conducted in the Galloway Memorial Church, beginning at 10:30 o'clock a. m. last Friday morning, and were under the direction of Bishop W. B. Murrah and the pastor, Dr. W. G. Henry, Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson District, and the Editor of the Advocate also taking part in the service. Other ministers whose presence we noted were Dr. T. B. Holloman, Dr. W. H. LaPrade, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Rev. J. M. Morse, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. W. L. Duren, Rev. L. P. Wasson, Rev. S. M. Thames, Rev. W. H. Lewis, Rev. J. S. Duke, and Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr. There was a great outpouring of the people of Jackson to pay the last tribute of respect to their city's foremost citizen and sorrowing persons were present from many other parts of Mississippi and elsewhere. We observed in the galleries of the church quite a gathering of colored people, who recognized in Major Millsaps a true and helpful friend of their race. Business in the city was largely suspended while the funeral was in progress, and all seemed to feel the weight of the great loss which had been sustained. Bishop Murrah's address was feeling, discriminating, and admirable in every respect, and, following it, the body of the deceased was borne to the Millsaps campus, accompanied by a great procession, and was there deposited in the marble mausoleum that Major Millsaps had had constructed to be his lasting resting-place. The remains of his beautiful and devoted wife will later be placed therein also, and they who dwelt so happily together in life will sleep side by side in death until the trumpet of the archangel shall bid them wake and rise to meet their Lord.

The space is not at our disposal to attempt in this issue of the Advocate a discussion of the character and work of our honored and glorified friend. He was a truly great man—great in intellect, great in heart, great in force of personality, great in faith, and great in his aims and achievements. No place would have been too large for him. He would have made a Governor, or United States Senator, or a Cabinet officer who would never have been forgotten; but he sought no office and lived a quiet and unostentatious life, which was devoted, however, to lofty purposes and unselfish service. Of all the laymen in the Church that we have known, he was easily the ablest and the most clear-visioned. He played a large, if not conspicuous and showy, part in the affairs of his State, and his fame is secure. His monuments are of the kind that will not perish, and, while other names now well-known may be forgotten and cease to be spoken, his will grow brighter with the passing years. Mississippi Methodism owes him a debt that can never be paid, and by his death the whole Southern Church has been made poorer. Future generations will rise up and call him blessed. With Galloway, and Wheat, and Black, and Andrews, and numerous others whose names were graven on his heart, together with his own ascended kindred and the precious Savior, to meet and greet him at "the pearly gates," he cannot be lonesome in the City of God. There we hope to see him again some sweet day.

To the grief-stricken loved ones we extend our deepest sympathy, and pray that the Heavenly Father may gently lay his healing hand on every bleeding, aching heart. Certainly, they do not need to mourn as "they who have no hope."

FOR MEMORY'S WALLS.

A very pleasing incident recently occurred in the pretty town of Magnolia, too heart-warming, charming and delightful not to be told. On Wednesday, June 28, Miss Lucia, second daughter of that splendid Methodist layman, Mr. Lucius Lampton, became the bride of Mr. James Thomas Brown of Laurel, Miss. On the Saturday preceding the wedding, in lieu of the usual "shower," whereby the bride herself is the beneficiary, receiving lovely gifts, this rarely beautiful and thoughtful girl carried out the blessed injunction, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." At the lovely home of her childhood, she entertained scores of boys and girls employed at the factory of the Lampton Brothers, making her guests have a happy time on the spacious lawn, serving them delicious refreshments and charming them with a royal welcome. Surely this "shower" of good things to others was marked by the eye of Him who rewards even a "cup of cold water" given in the name of the beloved Son of God. Miss Lucia's whole young life has been marked by lovely endeavor among the poor and downcast, and many prayers ascend that this fair young girl, who did "noble things," may find as the poet sings, "Life, death and that vast forever, one grand sweet song." May God bless her in her new life!

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The Seashore Camp Meeting, at the Campground near Biloxi, Miss., will open on Wednesday, July 12. It will be under the direction of Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District; Rev. O. V. Calhoun, presiding elder of the Mobile District, and Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District. Dr. E. C. Moore, of Montgomery, Ala., has been engaged to do the preaching, and the music will be in charge of Rev. H. W. Van Hook. The accommodations are excellent and ample, and all visitors and workers will be heartily welcomed. Why not attend and make the most of this opportunity to deepen your own spiritual life and help others? Let the readers of the Advocate pray for the success of this annual series of revival services at this historic place, where God has so often met with his people and where thousands of souls have found the Savior.

FORGETFUL OF GOD.

He that prays for a mercy he wants, and is not thankful for mercies received, may, indeed, seem mindful of himself, but he is forgetful of God, and so takes the right course to shut his prayers out of doors. God will not put his mercies into a rent purse, and such is an unthankful heart.—William Gurney.

CONSTANT LIGHT.

A candle that won't shine in one room is very unlikely to shine in another. If you do not shine at home, if your father and mother, your sister and brother, if the very cat and dog in the house are not the better and happier for your being a Christian, it is a question whether you really are one.—J. Hudson Taylor.

WE NEED THEE EVERY HOUR.

God's Word teaches us that God does not expect a man to live for one minute as he ought unless the Holy Spirit is in him to enable him to do it. We do not want the Holy Spirit only when we preach, or when we have some special temptation of the devil to meet or some great burden to bear; we cannot live a right life unless every moment we are guided by the Spirit of God.—Andrew Murray.

THE TOLERANCE OF PAUL.

Prof. Machen, in his lectures at the Princeton Summer School of Theology, made mention of the fact that our age is quite intolerant of new or unfamiliar methods—witness the opposition of many Christian people to Billy Sunday—but that it is exceedingly tolerant and easy-going as regards what is preached in the name of Christianity—witness the fact that if a minister is a good mixer, a good organizer, and popular with the young people, it is a matter of indifference to many what the nature of his message, whether he proclaims Christ as the divine-human Savior, or merely as an ancient religious teacher who was markedly free of moral faults. He pointed out at the same time, however, that Paul's position was just the reverse of this—that he was exceedingly tolerant of methods as long as Christ was truly proclaimed, but that he was exceedingly intolerant of any message other than that which Christ had made known to him. We never find Paul using strong language when speaking of those with whom he differed only as regards matters of method, but when speaking of those who distorted the message itself, he did not hesitate to say, "If any man preacheth unto you any gospel other than that which ye received, let him be anathema."

Surely it is Paul who here places the emphasis right. The primary function of the minister is that of a witness, and the essential thing in a good witness is that he tell the truth. A pleasing appearance, a fine address, correct and fluent speech on the part of a witness, avails nothing if he does not tell the truth, and so no matter what qualifications a minister may have, if his message does not ring true to the New Testament, he is lacking as regards the most vital requirement.

And yet it would seem that about the last question that modern congregations ask when seeking a new minister is the question that has to do with the content of his message. They ask all kinds of questions, and rightly ask all kinds of questions, about the men they are considering, but too often they fail to ask the one question that is most vital where true ministerial efficiency is concerned. After all, what does it profit that a man succeed in gathering large numbers of men, women and children into his congregation if at the same time he does not lead them to put their trust in Jesus Christ as their only Savior, and to obey Him as their Lord and Master in every sphere of life?—The Presbyterian.

THE UNIFICATION OF AMERICAN METHODISM.

By Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D.

The action of the recent General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church upon organic union will be read in the light of the reader's previously formed judgment of the desirability of union. The believer in union, under any conditions, will hail the action with delight and find in the hearty approval of the general principle the prospect of an early consummation of his ardent desires. The man who believes that union is desirable under no conditions will be displeased at this approval of the principle of union as constituting a step toward the accomplishment of the unwelcome union.

To the attitude of neither of these brethren can objection be offered; but the influence of both is to be guarded against, lest, upon the one hand, unwise zeal should hurry the Church into a position of intolerable embarrassment; and, upon the other hand, lest a step promotive of the glory of God and the good of the Church be hindered. In the one case a mechanical union might be formed under conditions that would destroy all unity of spirit and precipitate an era of strife incomparably worse than the unhappy, though not intolerable, relation that now exists; in the other case undue consideration may be given to what seem to be objections to a proposed plan of union, but are in reality but poorly concealed objections to the principle of union.

There are many Southern Methodists who are convinced of the desirability of organic union, and earnestly hope for its accomplishment upon terms that will preserve their principles and safeguard their rights. We believe this to be the attitude of the greater part of our people. We think there are but few who favor the unconditional unification of the Churches, and that there are not many who are irreconcilably opposed to the principle of organic union. Under these circumstances we should rejoice that our Northern brethren have so enthusiastically endorsed the general principle of organic union and submitted tentative recommendations as a basis for further negotiations. We should be neither surprised nor offended that the recommendations submitted differ in some particulars from those submitted by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. If there were no differences there would be no need for further negotiations.

Believing, as I do, in the desirability of the reunion of the Churches separated in 1844, and cherishing, as I do, the expectation of the ultimate adoption of a satisfactory plan of union, I do not hesitate to express my sense of dissatisfaction with the tentative plan outlined by the Saratoga Conference, nor to declare the conviction that insistence upon the adoption of this plan will indefinitely postpone the consummation that I desire.

The first recommendation suggests "that the General Conference be made the supreme legislative, executive, and judicial body of the Church, under constitutional provisions and restrictions." Southern Methodists have a well-defined suspicion of "supreme" General Conferences. Seventy-five years have not made them willing to accept, as embodied in their organic law, a principle that, as enunciated by a majority of the General Conference of 1844, made necessary the division of the Church. It is to be noted, however, that the recommendation provides that this supreme authority shall exist "under constitutional provisions and restrictions." This significant provision may open the way for the adequate protection of the rights of the minority and the adoption of some satisfactory method of interpreting "the constitutionality of its own actions."

The suggestion that the number of Quadrennial Conferences be increased would seem unnecessary and undesirable. There would seem to be no justification for the establishment of more than one Quadrennial Conference in the territory now occupied by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the sentimental objection to the division is so strong that no consideration, short of the most imperative, would justify it. Such a subdivision may become necessary at some time in the future, but we believe it to be unnecessary and undesirable at present.

Possibly the most objectionable feature of the Saratoga plan is that dealing with the negro Methodists, whose status will be affected by the proposed readjustment. The plan suggests the organization of these negro Methodists into one of the several Quadrennial Conferences of which the reunited Church is to be constituted, and their participation as members in the supreme General Conference.

We fear that our brethren of the North do not realize the conditions in the South that would make this feature very unacceptable, and we are afraid that this would constitute an insuperable barrier to union. The recommendation made by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that they be organized into an independent body, holding fraternal relations to the reorganized and united Church, would seem a settlement of this delicate matter at once wise and righteous. If the suggestion should be made that the negroes need this closer relation, the answer would seem sufficient that the happiest results have followed a similar adjustment of the relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the negro members that remained with them after the war, and that it is probable that in the integrity and ability of its ministry and the consistency and liberality of its membership the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church is not surpassed (probably not equalled) by any body of negro Methodists in the world. While these brethren will need and should receive the sympathetic guidance and financial aid of the united Church, I am of the opinion that, with this liberal aid guaranteed, the negroes would prefer a separate and independent organization.

But we need not grow excited about the details of the plan of union, whether these details are suggested by the Methodist Episcopal Church at Saratoga or the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Oklahoma City. They are but the tentative suggestions that follow an enthusiastic endorsement of the general principle of union, and constitute merely the basis upon which the joint commission will work, and out of which they may or may not be able to draw a plan that will prove satisfactory to all.

I believe the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to be in favor of organic union upon suitable terms, and in this belief I rejoice. I believe, also, that the Methodist Episcopal Church is favorable to the union, and in this, also, I rejoice. If this be so, surely a patient, prayful effort will be able to find a way. The will of God must be made known and followed. Union should not be hurried by undiscriminating zeal; but it should not be hindered by the prejudices of men, whose gray beards are upon their shoulders, as they look back to and nurse the resentments of seventy years ago.

Intemperate zeal is sure to do more harm than good. We can afford to await the issue with quiet confidence, assured that the will of God will be wrought out by those who seek the guidance of His Spirit. If the Joint Commission succeed in working out a satisfactory plan of union, we may accept the results without fear. If no satisfactory terms can be reached, we can abide the result, consoling ourselves with the thought that an honest effort to provide for union, even though it fail in that, will probably bring about the adoption of a plan of thorough-going and practical federation that will in a large measure cure the conditions that now vex and humiliate the Church.

THE PLAN OF CAMPAIGN FOR OUR TWO UNIVERSITIES.

At a meeting of the Educational Commission held on June 12, a committee was appointed to consider carefully the matter of the campaign for our two Universities, and the following plan was reported by the committee and unanimously adopted by the Commission:

Your Committee to recommend a financial plan for raising funds for the two Universities of the Church beg leave to submit the following report

1. We would begin our report with the following quotation from the latest message of our Bishops to the Church:

"As chief pastors of our great Church and charged with the general supervision of all its interests, we desire in fulfillment of a special responsibility to call your attention at the present time to the condition and outlook of our two leading educational institutions, viz.: Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., and Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas.

"It is not necessary to tell you that these institutions were adopted more than a year ago by the Educational Commission which was invested by the General Conference of 1914 with full authority to act in the premises. One of these universities is to meet the special needs of the Conferences east of the Mississippi River and the other is to serve a like purpose for the Conferences to the west of that boundary. They are, therefore, both connectional enterprises in the full sense of the word and entitled to the undivided and cordial devotion of the whole Church.

"In conclusion, we give our most urgent counsel against divided and conflicting plans and policies. Everything depends upon unity of action. We have many and great tasks to perform. The number of them grows increasingly numerous. They will never be fewer, and they will never be less. It will require our best endeavors to meet them and carry them through. Unless we mean to invite failure and court disaster, we must pull together. There never was a period in the history of our Church when there was a more strenuous demand for unity of purpose and effort. The solidarity of Southern Methodism has been one of the chief sources of its strength in the days that have gone. Let us now once more, forgetting all minor differences of opinion and casting to the winds all factional feelings of every sort, rally as one man to the support of our universities."

2. We are glad to know that our people in the two Alabama Conferences are already enlisted in the raising of a minimum of $50,000 for the erection of an Alabama Building at Emory University, and, under the leadership of Dr. J. S. Fraser, our Commissioner for that territory, are making gratifying progress. And similarly, the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, under the leadership of Commissioner Robt. Selby, are prosecuting successfully a campaign to secure a minimum of $50,000 for the building to be occupied by the L. Q. C. Lamar School of Law, and the two Conferences in Georgia have determined, under the direction of Commissioners Chas. C. Jarrell and J. A. Harmon, to raise $1,000,000 in Georgia outside of the city of Atlanta for the general uses of Emory University.

All these movements are now successfully progressing and give promise of reaching their respective goals.

3. In order that the whole Church be enlisted in these great connectional enterprises, we recommend that in the support of Emory University the following adjustments be made in the territory east of the Mississippi River:

(a) That the Baltimore and Western Virginia Conferences unite in the securing of a sum of not less than $25,000, to be invested by the Board of Trustees of Emory University, and the interest on same be used annually for maintaining and enlarging the Alpheus W. Wilson Library of Theology.

(b) That the Virginia Conferences be requested to raise not less than $50,000 for the erection of a James A. Duncan Hall to be used as a home for the Department of English Language and Literature.

(c) That the four Conferences in North Carolina and South Carolina be charged with the raising of $100,000 to be devoted to the erection of a building for the James H. Carlisle Teachers' College, a proposed department of the University.

(d) That the Holston, Tennessee, Memphis, Louisville, and Kentucky Conferences be asked to raise not less than $200,000, of which $100,000 shall constitute a loan fund to be used in aiding young men to obtain an education in any school of the University, the preference in awarding loans from the fund to be given to a young man coming from the territory of these Conferences, but if there be at any time a surplus from this fund after aiding such young men, then said surplus may be used to aid young men in any school or department coming from other than this territory. That the second $100,000 be used in the erection of a building on the University Campus to be called the McTyeire Memorial building.

(e) Inasmuch as the Florida Conference was one of the original Conferences patronizing and owning Emory College, which has now been incorporated into the University as its School of Liberal Arts, we recommend that that Conference unite with two Conferences in Georgia in the raising of the $1,000,000 before mentioned in connection with the Georgia Conference.

4. We recommend that a Commissioner or Commissioners be appointed for each of the divisions above indicated, by the President of this Commission, with the approval of the Executive Committee, as soon as suitable persons can be found.

5. It is clearly understood that the amounts asked for in these recommendations do not represent the needs of Emory University, but are suggested as goals for the immediate efforts of the district named, in the endeavor to raise the minimum sum of $5,000,000, which this Commission estimates to be the amount needed for beginning operations in all departments of the University, and of which only approximately $2,500,000 has been secured to this date.

6. We suggest that in order to the proper launching of the campaigns in the several districts it is very desirable that a meeting of the presiding elders in each Conference should be held at an early date to consider the best method to be followed in each, and, if it be practicable, that the expenses of the presiding elders should be paid by the Commission.

Concerning Southern Methodist University, which shares equally with Emory in our sympathies and responsibility, we would say: Inasmuch as campaigns are already in operation west of the Mississippi River and said campaigns have been devised and conducted by the Board of Trustees of Southern Methodist University, we feel that it would be unwise for this Commission to adopt detailed plans for that part of our Church beyond making suggestions to the Board for their consideration.

We earnestly recommend to them that they inaugurate a definite plan of campaign covering all the territory of our Church west of the Mississippi similar to the plan outlined in this report for Emory University.

In conclusion, we believe that our people everywhere are ready to respond in a substantial way to the appeal of the two Universities, and that it is imperative that the needs of the work be presented to them at the earliest possible moment.

Respectfully submitted,

IS MONEY TO BE A CONSIDERATION?

Bishop Hendrix is quoted through [illegible] of the papers that come to our office as saying that he knows a non-Methodist who is willing to give a million and three quarters dollars to the superannuated ministers as soon as the two Episcopal Methodisms in this country are [illegible]

Commenting upon this statement of Bishop Hendrix, the Michigan Christian Advocate says: "Let us hurry up and be one."

Is the power of money to be brought [illegible] negotiations for what Bishop Hendrix and the Methodist Episcopal Church are so anxious to effect, namely, the union of the two Churches? Is that handsome sum of money for so worthy a cause as the relief and support of the superannuates of the Methodist ministry to be dangled before the Churches as a controlling or effective reason for the union? Have we come to [illegible] as that? Are there no principles that are so sacred and so vital to Methodism that their surrender by either the Methodist Episcopal or the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is easily accomplished when a big sum of money is the consideration of the surrender? For our part, we sincerely wish that the mere mention of such a thing shall be spurned, as it should be, by the commission when it meets to consider so far-reaching a matter as the union of Methodism.

It is generous in the non-Methodist to offer that sum of money for the superannuates. But if he really wishes to help these worthy claimants on the Church let him apportion the sum and divide it between the claimants of each Church, whether they unite or not. Superannuates are not responsible for the present status of the two Episcopal Methodisms. As a general rule superannuates are not members of the General Conference and therefore have no voice or vote in the laws that are made. Nor is it likely that any superannuates will be on the joint commission that is to work out the details of "unification." Why then should they be deprived of the help that a million and three quarters dollar would supply in their old age and their time of sore need? This generous non-Methodist could immortalize himself if he would take the view of the matter and furnish the money now irrespective of the results of the details for "unification by reorganization" as the Southern Methodist Church has proposed, and the "tentative basis for such unification" by the Methodist Episcopal Church, which in the interpretation of some of the leading men of that Church is really in its ultimate purpose "union."

The latitude from which this offer comes could easily be guessed. It is at least suspicious whence this offer comes. In the name of God and that which is right and just and true to the convictions of real men, let not such financial bids be for one moment considered in settling a matter that looks to the religious future of this country for generations that are to come. And don't dangle this sum of money before the eyes of the people as a bid for something the bidder wishes done. If unification, or what so many seem to desire, "union," shall come, let it come as the result of deliberations that have been under the immediate direction and superintendence of the Holy Spirit, and not as if influenced by any offer of financial assistance as a bid to bring it about.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

PAUL'S PHILOSOPHY.

"The happy state of mind, so rarely possessed, in which we can say, 'I have enough,' is the highest attainment of philosophy. Happiness consists, not in possessing much, but in being content with what we have. He who wants little always has enough."

REUBEN WEBSTER MILLSAPS.

So many years has Major Millsaps been a commanding figure in the commercial, religious, and educational life of Mississippi that the most prominent facts of his life and character are well known to all.

He was born May 30, 1833, in Copiah County, Mississippi, a County that justly boasts having given to the State many of its most distinguished citizens. He was the second of eight children of Reuben and Lavinia (Clower) Millsaps, both of whom were Georgians by birth. His paternal grandfather, William Millsaps, a native of Georgia, came with his family to Mississippi in 1830, and became a resident of Copiah County when that country was a wilderness. His maternal grandfather, William Clower, came also from Georgia and settled in Copiah County in the same year, becoming there a prominent and influential citizen. His father, Reuben Millsaps, grew to manhood in this section of the State; by his own efforts he acquired a superior education and became the first school teacher in the county. Here he married and here continued to live until the time of his death in 1854.

To the example and precept of his father is due, probably, the fact that when he was seventeen years old the young man left his home and went to Natchez, walking the entire distance, save when assisted along his way by some passing wagon. Here he took passage on a steamboat for Madison, Indiana, where he entered Hanover College, bent upon obtaining an education that would adequately equip him for the battle of life. After remaining here two years, he was induced to go to Asbury College (now DePauw University), Greencastle, Indiana, from which he was graduated in 1854. The years of his college life were years of poverty and toil. Privation and menial, but honest toil were the price paid for the education that he was determined to secure. Sometimes to those who possessed his confidence he would speak of those earlier days, and the heart of the listener would melt at the simple story of his patience and self-denial.

After his graduation he taught school two years in Warren County, Miss., in the home of Colonel Glass, every penny being saved that he might study law in Harvard University. He was awarded his diploma and degree from this great Law School in 1858, and located for the practice of his profession in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, where he continued in a successful and growing practice until the opening of the Civil War. Upon one occasion while at Harvard he received a check for $600, sent without a word to indicate from whom it came or for what purpose intended. But he suspected his old friend in Warrenton, and wrote to him, asking about it. In due time he received a letter from Colonel Glass, admitting that he had sent the check, and saying that he thought it might be needed; that he wished his young friend to accept it and that at some time in the future he might return it if he wished, but that its return was not desired. When in business in Brookhaven after the war Major Millsaps learned that Colonel Glass was dead and that his property had been swept away by the war. Going to his desk, he drew a check to the amount of the prineipal and interest of the gift and sent it to a lawyer in Vicksburg to be forwarded to the widow of his old friend. It is said that from that day she was the recipient of his aid, and that after her death her son was the object of his grateful kindness.

He joined Company A of the Ninth Arkansas Regiment, C. S. A.; was elected Lieutenant, then chosen Adjutant, and afterward made Lieutenant-Colonel. With his regiment he saw service in Kentucky and Tennessee, and participated in the battle of Shiloh, where he was wounded. After remaining in the hospital in Jackson, Miss., for some time he rejoined his command at Corinth in 1862. As a part of General Loring's division, he participated in the movements about Vicksburg, including the battle of Baker's Creek. As the Confederate forces were pressed back upon Vicksburg, General Loring led his command south of the city, and, crossing Big Black River, turned east to Crystal Springs; then moved north in time to join General Johnston in the fight at Jackson. He was in the fighting around Atlanta and took part in the battles at Franklin and Nashville, being again wounded in the latter engagement. Following this he saw service in North Carolina under General Johnston, and participated in the last battle of the war at Bentonville. He was on his way to the trans-Mississippi department, and had reached Jackson, Miss., when the news of General Lee's surrender came to him.

After his discharge from the army Major Millsaps returned to south Mississippi and engaged in the business of hauling cotton from the interior to the river at Natchez. Cotton was plentiful and teams were scarce and in demand, and ten dollars a bale was the price paid for hauling. From cotton hauling to cotton buying was an easy step, and from this to merchandising, and we find him engaged in a general mercantile business in Brookhaven in association with his brother, Rev. W. G. Millsaps, in 1866. In 1880 he sold out his interests in Mississippi and went to St. Louis, Mo., where he established a wholesale grocery and cotton commission business. Closing out this business in 1884, he spent a year in travel in Europe with his family, after which he returned to America, and in Hazlehurst, Miss., established the Merchants' and Planters' Bank, which he managed until 1887, when he moved to Jackson and became President of the Capital State Bank, soon to be changed into the Capital National Bank. In this city he has spent the last years of his life.

In 1869 Major Millsaps was married to Mrs. Mary F. Younkin, the daughter of Horace Bean, a wealthy banker of New Orleans. Of this union no children were born; but this lack was largely supplied by the presence of a gracious little niece, Josie, who became their adopted daughter. She is now the wife of the Hon. Guston T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, Tenn.

The home life of Major Millsaps was very happy. Mrs. Millsaps was a very beautiful woman, of refined and gentle spirit and gracious manner, and between her and her noble husband there existed the warmest affection. The home itself was furnished with simple elegance, and in it was dispensed a generous hospitality. On May 25, 1908, Major Millsaps was greatly bereaved in the death of his beloved wife, and the strong man weakened under the two-fold burden of age and sorrow. Henceforth his comfort and happiness became the care of Mary, his sister's daughter, the wife of Mr. Harry N. Austin, of Jackson.

The illness that came to him about the first of June alarmed his friends, though they looked forward to his early and complete recovery. But to those who came to see him he said that his work was done and that he would not get well, adding that he was ready to go and did not wish to remain longer. With unshaken fortitude he bore the pain, and with trustful confidence he awaited the coming of the end, and on Wednesday night, June 28, surrounded by his loved ones, he fell asleep, his last words being: "Tell everybody good-by. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost. Amen. Amen."

In person Major Millsaps was of medium height and weight, erect of carriage and quick of movement. He had been rather delicate in youth, but the out-door life and vigorous exercise of four years in the Confederate army had made him strong and rugged. His body was well knit and vigorous and his constitution almost perfect. He was fair of complexion, with clear-cut features, hair of a light reddish brown, and clear, bluish grey eyes that looked out with fearless confidence from beneath strong, tawney eyebrows. His voice was clear and rather high in pitch, and his manner alert and attentive. He was probably quick-tempered naturally, but had learned to an unusual degree the lesson of self-control. Intellectually he was a man of unusual power; his judgment of men was accurate, and of matters almost unerring. In the consideration of a question he was the most impersonal of men, and his opinions were expressed with a candor that sometimes gave offense. It was interesting to note his unaffected surprise and sincere regret at learning that some statement of his had wounded the feelings or offended the dignity of a friend. To him the question was of the correctness of an opinion rather than of the person of him who expressed it. He was steadfast in his convictions and his promise was as unfailing as the rising of the sun.

His mastery of the matters with which he had to do was comprehensive and detailed, and his memory retentive in a remarkable degree. He was systematic, careful, safe. In his earlier business life he was laborious to the limit of time and strength; in his later years he was laborious, methodically, prudently, efficiently. The chief elements of his success were judgment, capacity for hard work, the systematic ordering of his forces, prudence. He had in him none of the elements of a plunger. He had a wholesome horror of speculation. His fortune was not the result of a single bold venture, nor was it the outcome of some brilliant campaign of business daring; it was the garnered fruitage of long years of toil, guided by clear business judgment and conserved by prudent foresight. A speculative financier might have made and lost in eighty years many fortunes greater than that of Major Millsaps. He made but one fortune, and its size could have been limited only by the years of his life. His counsels to those who sought his advice were marked by prudence. He was pre-eminently a safe counselor. Many a venture against which his verdict was given might have turned out profitably; but when his judgment was favorable, the issue was as sure to be fortunate as anything contingent could be. One might prosper against his judgment; with his endorsement the venture was almost certain of success.

Major Millsaps was one of the most approachable of men. Many a man has marveled at the completeness with which he laid aside his business and gave himself with seemingly willing and undivided attention to his visitor, with no sign of impatience or preoccupation, and the instant and undisturbed resumption of his work, when his visitor had taken his departure. course he was marked by simple, unaffected cordiality. His interest was easily aroused and he was a good listener. It is a privilege to have known him, and an honor to have accounted him a friend.

He was a stalwart Methodist. His father and mother before him were Methodists. In his early life his religious sensibilities were awakened by his pious parents, and in his early youth he came under the helpful spiritual influence of the Rev. Samuel L. L. Scott, a Methodist itinerant, who often visited his father's home and preached in the neighboring church. His memory loved to dwell upon the early scenes that centered around old Pleasant Valley Church, at whose altars in his childhood he had given his heart to God; and the religious influences of childhood and youth crystallized in manhood into those steadfast Christian principles that held him true to the faith of his fathers and formed the basis of that assurance that enabled him at the last to say, "I am ready to go." For twenty-five years he was an efficient Sunday school teacher and for fifty years a diligent and faithful steward. His work as an official in the Church showed the same mastery of detail, the same business sagacity, the same prompt and unremitting care that he gave to his every-day affairs. In public worship he was conspicuous for his earnest and attentive participation in every feature of the service. He was a constant attendant upon the business meetings of the Church from the monthly conference of the local congregation to the quadrennial General Conference of the Connection. It is probable that no layman in Mississippi was so frequently elected a delegate to the General Conference of the Church. He was a systematic and liberal contributor to the support of the minstry and the benevolent activities of the Church, and, if not especially enthusiastic in the support of its missionary agencies, it was because there was another great Christian enterprise that absorbed his affections and commanded his unmeasured beneficence.

We have seen that probably from his father he inherited an interest in education; we have noted with what unflagging zeal he struggled against the difficulties that threatened to deprive him of an adequate education. His intimate and confidential friends of the earlier time have told it of him that as the boy trudged along the hot and dusty road to Natchez his heart turned toward the God of his fathers and he said, with something of the spirit of Jacob of old: "O God, if thou wilt prosper me in my plans and give me success in my life, I will build a College in Mississippi, so that her poor boys will not find it necessary to go so far away to get an education."

Forty years later Major Millsaps laid the foundation of Millsaps College in the offer of fifty thousand dollars to the Methodists of the State, provided they would raise an equal amount for the endowment of a Methodist College for boys in Mississippi. Since that day he has increased the initial gift ten-fold. He has watched the progress of every bulding, the planting of every tree. He has unselfishly invested and developed its growing endowment, has aided its every enterprise, has fostered every element of its growth, and often expressed the desire that in the midst of its beautiful campus his dust should rest. If the story of his youthful covenant with God be true, the man has fulfilled the promise of the boy.

But long before the building of Millsaps College he was conspicuous for his gifts to Whitworth Female College and other educational institutions of the Church, and notable for the unfailing generosity of his support of institutions for the education of the youth of the negro race. It is doubted if there be a needy school for the education of negroes in the State that has not been the recipient of his generous aid. While his gifts to the cause of Christian education sufflce to place him in a class alone among Mississippians as a Christian philanthropist, his liberality was not limited to institutions of learning. The splendid church building that adorns our State Capital, the memorial of our honored Bishop Galloway, was made possible by his large contribution, and unnumbered churches throughout the State have felt the blessing of his aid. To the Mississippi Orphans' Home, of which he was a director, he gave with princely liberality. To the erection of the Young Men's Christian Association building and to the support of this noble benevolence he was a frequent and generous giver. Nor to these alone: but to the poor his hand, unheralded, was ever stretched out to give relief. In his giving Major Millsaps was marked by a habit that was characteristic of the man. To give was to him a delight: but he was as methodical in his giving as in his making or saving of money. He did not give impulsively, but only when deliberate and careful investigation convinced him that he was justified in doing so.

Upon the campus of Millsaps College there stands a massive mausoleum, built of snowy marble. It is his monument. But near at hand there is a statelier structure that lifts its columned front toward the sky; at its feet, stretching far and wide, falls away the greenswarded campus; around it forest trees wave their leafy banners in the air; deep in their wooded emplacements stand other buildings. These are his monument. But back of its material expression is Millsaps College, intangible, but real and potent, with its high curriculum, its worthy faculty, its noble ideals of cultured and Christian manhood, its traditions, redolent with the memories of the sacred past and prophetic of its future glory. This is his monument. From out its halls have gone more than a thousand men, the product of its molding hand. They are in every hamlet in the State, and scattered far beyond its portals, honoring every field of worthy endeavor, adorning every activity of Church and State, inspired by the high ideals of cultured hearts, armed with the keen perception and balanced judgment of cultured minds, the servants and leaders of their fellow men. These are his monument. He rests to-day from his labors, and his works do follow him.

SCHOOL OF METHODS OF THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

At the session of the Brookhaven District Conference held in Summit this spring, a committee was appointed to arrange for and hold a School of Methods for the Sunday school workers of the District. This school was to be held in Whitworth College some time in June. Dr. Cooper, President of the College, very generously opened the College buildings to us, and agreed to board all who came in the College for one dollar a day.

As soon after the close of the District Conference as practicable, the committee met and began work. A program was arranged, carefully considered and finally adopted, dealing with such phases of Sunday school work in the district as were deemed most needed in this section of the Conference, and June 20-21 fixed as the date of the meeting. The services of Miss Kennedy, Elementary Superintendent under the General Sunday School Board, was secured and she spent the entire two days of the meeting with us, rendering efficient service. All other workers were secured from our own district.

As this was only a district school, and the first of its kind not only in the district, but in the entire Conference, an overflowing crowd was not expected. All who understood the conditions in the district at this time looked for an attendance of about twenty-five. But when an enrollment was had at the close of the first morning's session, it was discovered that there were present eleven pastors and Sunday school superintendents, fifteen teachers of classes above the Elementary Division, eight Elementary teachers, and six Sunday school pupils, forty in all, thirty of whom were from a distance. Besides, quite a number of the people from Brookhaven and some from out of town dropped in and spent from an hour to an entire session with us who are not included in the above estimate. Not only was the attendance far in advance of what was expected, but the character of work done, the very deep interest manifested by all present, and the character of questions asked and resolves made, more than compensated those having the work in hand for what had been put into it.

The meeting closed Wednesday afternoon in time for all who desired to leave on the afternoon trains. After a meeting of all the pastors and superintendents present, in which future plans were discussed, the meeting by a rising vote unanimously declared for a similar meeting next summer to be held in the Whitworth College buildings, but to last a week instead of two days. All financial obligations were met or amply provided for before adjournment, and provision was made for the meeting next year. B. F. LEWIS, Sec'y.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

Grenada College has just closed a very satisfactory session with an attractive commencement program. President A. F. Watkins, of Millsaps College, delivered two strong and appropriate sermons on Sunday. The annual address was given by Hon. L. G. Fant, of the Holly Springs bar, his forceful utterance being well up to the standards for such occasions. Five mature young women received diplomas, all of them being active Christian workers. The efficiency of the school in shaping the character of the students is shown by the fact that only one graduate in recent years was not an earnest Christian, and by the further fact that every boarding pupil in the school this spring became a Church member.

The Board of Trustees was so impressed with the zealous and intelligent interest of Judge J. G. McGowen in the work and future of the College that he was unanimously elected President of that body. The Board made a careful review of the business of the past session and heartily endorsed all plans for the further development of the institution, directing that all the buildings be thoroughly overhauled, necessary repairs made, woodwork painted, rooms papered and screened, and needed equipment added to laboratory and library.

The curriculum was so adjusted as to meet the requirement of the State Board of Examiners of Mississippi and bring the school in line for recognition of graduates as teachers without the formality of examination. The school now offers nine hours in education, besides having teachers giving full time to strictly college classes in English, Latin, French and German, Mathematics, Science, History, making seven in the college faculty. The Preparatory Department has three teachers; the School of Music, four; Art, Domestic Economy, and Expression, and Stenography, one each. These trained teachers are prepared to give those coming under their instruction advantages second to none in the State. R. A. TUCKER.

METHODIST UNION.

By Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr.

There are some things in the world that give a great deal of apprehension to those who seek to forward the interests of the kingdom of God in the world. One of these is a Church dispute. Men fall out with each other and reach the place where they are unable to agree. Sometimes they cease to speak to each other. It is usually the case that each party considers himself to be the injured one and is unwilling to show any disposition to meet the other party on any sort of ground. Many preachers have been hampered in their work in a community and the Kingdom of God has been held back because such things have come to obtain there. Doubtless some who read these lines have had personal experience with such matters.

Many years ago Methodism in this country had a Church disagreement. For a long time the great branches of Methodism in this country were almost at the point where they were not on speaking terms. Each believed itself to be right and that the other party to the disagreement was the one that needed to make advances. When preachers see two of their members in such a condition they begin to get interested and to get on their knees before God. When two men who have thus disagreed begin to show signs of entering into friendly relations again, we become interested to the extent of trying to bring about a reconciliation.

There are humble preachers and laymen in Methodism who have had their hearts made to rejoice because of the signs pointing in the direction of bringing this old quarrel to a close. May it not be possible that even the Christ who died for men might rejoice to see something of the sort done? It appears to this writer that there are some things that are going to look very small after a while. I remember two old men living as neighbors who fell out over a very trivial matter. They would not speak and would have nothing to do with each other for a long time. Then, after a while, one of them came down close to death. When this came to be true and death was staring this man in the face the difference began to look very small. It seems to this writer that the place and position of Bishops, whether women have laity rights or not, the place of the brother in black whom we are trying to win for Christ in Africa, organization of church boards and the management of church papers and some other such things will look pretty small when we come to stand before the bar of God and there consider whether it be not possible that some of us have lent our influence to keeping the great branches of Methodism apart on account of these things. No man denies but that there is much of warmth of feeling about the rights and position of these different branches of Methodism in some sections of the land. Why not forget all these old differences and these things that have kept us one from the other and then come to look one another straight in the eye with honest, sincere purpose to band ourselves together for the advancement of the Kingdom of God, rather than spend a good deal of strength in propagating our particular brand of ecclesiasticism? Which would seem more in keeping with the command of the Master when he said: "Go ye therefore into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature?" Let the dead past bury its dead. Our lives are in the present and we are looking toward the future. An old sore continually irritated may grow to something that will bring the death of the one whose misfortune it may be thus to be afflicted.

It appears to this writer that we Methodists had better begin to forget some of our differences and to strive to love each other more. The writer has had no great and wide experience, but has had some. As yet he has not heard a single, solitary lay person express his opinion on this burning question but what has desired to see Methodist union consummated. This experience has reached to the city, the town, and to the remote rural section. Furthermore, the great majority of the preachers standing on the firing line with whom this matter has been discussed have expressed themselves as being desirous of seeing the same brought about. Many of them are praying fervently and daily for this to be done. Are these men to be given a voice, or is this matter to be decided by the editors of the church press, doctors of divinity and others in authority in the Church? These carry great weight, but there are others who, though they have a burning desire with reference to this matter and who have a right to be heard, seldom speak out.

Shall the child of much prayer be stifled before it begins to draw breath?

THE DECADENCE OF PRINCIPLE.

Dear Dr. Meek: Glancing over the Congregational Record I find that during the proceedings of the Senate on June 22 a brief ceremony was devoted to the reception from the State of North Carolina of a statue of the late Senator Zebulon Baird Vance to be placed in Statuary Hall in the Capitol. This ceremony consisted of the introduction and passage of the customary resolution of acceptance and brief addresses from three Senators, among them a very striking utterance from Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, who is generally regarded as the ablest and most brilliant member of that body, as at present constituted. Mr. Lodge spoke as follows:

Mr. President, when I entered the Senate, in March, 1893, Senator Vance was one of its ablest, best known, and most popular members. My acquaintance with him was necessarily brief, because within a year after my coming into the Senate, Senator Vance died. It is no slight evidence, however, of the power of his personality and of his personal attraction that I felt that by his death I had lost a friend, for he had made me his friend in those few short months. I was a young man and on the other side, politically, but nevertheless he dwells with me now as one of the most vivid memories of my early days in the Senate and stands out a marked and gracious figure in my visions of the past.

Others far better qualified than I will trace here his distinguished career, both in war and in peace. All that I can hope to give is the impression made upon me during the brief year in which I knew him. He had a strong personality, as I have already said; but, unlike some strong personalities, his carried with it nothing but a sense of kindliness and humor, for which delightful qualities indeed he was conspicuous. When he died the feeling that came uppermost, I think, in the minds of all who knew him in the Senate was not of the eminent public man or of his services in the field and in public life. It was that we had lost a friend, a man who had awakened in us the warm feelings of affection. But there was another side to Gov. Vance, far more important even than this, and which I see now more clearly than I did at the time. He was a fine example of a certain type of man who had fought on the Confederate side during the Civil War. There were many of these men in the Senate in those days; now, alas! there are very few. Then for the first time I was brought into personal contact with them. I had been bred in an atmosphere of intense hostility to the principles for which they had fought. I widely disagreed with most of their political views: but I was not long in the society of these men in the Senate —these men of whom Gov. Vance was such an admirable example—without learning keenly to appreciate their strong qualities. Their theories of political action which had guided them in the past, and which guided them then, were not mine and never could be; but they were men of principle and of conviction, and for their principles they had not only fought but they were ready to sacrifice themselves to them if need came in the less dangerous but more insidious trials of public life. They were men of traditions. They had the old American traditions strong within them, as did the men from the North, who fought against them. What I mean precisely by this it would take more time to explain than I have to give, but I think everyone who knows and loves our history will understand what I mean.

Above all, Gov. Vance and those who shared his priciples and had fought with him in the Civil War were men who believed profoundly that there were certain things for which the individual life ought to be sacrificed, and that there were higher ideals to be followed than living in comfort and safety with an opportunity to accumulate money. They were to the fullest extent, like those whom they met in arms upon the battle-fields of the Civil War, of the race of men who fought in the Revolution, and they resented dishonor or humiliation for their country as they would have resented it for themselves. Rather than have their Nation undergo humiliation or be dishonored, rather than sacrifice principles in which they believed, they were ready to fight, and if need be give their lives. They and the men who fought for the Union, however they differed, went to war in the same spirit, which has, I believe, at all times ever been the true American spirit. When it is extinguished, then the end of the Republic is not far off.

In Gov. Vance one saw first his wit and humor, his geniality and good comradeship, and everyone loved him for these most attractive qualities. But as one came to know him better one felt that he was a representative of those by whose toil and sacrifice and courage great nations are made. Nobody could doubt for a moment that Gov. Vance would die rather than be

> One of a Nation, who, henceforth, must wear
> Their fetters in their souls.

Therefore North Carolina does well to give his statue to the Nation, and we do well to honor and recall his memory here.

That was a noble tribute. I was particularly impressed with Senator Lodge's characterization of those Confederate chieftains whom he found in the Senate in such numbers when he entered it: "They were men of principle and of conviction—they were men of traditions—rather than have their Nation undergo humiliation or be dishonored, rather than sacrifice principles in which they believed, they were ready to fight, and if need be to give their lives." Such were the men who represented the South in that earlier and better day; such the men whose departure their brilliant opponent laments.

Quite naturally my thoughts turned back to discover who were the contemporaries in our great Church of these majestic leaders in the State. They were Soule, Paine, Pierce, McTyiere, Keener, Wilson, McFerrin, and men of similar type. The age of namby-pambyism had not then arrived. Men could then stand up and fight with every weapon in their armory for their convictions, their principles, their traditions, and maintain their self-respect and the respect of their opponents. But now we have come to a time when honest men are condemned for stoutly maintaining their principles, and pious talk, however little it may have to sustain it, is a complete defense for any form of deviltry. We are having a noteworthy exhibition of this in the current discussion over this union folly, as we likewise had over the Vanderbilt issue.

Who that heard it can ever forget the great Keener's response to the fraternal delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church at Memphis? There spoke a man of principle, convictions and traditions! Who dared to question him? But now we are told that we must keep our mouths closed, that our principles, convictions and traditions are of little worth. We are admonished to wait again until a star-chamber proceeding has been held. And that this union business "is close to the heart of God." Who told Dr. Ivey that God was so much concerned about this matter? Has he had a special revelation? If the favor of Providence counts for anything in interpreting his will, then Southern Methodism has a most unmistakable commission to pursue the even tenor of its way in single blessedness.

Let nothing swerve you, my dear Doctor, from the noble course you have adopted in opposition to the hysterical clamor for union, disintegration and absorption of our beloved Southern Methodism, to which is largely committed the preservation of Southern ideals. J. D. BARBEE.

GOD'S SCHOOL.

In our Father's school are many benches. This life is school-time. Whatever the word God writes on the top of your page—Patience, Courage, Forgiveness, Resignation—copy it over and over, until he gives you another to solve your problems. If they are hard, try hard. If you are in the dark, say: "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." When you feel like complaining, listen.—The Presbyterian.

The Home Circle

THE MUMMY.

By R. H. McGimsey.

Emotions deep my being fill, when looking
At thy dark and wrinkled parchment features,
So still for all these thousand years. Once
Thy baby form cuddled in a mother's arms
And dimpled cheeks and rosy lips pressed her breast.
Later on in childish glee thou didst chase
The butterfly from flower to flower and
Merry didst the race pursue with bubbling laughter.

And then in early youth thou didst woo
Perhaps some gentle maid with golden hair
And eyes of blue that spoke back love to thee,
And in that first embrace thou didst feel
The joy and thrill of love requited,
Which makes this life a veritable Heaven.
Then, grown to manhood, all the passions
Swayed thy breast, love and hatred, envy,
Thirst of wealth, perchance, and all the rest,
To which the human heart is heir.

And when thy race was done, thou sleepest then.
And hast slept three thousand years untouched
In that embalmed estate. Thy lot has been
The lot of all, except this last estate,
To lie before the curious eyes of all
The gaping crowds that pass thee lightly by.
Some sacrilegious hand thy rest disturbed
And brought thee here so far around the world
To be the cynosure in foreign lands
Of curious crowds that look upon thy form.

Forgotten! No memory of the ages
Hath caught for us in legendary song
The merest doings of thine early life.
From human thought and ken thou'rt gone,
But from His eye thou never canst be lost,
To whom thou shalt arise in all the beauty
And glory of thy life regenerate:
For thou shalt be to Him in likeness then
In thy new life, and see Him as He is.

STRAWBERRY JAM AND OTHER THINGS.

Nellie M. Leonard.

"The strawberry bed is rosy with berries again," announced Aunt Maud. "They must have ripened over night."

"Oh, auntie!" exclaimed Jessie, "I'm tired of strawberries. We've had strawberries and cream, strawberry shortcake, strawberry pudding, and strawberry salad. Of course, they were delicious, but I wouldn't care if those saucy robins ate all the rest."

"Look ahead, child," said Grandma Graydon crisply. "It won't always be June. Strawberries will taste powerful good when snow flies. Do you suppose I shall allow all those fine berries to waste?"

"Take no thought for the morrow, Grammie," quoth Jessie mischievously.

"Well, now, I wonder if you don't understand the Master better'n that? If you'll read all he said, you'll see that he meant we should not be over-anxious about such things. Don't you remember the time when he fed the five thousand? 'When they were filled,' it says, Jesus told his disciples to gather up the twelve basketfuls of barley breadcrumbs. They weren't hungry any longer, yet the Master didn't let the fragments go to waste. He must have saved 'em for future use.

"I don't believe in wasting anything. If you don't need it now, look ahead, I say. Soon the ground will be covered with apples. I shall dry 'em in the sun and they'll keep until the fresh apples are gone. Some I shall stew and can up; others will make nice mincemeat for pies. I've a whole shelf full of rhubarb canned a'ready. That is real easy. Just cut it up, fill your jar with cold water and seal it. Last summer we had more string-beans than we could use, so I cooked 'em in salt water, canned 'em up and we've had string-beans all winter. Tomatoes, too, and sweet corn."

"Now, there's my next-door neighbor—she hasn't any knack at looking ahead. Talk about anxious thought! She'll come over some days, all worried up. She doesn't know what to have for supper; she hasn't a thing to make pies, and her husband is out of work. Yet they had a good garden and plenty of fruit last summer. If she only could learn to look ahead!'"

"You ought to give her a little sound advice with your jars and mincemeat and pear sauce," laughed Aunt Maud.

"Land sakes, I do!" replied the old lady, "but it doesn't seem to sink in. Well, I have the blessed privilege of giving out of my abundance, anyhow."

"Are you going to can the strawberries, Grammie?" asked Jessie.

"We'll make strawberry jam," decided grandma. "You and Maud may pick every sound berry you find. I've plenty of sugar. The price is real reasonable just now. Mind you, don't put in any rotten ones. One bad berry will spoil a whole jar. That's true of lots of things besides berries."

Aunt Maud and Jessie had a delightful time out in the sunshine gathering the ripened berries. Robins hopped about the orchard, waiting impatiently for their share. At last the baskets were filled.

"Please let me make the jam?" coaxed Jessie. "I'm looking ahead. I hope some day to be a woman in a home of my own. So I've started a cook book. But I never copy a recipe until I've made it myself."

"Very well," agreed grandma. "It's as easy as rolling off a log. Listen:

"Weigh equal quantities of berries and sugar. Wash the berries and mash them. Put in one quarter of the sugar and boil five minutes; repeat this three times. You will then add all the sugar, boiling it twenty minutes. Cook slowly and stir constantly to prevent scorching. If in twenty minutes it doesn't seem thick enough, boil five or ten minutes longer. I preserve raspberries the same way, only I sift out the seeds."

"That sounds easy. What shall I pour the jam into?"

"Oh, I looked ahead," laughed grandma. "I've saved all my glasses for years, when I've bought French mustard, lamb's tongue, and the like. There's nearly a hundred tumblers down in the cellar."

At last the jam was cooked. Jessie wrapped each glass in a thick, cold-water cloth and poured in the hot mixture.

"It looks tempting," commended Aunt Maud. "After it has stood for twenty-four hours I will cover it with white paper dipped in alcohol. That is even better than paraline."

Jessie wrote the recipe carefully for her cook book.

"I shall come visiting often next winter. This jam will be splendid on toast. I've made twenty-five glasses and captured another dandy recipe. Grandma's motto, 'Look ahead,' is a good one," she observed slowly.

"It works well with other things besides strawberries," replied Aunt Maud. "It can be applied to most things. The pennies we spend so freely, and sometimes so foolishly, if saved, would make dollars, which at some future time might supply an urgent need. People are realizing this truth more fully now that work is so dull and the cost of living so high. Then in the matter of health. Physicians depend in a crisis upon the patient's reserve stock of energy. If he has wisely looked ahead and stored up his energy, he often pulls through and gets well, where his spendthrift brother, who has recklessly exhausted his daily supply of strength, cannot rally."

"A wise look ahead saves much trouble and anxiety," added grandma. "You know the Bible tells us that a wise man, intending to build a house, first sits down and counts the cost, lest he be not able to finish it. I wish I might impress it upon every young life. First look Godward; then, with the clear vision that He gives, wisely look ahead."—Western Christian Advocate.

"That is an eight-day clock, madam," explained the antique dealer. "It will go eight days without winding."

"Gracious! and how long will it go if you wind it?" exclaimed the customer.—Christian Intelligencer.

CONCERNING CHURCH REGISTERS.

An editorial on the above subject, appearing in the Advocate of June 22, 1916, signed by "R. H. H.," gives me an opportunity to say a word about the Church Register itself. The Church Register was highly endorsed by the Nashville Preachers' Association, and afterwards by the Committee on Publishing Interests of the General Conference of 1890.

The main trouble about the book is that it is out of proportion. There are blank spaces for 144 marriages; while the space allotted to infant baptisms in only 162. Thus there is not room for two children to the family. There are blank places for 2716 members. How soon one part of the book is consumed, while very few churches would ever use up the other space!

Now, what remedy have I used so that I would not have to start a new roll? I sent to our Publishing House and got blank pages for the space needed and sent my roll book to a publisher and had blanks inserted and rebound. This plan obviates the difficulty of having several old Church Registers scattered over the parsonages of circuits and stations, as is the case in many places.

Let the publishers who make the Church Register correct this and add a space for the date of the birth of the child and space for sponsors in the records of baptisms of children, and the book will be almost perfect. And then let it be perfectly kept, and we will not hear of so many inaccuracies after each Annual Conference.

A FORWARD MOVEMENT IN OUR ITALIAN WORK.

On a recent visit to New Orleaus in the interest of the local mission work of the M. E. Church, South, Dr. Jno. M. Moore, in conjunetion with the Woman's City Mission Board, purehased a lot upon which to erect an Italian Chureh and an institutional building for St. Mark's Hall at a eost of $11,700.

Those who have been actively interested in seeuring a location for this work feel that this is the very best that could be had in this seetion of the eity. The lot has 110 feet front on Rampart Street by 130 feet on Gov. Nicholls Street.

As the work is connectional, Dr. Moore authorized Rev. W. E. Thomas, Superintendent of City Missions, M. E. Churech, South, in New Orleans to begin at once to raise funds for the church building.

The need is imperative and immediate. The present congregation, numbering 50, is now using a room fitted up in St. Mark's Hall for a chapel. The room is far from attractive and can make no possible appeal to the outside Italian or the Latin peoples generally, since they come from countries where great cathedrals and massive churches are the centers of worship.

If work is done among these people, it must be done through the churches, and the church building must be adequate to the needs. The present Italian population of New Orleans is estimated at 30,000, and Mexicans and Spanish are settling in the French quarters in numbers.

Many of them, having broken with Catholicism are without rudder or compass, having no saving knowledge of a living God. These people are naturally slow to accept another religion than that of their fathers, but the heart-hunger is there, and must be met by a closer acquaintance with the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

Few people residing outside of New Orleans realize what a needy field for mission work is here. In a population of 375,000, there are only 30,000 members of all Protestant Churches in the city. There are 2500 saloons open day and night. There are registered prostitutes in the restricted district—a district noted far and near for its debauchery and vileness. There are scores of picture shows open all day Sunday. Indeed, Sunday is unknown to thousands, save as a day of pleasure and debauchery.

The work of St. Mark's Hall is located on the border of the old French district, which covers an area of twelve square blocks and has an estimated population of 40,000 people.

Several years ago, the women of the M. E. Church, South, began work in this section. The work has grown slowly but steadily until the present quarters are inadequate. The Sunday school has an enrollment of 110, with an average attendance, until the hot weather began, of 80. The little room 15 x 30 is far too small. The Sunday school has paid for its own literature and for two shares of the "China Special."

The Clinic, which started with only a few patients, has now an average of 200 a month—this has been the greatest feeder of our work at St. Mark's Hall. Even a casual observer will affirm that we must have a church building at once, if we are to continue the normal growth of the work begun. We need to rally our forces throughout the Church and reap the harvest for our Lord.

The campaign for the proposed new Italian church has been launched, and the first cash subscription was given by an Italian. Mr. S. H. Meyer, 116 St. Charles Street, has been appointed treasurer. Contributions sent to him will be gratefully received.

Rev. W. E. Thomas' address is 815 St. Charles. He will appreciate the co-operation of friends in this movement, and would be glad to visit any place where he would be given an opportunity to present the work and work up an interest. Write to him about this important undertaking.

SOME HARMONIZING NEEDED.

In the Central Christian Advocate of June 21, Editor Spencer says:

"Our brethren of the Church, South, must understand as distinctly as language can express it that the action at Saratoga Springs was sincere. There was not a syllable uttered that can be construed into selfishness on the part of that body. With whole heart the General Conference declared that the basic principle of the "proposed plan adopted by the Church, South, at Oklahoma City, ought to be the basis of union. Nor was there any modification of that plan, which was intended to minimize or does minimize the basic principle of the proposed tentative plan. That basic principle, we also know, is the safeguarding of the INDIVIDUALITY and rights of the Southern body."

This sounds well, and we dare say that it will be sure to find a place in some of the journals of Southern Methodism, which have entirely ignored Dr. Spencer's utterance in his paper of May 24, which was as follows:

"The General showed beyond contradiction that this plan (the Southern plan), if unaltered, meant a more drastic separation of American Methodism than exists even at the present time; that the union the plan would produce would be a union only in name, by iron-clad walls of division along unhappy frontiers, eternally perpetuating sectionalism; a polite Chesterfieldian exchange of formal bows and conventionalities, destitute of the vital power which should make American Methodism a most puissant force among the stars of idealism and the plodding fields of Christlike toil. * * *

"Now the Central took the ground, first, that this sectional solidarity and its cleavage would be obviated if the number of Quadrennial Conferences were increased beyond the three provided in the proposed plan. It is illogical and untrue to say that the federal ideal would be achieved if the reorganized Church should have three divisions, the Old South, the North, the West, each with an independent legislature or Conference electing its own Bishops, etc. Rather, it would be equal to three independent sovereignties with three congresses, three presidents, a nullifying of the federal ideal of many States and one Congress and one head."

We rather think it is up to our confrere to harmonize these two statements. How he proposes to preserve the "individuality" of Southern Methodism and at the same time split it up to get rid of its "sectional solidarity" is a bit perplexing to us.

The Doctor pleads that there be no contention in this propitious hour, and almost anathemizes any brother who may hereafter presume to say anything that might hinder the consummation of organic union. Yet before Saratoga he hammered the Southern plan hard and even gathered into a book his voluminous utterances on the subject. It scarcely looks well for one who himself has had so much to say in opposition to the plan of the Joint Commission, including the representatives of his own denomination on it, and of the Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, now that he has a scheme that he likes, to conscript everybody into silence while it goes glimmering through. For our part, we are not any more afraid of editorial anathemas than we are of Papal bulls, and we propose to speak out our convictions on the various phases of this great question without the slightest hesitancy.

(This editorial was written more than a week ago, and the Editor has proven to be a good prophet. The dear old "pussy-footing" Nashville Advocate carried Dr. Spencer's last utterance in a conspicuous place, emphasizing it as much as possible, as if it were in blissful ignorance of his former utterance, from which we have also quoted. —Ed. N. O. Advocate.)

WHAT ABOUT THAT "INTERVIEW?"

In an address before the General Conference of the Northern Methodist Church, Bishop E. R. Hendrix admits that he used the following language:

"My brethren, do you know that since the Cape May Commission we have been wandering in the wilderness for forty years? Forty years, as long as Israel wandered in the wilderness, that great and terrible wilderness, when it was only about a three week's journey by a short-cut to the land of promise. What fools we mortals be! And now I am confessing your sin as well as my own. God be merciful to us miserable sinners and miserable fools!"

It was stated in the Nashville Christian Advocate last week that Bishop Hendrix claims that these were his only authorized words bearing on this point, and the plea has also been put forward for him that he spoke "extemporaneously" at Saratoga.

So far so good. But there is another thing still that needs attention. A flamboyant interview which Bishop Hendrix is stated to have given at Saratoga has been going the rounds of the Church presses from ocean to ocean (we printed it last week, being among the last to do so), and in it occurred the following sentence: "We have both played the fool for forty years like the Israelites in the wilderness."

Now what we wish to know is, Was this much heralded interview "unauthorized?" In the "Personal Column" of the Texas Christian Advocate of June 15, on Page 16, occurred the following statement: "Bishop E. R. Hendrix, who sent the editor a TYPEWRITTEN COPY of the interview published in last week's Advocate, will enjoy H. G. H.'s humor at the editor's expense in this week's issue?" If Dr. Bradfield's statement is correct, it would seem that there must have been more than one "authorized" utterance touching the sanity and the wanderings of American Methodists in the "terrible wilderness." And Dr. Betts' "extemporaneous" plea unhappily falls to the ground. What is "typewritten" and sent out could hardly be "hot off the bat."

Obviously some further explanation is yet needed. If the famous Saratoga interview is to be discredited, we would respectfully suggest that it should be done openly above the Bishop's signature—not in a round-about way through others. And in the clearing up, the statement in the "Personal Column" of the Texas Advocate should be taken care of.

LOUISIANA PRESIDING ELDERS CALLED TO MEET.

My Dear Doctor Meek: Please to announce that I wish to meet the Presiding Elders of the Louisiana Conference at Shreveport on Tuesday, July 25. If there should be any good reason why the time and place do not suit the brethren, I should be glad to be informed of the fact immediately. It is a source of regret to me that I found it impossible to be at the Seashore Divinity School this week. Fraternally,

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. B. W. Lewis has recently closed a helpful revival meeting at Learned, Miss., in which he had the efficient assistance of Rev. J. H. Foreman, of Silver City.

We are informed that Rev. J. M. Guinn has made a fine impression on our Centenary congregation at McComb City, Miss.

President Murrah has called the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College to meet next Friday, July 7, at 10 o'clock a.m., in the Galloway Memorial Church, at Jackson, Miss.

Rev. J. C. Price, of Ida, La., states that the new church at Belcher will soon be ready to worship in. A good measure of success is crowning the labors of this faithful pastor.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Ripley, Miss., writes as follows: "Mrs. Neblett and the children will spend the month of July at Monteagle, Tenn." We trust that they will have a delightful stay at that noted resort.

Bishop E. E. Hoss was announced to dedicate our church at Wagoner, Oklahoma, last Sunday, July 2. The pastor of this congregation is Rev. A. N. Goforth, who has many friends in North Mississippi.

The glorious Fourth may feed the fires of patriotism, but it does not help us to get out a Church paper. We are going to press this week, having had only one meager mail on Tuesday, the day for closing our forms.

We regret to know that Rev. W. D. McCullough, our capable pastor at Iuka, Miss., has found it necessary to go to a hospital in Memphis for medical treatment. We trust that his physical condition will soon be much improved.

Rev. C. M. Chapman, of Rolling Fork, Miss., sends us some subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we thank him, and says: "Everything is running along smoothly in my charge." Brother Chapman knows how to keep things running that way.

The July number of the Methodist Review Quarterly is one of the best issues of that splendid periodical which have yet come from the press. If you do not take it, send for it and read this copy. Dr. Du Bose is showing himself to be the right man in the right place.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, our popular pastor at Corinth, Miss., reports that the late session of the Corinth District Conference was an occasion of much interest. As a presiding elder, Rev. T. H. Dorsey may usually be depended upon to bring things to pass in good form.

Rev. H. S. Spragins, of Greenville, Miss., was unable to be present at the funeral of Major Millsaps last week because of the illness of his sister, Mrs. Buchanan, of Memphis. Brother Spragins is one of the most useful members of the Millsaps College Board of Trustees.

Rev. S. H. Coffey orders his paper changed from the University of Mississippi to Victoria, Miss., and reports that his work on the Red Banks charge is progressing in a gratifying manner. His letter brought us five subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we extend to him our thanks.

Rev. W. M. Young, of Pontotoc, Miss., stated in a letter, forwarded on June 27, that his revival meeting would begin last Sunday, with Rev. J. H. Bell, of Columbus, Miss., to do the preaching, and prof. J. B. Burns to lead the singing. A gracious season of spiritual quickening is expected.

Despite our oft-repeated announcement that we cannot use copy written with a lead pencil, such matter continues to find its way to our desk. There seem to be some brethren who have the lead-pencil habit, which they are resolved not to give up. Very well—we have a good-sized waste-basket.

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Boyce, La., continues to send in subscritions to the Advocate. If we had more preachers like Brother Perry, the circulation of the Conference organ would be much larger. Brother Perry's aim is to send us 100 subscriptions this year. He's a hustler for all the interests of the Church.

We aeknowledge ourselves indebted to the following friends, whose kindness has not been mentioned elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. P. M. Brown, Natchitoches, La., 3; Rev. J. A. Biffle, Eudora, Miss., 3; Rev. D. R. McDougal, Kossuth, Miss., 9; Rev. W. A. Hays, Decatur, Miss., 5.

Rev. C. E. Fike, of Rayne, La., writes: "I notice that in the report of the Lafayette District Conference a typographical error was made. The sentenee, 'Methodism is waning in this French section, should read, 'Protestantism is not waning in this French-speaking section." We are pleased to have Brother Fike set this matter straight through our columns.

Because the Editor was called to Jackson, Miss., last Thursday before the matter for this issue of the Advocate was properly arranged and was ill upon his return Saturday, some things do not appear in this issue of our paper which he had expected to do so. We will try to make the proper amends next week, and we trust that our contributors and corresponhents will exercise a ilttle patience with us.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir says: "By July 15 I will complete the rate adjustment for the Columbian Woodmen, after which time my services will be at the command of any brethren who may need my assistance in revival meetings or otherwise. Those desiring my help may address me up to July 15 at West Jackson, Miss., care of the Edwards House, and after that date at Estherwood, La."

Mr. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, Miss., who is a trustee of Millsaps College, attended the obsequles of the late Major R. W. Millsaps at Jackson, Miss., last Friday. Brother Barbee was also a warm personal friend of Major Millsaps. Mr. H. C. Watson and Hon. A. G. Paxton, of Greenville, and Dr. Melville Dye, of Clarksdale, all relatives of the deceased, were also in Jackson on that occasion.

While in Jackson last Thursday and Friday, the Editor was stricken with a severe attack of cholera morbus, from which he suffered most acutely. To several friends who ministered to him in the midst of his sufferings, and particularly to Dr. J. F. Hunter, a leading Jackson physician, who came to his assistance, he acknowledges himself deeply grateful. He was able to make the trip home Saturday, but at this writing (Monday) he has not fully recovered.

A friend informs us that Mr. W. P. Kretschmar, of Greenville, Miss., recently carried a crowd of boys to Lake Chicot, Ark., on a camp where they had a fine time. Mr. Kretschmar is one of the most progressive and successful bankers in Mississippi, and his hands are quite full of work; but he finds, notwithstanding this fact, opportunities to interest himself in the affairs of the Church, and particularly in the young people. Would that we had more Methodists like him!

Rev. E. H. Rook, a long-time and highly esteemed friend of the Editor, calls our attention to the fact that the Aberdeen District Conference will convene at Vardaman, one of his appointments, July 11-13, and gives us a pressing invitation to attend. We are grateful to Brother Rook for thus remembering us, and we sincerely wish it were possible for us to be present on this interesting occasion; but such is the distance of Vardaman from New Orleans that, with the many urgent duties that we have on hand, we dare not indulge this hope. We pray that the Conference session may be both a pleasant and profitable one.

From Pontotoc, Miss., under date of June 27, Rev. W. M. Young writes: "Brother W. A. Boone has lost his oldest son, Lundie, who died at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., last night at 9:30 o'clock, following an operation for appendicitis. Lundie had this year graduated from the Mississippi State University and had gone to Poughkeepsie to take a business course. His only sister, Miss Loy, was recently graduated from the Woman's College at Huntsville, Ala. This is a terrible blow to Brother Boone, who is our worthy Sunday school superintendent, and his family." We are sorry to be informed of this sad occurrence, and we extend heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved.

REVIVAL AT BOONEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We closed a great revival here last Thursday night. From the beginning, Sunday morning, June 4, there were clear indications of a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon us. The first day our people crowded the church building. The communion service in the morning was sacred and inspiring and gave us all a good start. The very splendid music—from the first and all the way through—was thrilling and inspirational. Brother R. A. Clark, of Jackson, Tenn., came by appointment Monday evening and did the preaching from then until we closed. His forceful sermons, Scriptural, full of sympathy and love, were very effective in reaching both sinners and backsliders, and in arousing to greater activity the faithful members of our churches. It was indeed a great revival, in which all denominations joined heartily. Our church building frequently failed to hold the people. Our young people were wonderfully blessed, and often testified earnestly for the Master. We have quite a number of unusually fine young men and young women. They are now being organized into an Epworth League and missionary workers. We received on last Sunday morning 32 into the Church—25 on profession of faith and 7 by letter. It was a beautiful sight. We have had 50 accessions during the year—32 on profession of faith. Our church membership is now about 500. I do not believed that a finer people can be found than we have here at Booneville. My board of stewards, Woman's Missionary Society and choir are each a delight and a tower of strength to the pastor. The singing, led by Prof. W. A. Dunmore, our choir leader, was such a very, very great help in our truly good revival. It seemed that God directed everything for and about the meeting. We together bless and praise His Holy Name. We are a thankful, happy people.

June 19, 1916. J. M. WYATT.

GOD IS OUR REFUGE.

God is our hiding place. Many in the world are feeling to-day that there is no sure refuge except in God. A man in Europe wrote the other day: "World courts have failed; treaties have broken down; governments have collapsed; the sword has proved futile to save us. There is no safety, nor certitude in the earth. God is the only refuge left us now. Perhaps the world will trust in him a little more than it has." God will instruct, teach and guide the good man. The only thing is to confess our sin, get close to God, and then he will lead us by the hand. Many sorrows shall come to the wicked—one calamity after another. But he that trusteth in God shall be saved out of them all.—Christian Work.

AFTER TOIL COMES REST.

Whatever rest is provided by Christianity for the children of God, it is certainly never contemplated that it should supersede personal effort. And any rest which ministers to indifference is immoral and unreal—it makes parasites, and not men.—Henry Drummond.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT BULLETIN.

Dear Dr. Meek: Editing and proof-reading are both new to me, and the bringing out of the Columbus District Bulletin is ample evidence of this fact. Two or three of the errors of the Bulletin for June 1 are due to faulty editing, two or three to imperfect proof-reading, and some are due to mistakes of the printer after I had corrected them in proof. But the errors are, of course, all chargeable to me. Will you be kind enough to give utterance to a correction of some of the errors, as follows:

In the tabulated statement of the receipts of the treasurer of the Board of Missions an error of my addition makes the total of the Columbus District to read $1041, when it should have been $1011. In reporting the number of charges paying the pastor in full to date, I should have included the Cochrane Circuit with West Point. In giving the alternate delegates to the Annual Conference, I should have had G. D. Harris, instead of J. A. Watson. In the digested reports for the Starkville station, the third line from the bottom is out of place, being the showing for the same line of the Sturgis charge. The mistake was made after the proofs were read. It should read, "Paid P. C. this quarter, $375; paid to date, $625." Of course any reader will know that the error of the membership in this charge is occasioned by poor proof-reading. It should be "membership, 542," instead of "membership, $542." I believe these are all the mistakes worth correcting.

I am delighted with the reception that has been given the two issues of the Bulletin. The preachers and laymen speak in the kindest terms of it, and I am encouraged to continue its use. The third issue will come out at the end of the third quarter—about September 1. Fraternally,

LETTER FROM MR. JOHN R. PEPPER.

"Lake Junaluska, N. C., June 23, '16.

Dear Editor: In view of the great conferences that are to be held here this summer and the varied preparations necessary for some, I have made four trips up here during the past few months and have just arrived again, bringing my family here for the season this time.

Everything Astir.

Everything is bustle and stir here. With three hotels built and building since last year, the outlook for accommodating the big crowds expected in July and August particularly is most cheering.

Mr. J. D. Stentz, Assistant General Superintendent, with residence on the grounds, is having very many inquiries and requests for reservations in various directions.

Good Entertainment.

In the new and handsome literature all phases of the Junaluska program, rates for accommodations of all kinds, and Junaluska life with its many manifestations are all finely set forth, and this literature is being distributed. A postal request will secure it. "The Virginia," an eighty-room hotel being erected by Virginia Methodists, is nearing completion and will be of great service this summer, with very reasonable rates. The Junaluska Inn, standing high above the lake, reminds one of those interesting old castles on the vine-terraced slopes along the famous River Rhine. This hotel, so beautiful for situation and with such modern facilities, will furnish accommodations to please the most exacting.

The Hotel Company has been very fortunate in securing as manager of the Junaluska Inn Mr. J. Baylis Rector, for a number of years and until very recently manager at the "Hotel Langren," one of the very best hotels of Asheville, N. C. Mrs. Rector, an accomplished hotel housekeeper, will assist Mr. Rector in this important part of the internal work of the new hotel. The work on Junaluska Inn is progressing excellently and the builders expect to have it ready by the time the crowds demand its service.

Laymen's Conference—Texas and Oklahoma Coming!

The Laymen's Missionary Conference, August 1-6, is confidently expected to be a record-breaker. It looks like we may have several hundred pastors and the biggest number of presiding elders that have ever assembled at one time in the area of Southern Methodism, and of course an army of picked laymen, coming from Baltimore to San Francisco. It is reported that Texas, the big doer of good things, may bring a carload or two of the longest-horned and biggest-headed laymen to be found anywhere in the Lone Star State. It is also expected that Oklahoma and Arkansas may come with Texas, if all will agree to be good.

Nearly every cottage on the Southern Assembly grounds is already occupied, and more are coming right along.

A big Florida girls' school camp nearby is alive with bright girls who came on a hay ride to the lake to-day to go swimming.

Eureka camp for boys from Georgia and elsewhere opens in a few days with Prof. C. E. Boyd, of Oxford, Ga., conducting the school work.

Blankets are sought here every night for comfort, and this favored spot of earth never looked more charming than now.

Lovely Junaluska.

The man or woman who has not looked upon lovely Junaluska has something to live for yet, and should make sure to get here, beginning with the most helpful Sunday School Institute, July 14-20, and on with other inspiring meetings—or just come for genuine rest and recreation without attending a single meeting. It's all here. Come and take just what you prefer and you will thank your friends for suggesting it. Yours truly,

J. R. PEPPER.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NOTES.

By Prof. C. L. Harrell.

The session just closed has, in many respects, been one of the most successful in the history of the college.

The enrollment in the College Department has been larger than in any previous session, though the attendance in the Preparatory and Law Schools has not been so large as in former years. The total enrollment during the year was 249, distributed as follows:

While it is not the purpose of the writer to discuss fully the situation, still an analysis of the above figures forces us to this question: Why the great difference between the number of Freshmen and Seniors? Doubtless there will be many who will offer solutions to the problem, or answers to the question, many of which answers, in all probability, will be plausible enough. The answer is sought not so much in words as in action.

The situation is not peculiar to our own institution. Can we not as pastors, patrons, fostering Conferences, and teachers bring about a condition that will meet the issue as it confronts us?

In this day and time when "efficiency" is the cry of the hour we are hardly able to say that our educational institutions are as efficient as they should be, when they turn out as finished product scarcely more than twenty per cent of the raw material which enters them. The issue can be met, in part at last, by thorough cooperation of all the agencies mentioned above.

Every student in the college during the past session except ten came from some Mississippi pastor's charge, some patron's home, in one or the other of the two Conferences, and was the pupil of some teacher in the college. Let all these forces unite to bring him back to the college next year and keep him there until he finishes his course and leaves with the diploma of the Institution.

The coming of Bishop Hoss to preach our Commencement sermon makes the fourth time that he has appeared on the Millsaps platform in the capacity of a speaker. For the first time, we think, in the history of the college the generous founder, Maj. Millsaps, was absent on Commencement Day. His absence was due to illness.

The cyclone in the early morning of June 6 touched the campus at the extreme southwestern corner and did some damage to the two fraternity houses located there. None of the other college buildings suffered any damage.

The homes of four of the professors, Key, Ricketts, Hudleston, and Harrell, were damaged, the home of Professor Hudleston being completely wrecked. The home of Miss Annie Linfield, for so long a time one of the boarding houses of the college, was completely wrecked.

The summer campaign for students is now under way, Dr. Watkins and Dr. Sullivan being almost constantly in the field, while Professor Lin is looking after the work in the office.

Professor Ricketts and Professor Hudleston are spending the vacation quietly at home. Professor Noble, of the Department of Education, recently established, is spending the summer at Columbia University. Professor Withers is studying at the University of Chicago. He will not return to Millsaps next year. Professor J. M. Burton has been re-elected to the Chair of Modern Languages which he formerly held. Dr. Kern is teaching in the summer school of Johns Hopkins University, this being the second summer that he has filled that position.

Professors Key, Mitchell, Whitfield (Law), and Harrell are teaching in the Millsaps College Summer School.

Professor Smith (Law) is kept busy in court, the Supreme Court not having yet adjourned for the summer. He is a candidate to succeed himself as a Justice of the Supreme Court.

The summer school is larger than it has ever been. It is being conducted on a broader scale than in former years and promises in the future to become more largely patronized than in the past.

At the meeting of the Alumni during Commencement plans were discussed for the proper celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the College. It is hoped that every graduate and old student will feel that it is his duty to come to assist on that occasion. It is to be made a great event. Visitors and guests from many of the leading institutions of the country will likely be present.

The deep-seated cough that does not yield to ordinary treatment may lead to distressing pulmonary troubles. Or it may bring on a chronic bronchial affection. Many persons now incapacitated might have avoided such disastrous results by timely care and efficient medical treatment.

Among the latter Eckman's Alterative has an enviable record. It is a lime-bearing preparation which is easily assimilated in most instances. Where used in connection with nourishing food and proper living, it has given widespread relief.

Its freedom from poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any nature whatsoever renders it safe to try. And its content of calcium gives it tonic value. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

FROM A FRIEND.

Dear Dr. Meek: The thought has just occurred to me that I have been using what you might call undue familiarity employing the common way of addressing you as Dear Doctor Meek, a manner which is very much abused, but in your case I have used the word "Dear" as meaning everything that this word implies and for two good reasons. Firstly, because on all questions which affect the polity of the Methodist Church and her future you have always shown an uncompromising attitude, and secondly, when the doctrines of our church have been assailed, you always stand "on the solid rock."

Again I ask you some space for the following extracts from the pen of our "hyphenated" Brother N. R. Drummond, the efficient superintendent of the Sunday school of the Baptist Church at Columbia, Miss.—hyphenated, because Brother Drummond is an uncompromising doctrinal Baptist, and Sister Drummond, his wife, is "rock-ribbed" in our Methodist doctrine. So you see, dear Doctor, that without taking into consideration the intrinsic value of his writing, which deserves to be read by all Sunday school workers, everywhere he ought to be granted a few inches.

His remarks written to his own school applies with equal force to all other schools lacking in this same thing.

"Sunday School Attendance.

"It is a great privilege that we have to study God's Word and thus learn of His will concerning us. It is likewise a great opportunity that we have to teach His Word to others. Teaching God's Word is the mission of the Sunday school, a mission of such great importance that every one connected with the Sunday school—officers, tecahers and pupils—should thrill with the very thought of it.

"But whom shall we teach? Shall we he content to go to our classes from Sunday to Sunday and teach only those who are interested enough to attend? Such action we are sorry to say will always result in a very small attendance. It is strange that every one does not take advantage of every opportunity to learn everything possible about the Word of God. Many, however, care nothing whatever about it; others are indifferent, and our Sunday schools cannot perform their mission without first reaching the people and bringing them into the school.

"Our attendance, lately, has not been what it should have been, and for a few weeks we want to put forth special effort in every department to improve our attendance. In this effort we earnestly request the co-operation of the parents. We are careful that our children attend the puhlic school, and that is well, but it is much more important that they should attend the Sunday school."

Let me conclude with the request that all Christians pray daily for "peace" and "faith."

Sincerely,

A METHODIST.

Columhia, Miss.

THE MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Monroe District Conference convened in Rayville on June 21, at 10 a. m. Owing to the absence of the presiding elder on the first day, Rev. C. C. Miller was elected to preside. At the opening of the second day Rev. A. S. Lutz took the chair. Though quite a husy season for the farmers, quite a number of delegates were present. All of the pastors were present except two.

The reports were tempered with cheerfulness. The finances of the district are in fairly good shape. Gains were reported where duplex envelopes were used and the every-memher canvass had been made. The Sunday schools are in fine condition, and, as a rule, are splendidly organized. Many reported from 90 to 100 per cent on the standard of organization. One church had been blown down in a storm. Three new churches had been built, and some repairs and improvements of churches and parsonages were announced. One new church had been organized. At least three charges had good revivals. The Monroe church has 131 additions since Conference. Oak Grove has received 103 members. On most every line there were indications of advancement. There was a general air of hopefulness.

George W. Warren was licensed to preach and recommended for admission on trial into the traveling connection.

One afternoon was given to the Layman's Movement. Mr. R. O. Randle, the District Lay Leader, presided. Messrs. W. S. Holmes and T. W. Holloman made splendid addresses, illustrated hy prepared charts. Mr. Randle had tahulated on a hlackhoard the average amount paid per memher in the several charges to each benevolent cause for the last four years, and the average total per memher each year during the last four years. West Monroe led the district, having paid an average upward of $19 per member, each year for four years. Mr. Randle's remarks were helpful. Mrs. J. C. Calhoun addressed the Conference on the W. M. S. work, and Rev. C. V. Breithaupt spoke in the interest of the Sunday school cause. Many of the charges are raising the two per cent assessment for the Sunday School Field Secretary's salary. Rev. R. W. Vaughan impressively represented the Methodist Orphanage. Twenty-five dollars were raised for the Divinity School.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: R. O. Randle, W. L. Calhoun, C. E. Faulk and W. M. Hunt. R. O. Randle was elected lay leader.

The following brethren preached helpful and inspiring sermons: Revs. C. C. Miller, George Fox, W. R. Harvell, V. D. Skipper, and Dr. R. H. Wynn.

The Conference was most hospitably entertained, and resolutions were passed expressing appreciation of the same. Strong resolutions were passed commending Rev. A. S. Lutz and asking his reappointment to the district for another year. His strong preaching ability, his brotherly attitude toward the brethren, his ready insight into the problems of the district, and strong grasp of the same, and the manner in which he has laid himself out for his work have combined to place him in high favor throughout the district.

The Conference adjourned sine die, to meet next year in Oak Grove.

H. W. LEDBETTER, Secretary.

The Ravages of the Tsetse, Africa's Most Dreaded Pest

A traveler had talked interestingly to a party of friends relative to the Tsetse fly, commonly found in the interior of Africa. In conclusion he was saying, "and invariably their bite results in 'sleeping sickness,' a malady from which no unfortunate has ever recovered."

In answer to inquiries, the entertainer told of how during certain seasons the natives collected a plant with which they would rub their bodies as a precaution against the ravages of this deadly insect.

"'Tis odd," he added, "the absolute reliance these black men place in their remedy, as they often go an entire week without applying a fresh supply to their bodies, and through its use only the most unscrupulous fall victim to this loathsome disease."

At the conclusion of this narrative, an African idea had entered into American commerce. Right then one listener sought information relative to this wonderful plant, and the result of this research was the development of Sweet Dreams, and Sweet Dreams is the most satisfactory article that has ever been offered for the purpose of keeping mosquitoes away. Through its merit, Sweet Dreams won instant favor, and now it has become the one standard mosquito remedy everywhere.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SOCIETY.

In response to a call from the President, the members of the executive committee met in Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., at 9 o'clock, June 1, 1916.

Psalm 19 was read in concert, and prayer was voiced by Mrs. Lewis. After short and pointed remarks on the Scripture lesson, the President urged an earnest consideration of the different plans to come before the body and a prayerful attitude throughout the day's service.

Mrs. J. L. Decell, Second Vice President, was called on for a short report and summary of the work under her supervision. Mrs. Middleton, First Vice President, was delayed in arriving until the afternoon session. Mrs. Decell reported an encouraging increase in new societies among the children. She commended the co-operation of the District Secretaries who had without an exception lent their help in getting her started in her new field. She also stated that she had about perfected arrangements to meet with all weaker auxiliaries in either a district conference or an all-day meeting. Her four new Junior societies were reported at Morton, Lumberton, Waynesboro, and Meadville. Quoting Mrs. Albright, Mrs. Decell said in conclusion: "The only reason that any Young People's or Junior Society ever died was for lack of a competent leader."

Just in this connection Mrs. Lewis gave the salient points in Mrs. Albright's report to the Council recently held in Atlanta. Mrs. Decell was asked by the Executive Committee to prepare a form of program for Juniors' quarterly public meetings, and this she consented to do. The President urged the secretaries to mention the importance of this work in all their letters to auxiliaries.

Mrs. Lewis suggested in view of the fact that the next Council meeting would be in New Orleans, that our Conference make a special effort in the publicity line and see that many attractive posters, charts, etc., be prepared for display at that time. This would apply specially to the Junior work, for the work of children is always appreciated.

The next report called for was that of Supt. of Study, Mrs. LaPrade. She called attention to a marked discrepancy between the number of circles reported to the Corresponding Secretary and Superintendent, the number being 56 and 26 respectively. She noted an increase in the number of circles, however, and stated that she thought the lack was entirely in making correct reports, for most of the auxiliaries were doing good work along this line. She called for voluntary contributions of the latest study books for weaker societies who had just taken up mission study.

Reports of District Secretaries.

Mrs. Ford, of the Seashore district, was gratified to note an appreciable improvement in her whole district. All auxiliaries had made a pledge up to date. She suggested several all-day meetings at weaker places instead of a district meeting. This met the approhation of the other secretaries. The President suggested that secretaries have entire charge of these meetings, and leave the other officers for the whirlwind campaign work, to go with Mrs. S. S. Harris.

Mrs. McMullan, Hattieshurg district, reported that all twenty-three of her societies had paid something on the pledge. She had also heard officially from each one, and was thus in close touch with them. Prospects of new auxiliaries at several places were assured. Purvis Young People was the last to come into the ranks, with a fine enrollment.

At this juncture, one of the hostesses announced that lunch would be served at one of the down-town cafes and that automobiles were waiting to take the guests there. Adjourned until afternoon.

Afternoon Session.

Miss Porter led the devotional service, using Mark 10. Prayer voiced by Mrs. McCleskey.

Secretaries' reports continued. Miss Kearney, Brookhaven district, reported improvement and hearty co-operation from all her organized places, and one healthy new society at McCall. She favored the all-day meeting at the weaker points in her district, and had in part plans for the perfecting of same. She said she had had very business-like reports from most of her societies and all pledged their support in the work new to her.

Mrs. Clarke, Newton district, was glad to show five new organizations, four young people's and one adult. Her district as a whole was reported in fine condition, but the general character of reports are still unsatisfactory. Miss Porter, Port Gibson district, stated that she had enlisted the valuable help of two good workers in hers, the "shoe string district," one to work in the extreme northern part and another in the southern. She said the two points she was laying unusual stress on with her societies were the pledge and new members. She has promise of several new societies and thinks they will be assured soon.

Mrs. McQueen, Meridian district, said that her one aim since Conference had been to develop unorganized territory, and her subsequent report verified the fact that she had been successful. She noted especially the increase of subscriptions to the Voice and Young Christian Worker. She had had good reports from every society except one, and this was a new one, not yet accustomed to reporting.

No report was heard from the Jackson district.

The Station Plan.

This was briefly explained by the President and other officers who heard it discussed at Council. If adopted in our Conference, it is the opinion of all present that it will materially aid in the increase of our pledges, make for more intelligent giving among the members and strengthen and heighten interest in the financial part of our work; hence after consideration it was moved and carried that the corresponding secretary submit a proposed plan previously worked out for each district to Miss Head at an early date, asking her to ratify it for practical use in our own Conference. In brief, the main distinction between the Station Plan and the Share Plan was defined as applying distinctly to the foreign fields and the home respectively.

Mrs. Middleton having arrived, she was called on for her report as 1st Vice President. The same cheerfulness and enthusiasm which characterizes all her reports was manifest, and all were glad to hear that her department is steadily on the up-grade. She strongly recommended that Young People's Societies have some voice in the election, or, rather, the recommending of adult first vice presidents, for so much depends upon congeniality between the lady manager and her girls. That was stated in motion by Mrs. McCleskey as follows: Moved that this body go on record as favoring a recommendation from Young People's Societies before each annual election in the adult society of their choice of the woman who shall direct them, and that this choice shall be duly considered in the latter election. Carried.

Bulletins were instructed to be sent each Young People's Society. Mrs. Middleton's report was supplemented by Mrs. Lewis with figures from Council reports showing our increase of 74 per cent in this Conference, making ours the banner Conference in Young People's work.

Council Meeting, New Orleans.

A motion was adopted that the President communicate with those of Louisiana and North Mississippi for a concert of action regarding meetings of these Conferences so as to work in with meeting of Council. Mrs. Clarke moved to rescind action of body setting time of annual meeting for February, in order to change it for this year to come immediately previous to Council. Carried. Motion of Mrs. Lewis to set time of next annual meeting for the Friday before Council meeting carried. Other definite arrangements will be perfected later.

Whirlwind Campaign.

Referring to pamphlet issued by Home Base Secretary, Mrs. Lewis fully explained the points of this enterprise. The time was set for early in the fall, and the services of Mrs. S. S. Harris have been secured for October. Officers are to hold themselves in readiness for appointment to serve with her at different points, as shall be directed from headquarters.

The hour having passed for adjournment, an invitation from Mrs. C. B. Galloway to hold a night session in her parlors was accepted.

Evening Meeting.

The service was opened with prayer by Mrs. Clarke.

A tentative arrangement of Mrs. Harris' itinerary was announced. The following were appointed by this session to act as commissioners in dispensing the work of the campaign: Mrs. Lewis in Jackson; Mrs. Johnson, Gulfport; Mrs. R. F. Harrell, Centreville; Mrs. J. K. Dunn, McComb; and the First and Second Vice Presidents of the Conference.

The following resolution, pursuant to a discussion at the morning session of the connection of Conference with the Orphans' Home was read and adopted:

"Whereas, there has been some misunderstanding in regard to the attitude of the Woman's Missionary Society toward the Orphanage work; and whereas Council has plainly indicated that we cannot assume work that comes directly under the care of the Church as a whole; therefore, be it resloved,

That as members in executive session we pledge our hearty support to the work, remembering, however, that we cannot assume the financial responsibility of werk not enterprised by the Council; but we recommend that appeals for this work be directed through the regular channels of the Church and Sunday School work, and same be always duly reported through the pastor in charge."

Signed: Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Mrs. H. L. McCleskey.

The following members were present at this meeting: Mrs. R. E. Johnson, Mrs. H. O. Middleton, Mrs. J. L. Decell, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Mrs. W. H. LaPrade, Miss Bessie Kearney, Mrs. J. J. Ford, Mrs. J. C. Clarke, Miss Mahel Porter, Mrs. C. R. McQueen, Mrs. H. McMullan, Mrs. J. T. Sharp, showing the absence of only one district secretary and two other officers.

There being no further business for consideration, Mrs. Galloway was asked to dismiss the session with prayer.

Recording Secretary.

A SEASON OF SPIRITUAL REFRESHING.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have recently closed a gracious revival at the Washington Church. The pastor and members had felt the need of such an awakening and had prayed that it might come. The services began on Sunday, June 11, and continued through the next Sunday night. Rev. C. W. Hillman, of Port Gibson, preached the opening sermon and led the choir throughout, giving us splendid service. His solos were pleasing and appropriate, his leadership was all that could be desired, his manner a genial, kindly, and yet earnest effort to enlist all the congregation in the worship of God in song and to use the singing to increase the spiritual atmosphere. Everyone sang—the choir, the congregation, and especially the children. Thanks are due to every one who helped to make the song service such a vital part of the meeting.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, Superintendent of our Gulf Coast Mission at Gulfport, came to us at noon on Sunday and preached two sermons a day for eight days—sermons direct from the heart of a man who not only knows God, but who also knows and loves humanity; a sincere, kindly man, who made no effort to exalt himself, but who presented at each service the plain, simple story of the Cross and the love of a dying Savior for a lost world. No compromise was made with sin, no effort to make the way easier than it really is, but in a direct, straightforward way the Biblical plan of salvation and consecration was set forth. Emphasis was placed where it belonged, on the need of a conscious relationship with God, and the presence and witness of the Spirit. The results came and the power was felt at each service. Sinners confessed their sins and came out boldly on the promises of God and found a pardoning Saviour. Wavering Christians had their faith made strong and all had their hearts strangely warmed. The very atmosphere is different now, and all rejoice because of that which has come into our lives. Three persons of mature years took upon themselves the vows of church membership. Our helpers captured the hearts of the people and we feel deeply indebted to them for their helpful service. To the Lord be the glory! Truly, He has been good to us.

Yours in the Faith,
BUFORD CAIN, P. C.

OLD-FASHIONED METHODISM AT FIRST CHURCH, NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop McTyeire, in his "History of Methodism," says:

"Christian Fellowship is a leading feature of Methodist economy. It was early provided for in the band meetings and love feasts, where mutual edification is the object and personal experience the subject of discourse. Bands were introduced from the Moravians. This institute provided for a close fellowship. Two, three, or four believers who have full confidence in each other form a band. The design is to obey that command of God by St. James, 'Confess your faults one to another and pray for one another, that you may be healed.' In the rules laid down very searching inquiries were allowed to be made of each other by the members and very free disclosures of the interior life as to temptations and deliverances."

It may be of interest to readers of the Advocate to learn that for some twelve to fifteen weeks past there has been conducted by the pastor, assisted by a few laymen, a nightly Gospel service, patterned very much after the old-fashioned Methodist band and class meetings, in which prayer and song and testimonies were joyously indulged in. Without any flourish of trumpets or noise, the pastor announced these nightly meetings and invited his congregation to meet him in the social hall of the Church. For the first six or eight weeks, I judge, the nightly attendance was between 40 and 60 earnest worshipers, anxious not only about their own souls' salvation but that of their friends and neighbors.

Since the extremely warm weather has set in, the attendance has somewhat fallen off, but, thank God, not the zeal nor enthusiasm. To the glory of God, it can be said that several bright conversions have already resulted, and none can foretell the future of these meetings, for the Lord of hosts honors us with His presence nightly, awakening the ungodly and quickening believers.

The writer has been a member of our beloved Zion for upward of fifty years, but has never heard of such meetings running nightly for so extended a period. The pastor delights in training lay members to conduct these services, though he is a very busy man. Why could not other sister churches open up their churches nightly and inaugurate a similar move for the moral and spiritual uplift of this notoriously wicked city?

These are indeed "perilous times," and God wants all the human help available. Where are the volunteers?

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The conference met in Iuka June [illegible]. The presiding elder, Rev. T. H. Lorsey, was at his best. There was no published program, but it was manifest that the president had the business well in hand. He dispatched it rapidly, yet there was no hurry. Not a minute was uninteresting from first to last—even to visitors.

The reports were good—the best, perhaps, that the district ever made. Few revival meetings have been held, yet many have come into the Church. Debts have been paid, some churches built, and others improved. Churches and parsonages are in good condition. More has been collected on salaries and benevolences, doubtless, than in the first half of any previous year. The prospect for the latter half is hopeful, and every one seems happy and in earnest.

In the campaign for new subscribers to the Advocate, Corinth District leads all other districts of the three patronizing Annual Conferences.

The laymen attended well and worked well, and stayed until the meeting closed. All pastors, save two, were present. Burks could not come. McCullough was ill in the Baptist Hospital in Memphis. The last report from him was encouragiug. He is one of our best preachers. His charge (Iuka) esteems him highly. The laymen are taking care of his work, and are paying the salary promptly.

A superannuate, Brother Edmonson, lives in Iuka and is much beloved both for his culture of head and heart. McIntosh stands "A-1" in his home town. The people love him and honor him. At present he is in Texas.

One young man was licensed to preach—Barney Gibbs Whitehurst. Marvin Ethel Scott was recommeuded for admission into the Annual Conference. Both expect to enter college. Good!

The special pulpit honrs were occupied by Carlisle, Pope, Selby, Randolph, and Jaco. Good preachiug we had—yes sir!

"Counectionals" present were Selby, Sullivan, Jaco, Ellis, Gladney and Randolph. Each represented his special work, and did it well.

Brother Selby's address on "Christian Citizenship" was great—really great! He is full of his subject, and he fills his hearers. Emory's interests are safe in his hands.

"Commissioner" Jaco's sermon on "Christian Education" was one of the best features of the conference. It was enthusiastically received in the church of which he once was pastor and by the couference over which he presided for four years. The fifty thousand dollars he is asking for Grenada College is well into the thirties already, and the field has hardly beeu opened. It appears that one hundred thousand dollars might have come as readily with Countiss and Jaco on the job.

The indications are that the College, with its increased facilities, will open full in September. North Mississippi is proud of Grenada College. We have a right to be.

The conference voted the presiding elder a little vacation (who has a right to do it, if the district has not?) and presented him a purse for expenses. He is now at the Seashore Divinity School.

More of the presiding elders would "go somewhere and try to learn some more," if their districts would encourage them to go, and provide the means. All of them need to go, but not many can afford it. "Same here!" It is true of most of the preachers. Usually, the man who needs it most can least afford to go. Let the charges fix it so they can. Amen! We meet next year at Rienzi.

By request of the Conference,
J. E. CUNNINGHAM, Sec.

Editorial

THE CHURCH'S ONE DISTINCTIVE WORK.

The news which is reaching the Advocate office concerning helpful revivals at many places should be counted highly gratifying. For, though more noise may be made about other things, this is the fundamental and most important work of the Christian Church. It is as a vehicle of spiritual power from on high—a power that can regenerate the moral natures of men and set them to living worthy lives—that the Church stands apart from all other organizations in the world, and in proportion as she embodies and exercises this superhuman power does she faithfully fulfill her Divinely-appointed mission. Whatever else a congregation may do, if it leads none who are lost to Christ and does not make those who have found Him more like Him in spirit, it is a lamentable failure.

The Church of our Lord has a nobler task committed to it than merely to rival other earthly agencies in humanitarian and philanthropic work, however commendable that may be. The Church or minister through whom the Holy Spirit obviously operates in making bad men undeniably good, is what the world wants to see. If a preacher could come to New Orleans and influence a thousand sinners to begin to live lives so pure and upright that they could not be discredited, and could achieve a similar success in a few other places, he would, like Billy Sunday, soon be in demand all over the Nation. Here is the efficiency which our pastors and flocks should most ardently covet and most persistently endeavor to secure.

SOME POINTERS.

About the best article on the question of Methodist union that we have seen comes from "the BORDER" in the form of an editorial, from the pen of Rev. W. I. Canter, in the Methodist Advocate, the organ of the Western Virginia Conference. We may let our readers see at least a portion of this strong utterance in the near future, if we can find the space to do so. The Central Methodist, Dr. Mann's virile paper, which has been so relentlessly uncovering the true significance of the Saratoga union scheme, is also issued on the border (Lexington, Ky.). The Methodists along the border are not by any means all shouting over what was done at Saratoga.

A prominent minister in the Advocate's patronizing territory, who lives in a town where there are several Methodist churches, writes us as follows: "I have been talking the question of union over with some of our most useful laymen at this place. I have seen four or five of our leading Methodist lawyers, four or five of our leading Methodist merchants, and some leaders in other lines of business. They were all against union on any plan which does not altogether eliminate the Negro. Some of them would be willing to see union come if the Negro were eliminated and effective safeguards of the autonomy of the Southern Church established. Some of them did not want union of any kind, and some said if union were effected they would connect themselves with some other Church."

OUR SCHOOLS.

Methodist schools are the proper institutions in which to educate Methodist young people. We have made this statement in the Advocate many times before, but it is one which needs repetition. A Church which does not seek to effect the mental development and training of its youth amid thoroughly Christian surroundings lacks much of making the most of its opportunities. No Christian denomination has ever grown to any considerable extent without deeming it necessary to establish and operate educational plants, and Southern Methodism is fully abreast of her sister Churches in the United States in this great work. The following is a list of the schools of our Church of which the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana are expected to be patrons: Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.; Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas; Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.; Grenada College, Grenada, Miss.; Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.; Port Gibson Female College, Port Gibson, Miss.; Mississippi Conference Training School, Montrose, Miss.; Seashore Campground School, Biloxi, Miss.; Centenary College, Shreveport, La., and Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La. A catalogue of any of these institutions may be had by writing its President.

May we add that now is the time for our pastors to do some telling work in behalf of these institutions? Look carefully over your community, brother pastor, and send to the proper representatives of our schools the names of all the young men and young women who ought to go off to prosecute their studies. It might also be a good idea to mention the schools of your Conference from your pulpit and offer to procure catalogues for any persons who may desire them. Let us be wide awake concerning this most important matter.

AN INQUIRY.

A correspondent writes us that in his community an effort is being made to erect a union church, to be served by a "union" preacher, and desires to know what we think of the undertaking, and particularly if there are any ministers of this kind.

There may be circumstances in which a community is justifiable in building a union church, but we are inclined to think that they are very rare. The trouble about such houses of worship is that usually they are not controlled by a body of men with definite convictions, and that in consequence they are generally open to the promulgation of every kind of doctrine. For our part, we think, as a rule, it is wiser to have a church, even though it be built by people of different faiths, deeded to some one of the Protestant Evangelical denominations, than to have it owned and held in common.

We know of no avowed "union" ministers, but there are in some of the denominations quite a sprinkling of men (that purport to be preachers) who affirm that they care nothing about any particular Church and that their mission is to build up the "Kingdom of God." Possibly the people of the community in question have one of these broad-gauged gentlemen in view for their pastor. If so, and their enterprise should materialize, we hope that they will call him FROM the Southern Methodist Church.

A TIMELY UTTERANCE.

The following editorial utterance, which appeared in the Texas Christian Advocate of July 6, under the caption, "Let Our Men Hold Steady," is, we think, well worth passing on.

"From authoritative sources the information reaches us that some of our men are being importuned to hasten the matter of our union with the Methodist Episcopal Church by taking steps looking toward the unification of local churches. Such a course cannot be justified and might prove calamitous. The union of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, must come through the actions of their Commissions and their General Conferences. With us the matter will have to go to the people. The issue is too vital to allow a few men to settle it.

"Certainly no individual pastor nor no single congregation should take it upon himself or itself to initiate the movement. The matter of union is not yet settled. Our brethren who think it is simply advertise their inattention to the large difference between the plans of the two General Conferences.

"Let our men hold steady. Let them be obedient to the authority of our Church. Let them desire union to their heart's content and let them pray constantly for union, but let no one of them take the matter into his own hands. Indeed, he cannot do so without repudiating the Discipline of his own Church.

"The separation of 1811 was providential. It saved Methodism to the South, and unless there can be union in which minorities are constitutionally protected, the providential call of God may be for separation still. We cannot divide and disintegrate our forces, therefore, without harm resulting both to Church and State. Let us act not individually, but officially. Let no man run ahead of providence, for he who does must certainly retrace his steps. Let our men hold steady!"

"The darker our night, the more radiant His coming." God is nearer to me than I am to myself.—Eckert.

THE CHURCH NEEDED.

Remember forever that the Church is a good place to be when her doors are open to worshipers. One of the most noticeable signs of a Christian's departure from his religion is the neglect of the regular services of the Church.

A RADIANT DAY FOR HER.

We have just begun reading of a young girl of sixteen years, living in the country at a distance from the church, which made attendance irregular, who read, on a Sabbath, the memoir of a Christian woman. On closing the volume, she said to herself: "That was a beautiful life." And after a little thought, she added. "And I should like to live such a life." A few minutes later she kneeled down and said: "Lord, I will try from this time." The decision was made. She went on steadily, and is still a useful and influential Christian woman, honored and beloved for her beautiful and devout character.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

FRAGRANCE OF A GENTLE LIFE.

Once, in crossing a meadow, I came to a spot that was filled with fragrance. Yet I could see no flowers and I wondered whence the fragrance came. At last I found, low down, close to the ground, hidden by the tall grass, innumerable little flowers. It was from these that the fragrance came.

I enter some homes. There is a rich perfume of love that pervades all the place. It may be a home of wealth and luxury, or it may be plain and bare. No matter; it is not the house nor the furniture, nor the adornment that makes this air of sweetness. I look closely. It is a gentle woman, mother or daughter, quiet, hiding self away, from whose life the fragrance flows. There is a wondrous charm in a gentle spirit. The gentle girl in a home may not be beautiful, may not be well educated, may not be musical or an artist or "clever" in any way, but wherever she moves she leaves a benediction. Her sweet patience is never disturbed by the sharp words that fall about her.

The children love her, because she never tires of them. She helps them with their lessons, listens to their frets and worries, mends their broken toys, makes dolls' dresses, straightens out the tangles and settles their little quarrels, and finds time to play with them. When there is sickness in the home she is the angel of comfort. Her face is always bright with the outshining of love. Her voice has music in it as it falls in cheerful tenderness on the sufferer's ear. Her hands are wondrously gentle as their soothing touch rests on the aching head or as they minister in countless ways about the bed of pain.

"The lives that make the world so sweet
Are shy, and hide like the humble flowers.
We pass them by with our careless feet,
Nor dream 'tis their fragrance fills the bower
And cheers and comforts us, hour by hour."

Our business is not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand.—Carlyle.

NO CAUSE FOR PANIC.

I have just read the article of Dr. S. A. Steel with reference to the action of the Saratoga Conference on unification and am in his debt for a good laugh. Dr. Steel is a great fellow. I appreciate him highly and love him sincerely. But he is an orator, a great one, and an orator's emotions are hair-triggered. Evidently he and those "representative men," of whose meeting he writes, have been stampeded by gross ill tragedies never to be which their fears and suspicions have conjured up. They would have made a better appearance had they not attempted their escape in their nighties, and they would doubtless have spoken to better effect had they waited till the height of their panic was passed. The wild rush of those "representative men" to the protection of our dear Bishops, and the scream of the brilliant author over the prospect of Bishop Hendrix "surrendering" the entire Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the Northern Methodists, both deserve large front page space in the choicest comic publications of the day. Though they appear in altogether different setting, I greatly appreciate their intrinsic humor.

Bishop Hendrix is a great and good man, and an honor to our Church. I for one am glad he had the heart, though realizing that important differences were yet to be adjusted, to rejoice over and speed the prospect of reconciliation of the brothers whose quarrel had separated them so long. In doing so he was but consistent with the spirit and history of his great Church. It is a pity that some dear fellows are by Bishop Hendrix as a certain horse I know is by automobiles. The old horse got scared at the first auto he saw, though it did not touch him, and he has consistently taken fright at every one that has come in sight of him since.

There is no compulsion in this unification proposition. Neither Church is obliged to enter into it if it thinks the proposed terms likely to prove detrimental to its work. There is no "fight" on—unless there are brethren on both sides who have more fear and suspicion than faith, and more pugnacity than charity. We do not have to accept unification on terms we believe to be unfair.

Certainly the end sought is most desirable if it can be accomplished with fairness to all concerned. But it will not be helped by those who cry from the housetops their doubts and fears and suspicions, and hurl unbrotherly insinuations.

Let us go about the matter in a statesmanlike manner. Let us show that we can trust our own men into whose hands the adjustment of differences will be committed, and rely on our own organized and orderly way of dealing with it. And let us of the Southern Church at least proceed in such way as shall commend our spirit of fairness and Christian love to the brethren of the North. And let us enthrone the "golden rule" in our judgments and speech.

If we haven't the spirit to rejoice at the prospect of unification and the will to help toward that end, let us, for the sake of the Church that has minstered to us, avoid any advertisement of mental panic or spiritual dereliction. We shall meet the issue better if we keep our poise. Bishop Hendrix will hardly "surrender" us. Our own wise and safe men are to sit on the Commission that shall consider these grave matters, and our General Conference is between us and any precipitate capitulation. Even then no doubt the Annual Conferences will be called on to ratify whatever action is taken.

One thing we should bear in mind: This issue forces Southern Methodism into a conspicuous place on the stage of human events, and the world is bound to take note of both the spirit and quality of intellectuality it manifests. And, however this matter may be determined, may our members so exhibit the spirit of Christ in their conduct and speech that they shall commend to all men the religion they have learned at the altars of their Church.

GIVE US A BILL OF SPECIFICATIONS.

By Bishop E. E. Hoss

Nothing ought to be more apparent than that it is not possible to promote fraternity and union by sharp and biting speech. Those brethren of "light and leading" who are intent on bringing the different branches of Methodism together should be careful above all things to cultivate the grace of gentle words. Especially if they are recent converts to the policy of union, with an established record for having long antagonized it, should they now avoid anything like harshness or bitterness toward those of their brethren who are deficient in the capacity for making lightning changes, and are not quite ready to throw overboard in wholesale fashion what they have long held as established and valuable convictions.

When Bishop Hendrix, in a sudden gust of emotion, stood up before the General Conference of the Methodist Church at Saratoga and made a sweeping confession for himself and for the whole body of his brethren, that for the past forty years we have all been "miserable sinners and miserable fools," simply "wandering in the wilderness," when we might at any time have crossed over Jordan and entered into the promised land, it seems to me that he overdid things. I should be afraid to go to the length of admitting that my leadership of forty years had been one of folly and sin, lest the people to whom I am sent should be afraid to trust me for the future. As a matter of fact, I do not believe one word of the Bishop's allegation, and in the name of all the great and good men from whom I have learned my Methodism, I repudiate it and deny it. It is an impeachment of the living and the dead. What would Enoch M. Marvin and David R. McAnally say about it? What would Holland N. McTyeire and John B. McFerrin say about it? What would George F. Pierce and Atticus G. Haygood say about it? What would John C. Keener and Linus Parker say about it?

With a merely general statement of this sort, it is not easy to deal. One man may affirm it, and another only deny it. It is my purpose to deny it as vigorously as anybody can possibly affirm it. If anything is demonstratively true, it is that Methodism has been saved in the South, if not from utter destruction, at least from the gravest weakness and inefficiency, by maintaining through all the storms and tempests of the last half-century a policy of independent self-respect. Blind indeed must he be who can read the chronicles of these times and still fail to see that the kindly approval of Providence has been upon us. The whole world may be searched in vain to find a better or truer body of Christians than those that worship at our altars—not perfect, to be sure, but not "miserable fools," nor "miserable sinners," but sincere disciples of the risen Lord and safely housed in a branch of his visible Church.

I call for a bill of specifications. Was it a piece of folly and sin when our College of Bishops in 1865, while the ashes of the Civil War were still hot, met at Columbus, Ga., and blew a trumpet blast that rang through the land and put hope and courage into the hearts of our scourged and conquered members? Was it folly and sin when at St. Louis in 1869 these same godly leaders, in a paper that will make Bishop McTyeire immortal, responded to a deputation from the Northern Bishops who had come to propose union, to the effect that fraternity must come first, and must come from the only body authorized to offer it, namely, their General Conference? Was it folly when at Memphis in 1870 our General Conference, following the leadership of Dr. John C. Keener, graciously pointed out to Dr. Harris and Bishop Janes, who were there bent on a similar errand, that the action of their General Conference, which they presented in explanation of their mission, did not even mention our Church? Was it folly and sin when at Louisville in 1874 our General Conference joyously welcomed General Fisk, Dr. Fowler, and Dr. Hunt, who at last abandoned any attempt at backstairs fraternity and came in by the front door that had always stood open? Was it folly and sin when that same General Conference said to them, we accept your offer of fraternity with all our hearts, and without waiting for an adjudication of the differences between us, but we think that these differences nevertheless ought to be adjudicated as soon as possible, and we propose a Joint Commission with that end in view—the Cape May Commission" Was it folly and sin when in 1894 we proposed the Commission on Federation? Was it folly and sin when in 1914, we accepted the tentative scheme of union which the same Commission had prepared, and sent it up with our endorsement to our Northern brethren?

The matter of "union by reorganization" is now before us. The Saratoga Plan is a very different one from the one that we offered. To affirm its identity with ours is childish. In the matter of the General Conference—its composition and its functions, which is the core and center of the whole question of union—there is a difference that goes to the very bottom. Any attempt to minify this difference is doomed to failure. No difficulty is ever cured by denying the reality of it.

It will be a piece of folly and sin if we do not meet our Northern brethren face to face, and, in perfect candor and in perfect kindness, open our minds to them. In agreeing to give up our distinctive name, to surrender our ecclesiastical independence, and to become a mere minority in another Church, we have already given up much. If our Northern brethren are really to give up anything, it has not yet appeared. They ask us to go still further and submit ourselves to the control of a General Conference that is to have supreme legislative, executive, and judicial authority. The statement that this supreme body is to act under "constitutional provisions and restrictions" is almost amusing. How are such provisions and restrictions to be imposed? Who is to impose them? Who is to execute them? These are matters that must be threshed out. It does no good to dodge them nor to shy at them.

I should have kept silent if some of my brethren had not spoken out as if all were settled. Nothing is yet settled. I hope, however, that the proposition of my Senior Colleague to raise $25,000,000 for the superannuates in commemoration of the event may at least go forward. That great scheme deserves to go forward to a glorious success, even if the era of complete union must be delayed for a fuller consideration.

A GREAT ISSUE IN MISSISSIPPI.

Within the last thirty days the liquor interests have thrust upon our people a paramount question. Availing themselves of the late constitutional amendment, known as the "Initiative, referendum and recall," the liquor men hope by preying upon the ignorance, prejudice, appetite and cupidity of many people to induce them to vote for the repeal of our new anti-liquor laws, thus setting back the progress of our State at least a quarter of a century.

In an effort to head off the powers of evil, the League brought to Jackson on Sunday, June 11, Rev. James Cannon, D.D., Richmond, Superintendent of the Virginia Anti-Saloon League, and Hon. W. B. Wheeler, General Counsel for the National Anti-Saloon League, Washington, D. C., where each spoke three times.

The Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, the Capitol Street Methodist Church, the First Baptist Church, the Second Baptist Church, and Majestic Theatorium were all used by these speakers. Other churches could have been secured, if they had been needed. The speeches were great and will beyond a doubt contribute much toward the advancement of the cause of temperance and prohibition in our beloved State. The National League was generous in giving us these high-class speakers for the day, and in doing so they have brought all Mississippians under a debt of gratitude to the National League.

In these meetings were fired the first big guns of the campaign recently provoked by the liquor forces. Their plan is to suddenly thrust upon the people this question and, as usual, to use all the money necessary to carry their point in the approaching general election.

The campaign thrust upon the sober, law-abiding people of Mississippi by the liquor forces is to secure a sufficient number of petitioners to place our recently enacted anti-liquor laws before the people for their vote as to whether this splendid body of anti-liquor legislation shall stand as our honored lawmakers fixed it, or be repealed by a vote of the people in the next general election.

The war is on. The mobilization of our forces must be begun at once and pushed with energy and persistency, to meet the onslaughts of the old foe.

Some of the whisky forces in Memphis and other places are very active in circulating petitions for signatures. Some of these blank petitions, with an accompanying letter from the liquor houses, have fallen into the hands of friends of prohibition who have sent them to the Anti-Saloon League office in Jackson.

In one of these liquor letters, this language occurs: "We will ask you to get as many * * * to sign these as possible. If there is any expense attached to same we will gladly reimburse you." This is the same old story of liquor men standing ready to pour money into the hands of those who fight their battles. It is very clear that, unless the sober, moral people of the State contribute money to the Anti-Saloon League, the only temperance and prohibition organization of men in the State, the battle will be very unequal so far as equipment and supplies are concerned.

It has been stated before from this office under two-cent stamps to every pastor in the State of all the denominations, and it is here repeated, that the pastors must take the lead in all great moral questions like this one, or the day will be imperiled.

The exigency of the hour calls upon our pastors to do two things to save our State from a possible return to rum rule. First, to use every available moment to stump their districts in informing and inspiring the people for the battle. Second, to raise all the funds they can, and send them to the League, so that it can employ many of the strongest speakers to help them stump the State. It is imperative that our pastors, whether in large or small places, do these things without delay. The brevity of time emphasizes the necessity of quick action. The people of Mississippi will give some of their money to a worthy cause like this, if the pastors will do their full duty in presenting the matter.

Another class of persons in our State, composed of teachers, both Sunday school and literary, have brought to them by this emergency a loud call to help in their own ways.

Fellow-citizens, I am no sensationalist nor alarmist, but I am stating to you the naked truth, as it stares us in the face at this moment. I am talking to you about a question which concerns you as vitally as it does me. As your watchman on the tower, I am delivering my soul. Having full knowledge of the dangers of the situation, the responsibility is upon you. I count on you to do your best.

Impressed with the importance of quick action, I secured the services of the above named gentlemen, who pictured to our people in Jackson vividly the real situation. The amount raised in Jackson for this work for the year is to date just a little over $1000. I must be allowed to believe that all other portions of the State will assist in this most important work, when they know the facts in the situation.

Please send your contributions with as little delay as possible to the undersigned.

A MILLION FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

By Rev. W. W. [illegible], D.D.

This is the slogan for 1916. [illegible] to come true, but it is [illegible] cool and rational aspiration [illegible] that we have dared to think [illegible] that. Now it is not only a [illegible] very reasonable probability [illegible] thought of it. We were a little [illegible] selves when we found that we [illegible] close to a million in 1915. When we caught breath good we said, "Why not make it a million for 1916?" Why not? We can do it in a way—that is, if we all will at once and keep on [illegible] until December 31.

You see, our income for foreign missions for 1915 was $919,622, only about $80,000 short of a million. Our total increase last year was $[illegible]. We need to do only a little better than the way of increase, and it is a far better year than [illegible]. The above figures include that raised by the Woman's Missionary Societies. It does not include money raised and spent on the fields. Hence we need to raise in the home field $80,000 more than last year in assessments, special, and women's work, and we can sing the Doxology over a million dollars for foreign missions.

We are certainly going forward on specials. Our assignments are more than $50,000 ahead of last year and still growing. We are certainly going forward in Sunday school giving. There is every reason why we should advance in income from assessments. The women have set their aim high and will do their part. Then why not all take heart and go in to make sure of a million dollars?

What will it signify? Is it worth the effort? Let us see. Eight thousand dollars' increase for our general foreign missions' income will clear the decks of all the clutter and tangled cordage of debt. We can face the world and "publish our message in the face of the sun" free from the dire depression of "adverse balances." It will remove once for all the stringent limitations on our appropriations and make the missionaries laugh for joy. It will cut out a great big bunch of interest and altogether put us over the bar and away from the shallows for good. Then let us do it!

How can it be done? Not by any undue and exhausting "whirlwind campaign." That is neither necessary nor desirable. Just a determined, steady pressure on the ordinary lines of effort. Just speed up the faithful, well adjusted, familiar machinery. Put extra pressure on the assessment. Ten per cent increase of income on the assessment would add over half the needful amount. Make an extra effort to pay in full and begin at once to push the collections.

Stir up the Sunday schools for a share in the million. One extra cent apiece each month from our Sunday school scholars would more than make up the extra eighty thousand.

Push up the specials. See that the pledges are paid up and sent in. Often half the battle is lost at the last for lack of a vigorous, clean finish of what has been well begun. Clean up the score.

Then see that the money is sent where it belongs. Italics mine; emphasis disciplinary, moral and religious. Do not let anybody rob Peter to pay Paul nor all the people rob Peter and Paul both. Let money raised and given for missions be so reported and so paid over. Play pay and then pitch the tune. Remember, it is a million dollars for foreign missions for 1916 and a big increase for home missions for [illegible].

Of whom have you been thinking about reading? We have been thinking of you while writing.

MEETING OF THE MILLSAPS TRUSTEES.

At 10:30 o'clock on Friday morning, July 7, in the Galloway Memorial Church at Jackson, Miss., pursuant to a call which had been authoritatively issued a week preceding, the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College met in special session, with the President, Bishop W. B. Murrah, in the chair. Dr. T. B. Holloman led in prayer, after which the roll was called by the Secretary, J. B. Streater, and the following members answered to their names: W. B. Murrah, T. B. Holloman, M. M. Black, W. H. Watkins, W. M. Buie, S. M. Thames, W. W. Woollard, H. S. Spragins, R. A. Meek, J. D. Barbee, T. B. Lamb, W. W. Magruder, and J. B. Streater.

After a statement by Bishop Murrah, in which he referred feelingly to the lamented death of Major R. W. Millsaps and the larger responsibility thereby imposed upon the Board in administering the affairs of the College, the meeting was declared open for the transaction of business. R. A. Meek submitted a series of resolutions pertaining to the character, life, and work of Major Millsaps, which were unanimously adopted by a rising vote. (These resolutions appear elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.—Ed. Adv.)

W. M. Buie, the Assistant Treasurer of the Board, was then, upon motion, unanimously elected Treasurer, to succeed the late Major Millsaps, and his bond was fixed at $25,000. According to a by-law of the Board, this action placed Mr. Buie on the Executive Committee of the Board, the other members of which are Bishop Murrah, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. W. W. Woollard, and J. B. Streater.

After some discussion, the following gentlemen were named as a Finance Committee to have in charge the fiscal interests of the College: Thad B. Lampton, W. M. Buie, and J. F. Gunter, of Jackson; G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, Tenn., and W. F. Kretschmar, of Greenville, Miss. By request of the Board, W. H. Watkins and W. W. Magruder prepared a resolution, which was adopted, setting forth specifically the duties and powers of this Finance Committee. No loan of the College funds can be made without the consent of a majority of its members, and it must make annually a full written report to the Board of Trustees.

R. A. Meek introduced a resolution looking to the procuring for the College Chapel, at the earliest date practicable, of an oil painting of Bishop W. B. Murrah, the first president of the College, and who served the institution in that capacity with such distinguished ability for more than a decade and a half of years, which was enthusiastically adopted. It is intended that this portrait shall be a companion-piece of those of Major Millsaps and Bishop Galloway, which already adorn the walls of the Chapel, probably being hung opposite that of the latter. J. D. Barbee and W. M. Buie were named as a committee to secure the funds and arrange for obtaining this painting.

On motion of W. W. Woollard, a committee was appointed to go through the record books of the Board and collect all the rules and regulations which have been enacted by it from year to year, with a view to grouping them, and, if necessary, to making them fuller and more definite.

Dr. A. F. Watkins brought before the Board some matters relating to the proposed celebration the latter part of next May of the 25th anniversary of the College and the 84th anniversary of the birth of Major Millsaps. It is expected that a full statement concerning this important occasion will be given to the public in the near future.

After discussing and disposing of some other matters of detail, the Board adjourned with the benediction by Rev. W. W. Woollard.

J. B. STREATER, Secretary.

IN APPRECIATION OF MAJOR MILLSAPS.

"Whereas on the night of June 28, 1916, the all-wise Heavenly Father saw fit to remove from the scenes of earth the immortal spirit of Major R. W. Millsaps, the honored founder of the educational institution of which we are official representatives, and who for nearly a quarter of a century was the efficient treasurer and executive financial agent of this Board, as well as one of its most trusted and influential counselors; and

"Whereas the character and work of our ascended friend and colaborer were such as to command our highest respect and admiration, being, as he was, a man of large capacity and exalted ideals; a patriotic and public-spirited citizen, who served his country nobly and unselfishly, both in war and in peace; a large-hearted philanthropist, whose sympathies reached out to the suffering and needy, and whose generous hand was stretched forth to assist every worthy cause; and an ardent Christian, whose faith expressed itself not only in words of testimony, but also in practical deeds of helpfulness, these elements together constituting him the foremost layman that Mississippi Methodism has yet produced; and

"Whereas the College of which we are the commissioned overseers was in an especial manner, and to an unusual degree, the beneficiary of his splendid munificence and constructive leadership, having received from him gifts totaling approximately $600,000 in value, to say nothing of the worth of the time and attention which, without remuneration, he so assiduously devoted to the welfare of the institution—an invaluable service that money could scarcely purchase; therefore be it

"Resolved (1), That we hereby express the deep sorrow that surrounds us in this first meeting held since our leader went away, and record our profound sense of the large loss that we have sustained in the death of this great and good man, upon whose wisdom and strength we have so heavily leaned in our administrative work as a Board.

"Resolved (2), That, speaking for the Methodists of this State, whose agents we are, we acknowledge the vast debt that our Church in Mississippi owes to the generosity and consecrated ability of Major Millsaps, which made possible the establishment and equipment of a Christian institution of learning under their ownership and control that has already been of immeasurable benefit in many ways both to them and the general citizenship of the commonwealth, and which cannot but exert a still wider influence for good in the coming years—an institution which, though one of the youngest in the Connection, its translated founder has left better endowed than any other college in Southern Methodism, with a single exception.

"Resolved (3), That, as we take up the task of caring for this institution without the assistance of the masterful hand that has so largely directed its course in the past, we do so burdened with a sense of the responsibilty which is ours, and with an earnest purpose, by the help of God, and reenforced, as we trust we shall be, by its Alumni, by the 125,000 Methodists of the State, and by its friends of every name, to keep it true to the ideals fixed for it by its clear-visioned founder and to endeavor to make its future as nearly as possible a realization of the high hopes which he cherished for it.

"Resolved (4), That we shall count it a sacred and priceless privilege to have the bodies of our generous benefactor and his beloved wife to repose on the beautiful campus of our College, which was so dear to the heart of our glorified co-worker and into which he put so many of the best energies of his life, thus consecrating it and giving us the opportunity to care for the tomb in which they shall sleep—a tomb that should in the coming years be a shrine at which the youth of Mississippi shall kindle their aspirations for the things that are highest and best, as they shall meditate upon the remarkable career that began on an obscure farm in the County of Copiah and which ended at the Capital of the State with wealth, worthy honors, a name widely known and revered, and achievements that shall endure through passing decades and centuries, if time shall last so long.

"Resolved (5), That we shall ever treasure in our hearts the recollections of our association with our deceased brother; that his unsullied character and shining example shall ever be to us an encouragement and incentive to worthy endeavor; and that we shall look expectantly forward to the time when, having finished our work on earth, we shall overtake him in the Celestial City and unite our labors with his in the loftier ministries of eternity.

"Resolved (6), That we extend to the relatives, so bereaved by the departure of their loved one, the full measure of our sympathy, and pray that the blessed truths of the Gospel of Christ may comfort and sustain them in their loneliness and sorrow.

"Resolved (7), That a page be set apart in the Minute Book of this Board for the recording of these resolutions; that a copy of them be sent to the family of the deceased, and that copies be furnished the Jackson papers and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, with a request for their publication."

The foregoing resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College at their session in Jackson, Miss., on Friday, July 7, 1916.

It is urged that our pastors secure the renewals of last year's subscriptions. If the renewals are neglected, the campaign to add 3500 new subscriptions to our list will not meet the desired end.

Total new subscriptions sent in from the Louisiana Conference, 273; Mississippi Conference, 334; North Mississippi Conference, 556, distributed as follows:

REV. J. A. PARKER—AN APPRECIATION.

Rev. J. A. Parker, one of the veterans of the Louisiana Conference, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs T. B. Hopkins in Lafayette, La., on May 19, 1916.

He was a native of Alabama. He was converted in his youth, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and was licensed to preach in 1857. Thus for nearly sixty years he stood as a "watchman on the walls of Zion," warning men, and exhorting them to repentance and salvation by faith in Christ.

He became a member of the Alabama Conference in 1860. He enlisted as a private in the Confederate Army in 1861; and, on account of ill health, was discharged in 1862. Recovering his health, he re-enlisted, and was appointed by Bishop Andrew chaplain to Clayton's Division, which position he filled until the surrender in 1865.

He was appointed presiding elder of the Pensacola District, Florida Conference, in 1867. In 1870 he was transferred to the Arkansas Conference, and in 1876 he was transferred to the Louisiana Conference, which Conference he served faithfully for thirty-nine years. He served as presiding elder of the Homer, Alexandria, and Delhi Districts. He was pastor at Homer, Minden, Bastrop, Ruston, Baton Rouge, Lake Charles, Morgan City, and of other charges.

He was an instructive, forceful preacher. His sermons were clear, luminous expositions of Bible truth, and the earnest, spiritual fervor with which they were delivered pressed them on the consciences of his hearers, and he had many seals to his ministry.

Brother Parker was one of our ablest preachers. In the pulpit, among his people, and on the Conference floor, he was an acknowledged leader. I was intimately associated with him in the work of the boards and committees of the Conference, of some of which he was nearly always chairman, and he was always courteous and considerate of the rights and opinions of his co-laborers. In the discussions, and in dealing with the perplexing problems that sometimes came up, I never heard him say an unkind word, or utter a harsh criticism, or saw him do a discourteous thing. Would that more of us were like him in these fine traits of ministerial character!

I was his presiding elder for four years, and I looked forward to my visits to his charge with the expectation of learning something that would be helpful to me in my work. My love and respect for him were akin to that of a son for a father.

He died, as he had lived, in the full assurance of faith. His was a long, painful illness, but he never questioned his Father's will, bore his suffering bravely, and was always thoughtfully, tenderly appreciative of the loving ministry of his family.

His devotion to his family is beautifully expressed by a daughter, who says: "Only those who have lived with him in the intimacy of private life know just how pure and good that life was. When semi-delirious he prayed aloud and preached the most beautiful sermons. At other times in his delirium, he discussed ways and means for relieving the miseries of the war-sufferers. In a paroxism of great pain he said: 'All in God's good time—His will, not mine, be done.' Just the night before he died he whispered, 'All is well.'"

We who knew and loved him will sadly miss his kindly face and commanding figure when next we meet in our Conference session; but well we know that his loss is most keenly felt by his sorrowing wife, the devoted compaion of many years, and by his children. To these saddened ones, we offer our heartfelt sympathy. Our loss is his gain, and truly we can say with John on Patmos, "He rests from his labors, and his works do follow Him."

The following song, composed by Brother Parker during the last years of his life, and sung at his funeral, bears eloquent testimony to his love for and simple faith in our Heavenly Father:

"My day of life will soon be past—
The sun is going down;
And when I'm free from earth at last,
I hope to wear a crown.

Chorus—

"Starry crown, glory crown!
Ordained for saints to wear;
I'll share those starry crowns in Heaven,
And reign with Jesus there.

"This hope to me by Christ is given,
Through crucial pain he bore;
And when I reach that home in Heaven,
A crown he will bestow.

"I'll calmly bear my troubles here,
With the sweet promise given,
That he will dry each falling tear,
And crown my life in Heav'n.

"I'll struggle onward up the hill,
Though foes would press me down;
I still will do my Father's will,
To wear a starry crown.

"Though life to me be toil and strife,
Or riches and renown,
I'll gladly yield this mortal life,
To wear a starry crown.

"Then join in praise for victory won,
With all the Heavenly host;
Praise to the Father and the Son,
And to the Holy Ghost."

J. D. HARPER.

IN FAVOR OF UNION.

Shall the two great branches of Methodism in America unite? Pencils are being sharpened against the union, and still others are shaped to defend union. The matter, we are told, is a serious one. Dangerous rocks are said to be hidden and some are in sight upon which the old ship of Southern Methodism is in danger of breaking to her ruin. We are warned lest we be swallowed, and it is stressed that we must not capitulate. I desire to advance some thoughts on the subject, and may it be said at once that I am emphatically in favor of organic union.

The Methodists of the North, to my mind, are Christian gentlemen and women. I have lived among them, mingled with them, and know them heart to heart. The Christ is as dear to them as to us, and the way of righteousness is as familiar to their feet as to ours. I cannot calmly hold onto a view that the ministers of such a Church are planning a wholesale movement to swallow a denomination. I am not disposed to take a view, the very taking of which is an open charge against the motives of our brethren. In the beginning, let me say that I believe the Northern Church really desires to effect a union on such terms as will be satisfactory to all concerned. I further believe that an overwhelming majority of the Southern preachers and members sincerely desire the same.

Granting these conditions to exist, and relying upon the power of prayer to effect the leadership of the Spirit in all that we do, where is the man who will say that representatives of the great Churches cannot iron out the wrinkles and effect the union without friction? We magnify our differences and forget our points of agreement. It may be that there are differences. June weddings bring people together in life union who have differences, but the spirit of love makes the divine ordinance of marriage the binding link of civilization. The great thing is the fact that we are agreed on the essential things that we teach from the pulpit. We have a common creed and common Articles of Faith.

We may hobnob on the question of the Negro, but he is a human being, and whatever may happen will not ruin the effect of the gospel of Jesus Christ if we are faithful to preach it. Our brethren, the Roman Catholics, seat their colored members in the same congregation with the whites and minister to them all alike, and this thing is done in New Orleans and all over the South without that Church losing one inch of territory because of it. I attended a preachers' meeting in a Southern city where Methodist and Baptist and Presbyterian and Christian preachers, white and black, mingle together in a common ministerial alliance every Monday morning, and reports indicate that the churches of that Southern city are as prosperous as any. We send our missionaries to Africa, and our own Conference listens with intense interest to black men appeal for help, and sometimes instruct us in what our duty is. I do not say these things for the purpose of arguing in favor of mixing up with the Negro. I am opposed to mixing up, but for the purpose of saying that if in the final articles of union it should be decided that the Colored Branch should compose one of the units in making up the General Conference, the whole Church would not be sunk hopelessly. It is easy to throw cold water because it is so easy to get it, and it takes time to keep up the fire in order to keep water warm, but in this instance I believe we should keep the sacred flame of brotherly kindness and love burning bright enough so that we will have plenty of warm water.

I am convinced that the preachers and members of both Churches along the border want union. I spent a few days recently in Missouri and Kansas and found the sentiment there warm for union. I recently interviewed nearly every Methodist preacher in New Orleans and found them practically unanimous in favor of union. One of our New Orleans preachers put the question of union to the vote of his congregation and found but one member opposed to union. Our people are not disposed to quibble about non-essentials. They are tired of explaining why there are two Churches. The words, "time limit," "laity rights," "district superintendents," "supremacy of General Conference," and "social equality" mean little to them, and the fact is there is very little in any of them that, decided one way or another, really affect the great soul-winning business of the Church.

The question at last should not hinge on how best to make money out of our Advocates, nor on how best to name the fellow to preside over a district of preachers, but on how best to conserve the forces of Methodism and advance the cause of Christ.

A. J. GEARHEARD.

AMERICA FOR ME.

'Tis fine to see the Old World, and travel up and down
Among the famous palaces and cities of renown,
To admire the crumbly castles and the statues of kings—
But now I think I've had enough of antiquated things.

So it's home again, and home again, America for me!
My heart is turning home again, and there I long to be,
In the land of youth and freedom beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars.

Oh, London is a man's town, there's power in the air;
And Paris is a woman's town with flowers in her hair;
And it's sweet to dream in Venice, and it's great to study in Rome;
But when it comes to living, there is no place like home.

I like the German fir-woods, in green battalions drilled;
I like the gardens of Versailles, with flashing fountains filled;
But, oh, to take your hand, my dear, and ramble for a day
In the friendly Western woodland, where Nature has her way!

I know that Europe's wonderful, yet something seems to lack:
The Past is too much with her, and the people looking back.
But the glory of the Present is to make the Future free—
We love our land for what she is and what she is to be.

Oh, it's home again, and home again, America for me!
I want a ship that's westward bound to plough the rolling sea,
To the blessed Land of Room Enough beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars.

WHEN BETTY KICKED THE RUG.

"What a horrid, rainy day it is!" pouted Betty. Then she kicked the rug in front of the fireplace.

The rug did not feel that it ought to be punished for what was not its fault, and so it tried to slip along the smooth floor out of Betty's way. It slipped so quickly and so far that Betty slipped, too; and, to save herself from falling, she thrust out her hand.

The hand hit a tall vase that was standing on the center-table, and the vase fell—crash!—to the floor. It struck just beside Tiger, who was having a peaceful nap beside the fire.

Tiger jumped up with a startled bark, and dashed from the room into the kitchen. The back door was open, and Tiger ran through it just in time to upset the grocer's boy, who was coming in with a big basket on his arm.

The boy and the basket went down together in a heap, and the boy shouted so loudly that he frightened the horse attached to his delivery wagon. The horse ran out of the yard into the road, and basket after basket tumbled from the wagon to the muddy ground.

The runaway horse frightened a pair of horses that were hauling a big dray loaded with lumber. The two horses turned sharply and upset the load just as it was on the railway crossing. While men ran from all directions to get the overturned dray and the tangled pile of lumber from the track, a train had to wait in the station near by, and a hundred passengers fretted at the delay and wondered what had caused the trouble.

They little knew that a pouting girl in a house beyond the village had caused it all, just by one kick at an innocent rug!

They blamed the man who had been driving the load of lumber. The driver blamed the grocer—and so did the persons who did not get the groceries they had ordered. The grocer blamed his boy. The boy blamed Tiger. Tiger, being only a dog, did not blame the vase that had frightened him, but went back to the corner by the fireplace, and lay down to have another nap. And the vase, being broken into pieces, could not very well blame Betty.

And what of Betty? It was a sorry and frightened little girl that rushed to the door and saw what happened—a very sober and saddened little girl that crept back to pick up the pieces of the vase and to talk it over with her mother.

"I'll never kick the rug again," she promised.

"But it was the pout that really made all the trouble," said the mother. "The next time you feel a pout coming, just make a smile come in place of it, and see what a difference it will make in everything that happens."—Marion Holwell, in Youth's Companion.

THE AMERICAN EAGLE.

By W. K. Putney.

Young people often wonder how it happened that the American eagle was taken as the emblem of the United States. This bird is really the bald eagle, and it first received the honor of becoming our national bird in 1785, when it was displayed as the emblem of this new American Republic.

Many prominent men of the time did not approve of the choice. For example, Benjamin Franklin declared that the bald eagle was the most evil-disposed bird in the land, and that it did not earn an honest living, but secured its livelihood through violence, deceit and treachery.

Franklin's criticism, while it delayed matters considerably, did not prevent the eagle from being chosen. Others considered that this bird was one of the greatest possible dignity, as well as beauty and bravery, and they especially desired it to be our national bird or emblem because of its very strong attachments to its home and young. In this way they hoped to be able to make the colonies stand together, should anything come later to trouble them or cause any one of them to falter.

John J. Audubon gave this bird the name of the Washington eagle, because he claimed that it was like Washington in its bravery and the terror of its enemies in seeing it, and that just as Washington's fame was mightiest among the men of his day, so was the fame of the eagle greatest among the feathered tribes.

The ordinary name, "bald," is not rightly given, inasmuch as the adult birds have their heads and necks covered with very white feathers. The bird however, does seem bald, because, when seen in the distance, the head and neck shine and look just as if there were no feathers covering them.—Christian Intelligencer.

SEVERAL THINGS.

Dear Dr. Meek. A lady said to the writer not long since, "Methodist doctrine is not taught in the Southern Methodist Church to-day because the ministers and editors are afraid to preach their convictions for fear of the Bishops." What an exaggerated statement! That lady ought to read the New Orleans Christian Advocate. You are giving us a fine paper, Doctor, and you are to be commended for the stand you have taken upon subjects of vital interest to the Church. Your editorials on the Vanderbilt question, Methodist union, worldly amusements, etc., are fine, and the writer agrees with you in everything you have said.

The editorials in a late issue of the Advocate on "Preparedness," by R. H. H., and "A Great Difference," by C. A. B., are fine. Harper can use any object of nature as a means of instruction. The tomato plant, the morning glory, the sunflower, an ordinary violin, a preparedness parade, etc., are subjects from which he preaches his most illuminating sermons. Battle has the happy faculty of expressing his ideas in words. His editorials are always fine. I venture the prediction, Doctor, that R. H. Harper and Chas. A. Battle are destined to be in demand for some tripod.

Well, I started to write about something else. We hear a great deal about hyphenated Americans. Is there not such a thing as hyphenated Methodist preachers? The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not license women to preach the Gospel. Still we have some pastors who are employing lady preachers of other denominations to conduct their revival campaigns. If the M. E. Church, South, does not see fit to license women to preach, what authority has a Southern Methodist preacher for employing women preachers of other denominations? Would like to see an editorial from the Editor of the Advocate on this subject.

GEORGE.

THE HEART.

How careful we ought to be of our heart! Some people spend a great deal of time in cultivating their head, attending to their business, looking after their health and minding their store, but neglect to nurture their heart. What a blunder! The heart is the core of a person's being. Around it cluster our thoughts, plans, purposes, desires, aspirations. It is the heart that determines our dispositon and makes life radiant, happy, and useful, or dull, gloomy, and burdensome. It is the heart that brings success or invites failure. It is the heart that makes marriage a lovely thing or an ugly thing. It is the heart that makes a home or mars it. It is the heart that determines our destiny here and hereafter. We must take time and thought in training and graduating the heart, "for out of it are the issues of life." The result is worth more than all the care we can bestow upon it. Be sure to keep it "with all diligence."—Northern Christian Advocate.

A QUESTION OF TREMENDOUS IMPORT.

Two or three weeks ago, when Dr. S. A. Steel, of Columbia, S. C., ventured to suggest that the organic union of the Northern and Southern Methodist Churches in the United States, according to the terms laid down at Saratoga, would virtually amount to the surrender of all our Church property into the hands of the dominating Northern wing of Methodism, some of the brethren showed a disposition to sneer at and make light of the suggestion. But we note that in the Texas Christian Advocate of June 29, Judge C. L. Bates, of Holly Springs, Miss., who is stated to be a lawyer of conspicuous ability, in a somewhat extended article on "Methodist Union," makes the following thought-provoking utterance bearing on this same point:

"It has been assumed, and that without argument, that love for Christ and loyalty to him unconditionally demand the union of the Churches upon the ground that such union is necessary to the efficiency of Methodism in the prosecution of its mission in the world, and occasionally in the discussion there appear dreams of ecclesiastical imperialism. Southern Methodism is, first of all, charged with the evangelization and education of the people of the South, and that these people, by their free-will offerings, have richly endowed the religious and educational institutions of the Southern Church to enable it to accomplish its great work of evangelization, education and civilization.

"Now, when the union has been effectuated, who is to own, direct and control the propertes, the religious, educational and eleemosynary institutions built up by Southern Methodists? Who will own, direct and control the great universities at Dallas and Atlanta?

"If supreme power, legislative, executive and judicial, be vested in a General Conference, then will not these properties and institutions pass from local control? Will not the title and control pass with the change of ecclesiastical sovereignty, if I may so speak?

"The Southern Church once thought it owned Vanderbilt University. That thought was but an "iridescent dream." Does love for Christ and loyalty to him require the Southern Church to surrender the control of its institutions, which have been built up by the love and loyalty of more than two generations, and at the cost of great toil, blood and treasure and which are necessary to sustain and perpetuate our own Christian civilzation?"

When a practical, big-brained lawyer raises such an inquiry as this, we may well pause and ponder it. Do we want to give the brethren across the Ohio a grip on our property in the South that can never be shaken loose? It is much easier to entangle ourselves in this respect, than it would be to get detached afterwards. The Cumberland Presbyterians lost nearly all their property by their Northern alliance, though that Church, with nearly half its membership, yet exists. It behooves Southern Methodists to be exceedingly careful about what they may do in the present emergency. Unless they stand resolutely against any and all forms of union that do not guarantee such an autonomy to the Church, South, as will safeguard absolutely their property interests, they may, like the Cumberlands, soon find themselves rich in experience and poor in possessions.

THE ITALIAN CHURCH IN NEW ORLEANS.

Since the statement in the Advocate of last week concerning the building of a church for the Italians and other foreigners, Rev. W. E. Thomas, Superintendent of City Missions, has had pledged more than half the amount necessary for the building. Only $4000 more is needed. By the co-operation of our pastors this amount can be quickly raised, and this much needed enterprise can go forward. Let Brother Thomas hear from you at once on this subject, brethren. His address is 815 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La. Our churches in Mississippi, as well as in Louisiana, should assist in this undertaking. This great missionary work should be the task of the whole Southern Church.

TWO SUGGESTIVE OBSERVATIONS.

The Presbyterian of the South (Richmond, Va.) says:

"Dancing and card-playing will no longer be permitted by the Roman Catholic Church as a means for raising money for church purposes. All of the thirteen archbishops of this country, under command from Rome, have joined in a pastoral letter which interdicts these forms of amusements at 'church entertainments.'"

In the Outlook of June 28 appeared the following:

"The tendency in most Protestant Churches is in the other direction. Protestants in increasing numbers are directly providing for, as well as encouraging dancing in connection with social settlement work under wise guidance and direction, in the belief that when so guided and directed it is an exercise mentally, socially, and physically beneficial. In at least some cases encouragement is directly given to dancing under supervision by the Church in parish houses or other buildings belonging to the Church."

The Roman Catholic Church is undoubtedly to be commended for this action, which, in view of the extent to which its congregations have been using dancing and card-playing as a means of earning money for Church purposes, was, we think, urgently needed. It has been our observation that the Catholic denomination has been standing for much less in this respect than those which are Protestant, and we think that the approval that is being given the dance by the latter bodies, referred to by The Outlook, is principally confined to those which are the least evangelistic in spirit and purpose. However, that there seems to be among all the Protestant bodies an abatement in the vigor of their opposition to dancing, card-playing, and theater-going—a thing which we deeply regret—we scarcely dare to deny. Only a few days since some of the readers of the Advocate called our attention to newspaper advertisements of a theatrical for the benefit of a Methodist Hospital, in some of which objectionable pictures of young ladies who were to participate in the performance were given. Such tendencies as these are not calculated to inspire confidence in the future spirituality of American Protestantism. Latitudinarianism, either in faith or conduct, cannot reasonably be expected to produce Christians of the noblest and saintliest type, such as have adorned the Church of God in its best days on earth.

DO NOT OVERLOOK IT.

In an appeal to our pastors and the membership of the Church, Bishop Hoss says: "The report of the Treasurers, Smith & Lamar, shows that up to the present time only a very small sum has been contributed by our Church toward the erection of the Asbury Memorial in Washington City. This, I am sure, is due to oversight. There can be no doubt that our people wish to pay their due share to this worthy enterprise. No large sum is asked from anybody, but something is expected from every congregation. The sooner the collections are made and forwarded to the Treasurers, the better it will be. There ought to be no delay in the matter."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. W. Holmes requests us to state that the Seashore Camp Meeting has been postponed. The new date for this series of services will be announced later.

Rev. W. R. Williams, of Buena Vista, Miss., writes that his work is moving along smoothly. Things generally go forward without friction where Brother Williams has sway.

After a pleasant stay at the Seashore Campground, Rev. H. T. Carley and Mrs. Carley spent a few days in New Orleans. From here they expected to go to Satartia, Miss., to visit Sister Carley's relatives at that place.

Rev. F. R. Power, of Pelican, La., has brought us under obligation to him for 4 subscriptions to the Conference organ. He states that peace and harmony prevail throughout his charge. He should be a happy pastor.

Writing from Monticello, Miss., Rev. W. W. Nelson, who is serving his third year as pastor of the Pleasant Grove charge, reports that his work is progressing favorably. Those who know Brother Nelson will not be surprised to learn this.

In a personal letter to the Editor, Rev. J. H. Felts, the energetic presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, says: "The district as a whole is doing reasonably well. The finances are considerably ahead of those of last year at this time. I am encouraged."

Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Boykin, of Covington, La., were pleasant callers at the Advocate office last Friday. They had been attending the Seashore Divinity School and were en route home. Brother Boykin stated that the work of his charge is progressing well.

We regret to be informed that Dr. T. J. Mayers, a well known physician and citizen of Shelby, Miss., died on June 9. He will be remembered by all our pastors who have served our church at that place in a number of years. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Dr. E. H. Galloway, a son of the lamented Bishop Charles B. Galloway, and one of the leading physicians at Jackson, Miss., has been spending some time in the North taking some special courses of study related to his profession. He is an honor to his noble calling.

Rev. L. P. Wasson has lately conducted a successful meeting at West Point, Miss., where he had as his chosen co-laborer Rev. S. A. Brown, of Kosciusko. With two such workmen in charge of these services, it is not surprising that they were impressive and helpful.

Tylertown, Miss., and its gifted pastor, Rev. T. B. Cottrell, this week take a place on our Honor Roll, which for the lack of space we are not printing in this issue. We appreciate the care with which Brother Cottrell looks after the interests of the Advocate in his field.

Our hat is off to Rev. J. L. Carter, of Wade, Miss., for a club of 9 subscriptions to the Advocate—6 of them new. This is a fine summertime list. Thank you, Brother Carter. We trust that you will find the Conference organ helpful to the interests of the Church in your charge.

Rev. John L. Williams, our popular pastor at Leesville, La., came to New Orleans the latter part of last week, bringing his son here for medical treatment. He favored the Advocate office with a visit, but the Editor, being out of the city, missed seeing him, much to his regret.

Our nine representatives on the Joint Commission on Federation will meet at Tate Springs, Tenn., on August 9, to name our Committee of twenty-five to confer with the Committee of the Northern Methodist Church concerning the question of the unification of American Methodism.

Rev. H. B. Perritt, of Colfax, La., has issued for circulation among his people a neat four-page folder, entitled "Ten Reasons Why We Should Attend the Prayer Services, the Sunday School, and the Preaching Services." It is a strong and forceful appeal, and has reached the second edition.

Our good friend, Rev. T. W. Adams, of Hattiesburg, Miss., sent the Publisher a few days since an additional club of 6 subscriptions. The Advocate has no better friend than Brother Adams, who is showing by his labors in his present field that he is quite as effective as a pastor as he is as a presiding elder.

Rev. A. D. George, of Bonita, La., has our thanks for a club of 5 subscriptions, forwarded on July 5. Referring to his charge, he says: "Things are moving along very favorably with us. We have had one good revival and are now in the midst of another. Souls have been saved and the Church greatly revived."

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, and Rev. J. L. Lay, of Indian Bayou, La., were in the Crescent City last Friday, and, as good Methodists should do, took time to tarry a bit in the office of the Conference organ. Both of these brethren are giving a good account of themselves in their fields of labors.

It was our pleasure to meet in Jackson, Miss., last Friday, Rev. J. W. Dorman, the capable pastor of our First Church at Water Valley. Brother Dorman is delighted with his present charge. He was on his way home from the Seashore Divinity School, which he said had a fairly good session, with about 100 preachers in attendance.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. A. Wells, Oak Ridge, Miss., 2; Rev. F. L. Applewhite, from the Fernwood charge, Miss. Conf., 4; Rev. J. R. James, Abbeville, Miss., 4; Rev. R. M. Evans, Calhoun City, Miss., 2; Rev. E. J. Coker, Topisaw charge, Miss. Conf., 9.

We received to-day (Monday) from Rev. W. M. Langley, the accomplished Secretary, a report of the Durant District Conference, recently held at Durant, Miss., which, because of the already crowded condition of our columns, we were reluctantly forced to let go over until next week. It is an admirable account of that interesting gathering, and will be read with appreciation by those who take the Advocate when it appears.

Several of our Connectional Boards have sent us lengthy programs to print, showing their schedule of work at Lake Junaluska. It has long been an established rule of our office not to print programs of any kind; hence we could not see our way clear to oblige these brethren. Should we once set the precedent of carrying such copy free, we would be deluged with it. We cannot, even by exercising the utmost care, publish more than a fraction of the matter that finds its way to our office.

Mr. Thad B. Lampton, of Jackson, Miss., because of the pressure of work, has recently resigned from the Board of Trustees of the Mississippi State Charity Hospital. In accepting his resignation, Governor Bilbo in a letter to him said: "It is with regret that I accept your resignation. I feel that the institutions of the State should be managed as well-conducted private concerns are, and I regarded your business sagacity, honesty, and energy as a great asset to this Board. Your loss on it will be keenly felt."

Rev. S. L. Riggs, of Selma, La., gives us a club of 5 subscriptions, and in his letter appends the following note: "My work is doing very nicely. Though I have yet held no revivals, I have received 18 members since Conference. My health is very good, but I expect my son to come to the Touro Infirmary some time this month to undergo an operation on his tonsils and for the removal of adenoids." We regret to know that Brother Riggs' son is thus afflicted, and we trust that the surgical treatment in contemplation will give him complete relief.

From the Bulletin of our First Church of Baton Rouge, issued for July 9, we take the following: "Our pastor at Denham Springs, Brother Mangum, and his wife, are both ill with typhoid fever at the Baton Rouge Sanitarium. Their suffering has been made almost unbearable in the loss by death of one of their fine babies, which occurred last Monday. The little body was carried from the Sanitarium here back to Denham Springs for interment." We are grieved to learn of the illness and sorrow of Brother and Sister Mangum, and pray that God may be consciously with them at this trying time.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, pastor of the Franklinton (La.) Circuit, passed through New Orleans last Monday on his way to Clinton, where the Baton Rouge District Conference is in session this week, and, while here, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. Brother Sweeney closed a fine meeting at Varnado last Friday night, which had continued for 17 days, and in which he was assisted by Rev. R. A. Bozeman. There were 50 conversions and 9 additions to the Church; and one young man professed to be called to preach, being the third to do this on Brother Sweeney's work within the past twelve months.

The Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College is composed of five choice business men. Mr. W. M. Buie and Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh are the two chief beneficiaries of Major Millsaps' will, having each received therefrom a fortune estimated at about $750,000; Mr. T. B. Lampton was associated with Major Millsaps in the Capital National Bank and is considered one of the most competent financiers in Mississippi; Mr. J. F. Gunter we do not know personally, but he is said to be one of the most capable business men in Jackson; Mr. W. P. Kretschmar, of Greenville, because of a situation created by his stand for prohibition, surrendered the cashiership of a prominent bank about eight years ago and started himself a small bank in his home town, which has grown to be one of the leading banking institutions in the great Mississippi Delta. He is president of the Mississippi Y. M. C. A., and an active Christian worker. He is the only North Mississippian on this important Committee and he resides in that section of the State which Major Millsaps said was the best field for investments. All of these gentlemen are loyal Methodists.

MAJOR MILLSAPS' WILL.

The following statement concerning the will of the late Major R. W. Millsaps, for which we are indebted to the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News, will doubtless prove of interest to many of our readers:

Practically the entire fortune of the late Major R. W. Millsaps, financier and philanthropist, who died here on Wednesday, June 28, is bequeathed to Mrs. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, his adopted daughter, and Webster M. Buie, his nephew.

The estate left by Major Millsaps is estimated from one and one-half to two million dollars. The latter figure is probably correct.

The will was filed for probate in the Hinds County Chancery Court this morning. It covers eight pages, and makes quite a number of bequests, but they do not aggregate more than $50,000.

G. T. Fitzhugh and Webster Buie are made executors of the estate without bond, and are not required to make reports to the Chancery Court. The bequests are to be paid within one year.

Mrs. Harry A. Austin, of this city, a niece of the deceased, who has presided over the State Street home since the death of Mrs. Millsaps, is given $10,000. This is the largest indivdual bequest, outside of the principal heirs.

It is estimated by close personal friends of the dead financier that Mrs. Fitzhugh and Mr. Buie will each receive more than three-quarters of a million dollars.

Mrs. Lavina Johnson, of Port Gobson, a sister of Major Millsaps, is giving $3000 and a 241-acre tract of land on which she now resides.

Ten nieces and nephews residing in various parts of the State are given $3000 each.

The children of Mrs. G. T. Fitzhugh are each given $5000.

Bequests of $1000 each are made to the Baptist Orphanage, Methodist Orphanage, Campbell College, the Old Ladies' Home, the Ida Mitchell Robinson Memorial Circle of King's Daughters, and the fund for superannuated Methodist preachers.

(Millsaps College received as additional gifts from Major Millsaps, following his death, two paid-up insurance policies: one for $50,000 which is to bear 5 per cent interest, payable annually for twenty years, at which time the face value of the policy will be due, making the total amount finally accruing from this policy $100,000; the other policy is for $50,000, payable in twenty annual installments of $2500 each, but bears no interest. The will of Major Millsaps specifically directs that all of this insurance money shall go to the endowment fund of the College. His total gifts to the institution since its establishment are estimated to amount to about $600,000.—Ed. Advocate.)

A GOOD MEETING.

We have just closed our meeting here, which was very profitable. The preaching was done by Rev. J. A. Bowen, and the singing was conducted by Brother Irwin R. Price. Brother Bowen did good work for us. His preaching is strong and Scriptural. He preaches the old-time Gospel with the old-time power. He and Sister Bowen did great good by their personal work. They went into shops, factories, stores, and offices, and delivered messages of love and brought people to Church. Brother Bowen is good help in a meeting, and our people have learned to love both him and his wife.

Brother Price who led the singing is also fine help. Our people were delighted with his singing, and will want him again. He feels what he sings, and makes others feel his message in song, too.

While we did not have a great number to join the Church, we feel that the meeting was a great success. Our new church proposition has been stimulated, and we are expecting to be able to begin the work by September. We give the Lord praise for what he has done for us.

Louisville, Miss. J. D. SIMPSON, P. C.

NOTES FROM THE JACKSON DISTRICT.

With the militia of the State gathered in Jackson, things have a much livelier appearance. Scenes around the Camp are indeed lively. Some of the local pastors confess that many of their members find the Camp of more interest at the hour for evening service than their places in church. How we all like martial music and military display!

Some of the preachers are using the stay of our soldier boys in the Capital City as opportunities for impressing them with the importance of being true to God and their Churches while serving the Nation in camp. Rev. J. L. Neill, our Sunday School Field Secretary has been using a few days' stay in Jackson to this end. Rev. J. S. Duke says that now is the time for all preachers to show their patriotism by offering their services as chaplains without any danger of any one being accepted. Duke is great. He has raised a BIG patch of cucumbers and offers them for sale at five cents a dozen to preachers.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, pastor of Capitol Street, is making quite a record as a matrimonial pastor. He holds a record of about eight marriages during June, and the prospects of more in July. Ask him about that court-house wedding with a $21 fee.

Dr. W. G. Henry and his flock at Galloway Memorial are happy over the near-completion of the installation of their new $5200 pipe organ. Within another week the contractor will have completed his work, and the congregation will celebrate with a great musical service. When Conference meets in Jackson next December, it will be held in the finest church in the State, equipped with the best pipe organ in the State.

The preachers of the Jackson District have banded together in a preacher' association to meet once a month in Jackson—Tuesday after each first Sunday at 2 p. m. These meetings promise to be a splendid source of fellowship and help to the preachers of the district.

Another Ford has been added to the equipment of Jackson District preachers. Adams, of Flora, is in the company of car owners now.

SOLOMON L. OWENS was born on April 25, 1848, near Columbia, Miss., and died on July 7, 1915, at his home near Knoxo, Miss. Brother Owens was for many years a faitbful and consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, in which he long held the offices of steward and of trustee. He was a Methodist of the old-time sort. He loved the doctrines of the Church and professed a definite religious experience. His long life was usefully and honorably spent. His latter days were full of suffering, which he endured without murmuring, and near the end he rejoiced that he had continued faithful to Christ and joyously looked forward to the crown of life, which is the reward of him that overcometh. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Geo. H. Galloway, a former pastor, assisted by his pastor, Rev. W. H. Saunders. His wife and eleven children—five sons and six daughters—mourn because of his departure. May the religion which comforted and inspired the life of this good man be the hope and stay of these loved ones while they tarry here just a while!

F. L. APPLEWHITE.

On Sept. 21, 1862, there was born unto Mr. W. D. and Clara Eugenia Carmichael a little girl that was destined, not only to brighten the home and make glad the hearts of her fond parents, but to be a bright and shining light in the community where she lived. LAURA KATE, the subject of this sketch, was their first-born, and, having never married, her interest and affections were centered upon the home. After the death of her mother two years ago, her father became her special care. Being the only daughter remaining in the home, she was his loving comfort. On the evening of April 28, 1916, about 8 o'clock, the sweet, gentle spirit of Miss Laura passed away from this earthly scene to be with her Lord whom she loved. She was much interested in the Church, and in the days before she became an invalid she looked carefully after the needs of her home church, Bear Creek. The respect and love of her neighbors and friends were attested by the large numbers who attended her funeral and by the many beautiful floral offerings. She is greatly missed by her loved ones. Her father, two brothers, and four sisters mourn her departure.

"We shall sleep, but not forever.
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

B. W. LEWIS.

On May 20, 1916, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to bring to a close on the earth the beautiful life of Miss LUCY RAGAN, but in so doing he opened unto her the doorway into a more beautiful and excellent life. Her many friends who read these lines will brush the tears from their eyes and bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well. Miss Ragan was known far and near, and being an earnest believer, and a friend to the cause of holiness, she was no stranger to the many holiness ministers. Most of her girlhood days and the greater portion of her mature years were spent in Montgomery, La., where her parents and many relatives lived.

She spent the last few years of her life away from her old home, part of her time being spent with her niece and nephew, Mrs. M. A. Beevon, and Rev W. E. Harrison, at Meridian College, Meridian, Miss., where she took a special course and graduated with honors in domestic science.

For the past few months she had been teaching in Florida. Her school having closed, she was returning to Montgomery for a visit, but on her way she stopped off for a visit to relatives in Alexandria, La., and while there she became quite ill. The best medical skill, with trained nurses, was secured, but all to no avail.

While she is no longer with us, her influence still lives, and long after sculptor's work and monuments of stone have crumbled and decayed, the monuments of good deeds and the influence of that pure and holy life will stand unmarred and undimmed by the mists and storms of time. Her remains were interred in the Montgomery cemetery, where many of her loved ones, who outstripped her in the race, peacefully slumber.

Mrs. F. G. WARDLOW.

Mrs. ELIZABETH ANN MORRISON was born in North Carolina on June 17, 1831. She moved to Mississippi with her parents while a child, and settled near Kossuth, in which community the remainder of her life was spent. She professed religion in early childhood, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which she lived a steadfast Christian until God took her to his heavenly home on June 13, 1916. If she had remained four more days on earth, she would have completed her 85th year. She was the daughter of Wm. and Mary Wheeler, who helped to make the community a Christian one, being Methodists of the early type. She was happily married to Robert R. Morrison on December 2, 1846. To this union God gave six children—two of whom preceded their mother to the heavenly bome by several years. Fanny, who was a useful Christian, died first; later she was followed by Prof. Rice Morrison, who gave promise of much usefulness as a Christian teacher, but who bade adieu to all that is earthly before he attained middle life. Two of the daughters left are widows of itinerant Methodist preachers—Mrs. Mary C. Babb, widow of Rev. James A. Babb, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Mrs. Sallie Leatherwood, widow of Rev. W. M. Leatherwood, of the North Texas Conference. James Morrison, the oldest son, and Mrs. Ona Kinamous live near the home of their birth. Sister Morrison leaves a number of grandchildren and other relatives to mourn their loss, and also a host of tried friends. She fought the battle of life the last 35 years as a widow, having to assume the management of home, inside and out, much of the time (her husband having passed on to his heavenly reward). Her energy and her faith in God to help the widow showed where her refuge and strength were and constituted the key to her success as a wife and mother. She was affectionate in her attachments and wise as a counselor. As a neighbor and friend, she was true, and as a member of the Church she was loyal and among the best. Thus passed away an honored servant of God, who may very properly hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done." Her life was spent in much work for the Lord and her children, and now she has entered into that rest that remaineth to the people of God. May God bless those upon whom she bestowed so much labor, prayer, and love, and bring them to see her again!

HEAT FLASHES, DIZZY, NERVOUS

Mrs. Wynn Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her During Change of Life.

Richmond, Va.—"After taking seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new woman. I always had a headache during the Change of Life and was also troubled with other bad feelings common at that time—dizzy spells, nervous feelings and heat flashes. Now I am in better health than I ever was and recommend your remedies to all my friends."—Mrs. LENA WYNN, 2812 E. O Street, Richmond, Va.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness.

For these abnormal conditions do not fail to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss:

Organize, enroll, get ready for the federation of Bible classes. The revival meeting will be ten times more effective if the class is organized to win souls during and after the revival. Try it.

The Wesley Bible Class movement is moving. Bishop Atkins says, "It is a movement of human thought, it is a status of human civilization; it is revolutionizing the Church life."

The main object of the Wesley Bible Class is Bible study, and tho main object of Bible study is soul-winning. Again Bishop Atkins said in his address at Birmingham recently, "The Bible is the only thing worth reading. It not only makes life endurable, but a joy."

We quote the same speaker once more: "There are communities that have no suffering but that is relieved by members of the Wesley Bible Class. It gives an opportunity for the expression of the finer feelings; it satisfies the thirst for companionship, fellowship, friendship."

The dominant note in the North Alabama federation of Bible classes was, "We study the Bible to win men." A mighty army of heroic and trained men went out from this federation to help marshall the hosts of Methodism for still greater conquests for our Lord.

North Mississippi had a number of men to stand up and say they got their start in the great Bible class at Corinth. It was thrilling to hear these men express their gratitude for what our Mrs. Elizabeth Kilpatrick Burgin had done for them in the way of Bible study and Christian training. These "fellows" are spreading the good news among the men in mining camps, in the hamlets, and in the great cities.

May the time soon come when North Mississippi can call her men together for such a federation of her scattered and unorganized forces. How long, O Lord, how long wilt thou wait upon us? Look! The field is already white unto the harvest and the laborers are few. Thou art calling us to train our men that they may be workmen that needeth not to be ashamed; but we do not hear thy heart-piercing cry.

We not only need consecrated men, but men consecrated to such an extent that they are willing to be trained in the fine art of winning others to the Christ-life. How can a man use his time to better advantage than in training the evangelistic committee of his Bible class in the use of the Scriptures in winning men to Christ? If this were done before the revival meeting, success would be assured during the revival and would continue long after the meeting closes. May God put it upon our hearts to train men in this definite and most important work of evangelism!

The response to this new course indicates very clearly the fact that the Church was waiting for a satisfactory training course and that there is widespread recognition of the need of thorough teacher-training."

THE CREOLES OF LOUISIANA,

the descendants of the old-time Spanish and French settlers, prided themselves upon their hair and rightly they should—for it was they who first knew the secret of beautiful hair, the one great successful remedy for hair diseases and the greatest of all hair foods: La Creole Hair Dressing. The recipe was kept a profound secret by the race until about fifty years ago, but now you can reap the benefits of their early discoveries by using "La Creole" hair dressing, the very best dressing for keeping the hair fluffy, light and beautiful.

This wonderful preparation of the Creole race not only cleanses the scalp from all disease and filth, but also renews the life of the hair; makes it light and fluffy; restores to the hair its natural color and original lustre and supplies the hair with oil, food which it requires. No house should be without it. Ask your dealer for it. Price $1.00. Manufactured by VAN VLEET-MANSFIELD DRUG CO., Memphis, Tenn.

Attention to these matters should do much to arrest the progress of the malady, but in many cases there is need for extra help. Where Nature has to work with a weakened body her power is limited.

Your Greatest Problem—That Boy Of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects in the men to whom it entrusts its greatest affairs, be they business, professional, religious or social.

Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. He is a graduate of Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and the Vanderbilt University.

The boy deserves your most careful thought. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tennessee, today, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

ITINERATING BY MODERN METHODS.

I have lately been over a part of five parishes in Louisana with Rev. H. W. Bowman in his Maxwell car. A distance of over 200 miles was made from Saturday morning until Tuesday morning, five sermons were preached and two quarterly conferences were held. Brother Bowman started from Baton Rouge on Saturday morning, going first to Zachary, where the writer joined him; thence we went to Pine Grove (East Feliciana Parish), on the Wilson charge, and there met a splendid congregation of fine Methodists. After an excellent song service and prayer by Brother A. J. Coburn, of Clinton, La., the writer, after reading a part of the sixth chapter of Matthew, spoke a while on verses 19-21. Rev. S. J. Davies, the pastor, offered the closing prayer. Shortly after the service we repaired to the grove at the rear of the church and partook of one of those great quarterly conference dinners for which Pine Grove is so well and widely known. Immediately after dinner the quarterly conference was called to order. After a splendid talk by the presiding elder, an interesting business session was held, after which more excellent songs were given us by the consecrated Christian ladies and other religious workers.

Taking leave of these good people, we ran back to Ethel, where, after visiting some, we remained over night in the hospitable home of Brother W. W. Worthy. On Sunday morning the presiding elder returned to Pine Grove and this writer filled his own pulpit at Ethel. In the afternoon we ran out to Betoville, an evening appointment, where Brother Bowman preached to the delight of those good people. Then again at night he preached to a good audience at Ethel. Brother Bowman is no small preacher, and with the aid of his automobile he is touching more people, is able to be with the preachers more, and, as we see it, is doing a great work. After leaving Ethel, we were soon resting in the comfortable parsonage at Zachary. Next morning we ate breakfast at the district parsonage (Baton Rouge), and, after a few hours' rest, started for Amite and reached there about 1:30 p. m. We spent the evening pleasantly in the home of Dr. Lenoir. There were many old friends at Amite to greet us and for us to greet. (You remember Brother Bowman was pastor there for four years). We were delightfully entertained at the parsonage by Rev. H. T. Young and wife. The quarterly conference was held at 8 p.m. A good, representative body of officers were present. The efficient pastor made splendid reports, showing a great forward movement in Amite Methodism. After an early morning ride we breakfasted in Baton Rouge and dined at Zachary. I was indeed glad to stop for a little rest.

STRIKING FACTS ABOUT AFRICA.

Africa comprises nearly one-fourth of the earth's land surface.

Africa is four times the size of the United States, and ten thousand times as large as the State of Rhode Island.

It is as great a distance around the coast of Africa as it is around the world.

Every eighth person of the world's population lives in the Dark Continent. The blacks double their numbers every forty years and the whites every eighty years.

If the population of Africa were to be represented by the letters contained in the Bible it would require forty Bibles to set forth the number of this vast multitude.

There are 843 languages and dialects in use among the blacks of Africa. Comparatively few of these languages have been reduced to writing.

The coal fields of Africa aggregate 800,000 square miles; its copper fields equal those of North America and Europe combined, and its undeveloped iron ore amounts to five times that of North America.

Its forests would build a board walk six inches thick and eight miles wide around the world. It would be made of ebony, teak, rosewood, mahogany, and almost every known kind of timber.

Africa has forty thousand miles of river and lake navigation, and water power aggregating ninety times those of Niagara Falls.

In the interior of Africa the black man is the freight train. Each man carries about sixty pounds. To carry the load drawn by an American freight engine would require an army of 125,000 blacks.

If Africa had the same proportion of railroad mileage as the United States according to its size, it would have a million miles of track instead of the 25,000 miles now in operation.

The Africans are eager for an education, for this means wage-earning power. It is a common sight in the railroad yards during the lunch hour to see a group of natives conning over a spelling-book.

One area in Africa unoccupied by missionaries is three times the size of New England, a second would make four States like New York, a third would cover eight Iowas, and a fourth is eighteen times the size of Ohio. Throughout Africa there is only one missionary for every 133,000 souls.

It is probable that as many people are killed in Africa every year as a result of witchcraft as were killed in all the armies of Europe during the first year of the present war.

Africa is the land of the "open sore." The ravages of disease are in evidence on every hand. In some parts of the continent there is no isolation of leprosy cases, nor any restrictons of their movements.

Almost the entire continent is now under European flags. France has a colony in Africa twenty times the size of France itself. The British flag flies over a territory as large as the United States, and extends almost without interruption from the Cape to Cairo, a distance of six thousand miles.

Mohammedanism is spreading very rapidly throughout the entire continent. Every third person in Africa is a Mohammedan. There are 4,000,000 of them south of the equator. Within the next twenty years millions more will have gone over to Islam unless the Christian Church bestirs herself. —Men and Missions.

PERSONALS FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SOCIETY.

Mrs. J. H. Haughton, the efficient secretary of the Aberdeen District, has recently sustained the loss of her father. We are grieved to learn of her bereavement and extend to her our deepest sympathy.

A card has been received from Miss Dunstan, our conference corresponding secretary, telling of a most pleasant trip she is now enjoying. Miss Dunstan attended as a delegate the National Convention of Women's Federated Clubs, which was recently held in New York City, and she will continue her trip for still a few weeks longer.

The many friends of Mrs. Vic Thompson Hoyle will be pleased to hear of the splendid trip she and her husband are taking. They will be touring out west for the remainder of the summer, stopping at Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, and on to the Pacific Slope through the National Park.

Corinth is now having the pleasure of welcoming our new Conference deaconess, Miss Adaline Peebles, who comes to us from Mobile. Miss Daniel has recently left for her vacation before going on to assume her position at Mary Elizabeth Inn, San Francisco.

We shall all regret to learn of the recent illness of our splendid young secretary from the Holly Springs District, Miss Lizzie Horn, of Grenada. We shall regret, too, to learn that she is resigning her secretaryship for this reason. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. D. B. High, Secretary of the Sardis Dist., writes that she will be spending the summer in Tampa, Fla., and that, in her absence, the campaign in her district will be handled by Mrs. J. G. Pou, of Courtland.

Under her splendid leadership we have gone forward under the flag of conquest, until to-day the work of the Council is recognized as a mighty force in the evangelizing of the world.

Iron the Greatest of All Strength Builders, Says Doctor

A Secret of the Great Endurance and Power of Athletes

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous Rundown People 200 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Week's Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a well known specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray while many another has gone down into inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents is widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

Clyde, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Brother Dan Kelley closed a revival meeting at Clyde (Mississippi Conference) on May 14, in which we had great results. There were 23 accessions to the Methodist Church, 7 to the Baptist Church, and 2 to the Presbyterian Church. We feel that God has greatly blessed the Church at Clyde through Brother Kelley. There were a number of backsliders reclaimed who said that by the help of God they would hereafter live a true Christian life for their Master. The people showed their appreciation of Brother Kelley by their hospitality and liberal contributions. I do not think any one got any more out of the meeting than I did. Brother Kelley is a friend to the young preacher.—S. C. Moody, P. C.

Franklinton Circuit (La. Conf.)

Dear Doctor Meek: We have just closed a great meeting at Angie, La. The preaching was done by Rev. R. A. Bozeman, and the singing was led by Rev. Mr. Nall, of Ohio. Brother McCormack preached one sermon for us. I never saw a greater manifestation of the Holy Ghost upon the people than at this meeting. Brother Bozeman holds to the old Methodist style of coming to the altar, and the people came, young and old, and prayed their way through. On the last three nights of the meeting there were scenes of intense interest to behold, when we saw Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians all working together for the salvation of souls until between 11 and 12 o'clock. Those who were at outs with each other wept together, and as a result there were 68 that professed conversion. A number of these were Baptists. I received 13 members into the Methodist Church. We give God all the praise.

F. N. SWEENEY, P. C.

Hernando, Miss.

We have just closed a series of very effective revival services under the leadership of Rev. J. A. Bowen. Mr. Irwin N. Price, a most gifted soloist and choir leader, had charge of the singing. Four united with the Church on profession of faith and four by letter.

For ten days the Methodist Church was filled to overflowing by appreciative audiences at each of the evening services, while the two other services held each day were also well received. Brother Bowen brought us powerful messages, full of the Holy Spirit, and the people of all the Churches were greatly revived and strengthened. The results of the meeting are being felt in all the departments of the Church life—particularly in the prayer meetings. The people report that a revival of such depth and permanence has not been witnessed here in many years.

This year our Sunday school has reached a maximum in attendance of 239. During the months of March and April we averaged over 170. In the near future we will add a number of Sunday school rooms to the church, using all of the space which is owned by the Church.

I often hear the people speak of you and your pastorate here in the early years of your ministry. They all beg to be kindly remembered.

With very best wishes to you, and for the continued success of the Advocate, I am,

Fraternally,
MELLVILLE JOHNSON.

Booneville, Miss.

Dear Advocate: This scribe has not written for your columns in several months—not this Conference year, and it is half gone. A lot of us here were sorely disappointed that Brother Lipscomb was not returned to us, for he had done a great year's work and had won the hearts, not only of his own people, but of the whole town. While here he did a lot of grubbing and dynamiting—told us of our faults and warned us of the danger of living a sinful life and begged us to be men and women and seek Christ. He did this in a bold and fearless way, yet with love, and thus put men to thinking, and we love him for it. And we to-day feel that his work was not in vain and that his labors are being rewarded. God bless him and his in his new field of labors, and may this be the greatest year of his ministry!

I am glad that we have more than one man in our church who can fill our pulpit and win the love of our people. Brother Wyatt came to us by appointment of the Bishop, a stranger to most of us. He came in the spirit of the Master and is doing a great work. To say that he and his estimable wife have captured the town would be putting it mildly. He is an ideal pastor and an untiring worker, and we all love him. We have the best choir in the Conference, and Brother Lipscomb has invited it to come to Winona and sing at the coming session of the Annual Conference.

We have a junior choir of children that sing equal to most any choir I have ever heard, and whenever they sing it makes me think and wonder if the angels in heaven can make any sweeter music than it does. No congregation has a more faithful and efficient organist. Our Sunday school superintendent is unexcelled by any in the Conference.

To our former pastors, Brothers Jaco, Brown, Dr. Weir, Brother Holder, Brother Babb, Brother Cain, Brother J. H. Smith, and others, we want to say that we are still in the fight. We have just re-enlisted in the army of our Lord and intend to fight the devil and sin as long as we live.

To Sister Jaco we want to say we still love you and can never forget your many deeds of kindness to us, especially to the family of this scribe. We have not forgotten that during the protracted illness of our son and daughter how you from your own pantry and with your own hands for weeks prepared and brought our meals to us. God bless you! We all love you.

HARVEY W. REES,
Lay Leader.

A GREAT MEETING AT YAZOO CITY.

Dear Brother Meek: I want to report our meeting in Yazoo City. I believe, if I remember correctly, I sent a communication to your paper two years ago—the first in perhaps eight or ten years.

I was appointed to this charge by Bishop Denny in December, 1914. I found a discouraged people. As you know, this is a cotton country. The farmers had not made anything like a full crop and could not sell what they had made for half what it cost to make it. In fact, a large part of the time during the winter of 1914-15 they could not get an offer for their cotton. While all assessments for that year were paid in full, it was hard to get them when such conditions prevailed, and the stewards were forced to borrow a little less than $200.

But last year our crops were fairly good, and prices very good. So finances were easier.

In October, 1915, Rev. M. L. Burton preached two weeks for us. His sermons were strong, clear-cut, gospel messages. They were well received by the people, and great good was done. Brother Burton preached God's Word with power. The visible results of these services were 9 accessions by profession of faith and 3 by certificate.

I endeavored to keep the revival spirit going, and early in this year arranged for another meeting of fifteen days. Rev. J. A. Bowen, one of the Conference Evangelists of the North Mississippi Conference, was engaged to do the preaching, and the Lewis Brothers, of the Mississippi Conference, to lead the singing. Brother Bowen reached us Friday morning, May 12, 1916. At the first service, which was Friday evening, we had a good congregation. Saturday morning Rev. R. A. Ellis, a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, was called to his reward. He was looking forward to the meeting with great interest, hut joined the saints in glory. His funeral was held at 9 o'clock in our church, and he was laid to rest in the city cemetery. We loved him.

Sunday was Mothers' Day, and Brother Bowen preached on "God's Call to Women." The house was full. The preacher showed how God called women to he sisters, daughters, wives and mothers in the sweetest, richest sense. I never expected to see what we witnessed that day. At a mere suggestion from the preacher the men of the congregation rushed to the altar to pledge themselves to be better hrothers, sons, hushands, and fathers. Strong men wept like children, and praised God for such a service.

Sunday night the pastors of the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches joined us, and continued to do good service through the meeting. On the following Tuesday night we had a service for the old Veterans. In the camp here there are members of the Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Roman Catholic, and Jewish Churches, and some who belong to no Church. We had a great service. One Roman Catholic said that he never felt so much like shouting in his life. We continued to have good services through the week. When the weather was favorable we had to use the Sunday school room to accommodate the people. The next Sunday was a great day, but special mention must be made of the afternoon service for men. Brother Bowen conducted the service. There was a very hard rain at the hour for service, but 110 men were present. The preacher's text was, "Let brotherly love continue." He had already impressed the fact that he was incapable of using anything hut the most highly refined and chaste language. The power of the Spirit was with us. Brother Bowen is a great man in a meeting. One man who was in the meeting said, "He is as brave as a lion, as gentle as a woman, and as loving as can he." He holds up the pastors and works to build up the Sunday schools and prayer meetings. I believe he prays and studies more now than he ever did. He makes no compromise with sin—says God hates sin and the devil, but He loves folks. He is absolutely free from sensational methods. He speaks the truth in love. The Church needs more men like him.

Brother Bowen's wife came with him. She did good work in her quiet, gentle way, seeking to save souls. She is a great help to her husband in his work.

The Lewis Brothers had charge of the singing. With these four men to do the singing, and Bowen to do the preaching, the pastor's hardest task was to arrange to accommodate the congregations. These men can sing, pray, and preach, and are willing to help in any way. The father of these men was with us for a few days. Many of his old parishioners live here, and his stay was pleasant for him and helpful to us. Rev. John Tillery Lewis, our pastor at Greenville, was with us for two days after Brother Bowen left. He preached good sermons, full of the Sprit.

As a result of this meeting, the Sunday school is better, the prayer meetings are very much larger, a goodly number of the people are more spiritual, a good Epworth League has been organized, and some family altars have been erected. I think I am safe in saying we had 30 or 40 conversions, 20 accessions on profession of faith, and the most of our church people revived, though some refused to be blessed. Already we see the sad results that always follow such negligence. The people, without urging, gave a substantial expression of their appreciation of the services of these men. We were glad when they came, and hope they will come again.

IN WORK AND IN PLAY the girls of Ward-Belmont are stimulated to their finest interest, enjoyment and achievement in all that leads to their physical, social, intellectual and moral development. Inspired by delightful surroundings and associations and encouraged by the kindly influence and close, personal instruction of master-minds, our young women enter with hearty enthusiasm into every activity of college life.

In the class room or in the saddle, in the swimming pool or in the laboratory, at tennis and hasket ball, or in the studio and domestic science, the nohlest ideals of efficient, wholesome, practical and cultured womanhood are the common goal of WARD-BELMONT students.

The fifty or more instructors comprising the faculty, are selected for their culture, ahility, experience and moral fitness from the leading American and European Universities, Conservatories and Studios. The beautiful campus and buildings, representing an investment of more than half a million dollars, afford every comfort, convenience and facility for the protection and training of body and mind.

ANTI-PROHIBITIONISTS ACTIVE IN MISSISSIPPI.

We published in the Advocate of last week a statement from Dr. T. J. Bailey, Superintendent of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League, which dealt with matters of much importance, and we trust that our preachers and laymen in that State gave it a careful reading. Since Dr. Bailey wrote his communication, the situation, according to the press dispatches, has become even more menacing than he described it to be. To show that this is true, we reproduce the following statement of the Jackson correspondent of the Times-Picayune, which appeared in a late issue of that paper:

Statement from Jackson.

"Secretary of State Power has counted the names on the several petitions demanding an initiative and referundum election at the next general election and declared results as follows: On the fish and game law petitions there are 7674 signatures; on the one-quart-every-two-weeks law there are 6651 signatures; on the anti-advertising whiskey law there are 6258 signatures; on the $315,000 bond issue 1000 signatures; on the tick eradication law about 3000 signatures.

"It was necessary to have 6000 signatures of qualified electors, and the names on these petitions are certified to by the men who got them up. The bond issue and the tick eradication laws having failed to receive the 6000 signatures, there will be no election as to those laws.

"In order to be sure of his ground in certifying as to these petitions the Secretary of State submitted three questions to the Attorney General, which, in substance, were as follows:

"First: Shall I take it for granted that these signatures are those of qualified electors as certified to in the affidavits accompanying same? The Attorney General holds the certificates are sufficient and final.

"Second: Can names of signers be withdrawn after count is made and certified to? The answer is that no names can be withdrawn.

"Third: Does the ordering of the election suspend the operation of the law being tested? The answer is that it does and that it is so written in the Constitution.

Injunction is Served.

"No sooner had the opinion of the Attorney General been made public than an injunction was served on Secretary of State Power restraining him from any action that would hold the new liquor laws in abeyance and put the old gallon per day law in effect or permit newspapers to print advertisements of whiskey houses.

"The injunction was filed in the name of W. T. Ratliff, of Raymond, and Prof. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College. Secretary Power says that he will obey the injunction, and it is said that a motion to dissolve will be prepared at once, so that the matter may be settled according to the Constitution, which eminent lawyers hold plainly and unequivocally suspends the operation of the law until the referundum vote is taken."

From the foregoing summary of the situation, it seems to be certain, if the legal views of the Attorney General are correct, that the Mississippi Fish and Game law and the two phases of the recent prohibition legislation mentioned will have to go before the voters of the State for ratification. Concerning the fate of the first-named measure we care very little. Some features of it we regard as wise and wholesome, but there are some others which seem to us to be quite objectionable. In this effort, however, to upset these late prohibition enactments we feel a deep interest, and we trust that it will fail. These provisions are admittedly doing more to stop the shipment of intoxicants from "wet" into "dry" territory and to suppress all illegal forms of liquor-selling than any other legislation that was ever enacted in Mississippi, and we trust that the good people of that commonwealth will see that they are kept in full force. To this end, it would be well for the Christian people of the State to give Dr. Bailey immediately the active and earnest co-operation for which he asks. We think it would do much good if our pastors would read his letter to their congregations next Sunday, and, after explaining to them fully the situation, confer with them as to how best to arouse their communities to the importance of helping to circumvent this latest anti-prohibition movement, which is said to have been inspired by the wholesale liquor dealers. And do not forget that the State Anti-Saloon League is in urgent need of funds for the impending battle. Every town and village in Mississippi should send Dr. Bailey a remittance at the earliest moment possible.

We cannot refrain from saying in this connection, that an Initiative and Referendum law which allows so small a percentage of the voters to bring on an election is, in our opinion, very defective, and is calculated to keep up a disturbance. We think that at least one-fourth of the qualified electors of a State ought to be required to express their disapproval of a legislative enactment in order to arrest its operation and necessitate the trouble and expense of having the people to pass on it at the polls.

ONE SHOULD KNOW.

David says, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." This is a declaration of his complete trust and confidence in God, and it is stated in a tone in which there is no such thing as a tinge of doubt or a mere hope, but in which there is an absolute knowledge of the fact stated and of all that it implies in this life and in the next. Mr. Tennyson, whom many worthy divines are given to quoting frequently, and who is without doubt one of England's greatest poets, says: "I hope to see my Pilot face to face when I have crossed the bar;" but the word "hope" is utterly out of place in the vocabulary of the Christian when he speaks of his relation to God and spiritual things. A Christian must be one that "knows." He is one who says by the grace of God I know, and does know, and acts accordingly. Hope is for the use of those who have not the assurance of faith to give them knowledge. All men, even pagans, skeptics, and unbelievers of all kinds, indulge in hopes relative to the future world at some time. To say that one merely hopes is to say that one is standing on uncertain ground. We must know if we would attain to our highest privilege. God is not pleased with those who, with the light that is set before them, can give forth only the pitiful wail of the agnostic, "I do not know; I do not know." Some have marveled at the spirit of the martyrs, which is indeed a wonder to those who are not acquainted with the power which God can exercise over the hearts of men if they do not resist the Spirit; but the martyrs were men who lived and died knowing that God would take care of them.

WILL BROADEN ITS WORK.

As will be seen elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, Rev. C. W. Crisler, who has been chosen President of the Seashore Divinity School, states that the scope of the work of that institution will be broadened. This, we think, is a wise movement. Though they are not without some valuable features, we think that the weakness of most summer Bible schools is that their sessions are too brief and that they make too little provision for substantial study and instruction. Any one who has ever been to college or who has been a teacher knows that, except with well trained students, the lecture system is about the most ineffective method of imparting knowledge, barring teaching by correspondence, that could be adopted. If we are ever to develop our preachers who were deprived of early educational advantages into more adequately furnished workers, we must find a way to give them opportunities really to study and to push forward for themselves. In this, as in most other things, a man must himself tread the path of progress—others cannot do it for him, though they may immensely help him.

We have for some years had a growing conviction that we need to get more of our pastors into real schools on the order of those established by Mr. Moody at Chicago and Northfield for brief terms of sure-enough study. Therefore, we are pleased with this announcement of Brother Crisler. We should like to see the Seashore Divinity School become increasingly an institution of the kind that we have mentioned. Thus extended, and kept orthodox, we believe that it would render a great service to the Methodism of this section. Too many of our summer religious institutes have been permitted to become mediums through which men with a little, smattering knowledge of German rationalistic theology have peddled out their borrowed skepticism. Intelligent orthodoxy is what the Church must have to do its work in the world. What we as preachers most need is to grasp in all the fullness of their meaning the great unchangeable truths of the Gospel, that we may be able to drive them home in saving power to the hearts of others. If we could make all our pastors dilettante dabblers in the speculative and doubt-producing so-called religious literature of this perplexing time, we dare say that by so doing we would hurt them more than we would help them.

TEACH ME TO LIVE.

Teach me to live! 'Tis easier far to die—
Gently and silently to pass away—
On earth's long night to close the heavy eye,
And waken in the realms of glorious day.

Teach me that harder lesson—how to live,
To serve Thee in the darkest paths of life:
Arm me for conflict now, fresh vigor give,
And make me more than conqueror in the strife.

Teach me to live! Thy purpose to fulfill;
Bright for Thy glory let my taper shine;
Each day renew, remold this stubborn will;
Closer round Thee my heart's affections twine.

Teach me to live for self and sin no more,
But use the time remaining to me yet;
Not mine own pleasure seeking as before,
Wasting no precious hours in vain regret.

Teach me to live! No idler let me be,
But in Thy service hand and heart employ,
Prepared to do Thy bidding cheerfully;
Be this my highest and my holiest joy.

Teach me to live. My daily cross to bear,
Nor murmur though I bend beneath its load;
Only be with me. Let me feel Thee near;
Thy smiles sheds gladness on the darkest road.

Teach me to live! and find my life in Thee,
Looking from earth and earthly things away;
Let me not falter, but untiringly
Press on and gain new strength and power each day.

Teach me to live! With kindly words for all,
Wearing no cold, repulsive brow of gloom;
Waiting with cheerful patience, till Thy call
Summons my spirit to its Heavenly Home.

OUR SUFFICIENT HELPER.

"Christ is able to help us in all our temptations because he overcame. He never lost a battle. He stands by us as the strong Son of God, with omnipotent strength, and in every time of faintness or weakness we may turn to Him for help and he will deliver us."

TAKE YOUR RELIGION WITH YOU.

When the early disciples were scattered up and down the country because of the persecution following the death of Stephen, they took their religon with them. Not all Christians are like these disciples, but we honor those who are. When Frank T. Bullen was a boy at sea, he became a Christian. For years he had a hard time among his shipmates, but he persisted in "standing by his colors," and they came to like him for his steadfastness to principle. God asks us to bear witness for Him just where we are. What opportunity for testimony is waiting for us in the home, in the shop, on the street!—Christian Intelligencer.

ORGANIC UNION.

By Colonel E. C. Reeves.

The Church is of God. Organizations commonly called Churches are human inventions designed to help persons into the Church of God, and on to the heavenly home. No human organization, however blessed of God, is a divine institution. This will be conceded by any but a fanatic.

Churches differ frequently as to doctrine; always as to polity. The reason is obvious. No two human minds are precisely alike. What one likes another dislikes. What one accepts another rejects. The same object is seen differently because seen from a different view-point. The bases for thinking being different, the same conclusion is not always reached as to any particular thing not known from absolute knowledge. Therefore, different minds have devised different Church organizations, all founded on honesty of purpose, to meet the wants and desires, if not the actual necessities, of differing minds. Hence, we find about one hundred Protestant Churches in America. And each one, more or less successfully, is serving the purpose of its organization, or creation, and is doing a work, in part at least, no other could or would do. The membership of all these denominations is voluntary. Each member makes choice according to his or her will, and enters that Church which is the choice of the applicant—the Church that most nearly comports with the peculiar ideas of the applicant for membership. The will is the ruling factor, and it is ultimate; for no power above will force it, and no power on earth can. This supreme prerogative of the will to choose absolutely is a wise economy in nature to which the wise economy of human contrivance is wisely fitted—the contrivance of many Churches. These multiplied Churches of to-day were not born because persons are perverse, but because they are diverse. God has made them so. "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold." 1 reason, that were all the Methodists in one Church organization to-day, similar reasons for making many Methodist Churches in the past would soon make many in the future. Differing minds must, and will, have different Churches. Mark well that assertion.

II.

The Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have launched, probably, the most colassal undertaking known in church history. They have undertaken to unify into one Church the 7,330,000 Methodists in the United States, in sixteen Methodist denominations. While the plan consistently embraces all of those Churches, yet as the fourteen smaller churches are, possibly, non-episcopalian in polity, any special effort to bring them into harmony with the two great episcopal branches will naturally be postponed until the conclusion of the effort to unify the said two greater bodies.

The Northern Methodist Church has a membership in the United States of some 3,600,000 in round numbers; and the Southern Church something over two millons. To unify these two Churches and make one Church out of the two is the work laid out to be first performed.

Unification means organic union and nothing less. There are obstacles in the way to organic union. The editorials and published communications in our church papers written by those favoring unification, or organic union (they all fight shy of the word "organic"), contend that those obstacles are surmountable, or removable. But no writer, so far as I am advised, has, in advocating the innovation, gone to foundation facts, nor even mentioned a basic principle involved in the huge undertaking, except the editor of the Methodist Quarterly, Dr. DuBose, if he can be thus classed, and his editorial I have seen only since writing this paper. As to doctrine, the two churches are at one. It is likewise so as to the episcopacy, in so far as that both Churches are episcopal in polity. But in 1844 there was such a wide divergence in polity in essential matters that the original Methodist Church was rent in twain. Surface writers contend that the cause of the separation in 1844 has been removed. Rev. Jno. M. Moore, in a recent article of his, published in the Texas Christian Advocate, dogmatically asserts that "the political issues that influenced the separation have been settled." He then states with positiveness that the two Churches "have regulations of polity only slightly divergent, and that not in vital matters." Then with a kind of generous pity for "many good persons," he remarks that they "actually believe that the differences in polity and in the principles of Church government are so great as to be impossible of adjustment." The reasons for so many "good persons" being in blindness, or ignorance, as to these matters, he kindly informs us are "personal prejudices, natural opposition to any change and a tenacious hold on the past."

That any student of Methodist Church history can seriously promulgate such bald assumptions, clearly at variance with historic facts, is beyond my ken. I make bold to affirm that the rock upon which the Church was split, the basic principle underlying the controversy of 1844, was the relation of the episcopacy to the Church. That principle is as much an active force to-day as in 1844, and its potentiality has not been diminished in the least by time nor conditions. To support this affirmation I appeal to history. And as to other divergencies, or differences in polity, instead of decreasing since 1844, they have been biennially increased; for at every General Conference of both Churches for seventy-two years diverse legislation was enacted, pushing the two Churches farther and farther apart as to polity. The journals of the General Conferences support and prove this contention.

For many years there has been controversy over the question whether or not slavery was the cause or the occasion of the divsion of 1844. The discussion was purely academic, and the difference between the two contentions was about that between tweedledee and tweedledum; and had the question been a material one at all, which it was not, it was grounded on a false assumption. Slavery was neither the cause nor the occasion of the disruption of the Methodist Episcopal Church. But it did furnish both the cause and the occasion for the awakening of a fundamental principle that had lain dormant in the womb of the Church from its orgauization. When the sleeping giant awoke, and conditions invoked the exercise of his power, it was then learned that fundamental principles in Church polity must be reckoned with at their full value.

In the contest of 1844, and the great debate on that occasion, probably the greatest in Church history, slavery had neither an apologist nor an advocate. It needed none. It was not on trial. It was not in the issue joined. The Methodist Episcopal Church was a slave-holding Church; and in its two successors there were slave-holding members in good standing down to the emancipation proclamation.

A Bishop, owing to his connection with slavery, was unacceptable to a large membership of the Church. He was not guilty of an immorality, nor of misconduct in office; therefore no charges could be preferred against him to be followed by trial, and judgment of ouster, if found guilty. The majority faction of the General Conference, to meet what was regarded as a necessity, took advanced and radical ground, asserted and maintained that a Bishop made by the General Conference could, by the same power, be unmade at will, without charges being preferred, trial, conviction and judgment of removal. The other faction maintained the very opposite. The principle involved was not only material but it was fundamental. It is a manifest fact, that the principle of slavery was not involved. The relation of the episcopacy to the Church was the only question involved. Neither faction would yield, in fact in conscience could not, and dissolution followed; and our fathers did the wise thing in founding two Churches, each based on the idea, or principle, to suit its adherents.

Who can believe other than that our fathers did wisely in building these two Churches? Are not the facts compelling to the belief that the two Churches as separate units have done a greater work in the aggregate than if organic union had prevailed in the Methodist Episcopal Church to this day, when we look to their wonderful, their phenomenal successes in the kingdom of God?

There is no middle ground between the antagonistic principles underlying the two organizations touching the relation of a Bishop to the Church. The principles that divided cannot reunite. Is that not a self-evident fact? One or the other will have to be abandoned before there can be a union stronger than a rope of sand. Which Church will recede from the principle upon which it has builded so successfully for nearly three quarters of a century? This is no idle question. It goes to the marrow-bone. Aye, there is the rub, or one of them. Will the Southern Church repudiate its past history, and declare that "for forty years it has played the fool," as a Bishop unwisely proclaimed, if correctly reported? That declaration, unfounded on fact, was most extraordinary and unfortunate. To virtually charge incompetency, or insincerity, one or both, of forty years' standing upon a leading Church whose rank and file of members have been, and are, as intelligent, and probably as righteous, as any upon the face of the earth, is simply shocking. But I pass that by without further comment, with my regret and resentment.

III.

Another obstacle that looms up with tremendous proportions is a twin-brother to the one already discussed. It is the power of the General Conference as to its limitations. The antagonistic polities of the two Churches touching legislative and judicial matters will present a problem scarcely less difficult of solution than the one hereinbefore discussed. In our Southern Church, and alike in the Northern, the General Conference is the law-making body. There the parallel ends as to the powers of the General Conference. In the Southern Church the General Conference cannot pass upon the constitutionality of its own acts. If an act embodies a constitutional question it will be reviewed by the College of Bishops; and if by that high tribunal the act he deemed unconstitutional, the college will veto the act; and that renders it void unless an appeal be taken to all the Annual Conferences which, in their aggregated wisdom, as the supreme tribunal of the Church, will determine the constitutionality of the act. Such procedure is unknown to the Northern Church. This ultimate court, standing next to the membership at large of the Church, is the sheet-anchor of protection against the unlimited power and encroachments of the General Conference. The Joint Commission evidently meant for that principle to obtain in the organization of the contemplated new Church, for the Commission suggested as follows: "We suggest that neither the General Conference nor the Quadrennial Conferences be invested with final authority to determine the constitutionality of its own actions." That suggestion was unanimously adopted by the Oklahoma General Conference. The Saratoga General Conference suggested the following: "We recommend that the General Conference be made the supreme legislative, executive and judicial body of the Church, under constitutional provisions and restrictions." That recommendation is but a re-statement of the principle the majority faction held to in the contest of 1844, that the General Conference is a law unto itself, and is all-powerful in Methodist Church economy.

But the two suggestions are manifestly as far apart as are the poles. Bishop Hoss says of them: "Could two propositions be more contradictory in character? It is not possible to reconcile them." However, the Rev. Jno. M. Moore holds that "these do not necessarily conflict;" which goes to prove that the minds of some persons are so freakish as to make them believe just what they wish to believe regardless of facts. This may be on account of that "personal prejudice" he attributes to others.

These two suggestions, coming from the General Conferences, in the light of the past, are more than suggestions or recommendations. Each is an elemental and fundamental principle in the constructive polity of its particular Church. Which Church will surrender its cherished principle? That problem will have to be solved. And how?

But the suggestion of the Northern Church should be stripped of its surplus verbiage and meaningless restrictions. If the General Conference is to be "the supreme legislative, executive and judicial body of the Church," then on Monday it could, in its legislative capacity, enact a rule, or law, and on Tuesday following the same persons, as a judicial body, could pass upon the constitutionality of the work of the day previous, when, it is presumed they did their "level best" to do only what was constitutional! How much more constitutional knowledge would they have on the second day than they possessed on the first day? Would not the work of the second day be a howling farce? In reason, would not every legislative act be ultimate ab initio? There would be no constitutional provisions nor restrictions, only in name. Were a union formed on such a basis the unification, so called, would be simply the absorption of the weaker by the stronger.

IV.

One more obstacle I will discuss, having noted some of its attendant facts in the first paragraph of this paper.

How can a Church membership of five and one-half millions be wrenched from their present Church affiliations, and be set over into a new and untried Church organization? As has already been observed, the choice of a Church depends on the will of the applicant. So far as persons may will to go to the experimental Church, the transfers could be made. But there the matter of transferring membership would stop. The powers that be might pass such edicts and take such actions as would carry from the present Churches to the experimental Church our church-houses, our colleges, our universities and our publishing houses, and all church property, but they cannot carry over a single Church member against his or her will. Where would the line of cleavage run as to Church membership? There are attachments that will not be severed. No, never! I wish to illustrate by my own humble life, and without being charged with egotism.

I have been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for sixty-eight years. My love for my Church is without measure. In the prime of physical manhood I risked my life for the Confederacy; but I love my Church better than I ever did the Lost Cause. All of the wisdom of all peoples could not make for me a new Church that would suit me as well as the Church of my many years. I will remain in it, and no power on earth can drag me from it. Am I not willing for the will of God to be done? Surely so. But who knows the Divine will as to this matter of human contrivance? To assume that Providence is directing this unification movement is to beg the question and leave nothing to controvert.

We may look to the past for facts persuasive as to what the future under similar conditions may bring. We may look to the marvelous growth and achievements of the two Churches as separate units, and rely on such information as to probable results, under like conditions, in the future. But we have no data to reckon from to indicate what the experimental Church would bring forth in the future. The leap will be in the dark.

The Presbyterian Church of the United States and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church essayed to form a union. The same arguments, now passing current, for Methodist organic union, were used in the effort to unify those two Presbyterian Churches. What was the result of that effort? Ninety thousand members and nearly all of the church property passed to the greater Church, but one hundred thousand members, who did not will to make a change in their membership, remained and now constitute a pauper Church as to church buildings and school property. A strong Church, doing great good upon the earth, was torn asunder, and bitterness, litigation and strife followed in the wake, and one of the saddest pages in Church history was written; and if what the conquering Church gained in efficiency is equal to what the weaker one lost, the record is not made public. There is an object lesson for us. Our Church has two millions of souls, and immense properties in universities, colleges, publishing houses and church buildings; and we are at peace with our sister Church; and both Churches, separately, are doing greater works in the kingdom of God than ever before. Why then is this innovation sought? Why seek to dismember these two Churches, among the most successful on earth, that a colossal Church in numbers and wealth may be tried as an experiment? Push the experiment to its utmost, and, judging from the historic past, soon we will have strife, hatred, lawsuits and confusion dire.

Are there not tens of thousands tenfold multiplied in the Southern Church as devotedly attached to her as is this humble writer, and who will stand within her fold so long as life shall last? "If this be treason," thank God it is not treason to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South!

The questions involved do not lie on the surface. They are deep and intricate, and to my mind portentous. Neither good intentions, nor a blubbering sentimentality, nor enthusiasm, nor a slobbering over the surface, nor a "shout-and-go-round" argument, will settle a single one of them; and there are many of them. We must delve to rock-bottom principles and apply reason and cold logic.

In general I am an optimist; as to organic union, I am a pessimist. I charge no one with an ulterior motive. On the other hand, I credit each and every one, differing from me, with honesty of purpose. But some are sadly in error. Who? I have a well defined opinion, but do not know.

NOTABLE ANNIVERSARY WILL BE CELEBRATED.

Millsaps College to Observe the 25th Year of Its Existence.

The Board of Trustees of Millsaps College at its recent annual meeting heartily endorsed the suggestion that Wednesday, May 30, 1917, be observed with suitable exercises in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the college and the eighty-fourth anniversary of the birth of Major R. W. Millsaps, whose large-hearted generosity made possible this great institution of learning.

It is proposed to invite the graduates and other old students to a home-coming at that time, and to have them join with the student body and other invited guests in the celebration of the auspicious occasion.

The recent lamented death of Major Millsaps lends a pathetic interest to the celebration, and will furnish to his many friends an opportunity of honoring his memory.

A committee, composed of 37 prominent citizens of the State and friends of Christian education, was selected, and to them adequate authority was given to formulate plans for the celebration and to carry out the plans formed for bringing to a consummation the observance of this interesting double anniversary.

The following gentlemen constitute the committee:

From the Board of Trustees—Rev. R. A. Meek, D. D., Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D., Rev. S. M. Thames, Hon. W. H. Watkins, Hon. W. W. Magruder, Mr. J. B. Streater, Mr. W. M. Buie.

From the College Faculty—President A. F. Watkins, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Dr. A. A. Kern, Prof. J. Reese Lin.

From the Alumni Association—Rev. J. R. Countiss, Prof. Jesse T. Calhoun, Hon. Barney Eaton, Rev. J. L. Neill.

From the Student Body—Mr. O. W. Connor, Jr., Mr. J. B. Fiebelman, Mr. D. M. White, Mr. Millard F. Clegg.

From the Jackson Board of Trade—Mr. F. E. Gunter, Mr. T. B. Lampton, Mr. J. B. Lusk, Hon. Calvin C. Wells.

From the Young Men's Business Club of Jackson—Hon. Charlton Alexander, Mr. John M. Hartfield, Hon. John D. Ricketts, Mr. Dan W. Bufkin.

From the Rotary Club of Jackson—Mr. R. E. Kennington, Dr. R. S. Curry, Mr. T. R. Warburton, Mr. Raymond Smith.

From the State-at-Large—Hon. Edward Mayes, Hon. J. S. Sexton, Dr. H. R. Shands, Dr. E. H. Galloway, Mr. M. S. Enochs, Mr. L. L. Lampton.

A meeting of this committee will be called at some time in the near future for organization and the inauguration of plans for the celebration.

A CALL FOR HELP.

(Published by request of the Headquarters Committee of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League.)

The prohibitionists of the State have enjoined the Secretary of State from acting upon certain petitions appealing to the referendum to set aside the liquor laws passed by the last Legislature. In thus resorting to the courts to maintain the integrity of the laws as they now stand and to protect the people against the vicious effects of the old gallon law sought to be brought into effect again, the prohibitionists of the State, and especially the Anti-Saloon League, have become responsible for the sum of about $1000, this amount being necessary to cover the actual expenses of postage and clerical work in meeting the combined attack of the liquor men.

An appeal is now made to the prohibitionists throughout the State, and to all those in favor of the enforcement of the liquor laws and opposed to the repeal of our present excellent legislation, to make contribution and to provide a sum to meet the present necessities. Very able and learned lawyers have generously volunteered their services in behalf of temperance and the maintenance of the present status so far as the liquor laws are concerned, and therefore it will not be necessary to provide any attorneys' fees. But there are other expenses incident to a contest involving such momentous issues as are presented by this controversy, and therefore we must have some money, and we want it quick.

We suggest that temperance rallies be held all over the State to make plain to the people the excelience and righteousness of the present law, and we appeal especially to the ministers all over the State to take up this good work and to organize and co-operate with the good laymen in every community, to the end that through the impact of the combined forces of temperance and Christianity, the efforts of the liquor dealers, blind-tiger keepers, and others who would profit by a nefarious liquor traffic, may be defeated.

A special message to the ministers throughout the State will be issued by the Headquarters Committee, and an early response to this message is urged to be sent to Rev. T. J. Bailey, Anti-Saloon League Superintendent, Jackson, Miss. Any special contribution will be received by Mr. T. B. Lampton, Jackson, Miss., Chairman Finance Committee.

Church News

Bishop H. C. Morrison continues to give the public, through the Florida Christian Advocate, his admirable "Gospel Talks."

Dr. Theodore Jack, who has studied at Harvard and other colleges of note, has been chosen Professor of History in Emory University. He is a Methodist layman who has been termed "a preacher without license."

The Superannuate Endowment Fund of our Church now amounts to $489,356. Of this amount, however, $31,859 is in notes and unpaid subscriptions. The larger portion of this sum has been accumulated within the last few years.

A sun-dial formerly owned by the late Dr. J. H. Carlisle has been mounted on a marble pedestal on the campus of Wofford College. The South Carolinians do credit to themselves when they honor in any way this renowned Christian educator.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal has engaged Bishop E. E. Hoss to furnish it an article every week. In making this announcement, the editor of that publication speaks of Bishop Hoss as a philosopher and a leader of Southern thought and progress.

It is stated that plans are being prepared for the erection of a twelve or fifteen story structure on the site of the old John Street Church in New York City, the design being to use the lower floor for a church auditorium and to rent the other floors for offices.

Rev. W. G. Starr, D.D., a distinguished minister in the Virginia Conference who had long been noted for his brilliant pulpit gifts, passed to his eternal reward on July 1. The interment was made in the Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond, with Bishop Denny leading in the service.

The Alabama Christian Advocate calls attention to the fact that the Baptists have recently raised $55,000 for their orphanage in North Carolina and are planning to raise $35,000 for a like institution in Georgia. Perhaps the reason the Southern Baptists can do so much is that they are given to hoeing their own row, instead of mixing up so promiscuously with all sorts of religious denominations.

Have you seen the new Epworth League Handbook? If not, send for a copy. It is a neatly printed, paper-bound volume of 246 pages. It gives an interesting account of the origin, growth, and workings of the Epworth League, and furnishes copious suggestions as to how to operate the various departments of this urgently needed and useful organization. Every pastor and Leaguer ought to have this book. Dr. Parker, Mr. Culbreth, and Miss Trawick have rendered the Church a fine service in preparing it. It may be had of Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., or Dallas, Texas. The price is 15 cents.

Dear Brother Meek: Please announce through the Advocate that we want a Principal for the High School Department and a music teacher for the Mississippi Conference Training School. No one need apply except college graduates and active Christians. Let all applications be sent to me at Montrose, Miss. J. S. PURCELL,

NOTES FROM THE JACKSON DISTRICT.

J. S. Duke and Roy Kleiser have joined forces in a campaign for Christ at Rankin Street. The meeting, at last report, was developing a good interest.

In accord with the plans of the General Sunday School Board, our district has been properly organized for advanced Sunday school work with the following officers: V. R. Howie, Secretary; Mrs. Sue S. Brame, Superintendent Elementary Department; Mrs. J. L. Singletary, Superintendent Home Department; M. S. Enochs, Superintendent Wesley Bible Class, and W. M. Hemmingway, Superintendent Teacher-training. They are planning to hold a district institute at Canton early in September. Every pastor and Sunday school worker in the district should plan to attend it.

One of the local deacons of our church, Rev. B. L. Spruill, died at the home of his son, Dick Spruill, in Canton, June 28. M. M. Black, the local pastor, assisted by H. P. Lewis, Jr., conducted the funeral services June 29.

The revival season in the country charges is now opening up. We desire to see great success attending these efforts. But, brethren, did you ever stop to think that the Lord is more desirous of success than we can be? If we meet His conditions of success, no meeting will be a failure. Some of those conditions on the part of preachers and workers are clean hands, pure hearts, surrendered lives filled with the Spirit, faith, prayer, and a burning zeal for lost souls. May God help us to meet these conditions, and win many souls for Christ this summer! ISOM.

DR. CHAPPELL AND UNION.

By J. D. Barbee.

It is a matter of regret to some of his friends that Dr. E. B. Chappell should have yielded to the seductions of the Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate and joined him in imperiling the vital interests of Southern Methodism, to say nothing of his lack of regard for that large element in the Church to whom both are so largely indebted. But it cannot be truly said that it was surprising in Dr. Chappell's case when one remembers his conduct at Saratoga Springs, whither he went as the fraternal messenger of Southern Methodism, a commission which he discharged with conspicuous ability. But whilst he tarried among the Northern contingent, after having performed the duty laid upon him by a confiding Church, he was bitten by the kissing-bug and straightway fell into the arms of the North and was not to be outdone by the "Lord Bishop of Melrose" even in the warmth of his protestations. This is but the barest outline of what actually occurred. An attempt at analysis of this singular performance is restrained on account of a lingering regard for the actor.

Disregarding Dr. Chappell's special plea for union, I wish to notice briefly only a few points. The Doctor makes much, as others before him have done, of assurances received during his private intercourse with the Northerners. One wonders at his childlike and bland utterances thereanent and also if he ever heard "that for ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain, the heathen Chinese is peculiar." Does not Dr. Chappell know, surely he must know, that private statements, or public ones, for the matter of that, are utterly worthless in the presence of the formal action of any legislative body or court of law? It is what is nominated in the bond that controls in such matters. One who would plead private assurances or statements made in debate in support of his construction of any law would be laughed out of court. Such I understand to be the rule. Then why should Dr. Chappell expect us to attach any importance whatever to what he was privately told at Saratoga Springs? He may swallow such chaff if he wishes, but some of us will insist upon examining the instrument itself, which states officially and unanimously the mind of the gentlemen who assured the Doctor and others that they desired something quite different.

True enough, Dr. Chappell assures us that "we are not a lot of children," but in the light of all that he says he evidently thinks that we are, and he meant the quoted phrase to be understood in a Pickwickian sense.

The Doctor's unrestrained praise of the debates he listened to at Saratoga Springs makes those of us who read them wonder if he was not in a general state of ebfuscation. Anything less deserving of such praise would be difficult to imagine.

The rhapsody which culminates in our old friend Jonah proves nothing. Besides, if all accounts be correct, the Northern Church takes scant stock in Jonah and his tribe.

A sufficient answer to all this bald assertion about safeguards and not wanting or being able to swallow Southern Methodism is that majorities rule. There is no escape from this but in revolution. As a matter of course, that method always exists and it will not likely be overlooked in this case.

It was scarcely gracious in Dr. Chappell to intimate, as he does very broadly, that those who feel moved to oppose this Northern scheme, some of them men who have been his warm friends, and, at the very least, his intellectual and spiritual peers, are guilty of "petty quibbling." Does he think that principle is a stranger to such men and that it resides in his bosom and those of his fellow-absorptionists alone?

One cannot suppose that Southern Methodism is composed of such simpletons as to swallow the bait which has been dangled before their eyes under circumstances that leave exposed its true object. In vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird.

Greenville, Miss.

THE EFFORT TO STIFLE FREE SPEECH.

By the Editor.

We desire to state that all efforts to "resolute" or intimidate the Editor of the Advocate into silence concerning the great vital questions relating to the unification, or union, of American Methodism will not influence him in that direction to the slightest extent. When we accepted a position on the tripod, we did so without any imposition of restraint from any source whatever as to the expression of our convictions concerning any issue that might arise, and we would not consent to remain thereon for a moment on the condition that we should be thus fettered. Even if the three patronizing Conferences, which alone have the right to control the Advocate, were to undertake to muzzle us—a thing which we have not heard suggested, and which we feel sure they would never attempt to do—without the least hesitancy we would hand in our resignation.

We feel as profoundly as we are capable of feeling the tremendous significance of this movement, which, as we see it, involves, more or less, everything that we have stood for in the Church since we have been in the itinerant ministry—its doctrinal soundness, its attitude toward worldliness, its spirituality as distinguished from secularism, the character of its missionary work and educational system, its future relation and serviceableness to the people of the South, and, finally, its very existence as an autonomous organization, and the question of our own ecclesiastical home—and to expect us to sit quietly down and have nothing to say concerning these momentous matters until they are largely settled, and possibly placed beyond the reach of our influence, is, we think, utterly unreasonable. Whether on or off the tripod, we could never pursue such a course. That practically all the things mentioned above are largely involved in the pending union negotiations, if a kindly Providence shall continue to give us health and strength, it is our purpose to try to show in the columns of the Advocate within the next few weeks.

With the brethren who differ with us on the union question, we have dealt fairly, and we shall continue so to do. Neither before nor since the Saratoga Conference, have we turned down a single communication bearing on this issue that came from our own patronizing territory. And the only reason that we have not carried all the contributions that have reached us from all over the Church, is that our space is quite limited, necessitating the exercise of discrimination with reference to copy coming from outside of Louisiana and Mississippi. So long as we accord our ultra-unionist brethren the privilege of being heard, we respectfully submit that they have no right to try to conscript others into silence. The Northern Methodist papers discussed the Oklahoma City plan of unification for two years, and some of their leaders even brought out hooks dealing with it, many of their utterances being adverse to it; and discussion is still going on in the press of our Sister Church. Why, then, should there be an effort to proscribe free speech in the Church, South? As we have before shown, any and all forms of unification involve constitutional questions, which no General Conference action alone can settle, and, therefore, the whole movement is legitimately before the Church for debate. The humblest and most obscure Methodist in the land has a perfect right to give voice to his opinion concerning any phase of it.

We wonder why it is that the extreme union advocates are so afraid to let this whole issue be threshed out before the 2,000,000 Methodists of the South. Why do they wish to keep them in the dark? Do they want to effect some kind of union which they fear would be displeasing to them? For our part, we do not think there ought to be any kind of union that a majority of our people do not want. But it has been suggested that the prejudices of the people may become aroused and get in the way of the proceedings. Are those composing the membership of our Church so weak and silly as that? Must they be treated like incompetents? Are they not capable of exercising reason and weighing at their proper value any efforts that may be made to appeal unworthily to their prejudices? If not, then pitiable indeed is the condition of Southern Methodism.

But it is said that the people would have an opportunity to be heard later. Would they? Our General Conference is only a little only over a year and a half off, and the Northern General Conference has been staged to meet, if thought desirable, at the same time, to put, as we have been told, the finishing touches on the merger in 1918. Our Commission of Twenty-Five has not yet even been appointed, and when it is, we will only be ready to take up anew negotiations with the Northern brethren, the beginning and length of which no one can tell. It takes time to get the attention of millions of people aroused and focused upon any great issue.

And HOW is this question to be before the more than 2,000,000 of Southern Methodists? If the Joint Commission should agree upon a plan, it would then go to a General Conference of 300 or 400 men (not elected by the people), and if that body should give it a two-thirds vote, it would finally go to the Annual Conferences, made up of some 8000 preachers, and some 1200 or 1500 laymen (elected by the quarterly conferences composed of a few officials—not by the people of the congregations); so that some 10,000 or 12,000 persons (not elected by the general membership of the Church) would settle this great issue, embracing the questions as to whether the substantial integrity and autonomy of the Church, South, shall be maintained, and what is to become of the institutions and property into which our two million communicants, who have no vote in the determination of the matter, have put their hard earnings.

No, no; the only influence that the great body of our membership can bring to bear upon this movement that involves so much is the pressure of public sentiment, as they may be able to find avenues for its expression. Yet seemingly there are those who would have them kept uninformed as to what is going on and deny them even this inadequate right. If it be said, this would come to them in the final stages of the process, we answer that, after the Joint Commission had adopted a plan, the people could resist it, if they should wish to do so, only under a tremendous handicap, which would be still further augmented if the General Conference should also approve it. Public sentiment is a better aid to legislation before it has taken shape than afterwards.

To whom does the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, really belong? To the Bishops or preachers? No. To the General and Annual Conferences? Nay, not so. By every consideration of moral right, it belongs to the 2,000,000 members composing it, and they should be fully consulted concerning this matter which embraces the very life and existence of the organization of which they are the bone and sinew, and their will, whatever it may be, should prevail. There can be no justification for Commissions, or Conferences, or high officials of any sort trying to rule them out of the proceedings and to take the issue out of their hands and settle it for them. Let us have open dealing and free speech in Southern Methodism at this crucial time. These union negotiations have gone on for nearly six years with practically no discussion of them in the press of the Church, South, which fact certainly shows that we have been a patient and confiding people. Possibly it is because we have been so submissive in this respect that some have come to think it is presumptuous and ugly for us to open our mouths at all concerning this fateful undertaking, unless it be to agree with them.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The Eighth Session of the Seashore Divinity School, just closed, was well attended and in some respects the best yet held. The public lectures were interesting, instructive, and good. The young men were diligent and efficient in their class work and the eight graduates will reflect credit upon our Church.

The severe tropical storm prevented the carrying out of the last day's public program, except at the nine o'clock hour. However, the class work went on without a break and the certificates and diplomas were awarded after satisfactory examinations. While the storm was severe and did damage to property on the Camp Ground, not a house was destroyed. In fact, the damage done on that part of the coast was not nearly so severe as in the interior.

It has been decided to broaden the work of the school so as to include some phases of the Sunday school and mission work. The Sunday School Boards of the patronizing Conferences are invited to secure the services of a great specialist for one hour each day for platform work, and the Women's Missionary Societies are also requested to select a specialist for one hour each day. It is expected that these two interests will provide funds for these lecturers.

It was determined to make the postgraduate course of study, or reading, for the brethren, extending through four years, an instructive and attractive feature of next session. Considerate of those preachers who lacked early advantages and need directing in their reading, the first year's course will be simple and inviting, and each year's course will be worthy of the progress that has been made. This course is to be as general as possible, and is in no way to take the place of the postgraduate work outlined by the College of Bishops, but is to supplement that work. A certificate will be given to those taking the course each year, and at the conclusion of the fourth year a diploma will be awarded to those completing the course. The course of reading outlined for this year is, "Bury's Students' History of Greece," by Dr. Everett Kimball; "An Introduction to Philosophy," by Geo. Stewart Fullerton; "The Story of Our Bible," by Rev. H. B. Hunting; "Ivanhoe," and "Macbeth."

The Directors decided to invite Emory and the Southern Methodist Universities to send instructors to take charge of a School of English running through the session.

An attractive feature of the new work undertaken is the offering of prizes of $25, $15, and $10 for the first, second and third best papers, or essays, of not less than three thousand nor more than five thousand words on "How to Increase the Efficiency of the Country Church." Any person who contributes the annual fee of $2.50 will be eligible as a contestant. The papers should be sent to the Secretary, Rev. W. W. Holmes, New Orleans, Louisiana, not later than the first day of next session, June 26, 1917.

The strongest and most attractive program yet offered is being prepared now for the next session. The services of the most popular and best platform speakers on the continent are being sought. This, with the other important features offered, should easily secure the attendance of at least three hundred preachers who have not yet stopped growing in efficiency.

The slogan of the School is, "A greater man, for a greater service." If our great Church shall continue to grow and do the work in the world God intended it should, we must develop a strong, intelligent, aggressive leadership—"one that knows the way, keeps ahead, and can induce others to follow."

My brethren of the Conferences, I call upon you to assist in popularizing this School down by the Gulf, so that it may reach helpfully and inspirationally the whole leadership of our Church in these patronizing Conferences.

Yours fraternally,
CHAS. W. CRISLER,
President, Seashore Divinity School.

NOTES ON THE DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Durant District Conference, which met in Durant, Miss., June 14-18, had a pleasant and profitable session. Our new presiding elder sat comfortably in the chair, and presided with ease, dignity, and efficiency. The business ran rapidly and smoothly, touching every department of our work. There was thoroughness and no haste—something out of the ordinary—everything had been wisely and skilfully planned beforehand, and the plan worked. The opening sermon was preached Wednesday evening by Rev. Chas. D. McGehee.

The conference met in the handsome new church that the Durant congregation has erected at a cost of $15,000, and has about paid for. Modern in all of its appointments, substantial and beautiful in its building and architecture, it is a house of worship and speaks well for the Durant people. The auditorium is spacious, beautiful, yet simple. In it one may speak and hear with all ease.

Among the beautiful windows are seven memorials to the following: Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Yancy Ramsey, Eleanor Weems McLellan, Mrs. Lily Smylie Shipman, J. D. Reed and wife, Celia Lockhart, Jas. and A. A. Weatherby, Mrs. Laura Harrington Murphy, Dr. John Murphy, and Wm. Allen Pope and his wife, Mary Pope.

The church is well equipped for a large, modern Sunday school. It has not only a lecture room and ample classrooms, but there is also a large room for an organized Bible class that will seat a hundred or more. And, best of all, Dr. Elmore has the class to put in the room.

The attendance was good, on the part of both laymen and preachers. Three preachers were absent. The reports of the pastors rang with hope and notes of progress. There was abundant evidence that the work of the district is going on well. The laymen wrought well, writing many of the excellent reports. The report of the District lay leader, Hon. J. Lem Seawright, was one of the features of the conference. The report of Dr. Elmore, for the Committee on Books and Periodicals, was ordered printed in the Advocate.

Helpful and timely sermons were preached by G. W. Gordon, J. T. Lewis, Robert Selby, and J. D. Simpson. The connectional men in attendance were B. P. Jaco, Robt. Selby, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, J. T. Lewis, H. M. Ellis, and J. B. Randolph. These men were given generous time and they delivered stirring messages, ably representing their several causes. Mrs. J. W. Conger, President of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, came and delighted the conference with an address that well represented the zeal and progress of this most efficient organization.

Wm. Robert Lott, of Kilmichael, and Wm. Alexious Langley, of Louisville, were granted license to preach. Brother Lott was recommended for admission on trial. Brother Langley will continue his studies in school. Rev. Chas. D. McGehee was recommended for local deacon's orders.

Hon. J. Lem Seawright was re-elected District Lay Leader. Dr. R. C. Elmore, J. Lem Seawright, R. E. Wilburn, and G. E. Ramsey were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference, with Dr. T. L. Wilburn and F. A. Howell as reserve delegates.

The Committee on the General State of the Church came forward with a full statistical report that was as full of interest as it was of facts and figures.

Number of congregations, 110, a gain of 5; number of church buildings, 105, a gain of 3; church property insured to one-fourth of its value, a gain of $10,000—10 charges carrying no insurance at all. Indebtedness at the beginning of the year, $7204, reduced to $2614. Repairs, during present year, to the amount of $3645—owing on these repairs only $73. A gain of 122 in membership and only 4 revivals held. Increase in pastors' salaries, $1951; 3 charges reporting no weekly prayer meeting; 3960 homes visited by the pastors; 45 boys and girls attending college from Methodist homes, and only 11 going to our church schools.

The good people of Durant were generous in their hospitality and untiring in their efforts to make pleasant the stay of the delegates and visitors in their midst. Brother T. M. Bradley is in high favor as pastor and is a host that looks well after the guest. The next district conference goes to Ackerman.

COLORED METHODIST CHURCH.

(Adopted by the Board of Church Extension at its Annual Meeting in Louisville, Kentucky, at the session Monday afternoon, May 8, 1916.)

We, your committee appointed to consider the appeal of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America made by the General Secretary of Church Extension, Rev. R. S. Stout, have thoroughly looked into the appeal, the same coming to us from that body of Colored Methodists that were members of our Church from 1844 up to 1870, when they were honorably set up and organized into a separate church under the direction of the General Conference of our Church by a committee of Bishops, ministers and laymen appointed by said General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, setting them apart, they having been loyal and faithful members of our Church.

We pledged them our hearty co-operation and assured them that if at any time they got in distress in their efforts to build suitable church houses and parsonages we would come to their rescue. Now that they are in distress, and, being our sons and daughters in Methodism and relying upon the promises made to them by us, they have come to us for help and we feel it our indispensable duty to help them.

(1) We beg to recommend that our Corresponding Secretary, Dr. W. F. McMurry, be and is hereby authorized to appeal to the congregations of our entire Church on behalf of our Colored Church for a donation to be used for them.

(2) That he be requested to urge the Christian Advocate and all others of our Church papers and magazines to get behind the appeal and insist on our churches to answer the crisis of our Colored Church.

(3) That we pray the Bishops to give their endorsement to the appeal in some suitable publication.

(4) That we do hereby give our endorsement to the General Secretary, R. S. Stout, and ask for him a hearing in our several Conferences and churches and that they be as liberal with him as possible.

(5) We recommend that our Secretary be and is hereby authorized to render assistance to the Church Extension work of our Colored Church as the law and his judgment will permit.

(6) We further recommend that it is the sense of our Board that we give more attention and publicity as to the relation between the two churches, urging our members and laymen to see to it as far as possible that the interest of our own Colored Church is cared for first, for this Church represents that membership that stood by us as true as steel in our darkest days, and in thousands of cases were the only ones at home to care for our loved ones when we were battling for what we believed to be right.

Now that God has blessed us, let us take care of our own true brother in black.

NOTICE.

The Louisiana Methodist Orphanage will be dedicated Friday, July 21, 1916. Brother Vaughan requests the Conference Board to sit on that occasion in joint session (at a called meeting) with the Board of Trustees. This is a great event. Every member who can should attend.

Fraternally,
C. C. WIER,
President Conference Board.

SEASHORE GHOSTS.

Mrs. George S. Brown.

We were spending the summer on the seashore, in a little Camping Ground on the Gulf of Mexico. The place was known as "Children's Paradise," for, whichever direction one looked, there could be seen merry groups of children, wading out on the sandbars, gathering shells, bathing in the water, rowing in the boats, or out, with net aud basket, catching crabs for the evening meal. On the beach, the nurses sat with the younger children, building huge houses of sand, or letting the clear white sand slip idly through their fingers.

In the evenings the older people would sit out on the benches under the trees and watch the unceasing lash of the billows, or perhaps, drawn hither by the contagious shrieks of laughter from the little ones, would wander up and down the beach. When darkness came many, loath to return to their tents, would linger and build a huge bonfire. The young people would feed the flames with the fat pine logs thrown up by the waves, and the older ones would roast oysters, and then sit around feasting and talking till a late hour.

One night the talk turned on ghosts, and some very weird tales were told, at which we all laughed merrily, having been brought up in healthy-minded families and knowing that a ghost was only a creation of fancy. Nevertheless, unaccountable as it is, we all know what an effect a weird tale told under cover of darkness produces in the stoutest-hearted. I, for one, felt very queer sensations. Not for worlds would I have acknowledged it to an earthly soul, but as I sped back to my tent I jumped at every sound and started at the shadows of the trees. If any one had said I was frightened, I would have denied it indignantly—but I had an indescribable sensation—one of those "it is not good for man to be alone" kind of feelings. I was more sorry than I would acknowledge, even to myself, to find every one had gone to bed ahead of me.

The little folks had spent the day gathering shells and had assorted them and stacked great banks of them on the shelves and in the corners, and then, worn out with play, had gone early to bed and were now sleeping the sweet, rosy sleep of health and happiness. Looking at them, lying there so peacefully, I had smiled at my shudderings, but, at the same time, I did not stop to crimp my hair or take any physical culture exercises. In a few moments' time I rejoiced to be safely in bed, with a bar tucked tightly all around me, and when the sheet was pulled way over my head I felt very brave indeed and was as soon as sound asleep as the children.

I do not know what time I was awakened by something falling from the dresser or rolling down the walls. "Rats!" I immediately concluded and rapped on the headboard of my bed. I knew I was mistaken when the noise kept up, for rats are easily frightened away. Plainly I could hear a stealthy creeping, creeping, toward my bed, and I sat up and pressed my face against the bar one moment, and then I'd hide under the cover the next. Still that tumbling, falling, and, worse than all, the creeping, creeping. No power could have induced me to get up and strike a match. I was glued to my bed. In vain I reasoned and argued with myself. My fears would not be calmed. The cold perspiration stood out all over me and I thought morning would never come.

After what seemed hours of torture, the first gray streaks of dawn appeared and I could see small white objects all around my floor. Yes they were certainly moving—and as the light grew brighter, I could see them hurrying and scurrying in every direction.

I looked more closely, and, as the truth dawned on me, my merry peal of laughter woke the youngsters and sent them scampering over the floor after their shells, which were scattered far and wide, having literally put forth legs and walked, for my seashore ghosts were nothing more nor less than—CONKS.

New Orleans, La.

A LITTLE SLAVE BOY.

Once upon a time, a great many years ago, there lived a little boy in a beautiful, far-away country. The boy might have been very unhappy, for he was hump-backed, and was a slave; but in spite of all his troubles he managed to pass the time cheerfully, making friends of cats and dogs and all sorts of wild creatures.

Little Aesop (for that was his name) loved his dumb friends so well that he used to make believe they could talk, aud as he grew older he told such interesting stories about them that even grown-up folks listened; and you may be sure he often had a group of children gathered about him, while he told them of the Lamb and the Wolf, the Fox and the Crow, and lots of other wise and merry stories of animals and birds.

At last Aesop's master was so pleased with his bright ways that he gave the boy his freedom. Aesop traveled through many lands, had many adventures, and died, so far as we know, at a good old age.

Now Aesop never wrote out his pretty stories, but other people remembered them and told them over and over, until somebody put them into a book, called "Aesop's Fables." One of the stories was about a funny race between the Hare and the Tortoise. Perhaps Aesop had been reading the Bible when he told it, and had found these words: "The race is not to the swift." Anyway, here is the story or fable.

A hare was once boasting of his sped, when a tortoise said: "Let's have a race." "Nonsense!" said the hare, scornfully. "You can't run!" "Try me and see," said the wise old tortoise. "Very well. The fox shall be umpire." Off dashed the hare, and was soon out of sight. He was so far ahead that presently he stopped for a nap. Meanwhile, the tortoise plodded steadily along, passed the sleeping hare, and crossed the goal just before his rival, who had awakened too late to win. Slow and sure is a good motto.—Christian Intelligencer.

Editorial

DATE OF MEETING CHANGED.

We are in receipt of the following telegram from Bishop E. E. Hoss: "Announce change of date of the call for the meeting of the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference to July 24." We infer that this meeting will be held in Shreveport, according to the Bishop's previous appointment.

A PERSONAL WORD.

The Nashville Christian Advocate is always one of the latest exchanges to reach our desk, usually arriving Saturday afternoon or Monday. This number of our paper was largely made up before the last issue of that publication came to our hand; hence Dr. Ivey's garbled and misleading strictures upon our editorial utterances are passed over this week. Due attention, however, will be paid them at an early date.

WORTH CAREFUL CONSIDERATION.

Do not fail to read Col. E. C. Reeves' able article on "Organic Union." He was the Private Secretary of President Andrew Johnson, and, besides being a devoted Methodist and a stainless Christian gentleman, he is one of the ablest lawyers in the South. In his paper we have a vigorous utterance from one who has both a great head and a great heart.

MILITARY TRAINING IN HIGH SCHOOLS.

A bill was passed at the late session of the Louisiana Legislature requiring that military training be given the male students in the high schools of this State. This measure, which was introduced and championed by Senator J. R. Domengaux, of Lafayette Parish, who was a soldier in the Spanish-American War, at first contemplated making this training obligatory in all the public schools of the commnwealth, beginning with the seventh grade; but the objection was made that most of the teachers of that grade are women and incapable of giving such instruction; so the bill was changed to apply to boys in the high schools.

It is clalmed that Louisiana is the pioneer State in this experiment. Whether it is a wise movement, we do not know. We have never been inclined to look with much favor upon the suggestion that universal military training should become a part of our public school system; but the recent effort to call out the State militia for service has been attended with such difficulties as to show that something more than we at present have in the way of military training is needed, and it may be that thus restricted to the boys in the high schools this enactment will answer a good purpose. This is a question, however, that time alone can definitely settle.

BISHOP McCONNELL ON OUR EPISCOPACY.

In addressing a body of Southern Methodist preachers at Conway, Arkansas, a few days ago, Bishop F. J. McConnell, of the Northern Methodist Church, is quoted in the press dispatches as having said: "Methodists in the North have evolved a Democratic episcopacy, while the South has favored an absolute College of Bishops."

Did Bishop McConnell correctly represent the character of our episcopacy in this statement? Is our College of Bishops indeed "absolute?" We scarcely think so. When, in the memorable debate over the division of the Methodist Church in 1844, Mr. L. L. Hamline, of Ohio, one of the ablest members of that memorable General Conference, was accused of having said that the powers of that body were "absolute," he vigorously denied having done so, adding: "I said they were 'supreme.' Absolute means not bound. This Conference is bound in all its powers, whether legislative, judicial, or executive, by constitutional restrictions." If this be a correct definition of the word "absolute" (and it is in accord with the definitions given in the lexicons), Bishop McConnell was very unfortunate in his use of the term "absolute" in referring to our episcopacy.

Our Bishops are under law, with clearly defined duties, for a proper exercise of which they are held to a rigid account. They are elected for life, as are the Bishops of the Church, North. Their power in appointing preachers is no more untrammeled than is that of the latter. The difference in the two episcopacies lies in their relations to the General Conferences: our Bishops are the guardians of the constitution of the Church to the extent that they have a qualified veto power, and that they may not be deposed by a mere majority vote of the General Conference. If they could be so removed from office, they would amount to little as guardians of the Church's constitution, for that body could then set them aside and put others holding its views in their places. This is a fact which should be carefully noted.

The Northern Bishops are held to be mere creatures of the General Conference, and the constitution of their Church is entirely at the mercy of that body. There is no check upon hasty legislation—no other tribunal to call a halt when the Restrictive Rules have been encroached upon. Their General Conference is much the same sort of an assembly that our Federal Congress would be without the existence of our United States Supreme Court. The weakness of such unbridled democracies is writ large in the history of the world. That a democracy of co-ordinate and rigbtly balanced powers, exercising a check upon each other, is a far better conservator of order, true liberty, and progress is attested by the marvelous history of the great American Republic—a history, in the light of which that of all other republics fades away into the dim and inglorious commonplace.

Ours is the historic episcopacy of Methodism—that for which Asbury, McKendree, and Soule stood. Bishop McConnell was right in speaking of the episcopacy of the Church, North, as being an evolvement. It was born of political expediency, in violation of the constitution of American Methodism. The fanatical type of abolitionism that begot it had little respect for the constitutions of either Churches or States.

Two other things we wish to say: (1) We wonder what would be thought of a Southern Bishop if he were invited to deliver a series of lectures at a Northern Methodist Bible School and he were to criticise adversely the form of episcopacy of that Church. If he has been correctly represented, this is not the first time that Bishop McConnell has done this.

2. We hope that the brethren who have been disposed to think that the Saratoga proposal, to have "one supreme General Conference" in the reorganized Methodist Church "under constitutional restrictions" is a hopeful concession, will carefully note the quotation we have made from Mr. Hamline's speech in 1844. As we stated in our very first utterance after the Saratoga enactment, that claim has always been made by the Northern brethren for their General Conference, even for the one that ripped American Methodism wide open. There is nothing new about it.

We suppose that some of our Southern Methodist brethren will now want to rise up and piously declare that we ought not to say these things in this blissful hour of union courtship. If so, we desire to say in advance that things have come to a pitiful state, if our episcopacy, in which, in addition to the great trio of Bishops named, Paine, Pierce, Winans, Marvin, McTyeire, Keener, Parker, and their illustrious compeers believed, may thus be misrepresented by a brother from the North, and a Southern Methodist editor may not speak in its defense.

A SHOT THAT HIIT THE MARK.

In these days when the atmosphere in Southern Methodism is so charged with seriousness and anxiety, the followiug unidentified story will probably be appreciated by some of our readers:

A colored preacher was vehemently denouncing the sins of his congregation. "Bredern an' sistern, Ah warns yo' 'gainst de heinous sin ob shootin' craps! Ah charges yo' 'gainst de black rascality ob liftin' pullets. But above all, bredern an' sistern, Ah, demolishes yo' 'gainst de crime ob melon stealin'."

A brother on the back seat made an odd sound with his lips, rose and snapped his fingers. Then he sat down agin with an abasbed look.

"Whufo', ma fren,'" said the parson sternly, "does yo' rar' up an' snap yo' fingers when Ah speaks ob melon stealin'?"

"Yo' jes remin's me, pahson," the man in the back seat answered meekly, "wha' Ah lef' mah knife."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop Hoss will dedicate the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston Friday of this week, and will preach in Shreveport next Sunday. He continues to be one of the most active workers in Southern Methodism.

Rev. R. C. Elliott, one of our Mexican missionaries, passed through New Orleans Wednesday of last week, en route to Texas. He favored the Advocate office with a call, but the Editor, not being in, missed the pleasure of seeing him.

Mr. Edmond Taylor and Mr. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, Miss., left this week for an extended trip to the Pacific Coast. They will be gone until about September 1. Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Barbee will spend the remainder of the summer in Colorado.

Rev. H. W. May, who is rounding out his fourth year on the Alexandria District, has been abundant in labors and has witnessed a gratifying growth of the Church in the territory under his supervision. He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

Rev. A. H. Williams, of Strongs, Miss., had a vigorous article on the question of Methodist union in the last number of the Nashville Christian Advocate. He feels a keen interest in this great issue, as every Methodist preacher and layman ought to do.

The reports were highly encouraging at the late session of the Baton Rouge District Conerence, which met in the hospitable town of Clinton. Brother Bowman is a leader whose watchword is "progress," and he has associated with him a fine corps of workers.

Rev. N. B. Harmon, of Magnolia, Miss., attended a meeting of the Headquarters Committee of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League at Jackson on July 13. Brother Harmon is a live wire when it comes to fighting the rum traffic, as he also is in most other respects.

In a letter to our office, Brother J. M. Moore, of Greenwood, La., says: "Brother Rousseaux, our pastor, is a very zealous worker. He is deeply interested in his charge. He and his wife stand well with the people and there is a career of large usefulness before them."

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few weeks: Rev. J. R. James, Abbeville, Miss., 2; Rev. W. H. Lane, Foxworth, Miss.,

2; Rev. L. H. Floyd, Smithville, Miss., 4; Rev. J. E. Stephens, Coahoma, Miss., 2.

Writing on July 11, Rev. H. T. Gaines, of Jacksonville, Fla., said: "I go in a few days to help Rev. W. W. Jones in a meeting at Lula, Miss." Brother Gaines will not feel like a stranger when he reaches North Mississippi, where he wrought efficiently in the Master's service for a number of years, and where he has many friends.

Dr. George S. Sexton, of Shreveport, La., writes: "On next Sunday, July 23, Bishop Hoss will dedicate our First Church at this place. An invitation has been extended to all former pastors to be present, and you, Mr. Editor, are invited to be present and rejoice with us because the debt on this great plant has been entirely paid."

Rev. J. M. Alford writes that he is in a meeting at Winnsboro, La., with Rev. H. B. Thomason, our pastor there, who is in fine favor with his flock. At the end of the first week 30 members were received, and when it was suggested that the services be closed, the people would not hear to it; so they will likely be continued through this week.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, Miss., writes: "Bishop Murrah will dedicate our church at Knoxo, Miss., on the fifth Sunday of this month, July 30. Dinner will be served on the ground, and Dr. I. W. Cooper, our presiding elder, will preach at 3 p. m. At 8 o'clock that evening Bishop Murrah will preach at Tylertown. We are expecting a great day."

Rev. W. V. Shearer, of Shannon, Miss., in a personal note to the Editor, says: "The Aberdeen District Conference, which met at Vardaman, Miss., closed last night (June 13) with things at high tide spiritually. We had a most delightful and profitable time." The presiding elder of this district, Rev. J. W. Bell, is in his fourth year and is highly esteemed by the brethren.

Rev. W. I. White, pastor of the Iuka (Miss.) Circuit, sends us several subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we extend to him our thanks. He has lately had a good meeting at Harmony Church, one of his appointments, in which the preaching was done by Rev. W. C. Carlisle, of Guntown, Miss. What he has to say concerning this season of spiritual refreshing will be published next week.

From Escatawpa, Miss., Rev. R. T. Pickett writes as follows: "There was great destruction here and in the surrounding country from the great storm on July 5. Crops, fences, out-buildings, and a few residences suffered severely. We had no mail for several days. Our work here is moving on fairly well. We recently had a good meeting at Caswell Springs, where I was assisted by Rev. G. W. Huff."

Miss Lizzie Horn, of Grenada, Miss., writes: "The meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Holly Springs District will be held at Oxford, Miss., July 24 and 25. An interesting program has been prepared. Several Conference officers will be present. All auxiliaries in the district are urged to send good delegations. Those places where the woman's work is not organized are cordially invited to send representatives."

Rev. C. A. Parks, pastor of the Kosciusko (Miss.) Circuit, brings us under obligations to him for a club of 13 subscriptions. Referring to his charge, this worthy pastor says: "Our prospects for a great year are growing brighter all the time. We have a Sunday school at every church, four of them having been organized this year. We have three prayer meetings, which meet regularly, with good results. This charge is headed upward."

Rev. Martin Hebert, superintendent of our French Mission at Houma, La., was in New Orleans last Thursday and graciously looked in on us in our sanctum. He had accompanied Rev. A. D. Martin, of our Lafourche Mission, to the city, who came seeking medical treatment. Brother Martin, when we last heard from him, was quietly resting in ward 69 at the Charity Hospital. He was not considered dangerously ill and was thought to be doing well.

Rev. Hilary Westbrook, of Meridian, Miss., sends us a club of 5 subscriptions, and appends in his letter the following note: "Our work is progressing well at Seventh Avenue. Our congregations are fine. Last Sunday (July 9) was a great day with us. We had three bright conversions. We have had a total of 33 conversions since Conference and 39 names have been added to our membership roll. I am doing my best to reach my people with the Gospel of my Lord."

Dr. I. W. Cooper dedicated our new church at Morton, Miss., on Sunday, July 9. This structure is said to be comfortable and attractive, being well screened with wire gauze. Rev. C. M. Crossley, the pastor, is popular with his people and is doing well in his work. Rev. W. L. Linfield, the highly esteemed presiding elder of the Newton District, was present on this interesting occasion. One who is a good judge of what a "beloved" ought to be states that Brother Linfield is magnifying that responsible office.

Three persons have recently been recommended for license to preach within the bounds of the Brookhaven (Miss.) District, of which Dr. I. W. Cooper is the popular presiding elder. One of these is Mr. Victor Clifford, a son of Rev. T. B. Clifford, who is a graduate of Millsaps and who has been teaching at McComb City for the past three years. The other two are Brother Enoch King, of Auburn, Miss., and Brother D. B. Rollins of Meadville. The first two of these brethren expect to enter the Mississippi Conference on trial this fall.

We received a few days since a pleasant note from Rev. N. G. Augustus, our scholarly pastor at Prescott, Ark., who formerly was a much esteemed member of the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Augustus states that he is pleasantly situated and that his work is progressing encouragingly. Enclosed in his letter was a neat card, from which we take the following: "N. G. Augustus, Jr., born June 24, 1916; weight, 7 1-2 pounds." We extend congratulations to the happy parents and pray Heaven's richest blessings on the little one."

BISHOP MURRAH'S PORTRAIT.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have notified Mr. W. M. Buie, with whom I was appointed to procure an oil portrait of Bishop W. B. Murrah for Millsaps College, that I shall be away from home until about September 1. And I shall now lay another task upon your already overburdened shoulders by requesting you to represent me during my absence by co-operating with Mr. Buie in this most laudable undertaking. As a matter of course, the portrait will be secured without difficulty, but it will not secure itself—somebody must look after it. I hope that you and Mr. Buie will address yourselves to the matter without delay and that I shall find it closed up when I return.

Greenville, Miss. J. D. BARBEE.

A VOICE FROM OKLAHOMA.

Dear Doctor Meek: This is just to state that you are conducting the editorial department of the old home organ so nearly to my notion that I am persuaded to just refrain from taking up the reins of that responsible position and allow you to continue where you are. Your timely defense of Bishop Kilgo's article and position on the Lenten machinery that clangs with the spectacular metal—brass—of Romanism which is being foisted on Southern Methodism (my, how I love the name!) was so entirely satisfactory to me that I want to endorse your position without reservation. Don't fear, as you do not, that you will offend the Lord in repudiating this fad that is being pushed forward by a few would-be leaders who grasp at any straw plan to get in the limelight. Personally, it is about all I can do to keep from becoming vitriolic concerning this aping of Romanism. I am a Protestant and rejoice in the rejection of the fallacies of Rome by our fathers. If I were seeking a specially holy season in which to conduct a revival, I should not follow Rome, but rather embrace the forty days the Lord was on earth after the resurrection and include Pentecost, as well as Passion week. St. Paul would say: "Ye observe days and months and years; I am afraid of you lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain." (Gal. 4:10-11.) The traditions of men can never take the place of the commandments of God. The time-honored and Scriptural leadership of the Holy Spirit will adjust the matters of time, method and means.

Then, that noble and manly deliverance concerning unauthorized advocates of hasty union with the Methodist Episcopal Church by our Church is worthy of all commendation. I am certain our representatives on the Commission will take care of the position of Southern Methodism. How a man could know all the facts and history and still acquiesce in the scenes at Saratoga Springs is beyond my power of conception! The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church did absolutely nothing in regard to the plan of union proposed by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, except to turn a trick and shunt off on another expensive commission the futile effort to reconcile radical differences that have always separated the two Churches since 1811, and for decades before, since it was these differences that divided the one Church into two. These differences are as real to-day as ever. They are not vital to Christianity as such, but are vital to justice and the right of a great section of American Methodism to think and feel as it pleases regarding its particular form of ecclesiasticism.

It is plain the M. E. Church does not intend to recede from its position that the General Conference shall be the sole judge and administrator of its own acts. Either we are Episcopal Methodists or we are not. A modified Episcopacy would suit me, if it is the mind of the Church after due deliberation and prayer; but if our system is to remain the powerfully organized and balanced system it has before proven itself, then the executive and administrative branches must be regarded as well as the legislative. Mutual concessions may be able to heal all our differences, but we had just as well look at things squarely and recognize that there will certainly need to be concessions in deed and in earnest before we relinquish our birthright. Our condition is far better as it is than to be torn in shreds by futile efforts at union. Witness the pitiable muddle the Northern Presbyterian Church and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church made of it.

To my way of thinking, there is nothing before the churches to discuss by a Joint Commission, since the plan proposed by the M. E. Church, South, has been politely side-tracked, although that plan had the weight of one Joint Commission of godly men from both sides behind it. Why or how men can lose their heads and go wild with enthusiasm and be led into howling for that transaction at Saratoga Springs puzzles me. May our Heavenly Father guide us at this important time!

Mrs. MARY BARNETT was born in Lincoln Parish, La., on August 9, 1843, and died in Newport, Clay County, Texas, on January 16, 1916. She leaves six children to mourn their loss. Though she went to meet her loving Savior and her husband, and two children who were waiting in the beautiful home beyond, to be once more with their dear mother; she was so precious to those left behind that they will sorely miss her and cannot but be sad because of her departure. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of sixteen, and lived a consistent Christian to the end of her life. She had several strokes of paralysis in her declining years and always bore them with patience. Her children, although all were married, were devoted to her, and did all they could to make her life happy and pleasant to the end. They can well say, "Farewell, mother, but only for a while, for we will join you soon on that blissful shore, where parting and tears are no more." A loving friend,

Mrs. M. E. YOUNGBLOOD.
Noble, La.

Mrs. ZERA OSBORN, wife of Wall Osborn and daughter of Mrs. M. J. Crews, was born on March 28, 1897, and died on March 7, 1916. Mrs. Osborn united with the M. E. Church, South, at the age of 16, and was always present at its services and ready to work for her Master. It was her habit to carry a bright face and pleasant words with her. She always wanted to be a help to somebody. Her home life was beautiful. She was patient and cheerful and strove to make home as pleasant as she could for her husband. She had a very quiet and smooth temper. Her disposition enabled her to gain friends wherever she went. The associates of her girlhood days loved her and grieved over her death. I had known Mrs. Osborn for a little more than a year, and I found her to be a true Christian in every sense of the word. I feel that she is at rest in the home of the faithful. Her illness lasted for several weeks; however, amid her sickness she never complained, but had a smile for every one that came into her room. Besides her husband, she leaves a little girl a few weeks old, a mother, three sisters, and three brothers to mourn their loss. May God's Holy Spirit comfort and sustain the bereaved and bring them at last to a happy reunion in the Father's house!

S. C. MOODY.

Mrs. LUCINDA A. JONES (nee Harrington) was born on May 8, 1826, and was united in marriage to M. M. Jones on April 29, 1847. Two sons, both living in Mississippi, are left to mourn her departure. They are Rev. T. A. Jones, a local Methodist preacher of Potts Camp, and J. L. Jones, who at present is Sunday school superintendent and a steward in the church which the writer serves. Sister Jones was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1847, and to this Church she clung tenaciously for sixty-nine long years. She was a true companion, a devoted mother, a kind friend, a good neighbor, and a faithful Christian. Her home was always open to the servant of God. Many a tired and worn preacher has found a warm reception in her hospitable home. Her illness, aside from the weight of years, was of short duration. Her soul left her body on June 9, 1916, for realms of bliss. She trod the soil of earth for 90 years, 1 month and 1 day. The writer, assisted by Rev. J. L. Nabors, of Potts Camp, conducted the funeral service and laid her body in a new-made grave in the Potts Camp Cemetery, to await the trumpet of God. We sum up her life in the words, "She kept the faith."

"She has but dropped her robe of clay
To put her shining raiment on;
She has not wandered far away—
She is not lost or gone."

Her pastor, W. C. BEASLEY.

Mrs. CORINNE COBB CLIFTON, youngest child of Dr. P. B. and Eliza Boykin Cobb, was born at Mifflin, Henderson County, Tenn., April 13, 1850; married Alfred Benjamin Clifton on December 18, 1867, and died at Hernando, De Soto County, Miss., at 4:30 a. m., on March 29, 1916; and was buried at Baker's Chapel, De Soto County, Miss., on March 30, at 10 a. m. She professed religion and joined the Church in early youth.

I met Sister Corinne Cobb Clifton on my first work, Lewisburg Circuit, North Mississippi Conference. She lived two miles north of Lewisburg in a comfortable home, surrounded with a beautiful grove of oaks. Her bright, smiling face and warm handgrip to her young pastor made an indelible impression upon his mind. I met her time and again after this, and she was the same noble woman, such as Paul met on his first missionary rounds, who ever afterwards welcomed him in the name of their Christ.

Back of Sister Clifton's bright, smiling countenance was the Christ, and from His life within emanated the light that shone in her face: for the time element in the formation of character proves what is within. "Out of the heart are the issues of life"—as every force in nature carries with it its atmosphere, so does every man and woman. The atmosphere of Sister Clifton's home was pure and congenial because of her abiding presence in it; there her husband and children found comfort and pleasure; she made it a resort for them where they could rest, be refreshed and strengthened for the duties of life. The Church was her beloved place as long as her health permitted. The same spiritual atmosphere she carried there; in fact, she let her light shine wherever she went.

Sister Clifton was a refined, cultured, and modest woman of the true Southern type. Only pure thoughts suggest themselves to the mind while in conversation with her kind. She was an ideal wife and mother to her husband and children.

To the bereft loved ones left behind—husband, two daughters, and son-in-law—permit me to say, only God can ease and calm the disturbed soul amidst such sorrows of life. To Him I commend you, and pray that there may be another family reunion some day; a day which is not followed by night, and a coming together never to be separated one from the other.

I OWE MY HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Washington Park, Ill.—"I am the mother of four children and have suffered with female trouble, backache, nervous spells and the blues. My children's loud talking and romping would make me so nervous I could just tear everything to pieces and I would ache all over and feel so sick that I would not want anyone to talk to me at times. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills restored me to health and I want to thank you for the good they have done me. I have had quite a bit of trouble and worry but it does not affect my youthful looks. My friends say 'Why do you look so young and well?' I owe it all to the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. ROBT. STOPIEL, Moore Avenue, Washington Park, Illinois.

We wish every woman who suffers from female troubles, nervousness, backache or the blues could see the letters written by women made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The Eighth Session of the Seashore Divinity School convened on the evening of June 27 at 8 p. m. Rev. Robt. Selby, president, presided, opening the service with song and prayer.

Rev. H. H. McNeil, Dean of the Divinity School, was gladly welcomed. He outlined the course of study and class hours. President Selby made an address touching upon the successful record of the Divinity School and the program of the session. The speaker of the evening, Rev. H. M. DuBose, was introduced and received with applause.

The first lecture of this eminent divine was on "The Theology of St. Paul." Especially telling was the description of the stoning of Stephen, the rushing mob, the coming on the scene of Paul, the lofty student of Law, clothed in the paraphernalia of pomp (who until then had never deigned to mingle with the crowd), his witnessing of the appalling death of Stephen, which lingered with him until he heard the voice saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutes thou me?" The theology of St. Paul was sumed up as being the theology of the Methodist Church.

Dr. DuBose lectured every morning at 8 a. m. and at 8 p. m. The subjects of his discourses were: "The Consciousness of Jesus;" "Armageddon the Issues of the War;" "Francis Asbury," and "America and Americans."

At 11 a. m., Rev. Frank Seay, B.D., Professor of New Testament Greek in the Methodist University, at Dallas, Texas, held fourth during the entire session. His first lecture, "Bible History and Philosophy," was replete with learning, and gave a clear conception of Bible history as connected with philosophy.

The lecture on "The History of the World's Literature and Hebrew Scholarship" brought his listeners in touch with all the famous ancient and modern historical and fiction writers of the world. Comments were made upon the change in the modes of education. "The Extension of Philosophy and Bible History" made clear the further development—the growth of sin—and redemption. This lecture followed the one on "Philosophy of Human Environment."

The discourse on the poetical Book of Job, dealing with (1) the attitude of the wife of Job; (2) the attitude of Job's friends; and (3) Job's attitude in trying to reach out for the new—was very fine. On Sunday morning an impressive love feast was held at 9 a. m., with Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir in the pulpit. Afterward many rich experiences were given by the ministers and lay members present. During the service a young thrush, which had flown into the dome of the tabernacle, plaintively lamented its captivity. Ere dismissed, Dr. DuBose arose and repeated the line, "Flee as a bird to your mountain," and made a plea for the bird's release. Mr. Daniels gave assurance that the little bird would soon be liberated. At 11 a. m. Rev. Frank Seay delivered the sermon. Taking for his text, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall inherit the earth," he set forth a manly, reasonable plea that peace should be maintained by the American Nation.

After Dr. DuBose left, Rev. Hounshell, a missionary to Korea, lectured at 8 a. m. and at 8:30 p. m., telling of the needs of the missionaries in Korea and the zeal displayed by the converts to Christianity.

The weather had been ideal until Wednesday morning when the storm broke on the horizon; and, as the rain fell in torrents, the north wind came roaring in, smothering the voices. So, silently the Seashore Divinity School closed amid the applause of the elements. Later, like boys let loose from school, the divinity students were seen dashing across the campus "hot-footing" it for dinner and supper and back again to Wesley Hall, and in that safe refuge they laughed and talked. As darkness fell, they sang Gospel songs, undisturbed by the howling wind, the falling rain, branches of trees, and the sound of water on the beach.

By nightfall Biloxi was cut off from the world. The next day the storm continued in full force, but on Friday at 12 a. m. the wind lulled, the sun peered from beneath the clouds and soon shone out triumphantly. When it was heard that the belated excursion train would leave for New Orleans all was bustle and excitement. The happy divinity scholars and teachers were seen hurrying to the Seashore Campground station in all haste, for fear they would be left over.

Now the weather is serenely beautiful, and every one is looking forward to an old-fashioned camp meeting which will begin soon, as it has for 44 years.

AN ERROR.

Dear Advocate: I notice in the report of the Treasurer of the Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference that no account is given of $20 from the Paris Circuit, which was paid early in the year. This $20 was first credited to the Prairie charge by mistake. I have a receipt for it, and we should have been credited with $27 for Home Missions, instead of $7. Please publish this statement.

Don't Let a Cold Get a Good Start

The way to check a cold is to fight it from the first. Even the worst maladies often are easily conquered if attacked early enough. Colds may lead to asthma, bronchial troubles and pulmonary affections. In the treatment of these one of the first needs is to build up body resistance.

Eckman's Alterative often has assisted in such upbuilding. As a treatment for the troubles named, it has been used for more than twenty years. And in many instances it has effected lasting relief.

As with any other medicine, it should be regarded only as a first aid to right care and hygienic living—and a safe one. For it contains no narcotics, opiates or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Snperintendents:

A short while since I sent you a letter asking if the Sunday schools would furnish a cutter and help build a barn for the Orphanage. We have had some responses, but have not received one-half enough to buy the cutter. This is needed, and needed badly.

Please bring the matter before your schools and send a contribution, no matter how small, or how large. Some schools have responded liberally, and I am sure all of our Sunday school people will be glad to have a part in this work for the orphans.

Yours truly,

WHITWORTH COLLEGE A GREAT INSTITUTION

FACULTY EXCEEDINGLY STRONG — FRIENDS ENTHUSIASTIC

Fifty-eighth Session Opens Thirteenth of September

When the doors of Whitworth College are opened on September 13 the President expects to enroll the largest student body in the history of the school. Prospects are most gratifying. This prospective increase is due in a large measure to the improved financial conditions of the country, but in a still larger measure to the wonderful opportunities which Whitworth offers to young ladies. The course of study is on a par with that of an A grade school. Graduates are not required to take an examination to teach in Louisiana; matters are being adjusted to extend this privilege to those who teach in Mississippi. Whitworth College is a STANDARD school. Each department is equipped with well trained teachers. Extensive improvements have been made, and no school in the South is more favorable to the health of the student body than is this institution.

One other feature of this great school is the wonderful enthusiasm that is back of these progressive steps. Many of the ministerial friends and alumnae are alive to the interests of the college, having cheerfully responded to all requests made of them. With all these forces cooperating for the growth of the school, it is but natural that Whitworth College occupies a prominent place in the educational world.

The first consideration in selecting a college ought to be the training and experience of the instructors. The friends of Whitworth College are requested to note the equipment of the following faculty:

Nashville, Tenn., February 4, 1915.

"To whom it may concern:

"In choosing the school for the boy, one should FIRST consider the man at the head of the school, afterwards the curriculum. The curriculum of Massey School stands for mental growth; the man at the head writes himself on the boy's character. Massey School represents all that is to be desired on both counts.

DURANT DISTRICT MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Durant District held its annual meeting in Ackerman, June 27 and 28, with 30 delegates and visitors present. The District Secretary, Miss Elie Willingham, presided, and had arranged a most interesting and instructive program.

We were fortunate indeed in having four of the Conference officers with us: Mesdames Conger, Wilburn, Woodward and Baker. These officers held very instructive institutes in every department of the work, and their messages were an inspiration to the delegates. Good reports were given by all of the delegates of the work being done in their societies.

The hospitality of the Ackerman people is unsurpassed. Each one at this meeting declared her home the very best. Brother McGehee, the pastor, was untiring in his efforts to add to the pleasure and comfort of the delegates and visitors.

The meeting closed on Wednesday night with a most interesting service, the principal feature of which was a splendid address by Mrs. J. W. Conger, of Vaiden, Conference President. The next meeting will be held in Mathiston.

Supt. of Publicity.

A MESSAGE TO THE FIRST VICE PRESIDENTS OF LOUISIANA.

Dear First Vice Presidents:

We are closing our second quarter's work of 1916 and I don't know yet the result of our effort for the Master in April, May and June. Each quarter I will give you a report of the previous quarter's work.

Report of first quarter's work 1916: Y. P. M. S., 13 auxiliaries out of 25 reported to Mrs. J. J. Holmes, our State Treasurer, 16 auxiliaries reported to their First Vice President. Dues for first quarter, $35.20; pledge, $18.70; local work, $88.75. Mansfield was the first Y. P. M. S. to report to me the first quarter—who will be first this quarter? Minden, Crowley, and Mansfield are on the Honor Roll. Study your "Standard of Excellence" and work for the Honor Roll next quarter. Remember we have pledged $100 for our Y. P. M. S. in Louisiana, and only $18.70 has been paid. Let us engrave on our hearts this little verse:

"He is counting on you—
On a love that will share
In his burden of prayer
For the souls he has bought
With his life-blood and sought,
Through his sorrow and pain,
To win home again.
He is counting on you;
If you fail Him.
What then?"

When the report blanks come to you, fill them out at once and send to me, your District Secretary and State Treasurer. Send a report, if you can only fill out two or three items.

Jena, Grand Cane, Coushatta, Campti, Ruston Orphanage, and Second Church, New Orleans, are my new auxiliaries for first quarter. Lake Providence, Alexandria, and Dubach are the new young people's auxiliaries for second quarter, ending June 30, 1916. There may be more, but I have heard from only three. Watch out for Lake Providence! They have a live Y. P. M. S. and are planning to do great things.

Dear First Vice Presidents and Young People, here is a little story for you to ponder over—let it sink into your hearts:

"If you were a heathen girl and knew that somewhere there was a country called 'America,' that the people claimed to have a better religion than yours, that they claimed to have a God of love and of power, and some one had come to your country to tell you about him; you had listened to the story and been thrilled by its sweetness and power; you felt that here was a God that loved you, that his followers were different from the followers of your gods; the missionary told you that this Jesus died for you and asked if you would not accept him; but while you thought and hesitated, it was all so new, you saw the missionary grow pale and thin and her step languid, and you knew that it was because she was working too hard. You saw her overcrowded school and often saw tears in her eyes as she told the children who begged to come that there was no room. You knew that she had sent back word to America months and months before that a larger school building and another missionary were needed, but there was no response to the appeal. You saw her growing weaker and weaker, and it made you so sorry, for you loved her. Had she not brought more comfort into your life than you had ever known? Then you saw her go back to America, just a shadow of her former self, and the station left alone. What would YOU think if you were that heathen girl? Would you doubt the power and love of America's God? Would you come to feel that he was no better than your gods after all?"

What is our motto? Yes—"Loyalty." We are not loyal if we do not help to uplift the boys and girls in our home and foreign lands. Won't you help to cast out this doubt in the heathen girl's heart?

The Master wants you!

Lovingly,
Mrs. W. T. CUNNINGHAM,
First Vice President.
Natchitoches, La.

Astonishing Power of Iron to Give Strength to Broken Down Nervous People

Physician Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate Folk 200 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a well known Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue, and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all druggists.

The Reasons Are Reasonable, And Sweet Dreams Has Become The One Standard Mosquito Remedy.

Its efficiency has made it the standard and its efficiency will keep it the standard—its efficiency is a feature that can't be questioned.

Sweet Dreams has stood the criticism, and Sweet Dreams has stood the test.

Sweet Dreams withstood 'em both and that's just why Sweet Dreams became the standard.

A mosquito remedy that is as good as Sweet Dreams is remarkably fine—but why not Sweet Dreams in the beginning?

Your dealer has the standard.

Double strength; just a quarter; every store; every town.

FROM THE "COMMISSIONER."

The spirit of chivalry is in the air; the sound of the fife and drum recall the couplet, "Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who to himself has never said, this is my own, my native land?" While I write these lines, there is passing by my door, with drums and banners and martial tread, 110 young men — the flower of our community—to take train for Jackson, where are being mobilized the troops of our State, preparatory to orders from the government to move toward Mexico. This company bears the honored name of the Warren Light Artillery, successors to the same name of 1861 and carrying practically the same number of volunteers.

What a change since those unhappy days—then it was for States' rights; now it is for the honor of the United States. While it can not be said there was "dearth of woman's tears" at the parting, it was thrilling to note, here and there, a mother kiss her boy good-by and cheer him on to duty. Another company is fast recruiting and only a few days will have passed before this historic city will offer another to the authorities for service. As is doubtless the case in other sections of the South, some of the ranking officers in these companies are the grandsons of Mississippi's most gallant Confederate leaders.

A notable gathering has visited our city since my last—the National Baptist Sunday School Congress, an organization of the negro Baptists, which was represented by many intelligent people of that Church. It was estimated that there were approximately a thousand delegates in attendance, and many of the papers and addresses were of high order—full of thought and suggestions. One feature of the papers, which I heard struck me forcibly, the stress laid upon the "new birth" as an essential to the office of superintendent and the work of a teacher.

He who says the negro has made no advance in learning since his freedom has himself lived in the shadow of darkness; and he who would deny him the right to all that education and Christianity can do for him is sorely lacking in the spirit of philanthropy, as well as in that wisdom which looks to the better citizenship of our Southland.

By appointment the Elder came, preaching at the evening hour and holding quarterly conference on June 19. This marks chronologically one-half of the year, and the stewards reported about as last year at this third conference. Our Sunday school superintendent was enthusiastic in his report of increased zeal in that department. That our Elder really loves to preach, and that he preaches a "good gospel," as our lamented Bishop Galloway was wont to say, there is no doubt.

The Elder reports well from Wells, whose quarterly conference he had just held. One steward on the circuit proposed to those at the other churches to pay up quarterly, which has resulted in putting Oak Ridge in a class all by herself in the payment of the pastor's salary, and one-half the year finds the circuit 50 per cent up. If Oak Ridge can do that, I am justified in saying that any charge in the Conference can do as well—another "verbum sat." Roberts keeps busy hunting up the waste places and playing the role of Philip. Our city has been honored by a visit from our nestor, Rev. H. P. Lewis, who, with his wife, has spent some days visiting friends and relatives here. Sister Lewis is a representative of the Gibson family, which has played such a conspicuous part in Methodism in Warren County, and, as Miss Lou Gibson, will be recalled by some for her hospitality and hearty welcome to the itinerant in the days agone.

Drs. Chapman and O'Neill gave us a pleasant call early this week. O'Neil is as long as ever, and Chapman is longing for further light, he says, and to that end is planning a trip to Boston in search of the same. But when he confessed to one sermon two hours long and another approaching that length, to the people I felt like saying:

Oh, where shall rest be found,
Rest for the weary soul;
'Twere vain the ocean depths to sound.
So we'll send him to the pole.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

FROM A FRIEND.

Dear Doctor Meek: I enjoy the weekly visits of our great and good paper. I have two sons who are members of the Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. H. Grice and Rev. P. H. Grice, The younger is an undergraduate. He had the misfortune to get his leg broken in a buggy with a runaway horse. The accident happened 2 years ago, but the injured limb has never healed. I ask you to pray that God may heal his wound and that he may do great good for the Master. He has spent some time in the sanitarium this year. I saw mention made of him in your paper some time ago. My children are all members of the Methodist Church. I think your paper grows. I am sixty-nine years old, and as I review the past I recall many good things that I have gotten from the Advocate, and up to this good day I find it yielding more fruit and better fruit. May God bless you in your good work and crown every effort with success! Mrs. E. V. GRICE.

SHREVEPORT NOTES.

By Rev. J. T. Reames.

Shreveport Methodism is constantly on the advance, seizing every opportunity for progress, both in the material and spiritual sphere. First Church and its pastor are wide awake, and while they have held no special revival services, the church interests are well cared for.

Noel Memorial has recently closed a gracious revival which resulted in the upbuilding of the membership and in increasing the number of names on the register. Brother Klein was earnest and painstaking in his work and, while I cannot go into details, suffice it to say the meeting was a great success.

Texas Avenue congregation has also had a great meeting, and as a result all church interests are moving along with increased momentum, and the pastor counts on having a good report for next November. The church exterior has recently been dressed in a coat of white paint.

Things are moving along well at Cedar Grove—that charge having received great impetus from the revival held there some time ago. Queensborough is now in better shape for service than at any time in the past. Brother Bozeman did some of the greatest Bible preaching to this congregation that I have ever heard. I have heard men from the Episcopal College on down, and I do not hesitate to say he is one of the plainest and most Scriptural preachers I have ever listened to. Queensborough was fortunate indeed in securing the services of this modest, unassuming, consecrated servant of God. I would that other Shreveport churches could get him for meetings.

A PROSPEROUS SCHOOL.

The Bible Teachers Training School of New York on July 1 secured from the Board of Regents an amendment to its charter, by virtue of which "suitable degrees of the University of the State of New York will be conferred upon the graduates of the school who, in the judgment of the Regents, shall fully earn the same." The authority to secure for its graduates appropriate degrees will give the School a new place in academic circles. It will also attract a large number of college graduates as students.

Even without this academic recognition the School has numbered among its students many college men and women. Although in but its sixteenth year, its former students, numbering 2531, represent 349 colleges, universities, and seminaries.

Graduates of the School of Theology of the Bible Teachers Training School, are in the ministry of the Baptist, Congregational, Lutheran, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal, Reformed Episcopal, United Evangelical, and United Presbyterian Churches.

The summer term, which is held from the middle of June to the first of August, is becoming increasingly popular with ministers, theological students, and other college men and women who cannot attend the regular sessions of the School during the academic year. The present summer term is the most successful thus far conducted.

Boils Disappear.

Away back in 1820 a North Carolina physician compounded an ointment for treating boils and other affections of the skin. So successful did this preparation work that its fame soon spread. To-day it will be found in a vast number of homes. If you suffer from boils, carbuncles or other skin eruptions, ask your druggist for a 25c box of Gray's Ointment. It is also an effective protection against blood poison resulting from abrasions of the skin, cuts, sores, bruises, burns, etc. If your druggist does not sell Gray's Ointment, send us his name and we will send you a generous FREE sample postpaid. Address W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

DR. IVEY'S ARRAIGNMENT.

The following utterance appeared as an editorial in the Nashville Christian Advocate of July 14:

"We be Brethren."

The editor of the Christian Advocate returned from the Saratoga General Conference in a very hopeful state of mind with reference to the future of the unification of the Methodisms which had been so strongly indorsed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, through the General Conference at Oklahoma City. He was very hopeful in spite of the fact that he saw in the Saratoga resolutions some things which he felt the Southern Church would not and could not accept without fundamental modifications. He returned to Nashville believing that the question of Methodist unification indorsed at Oklahoma City and partly accepted at Saratoga would have an unobstructed road to travel by way of unanimous encouragement from the Southern Church, by way of a sound and conservative consideration by a joint commission, and later by the General Conference, and finally by way of submission to the Annual Conferences. His idea was that there would be an open way either for the Methodisms to agree, if possible, on a final plan of unification or, like brethren, to agree to disagree. He gave the Saratoga resolutions a more careful study; and as was his right and duty as editor of the official organ of his Church, he at once expressed himself editorially on the great question and tried to show in a general way the status and import, as he saw it, of the Saratoga resolutions.

In that editorial he pointed out that even then the spirit of Methodist unification had much to accomplish; that haste in bringing it about should be deprecated; that whatever plan might be adopted, it would protect the smaller bodies and give perfect autonomy to each jurisdictional Conference; that while much suggested by the Oklahoma Conference had been accepted by the Saratoga Conference, the main battle to be fought would be over the General Conference provision; that in all probability the "lion in the way" in the form of that General Conference "supremacy question" would fail to materialize, our idea and belief being that our Northern brethren, in spite of the wording of their suggestion on that point, were not opposed to the eighth resolution in the report of the Joint Commission and would ratify it in joint council; that the Northern brethren were sincere in their desire for unification; that we could go forward hopefully in the further prosecution of the scheme; that we should trust one another; and that if Christ should be allowed to have his way the picture of a reunited Methodism will become a reality in God's own good time.

Before this first editorial had reached our readers there had arisen a very heated discussion, in which the motives of the Saratoga Conference were impugned, in which the resolutions were declared a makeshift, and in which there was strong emphasis laid upon so-called impossibilities demanded of Southern Methodism. We thought that we saw the danger in the continuation of such a discussion. We knew on general principles that the success of any enterprise in which two parties are striving to get together is always in inverse proportion to the amount and warmth of the preliminary talk engaged in. We pleaded for a cessation of intemperate criticism and a minimum of discussion of the crucial points until the full establishment of the Joint Commission. In our plea we tried to point out plainly that all the Church newspapers would in due time be open to all our people for the discussion of the question, that the General Conference and the Annual Conferences would have to pass finally on it, that everything would be fair and open, and that there would be nothing lost if there should be a minimum of discussion pending the establishment of the Joint Commission. At the same time we pointed out that there were principles which we could not afford to compromise and that certain dreaded eventualities were simply impossible.

A Reign of Suspicion.

The saddest fact that we see in all the regrettable controversy which is now raging is that a spirit of distrust and suspicion has been consciously or unconsciously fostered until it has laid its dark veil all over the Church. The distrust of the sincerity of the Northern General Conference seems to have spread so that it is now being fastened on Southern Methodists themselves, whose only crime seems to be a desire to perfect that which their General Conference indorsed and began. We thought it so sad that we would gladly avoid it so far as discussion of it is concerned, especially in the columns of the official organ. Only a sense of duty prompts us to write this editorial. We must protest with all the earnestness of our nature against this cruel policy and spirit of distrust and suspicion, which must in time eat like a canker into the heart of the Church

We have just read the New Orleans Christian Advocate of June 29. We are amazed at its spirit and tone. That paper creates the impression that not only Bishop Hendrix but every Southern Methodist visitor to the Saratoga Conference was engaged while there in some hidden and unworthy work connected with the shaping of the Saratoga resolutions; that in some underhand and disloyal fashion these brethren interfered in such a way as to thwart the will of their General Conference. To show that we are correctly representing the spirit and purpose of the New Orleans Advocate we quote the following words taken from an editorial on June 29:

> If the union movement had been allowed to take the natural and expected course, if the action of our General Conference had been permitted to go to the General Conference of the Church, North, as officially communicated to it, and if that body had been let take such action as it might have pleased to do without interference by the ultra-unionists of the South who found their way to Saratoga, and the whole question had then come back in a normal manner to our representatives on the Federal Council of Methodism according to the provisions of our General Conference, it might have been possible for the negotiations to have gone forward to a more advanced stage without any great agitation and excitement throughout the Church. Unhappily this was not done, and Dr. Ivey is one of the gentlemen who have contributed largely toward a very different course of events, resulting in the development of a situation which he now deplores and would like to remedy. * * * To be sure, the discussion of the various aspects of the union project that has been going on is stirring up interest and some feeling among our brethren, and if this is to some extent harmful, the blame we think, should rest upon Dr. Ivey and the gentlemen (whom he has indorsed) that were not content to let the negotiations proceed through the prescribed channels etc.

From another editorial we take a quotation which consists of certain questions, two of which, it is very evident, the writer expects his readers to answer in the affirmative. They are as follows

> What is the significance of these statements from these three high sources that there are leaders in our Church who have been giving the Church, North, to understand that we need and desire some plan of union different from that outlined in the paper adopted by our great lawmaking assembly at Oklahoma City? Has there been at work a secret clique in the Church, South, that has not dared to come out into the open; and have some of our Northern brethren been in league with it? Was our Oklahoma City plan of union reached around by these Southern leaders (under cover) and virtually nullified before it had even been considered by the Northern General Conference?

All this is a very unworthy piece of innuendo with absolutely nothing adduced to give it a basis The point is, it is made in blanket form designed to cover any of those "interfering," "ultra-unionists" of the South who happened to be at Saratoga. The time will come when the editor of the New Orleans Advocate will reproach himself for having ever allowed himself to let such an innuendo see the light in a Methodist newspaper

Bishop Hendrix and the Other "Gentlemen."

While we have never had any sympathy, and have never intended to express any, for Bishop Hendrix's optimism in the way of his advocating a special Northern General Conference two years hence, we did feel free to say editorially: "As a Southern Methodist I rejoiced in the deserved respect and honorable attention shown our Senior Bishop, who proved himself so ready for every demand and opportunity." Is there any treason in that? Bishop Hendrix and the writer have been as far apart as the poles on the Vanderbilt question. If he now thinks as he did, we are still as far apart on the question. But we have never allowed ourself to forget for one moment that he is a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He has grown gray in his Church's service, and his sunset hour cannot in the course of nature be very far ahead. But apart from this, the thought alone of what is due his office would have restrained us under the strongest provocation from holding him up (or the humblest preacher) to the gaze of a railing public. Grant that he has made his mistakes, is he different from the rest of us? Is the mantle of charity to be laid away by the exponents of Christian love? and is the veil of distrust and suspicion to take its place? Is intemperate and uncharitable criticism to hold sway? We never expected to see the day when a Southern Methodist newspaper and one claiming, in a way, to champion the rights of the episcopacy would publicly pillory a senior Bishop of its Church. Such a course fosters that spirit which made possible a certain miserable students' parade in Nashville a few years ago. Such a course is establishing a precedent with which the Church will surely have to reckon in years to come. The New Orleans Advocate may make all it pleases out of these words. They are not a defense of Bishop Hendrix. They are the defense of the episcopacy of our Church. Bishop Hendrix would call for no defense, we feel sure, for the course of the New Orleans Advocate with reference to him is making him new friends all over the Church.

Is it reasonable, is it fair and brotherly, is it brave to fasten suspicion of having ulterior designs and interfering in an unwarranted way with the course of the unification question upon Southern preachers who happened to be at the Saratoga Conference and at the same time without calling their names and without adducing one scintilla of proof? We do not know what these unnamed "ultraunionists" said and did at Saratoga. We cannot be made to believe, however, without proof, that they said or did anything that they did not have a perfect right to do and say and what had not already been expressed by them in public print or speech. Grant that they actually recommended some things not found in the Oklahoma resolutions. Was that any worse than the attack made by the editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate on a part of the Oklahoma resolutions bearing on the appointment of a commission? We do not know that that editor even voted for those resolutions. If he did, his record in attacking the provision is still more inconsistent. The New Orleans Advocate should grant those ultraunionist gentlemen the same liberties which he craves for himself and uses.

This leads us to say that the same paper, not content with questioning the motives and actions of the Saratoga General Conference, of Bishop Hendrix, and "others" who were at Saratoga throws a veil of suspicion over the Federal Council and the twenty-five commissioners to be appointed. The intimation is made that there is danger of a dealing that is not open and that there is a necessity for the rank and file of our ministers and members for being on their guard against underhand work. We quote the exact words used by the New Orleans Advocate:

Dr. Ivey's bland assurance that we may feel certain that the interests of our beloved Church will be safe in the hands of any commissioners who may be appointed is hardly adequate to quiet the apprehensions of loyal Southern Methodists in view of some things that have taken place. They cannot be blind to the fact that the power of naming these commissioners has been taken from our College of Bishops, where all the precedents would have lodged it. They cannot be oblivious of the fact, as we are showing elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate, that the Northern papers are repeatedly stating that "leaders from the South" have been advising them contrary to our Oklahoma plan of unification, and the fair inference is that if such leaders have been at work they have not yet ceased to be active. So far from assuming an easy complacency as to what will happen, we think that if ever there was an occasion when the rank and file of our ministers and members needed to be on watchful guard and to demand open dealing that time is now.

The question we wish to ask the rank and file of our ministers is this: Is the sowing of such suspicions one of the functions of a Southern Methodist newspaper? Has it a place in a true Methodist brotherhood? Can it fail, if continued in, to produce for our beloved Church a harvest of misfortune beside which the continued separation of the Methodisms would be a blessing in comparison?

This editorial article is written at Beaufort-by-the-Sea, where the Editor is trying to derive a little physical strength from the salt water and the ocean breeze. He had fixed up a chatty editorial descriptive of this charming old place of his earlier years. But after reading the exchanges which had been forwarded, especially the New Orleans Christian Advocate, he felt that the only editorial article that we could now write conscientiously must be under the heading, "We Be Brethren." The one conviction that we feel should seize Southern Methodism to-day is that, whatever may be our present and future relations to our Northern neighbor, we are still brethren—brethren under a common Father, brethren in the bonds of one Spirit, brethren in the household of a Methodism one of whose battle cries through her glorious history has been: "Love for Christ and the whole world." In all candor and earnestness we enter our protest against this spirit of distrust and suspicion which, if unchecked, will produce havoc. We plead for the charity that can breathe just as earnest a prayer on the man who differs with it as on him who agrees with it. "We be brethren."

T. N. I.

P. S.—While the editorial in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of June 29 represented a desperate effort to place the Editor of the connectional organ before Southern Methodism as interfering in an unwarranted way with the action of the Saratoga Conference in connection with the unification resolutions as being largely responsible for the present situation so far as it is dark; and while we feel that our personality is so negligible in comparison with the great principle involved, especially as the New Orleans Advocate failed so utterly to establish a single contention reflecting on that personality, we nevertheless feel that it may be well to add a few words more. As we do so, we have no feelings of resentment and bitterness in our heart. We are in no mind to return railing for railing, to spar for any advantage, or to deal in any verbal fisticuff. God forbid! The hour is too serious for anything like that. We desire in behalf of the general organ and the Church in whose service we are to present, in addition to what we have already said, the following facts:

1. The Editor of the Christian Advocate did not reach Saratoga until two days after the famous resolutions were passed. He had consulted with no Northern man on the subject of Methodist unification. Until he read in the newspaper the Saratoga resolutions, he did not have the slightest idea of the wording or purport of those resolutions.

2. So far from being "not content to let the negotiations proceed through the prescribed channels," we have made it almost our whole editorial effort to drive home the truth week after week that the only part of wisdom is to confine the negotiations to the prescribed channels.

3. Whatever may have been the editor's views on the question of the discussion of the matter in the columns of the Christian Advocate, there has been no proscription, as the New Orleans Christian Advocate would make out. We have published in the Christian Advocate the editorial expressions pro and con of our Southern Methodist papers, including the gist of one of the editorials of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. We do not recall that that paper has returned the favor in kind. Before the New Orleans Advocate of June 29 containing its attack on the Editor of the Christian Advocate left its office there had already been set up the anti-union articles contained in the Christian Advocate of July 7. There has been no purpose on his part to exclude the discussion of the unification question from the official organ.

THE EDITOR'S REPLY.

This utterance of Dr. T. N. Ivey, as has already been stated, appeared in the Nashville Christian Advocate of July 14. We have reproduced it in full that every reader of our paper may see it and have it before him as he shall peruse our reply. It is a very severe arraignment of the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate which our confrere has made; but we have not the least disposition to whimper or to ask for sympathy. If we deserved the chastisement which he has sought to give us, he is not to be censured for performing this service; and if injustice has been done us, it devolves upon us to point this out, that the Christian public may judge between us. So, we accept the issue which our brother has raised, and will now proceed to notice the strictures in which he has so freely indulged.

First, we desire to say that we disclaim responsibility for the low plane upon which this discussion has been pitched, which Dr. Ivey seemingly would fix upon us. Our editorial, entitled "Discussion in Order," the only one in which we referred to him, was not written, as he has in effect presumed to affirm for the chief purpose of trying to place HIM in the light of having interfered in an unwarranted manner with the action taken at Saratoga. As important as our connectional Editor may consider himself and the position that he holds, we had a much larger end than that in view. Our brother, while expressing his own opinions with great freedom, had been exhorting against any discussion of the unification issue dealing with the obstacles in the way of that movement or the dangers to the Church therein involved. (See the editorial, "Let Us Reason Together," in the Nashville Advocate of June 23.)

Apparently he was not content to shape simply the policy of his own paper, but desired also to tell the other journals of Southern Methodism what they ought and ought not to do, as well as the Church at large. The effect of his urgent exhortations seemed to be creating a general impression that all discussion should be hushed except such as was calculated to boost the cause of union in whatever form it might come. Resolutions that by implication would condemn the public utterances of even such a man as Bishop Hoss, who has had more to do with the efforts to bring the Methodisms of the United States into closer accord than any other living Southerner, were being adopted by small gatherings that had scarcely given the momentous questions involved a half-hour's consideration. Under these circumstances, we felt it to be our duty to make a plea for the right to discuss the unification question in all its phases, and this we did in the editorial referred to, the burden of which was that the course of the ultra-unionists of the Church, South, at Saratoga and elsewhere had been such as to make public discussion a necessity, and that if this agitation was doing harm, the responsibility should rest upon them. We dealt entirely with what we conceived to be the facts in the case, and there was not in what we had to say, from beginning to end, the least effort to impeach any one's motives, or a single harsh or denunciatory word. We challenge Dr. Ivey to take this editorial and, by any fair construction, show anything to the contrary. The second editorial from which he quotes bore upon the utterances of three Northern journals and was by us given no application to him. Of the manner in which he has sought to blend the two utterances—dragging a fragment of the latter entirely from its setting—and trying to make them both serve a common end, we shall have more to say later.

Such was the temper of our editorial utterance dealing with the course of Dr. Ivey. Contrast with this the spirit which he exhibits toward us in his extended utterance. He accuses us of having sown the seeds of suspicion throughout the Church without any basis whatever for our distrustful statements, and of having used "unworthy innuendo," for which we shall be sorry; he compares us to anarchists, and, by implication, charges that we have prostituted the functions of a Southern Methodist paper to ignoble ends. We have gone over this matter at such length because, if this discussion shall become warm before it ends, we desire our readers to know who first injected sharp and unkind allegations into it. But for its considerable length, we would reprint our editorial pleading for the privilege of discussion, which has brought on the present clash between us and the Editor of the Nashville Advocate, and we should like very much for those who have copies of our issue of June 29 to reread it and see whether or not we have correctly stated the facts as to its tone and character.

Motives of Northern Church Not Impeached.

But let us notice more specifically the ugly charges that Dr. Ivey has made against us. He says, referring to his own initial utterance bearing on the question of union: "Before this first editorial had reached our readers there had arisen a very heated discussion, in which the motives of the Saratoga Conference were impugned, in which the resolutions were declared a makeshift, and in which there was strong empahis laid upon so-called impossibilities demanded of Southern Methodism." Dr. Ivey does not expressly declare in using these words that he has reference to us; but as nearly all of his caustic pronouncement is so aimed we think it is apt to be thus construed by most persons. It is true that we published in full in the same issue of our paper the action of our General Conference at Oklahoma City concerning unification and that of the Northern General Conference, and that we compared the two plans, pointing out wherein they differed and expressing the conviction that if the Church, North, should adhere to the principles its General Conference had just enunciated, union would be an impossibility. A week later, under the caption, "What Was Done at Saratoga," we examined the two plans still more critically and showed what we considered the inconsistencies of some of the different features of the Northern plan with one another. After that, we were away on a brief vacation, and for more than two weeks we had nothing further to say concerning this momentous issue. For the two utterances above referred to, we have no apology to make to Dr. Ivey, nor any one else. We had as much right to make them as anybody else had to give out a statement except our representatives on the Joint Commission, and, as we stated in a former editorial, the ultra-unionists from the South had brought about such a condition of things that we felt it to be our imperative duty to make them, that the Methodist public in our territory might be given a true knowledge of the situation and thus be safeguarded against being misled.

But if Dr. Ivey meant to accuse us of having impugned the motives of the Saratoga Conference, we emphatically deny the accusation and demand the proof. We have not at any time impeached the sincerity of the Northern brethren composing that body or invaded the sacred realm of their motives. They had a perfect right to promulgate any plan of union that they saw fit. Their judgment as to the significance of their enactment may be one thing and ours quite another thing; but this is not by any means necessarily an impeachment of the motives that actuated them. An action may be bad in its possible consequences, and yet have behind it a motive as pure as the sunlight. When Dr. Claudius B. Spencer, of Kansas City, in his book, entitled "That They May Be One," took altogether a different view from our Southern leaders as to the effects of the plan of unification approved by our General Conference, was he calling in question their MOTIVES? Of course, he was not. He would have indignantly resented such an allegation, as he would have had a right to do. It ill becomes the man who sits upon the tripod of the General Organ of our Church, as he seems to be doing, to try to fasten upon all Southern Methodists who conscientiously think that the Saratoga enactment, if accepted, would in effect be substantially equivalent to the old form of organic union for which the Church, North, has always stood, the charge of challenging the sincerity and probity of character of their Northern brethren. And when he does this he places the Church, South, in a most unenviable light before her Sister Church and before the world, for there are tens of thousands of Methodists who hold this view, among them being many of the foremost men in the Connection. In their name, we repudiate this unwarranted insinuation. A difference in judgment, even though it be radical, does not always carry with it an impugnment of integrity and good intentions, the asseverations of muddy-thinking brethren to the contrary notwithstanding.

From his insinuations, it would seem that Dr. Ivey has seen all sorts of evil and vicious things concerning the Church, North, in our first editorial deliverances relative to the status of the union question. Over against his carping criticisms, we desire to place the following extract from a personal letter recently received from a big-brained Northern Methodist Editor, whose name we do not call because we have not secured his permission to do so: "I have just now had time to look over our accumulated exchanges, and I want to congratulate you on the ability with which you have discussed the question of organic union, as it was raised by our own body at Saratoga Springs. * * * I do not now enter into the merits of the discussion, particularly of your great editorial of May 25, but assure you that I shall keep track of your utterances with no little interest."

How Negotiations were Interfered With.

Dr. Ivey becomes apparently considerably agitated over our statement that if the ultra-unionists from the South had let the union negotiations proceed in the channel prescribed by the General Conference, they might have gone to a more advanced stage without so much agitation, but that this was not done, and that, hence, discussion in the public prints had been made a necessity. We stand by this affirmation and are ready to defend it. To get the matter intelligently before us, we will quote nearly the whole of what we had to say on this subject in our editorial of June 29:

We agree with Dr. Ivey to the extent of feeling that it is very unfortunate that the Church must be agitated and torn up over this unificaion question; but, in view of the situation, we can now see no safe way to escape a thorough sifting of the whole matter to the very bottom in the public prints and other such forums as may be open to our preachers and people. If the union movement had been allowed to take the natural and expected course—if the action of our General Conference had been permitted to go to the General Conference of the Church, North, as officially communicated to it, and if that body had been let take such action as it might have pleased to do, without interference by the ultra-unionists from the South who found their way to Saratoga, and the whole question had then come back in a normal manner to our representatives on the Federal Council of Methodism, according to the provisions of our General Conference—it might have been possible for the negotiations to have gone forward to a more advanced stage without any great agitation and excitement throughout the Church. But unhappily this was not done, and Dr. Ivey is one of the gentlemen who has contributed largely toward a very different course of events, resulting in the development of a situation which he now deplores and would like to remedy:

"In order to make this clear, let us briefly note what took place at Saratoga and in the weeks immediately following the Conference session there. When the Northern General Conference adopted the paper that had been prepared by the Special Committee of Sixty, our Senior Bishop, representing one of the co-ordinate departments of our Church government and emphasizing expressly his official position, declared both from the platform and in the Daily Advocate published at Saratoga that the union of American Methodism had virtually been effected, that only a few minor and unimportant details remained to be worked out; and he even went further and influenced the Northern General Conference to adjourn subject to the call of their Bishops that the finishing touches might be put upon the assured linking together of the two Churches with the least possible delay. The whole tenor of his utterances was that everything of consequence had been settled by the Saratoga action. Other ministers of the Southern Church spoke or wrote in the organ of the Conference in a similar strain, and even Brother Ivey declared on the ground that unification was "at our very gates." Nor was this all. He sweepingly endorsed in our General Organ the course of Bishop Hendrix at Saratoga, who, he said, had "proved himself so ready for every demand and opportunity." And he also printed on the cover page of the Nashville Advocate a large picture of Bishop Cranston and Bishop Hendrix, with an inscription underneath, as follows: "THE HAND-CLASP OF A UNIFIED METHODISM." Mark you, not in contemplation of the unification of the Churches, but of a "UNIFIED Methodism."

It was but natural under such circumstances that Southern Methodists at home should scrutinize eagerly the paper setting forth the Saratoga scheme of union, which we had been told by our eminent volunteer leaders had so related the long separated Churches that nothing could stay the full completion of the happy merger. But when we turned to it, what did we find? We found that nothing had really been definitely entered except the abstract principle of unification by reorganization, the application of this principle being left to be worked out as to every essential point at issue. More than this, two adverse recommendations were made, one which insisted on keeping the Negroes in the Church, and the other declaring for one General Conference supreme in all legislative, executive, and judicial functions—the same two hobbies that the Church, North, has been hanging to ever since American Methodism was riven in twain. Yet we were told that we were already practically united with the Church, North. Not one of our volunteer leaders who had figured at Saratoga seemed to regard these recommendations of the Northern Church, made so explicitly, as obstacles of serious consequence. Not one of them uttered a word as to the necessity of safeguarding the delicate interests of the Church, South, at these challenged points, upon which our General Conference had been so emphatic. On the contrary, the most conspicuous of them declared that we had been wandering in the wilderness and playing the fool for forty years, and he broke clear away from the Oklahoma City plan of preserving the essential integrity of the Church, South, and affirmed that the chief benefit of the union assured would not be in the doing away with "overlapping" and competition, but in bringing the North to the South and carrying the South to the North—in a general intermingling. What was left for those of us who could not stand for the Saratoga plan of union, taken as its face value, to do under these conditions except to hold it up before our people and show them what would be involved in its acceptance?"

We would be almost willing to rest our case on this former utterance; but perhaps we can make our meaning somewhat clearer by a few additional statements. (Let the reader please refer to Dr. Ivey's editorial, which we have reproduced, and note in quoting us how carefully he kept out of the General Organ any of the arguments that we adduced to sustain our contention.) Now, the point that we desired to make was this: these brethren from the South by venturing to construe the Saratoga action as a virtual and satisfactory acceptance of the plan of union that our General Conference had submitted and by publicly proclaiming this to be true, some of them even going so far as to undertake to shape legislation in the Northern General Conference, created a situation that forced those of us who saw things in a different light to go immediately into the public prints, as we believed, to disillusion our people who had become excited by the publication of the utterances of these gentlemen, scattered abroad from ocean to ocean. It was our conviction that by not speaking and showing that they were in error the spread of this wrong impression would go on until it would become exceedingly difficult to counteract, thereby injuring the sacred interests of our beloved Church. Had these ultra-unionists of the South not spoken and acted as they did, for our part, we should have had nothing to say. Bishop Hoss has said that he would not have spoken; and we feel sure that most of the others who felt constrained to analyze the Saratoga plan would either have been silent, awaiting the action of our representatives on the Joint Commission, or that they would have spoken in a more guarded and less emphatic tone. So we re-affirm that the ultra-unionists of our denomination, by the unfortunate course which they have pursued, are properly chargeable with the responsibility for the agitation which is now so disturbing Southern Methodism, and which bids fair before it is done to shake it to its deepest center.

But it may be asked wherein did these gentlemen interfere and prevent the negotiations from proceeding "in the channel prescribed by the General Conference?" We answer that, according to the action of our great law-making assembly, it devolved upon our representatives on the Joint Commission on Federation to speak and act for our Church in construing the significance of any action taken by the Northern General Conference and in shaping the subsequent course of our Church. These functions no man or set of men had a right to try to take over and exercise —especially when the Northern General Conference was not through acting. We are aware that this view condemns us to some extent, along with others, but our plea of extenuation is that when others embarked upon such a course we could not permit them to work injury to our beloved Zion without doing what we could to combat their harmful efforts.

Dr. Ivey endeavors to escape from any connection with what was done in Saratoga in this respect by entering the plea that he did not arrive until two days after the Northern General Conference had adopted the paper on union; but this subterfuge will not avail him. The adoption of that paper was, so far as we know, in the regular channel; some action by that body was expected and was in order. It was the effort to proclaim the plan there approved as acceptable to our Church, to provide for a called General Conference, etc., that was unauthorized and out of place, and our confrere was there while this was going on, and contributed to the momentum that helped to carry it forward by his gushy deliverance through the Daily Advocate. The last-named provision was adopted when the session of the Conference was nearing adjournment.

Furthermore, if what we said is read carefully it will be noted that we did not restrict the charge of interference with "the order of procedure prescribed by our General Conference" merely to what was done in Saratoga. We had in mind, though we did not specially emphasize these features of the matter, both what afterwards followed in the way of interpreting utterances in the Church press, and what took place before that great gathering assembled. Of the latter we shall have much to say before we are through with this discussion, and our friend may again come into view before the curtain shall finally fall upon this interesting part of the great unification movement.

Dr. Ivey's Reign of Suspicion.

Our brother declares that a dark reign of suspicion has been stirred up throughout the Church and seeks to show that utterances that we have made have chiefly brought this about. So far as any impeachment of the motives or the sincerity of the Northern General Conference is concerned, we have sufficiently replied to this indictment. The only other reference that we have made to Northern brethren in any possible improper light was in a single sentence in the second editorial in our issue of June 29, from which Dr. Ivey has quoted, in which after calling attention to tne statements of certain Northern journals, we asked who these men were that they had clearly represented as having interpreted the attitude of the Church, South, contrary to the action of our General Conference, and inquired if any Northern men had been in league with them? For this impression the papers across the Church's boundary line were more responsible than we were, and our question did not intimate that there had been any official secret work in the Church, North, or that any considerable number of its representatives were involved in anything improper that had taken place. This utterance of ours will, we think, take care of itself satisfactorily as we shall proceed to set forth what we further have to say.

But what about the charge that we have, without the least semblance of truth to sustain us, sown the seeds of suspicion throughout the Church, South? Dr. Ivey says that he is "amazed at our spirit and tone." We reply that he could not possibly be more amazed than we are at his statements. He says: "That paper (the New Orleans Advocate) creates the impression that not only Bishop Hendrix, but every Southern Methodist visitor to the Saratoga Conference was engaged while there in some hidden and unworthy work connected with the shaping of the Saratoga resolutions; that in some underhand and disloyal fashion these brethren interfered in such a way as to thwart the will of their General Conference." That our utterances, fairly interpreted, warrant any such inference as this, we most emphatically deny. That we thus reflected upon "EVERY visitor" to Saratoga is a baseless misrepresentation. Even in claiming that there had been at Saratoga a diversion of the negotiations from "the channel prescribed by the General Conference" (the manner in which we conceived this to have been done we have already explained), we did not include all the visitors there, but only those who took a hand in the way that we have described. We did not think it necessary to give their names because their utterances had already been given in the Daily Advocate—a paper, with a circulation that reached all over the country. Nor, in our editorial, "Discussion in Order," which alone referred to Bishop Hendrix and what went on at Saratoga, was there the least hint that anything there had gone on secretly and under cover. Let the reader go carefully over the the first quotation which Dr. Ivey makes, and the longer one that we have made from the same editorial and see if this is not true. Our friend's excited imagination wholly misled him in this respect. If there was "hidden and unworthy work" done there, we know nothing of it. Indeed, we had never seen such a suggestion until Dr. Ivey set it down in cold print.

This idea of secret and improper work, so far as it relates to anything that we have said, was in a wholly different editorial—one in which Bishop Hendrix and the Southerners at Saratoga were not so much as even mentioned, but which dealt with certain suggestive, abstract statements that had appeared in Northern Methodist papers. This utterance Dr. Ivey transfers over into his discussion, placing it along with the quotation from our first editorial, and makes its suggestions apply to Bishop Hendrix and the other Southern brethren at the seat of the Northern General Conference. Note his language: "The point is, it is made in blanket form to cover any of those 'interfering' 'ultra-unionists' of the South at Saratoga."

Nor is this all that our confrere does in the dextrous handling of our second editorial, which had nothing at all to do with the former. He takes from it one of its concluding paragraphs, which reads as follows:

"What is the significance of these statements from these three high sources that there are leaders in our Church who have been giving the Church, North, to understand that we need and desire some plan of union different from that outlined in the paper adopted by our great law-making assembly at Oklahoma City? Has there been at work a secret clique in the Church, South, that has not dared to come into the open, and have some of our Northern brethren been in league with it? Was our Oklahoma City plan of union reached around by these Southern leaders (under cover) and virtually nullified before it had even been considered by the Northern General Conference?"

Upon this quotation, our connectional Editor made the following meant-to-be stinging comment: "All this is a very unworthy piece of innuendo WITH ABSOLUTELY NOTHING ADDUCED TO GIVE IT A BASIS." Now let the reader put on his spectacles and look at what preceded the foregoing quotation from our utterance in the second editorial, from which it was taken:

In an editorial in Zion's Herald of May 24 appeared the following statement: "We rejoice that the Church (meaning the M. E. Church) did not hesitate to speak out plainly concerning the position of the Negro. The Methodist Episcopal Church desires him to be a part of the reorganized Church. As we have said several times, so does the Church, South, AS INTERPRETED BY ITS LEADERS." As will be remembered in our issue of June 1, in an open letter to Dr. Parkhurst, the Editor of Zion's Herald, we called his attention to the fact that with this proposition to retain the Negroes as a part of the reorganized Church before it, our General Conference rejected it and declared for placing them in a separate Church, maintaining fraternal relations with the white Church, and courteously requested him to state who these leaders were whose views he had preferred to hold up before the public as representative of our Church rather than the declared will of our General Conference. But up to the present time neither publicly nor by private correspondence have we heard a word from Dr. Parkhurst.

In the Pittsburg Christian Advocate of June 15 there was an extended editorial which contained the following utterance: "The tentative plan (the one formulated by the Joint Commission and which, with a single modification, was approved by the Southern Church) which was regarded by many as rather a hindrance than a help toward real union, has been TRANSFORMED in the interpretation put UPON IT BY SOME OF THE LEADERS OF THE CHURCH, SOUTH, and by the report of the Committee of Sixty, adopted with unanimity and genuine enthusiasm by our General Conference—that plan has been TRANSFORMED into the basis of such a complete reorganization of the Churches as will show to the Christian world that Methodists are not only one, but are awake to the opportunities for world-wide service which the times have set before them." Let the reader note carefully the words: "Transformed in the interpretation put upon it by some leaders of the Church, South."

Furthermore, comes Editor Spencer in the Central Christian Advocate (Kansas City) of June 21, saying, "The modification of the tentative plan (our Oklahoma plan) is only such as many leaders of the Church, South, have already come to recognize as best for the South herself."

Immediately following this came the quoted interrogatory passage of which Dr. Ivey has striven to make so much. Yet he dares to say, in the face of these positive statements of Northern editors, that we adduced "ABSOLUTELY NOTHING" to furnish a basis for this "unworthy piece of innuendo." Will our friend then give us some other explanation of these statements in the Northern Methodist press?" Does he think that these distinguished journals have been scattering falsehoods abroad over the land? But whatever they may have meant, or whoever they may have had in mind, it certainly is not true that we did not adduce any basis for our inquiry concerning these representations. Dr. Ivey's statement to that effect is flatly false.

We have been on the tripod for nearly six and a half years, during which time we have read a large portion of the religious press of the Nation, but there has never before come under our observation a piece of editorial juggling that was more unwarranted and unfair than this which our brother, while affecting a superior piety, has perpetrated. To drag our editorial wholly from its setting and apply it to Bishop Hendrix and other visitors at Saratoga, thus fastening specifically upon them implications which we had not made concerning them, was bad enough; but to extract a single paragraph from the nearly column of matter which had gone before it, and upon which it was avowedly predicated, and to state that we had written it without giving any basis at all for it was, if possible, worse. If we knew that Dr. Ivey had thus designedly sought to misrepresent us and discredit us before the public, we would characterize his act in so doing as it would deserve to be; but we prefer to think when he did this (borrowing the expression of Brother J. D. Barbee) that he was in a bad "state of obfuscation," of which we earnestly hope that "the salt water and ocean breezes" at Beaufort-by-the-Sea have ere this somewhat relieved him.

Where Our Plan Was Discredited.

If these inquiries addressed to our Northern contemporaries as to who these leaders that they had been referring to as having interpreted the mind of the Church, South, as at variance with the action taken by our last General Conference were, was a sowing of the seeds of suspicion, Dr. Ivey is welcome to make the most of it. We did not know, for a certainty, to whom they had reference when we publicly interrogated them, and we do not know now. But we do know that the Oklahoma City plan of unification, after our General Conference had put the stamp of its approval upon it, was discredited BEFORE IT WAS CONSIDERED BY THE NORTHERN GENERAL CONFERENCE AT SARATOGA, as was intimated in these interrogations, and we will now proceed to prove it.

There was held in Evanston, Illinois, February 15, 16, and 17, 1916, what was called "A Working Conference on the Union of American Methodism." The money to defray the expenses of this gathering came from what is known as "The Lindgren Foundation" of Northwestern University —a fund set apart by a Northern gentleman of means for "the promotion of international peace and interdenominational harmony." The following are the men connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who were in this meeting:

Bishop E. R. Hendrix, formerly President of the Vanderbilt Board of Trustees, and who helped to organize it into a litigating body.

Dr. W. F. Tillett, a Professor in Vanderbilt University.

Dr. W. Asbury Christian, a Vanderbilt leader at the Oklahoma City General Conference.

Dr. H. N. Snyder, another aggressive and persistent Vanderbilt leader.

Dr. C. M. Bishop, who issued at Oklahoma City an address in favor of holding on to Vanderbilt.

Dr. F. M. Thomas, who was in and out on the Vanderbilt question.

Dr. John M. Moore, who had a soft side toward Vanderbilt and whose fondness for trying to "Northernize" the Church, South, is well known.

Dr. J. W. Lee, who is so extreme a unionist that he said at Evanston: "All mankind would come to Christ and be converted to-morrow if invited to do so by a united Church."

Bishop Collins Denny, Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, Dr. T. N. Ivey, and Mr. M. L. Walton.

Who appointed these brethren we do not know. We have an idea as to whose hand was in it, but, in the absence of positive information, we will not express our view, lest we might possibly do some one an injustice.

We will not stop to publish the list of representatives of the Northern Methodist Church at this Conference. Sufficc it to say that it included Bishop Cranston, Bishop Thirkield, Bishop McConnell, and others who were on the Committee of Sixty that handled the unification question at Saratoga.

Now we make bold to affirm that practically every important recommendation embodied in the Oklahoma City plan of union, which our General Conference had approved, was discredited in this Evanston Conference by some of these leaders from the South. Let us see if this is not true.

1. Our General Conference said: "We suggest that the General Conference (of the proposed reorganized Church) shall consist of two houses, each house to be composed of an equal number of ministerial and lay delegates," etc.

Dr. John M. Moore, in his address at Evanston, said: "I must say that I see no need for two houses in the General Conference. To my mind such a system is useless, cumbersome, bunglesome; it would prolong the session and be expensive; it would perpetuate more or less the spirit of sectionalism; it would make legislation difficult. It is undesirable, and even objectionable, because it is needless and burdensome." (See volume, "Working Conference on Union of American Methodism," Page 423.)

2. Our General Conference declared for "three or four Quadrennial Conferences." (See Report No 8 of Committee on Church Relations at our late General Conference—it was published in the New Orleans Advocate of May 25.)

Dr. John M. Moore, at Evanston, said: "I would prefer four white synodical Conferences. Five and even eight would be just as acceptable, if not preferable." (See "Working Conference," etc., referred to above, page 418.)

3. Our General Conference declared for having the governing power of the reorganized Church vested in a General Conference (two houses) and three or four Quadrennial Conferences, each under constitutional restrictions, of which they were not to be the judges and guardians.

Dr. John M. Moore, at Evanston, said: "Speaking for myself, but I believe voicing the desire of the leaders of the Church, South, we want one SUPREME law-making body for the entire Church, and no mere advisory General Council; one Book of Discipline, and no legislative powers in any jurisdictional conference such as to make possible the impairment of the unity of the Church," etc. (Page 415, "A Working Conference," etc.)

4. Our General Conference said: "We suggest that the Quadrennial Conferences shall name the Bishops from their several jurisdictions, the same to be confirmed by the first upper house of the General Conference." This has been generally interpreted as making provision for having the Jurisdictional Conference that was expected to embrace the chief part of the South to elect its own Bishops and be served by them.

On this point, at Evanston, Dr. J. M. Moore said: "No synodical Conference would elect its own Bishops, nor should it be required to elect its quota from the Conferences belonging to its own jurisdiction. A Bishop is to be a General Superintendent; no man could become a synodical Bishop unless the General Conference provided for such an office after the manner of the Missionary Bishop." So the door is here left wide open for Northern Bishops to be given supervision of our work in the South. (Though not strictly relevant to this point, it may be of interest to note here that Dr. Moore also assured the Northern brethren that he would have it so that as the Church grows the Synodical Conferences can be multiplied, and that property would be held in the name of the reorganized Church as now, and not by the Synodical Conferences.)—See Dr. Moore's address in "A Working Conference," etc.

5. Our General Conference turned down the suggestion of the Joint Commission on Federation that the Negroes be gathered into one of the Jurisdictional Conferences and recommended that instead of this they be placed in a separate Church holding fraternal relations with the reorganized Church.

At Evanston, various brethren expressed themselves on this question as shown below:

Dr. John M. Moore, professed a preference for having the Negroes in a separate Church, but, among other things, he said: "Some one may ask, would the Church, South, agree to any plan that includes Negro membership and Negro representation in the General Conference? I would not undertake to speak for so great a body; but it is a fact that the General Conference of the Church, South, did not vote down the suggestion in the Commission's plan that "the Negro membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church, and such organizations of the colored Methodists as may enter into agreement with them may be constituted and recognized as one of the Jurisdictional Conferences," but recommended as a substitute what was strongly believed to be a better plan for the Negroes and for the white Methodists as well. But if the Negro membership of the four Churches should express their preference for the Jurisdictional section in the great reorganized and united Church to an independent organization of their own, I cannot believe that the Church, South, would do other than readily acquiesce in their wishes," etc.

Dr. T. N. Ivey said: "In the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we think that we can appreciate the gravity of the (Negro) problem in the Methodist Episcopal Church. There can be no insuperable difficulty in the way of the church membership of the Negro. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from 1844 to 1870, and even now he is found here and there in this Church."

Dr. Asbury Christian said: "I am heartily in favor of Dr. Moore's synodical Conferences, with a General Conference to make all the necessary laws concerning the vital points of the United Church. There is one point however, in this paper with which I do not agree. I do not think we should set the Negroes aside by themselves."

We could give more quotations, but these are quite enough. They cover practically all of the more vital features of the plan endorsed by our General Conference, and they speak for themselves. Let the reader grasp fully the circumstances under which these utterances were made. The gentlemen quoted were prominent ministers of the Church, South, some of them high officials in it, all of them members of the last General Conference, and Dr. Moore, as were some of the others present, is on the Committee of Nine that will represent our Church in the union negotiations, or which will name the twenty-five men who are to do so. They were speaking in the presence of distinguished Northerners who were busying themselves with the union movement and who were to shape the action at Saratoga.

Some Pertinent Questions.

Now, in all fairness and candor we desire to ask a few questions: (1) Did not these statements "discredit" the plan of union approved by our General Conference before it got to Saratoga? Of course, it will be said that these men spoke only for themselves; but the truth is, they sometimes ventured to state what they believed to be the sentiment of the Church, South. But even were it granted that they spoke for themselves, it would not alter the case materially. They could not separate themselves and their influence from the Church of which they were members and in which most of them held high office. The Northern brethren were certain to construe their utterances as reflective and indicative of Southern Methodist sentiment. After these deliverances, made under the circumstances that attended them, we do not see how the Northern General Conference could reasonably have been expected to act otherwise than it did. WHETHER SUCH SUGGESTIONS WERE MADE BY SOUTHERNERS AT SARATOGA OR NOT, IS A MATTER OF LITTLE CONSEQUENCE. They had been made by prominent leaders from the South, subsequent to the action of our General Conference, and the impressions produced by them were in the minds of the Committee of Sixty who shaped the union negotiations at Saratoga Springs. And that these representations, or some others akin to them (made by Southerners), did influence the action of the Northern Conference in a direction contrary to that which we had taken at Oklahoma City is beyond question; if such Northern journals as Zion's Herald (Boston), the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, and the Central Christian Advocate are at all to be given credence. Certainly the Northern plan and the suggestions of the Southerners at Evanston are substantially one and the same.

2. Were things at Evanston proceeding "in the channel prescribed by our General Conference?" We scarcely think so. But Brother Ivey was there helping them along. He says he has "made it almost his whole editorial effort to drive the truth home week after week, that the only part of wisdom is to confine the negotiations to the prescribed channels." Since things have begun to get warm he has made somewhat of a "splutter" in that direction, but at the same time he has been loading the General Organ of the Church down to the very guards with such pleas for organic union as he has been able to dig up.

3. Was the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate, in the light of what went on at Evanston, far afield when, in his inquiry of the Northern editors before mentioned, he asked if our Oklahoma City Plan of union had been reached around and nullified before it had even been considered by the Northern General Conference? We were not sure that these brethren of the quill were referring to what went on at Evanston—we thought that they might have in mind other Southerners who had been doing some out-of-place talking; but we respectfully submit what had taken place at the Evanston meeting was ample justification for any suspicion that our interrogation might have awakened. But Dr. Ivey may say that the Evanston proceedings were not "under cover." We reply that they were "under cover," so far as the general Methodist public of the South was concerned. Dr. Ivey didn't print in the Nashville Advocate any of the quotations from what was said there that we have cited in this editorial. Apparently there was a part of his own address there that he did not then care to spread before the Church, South; for in the Nashville Advocate of March 3 he printed the introductory part of the paper that he had read at Evanston, and in a parenthetical statement said: "The remainder of the paper is not given as it involves questions that the Editor does not care to discuss officially until after the plan of unification submitted by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall have been considered by the approaching General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church." But he had not at all objected to giving this portion of his paper to the Northern brethren in Illinois.

But it may be said that these proceedings have been published in a volume. Yes; but when did that book appear? We do not know the exact time of its issuance, but it has dates in it as late as March 10, 1916, and, being a publication of nearly 600 pages, it could scarcely have come from the press before the eve of the assembling of the Northern General Conference in May. It was, we think, ready for service at Saratoga Springs, however.

Of course, an effort will be made to break the force of what we have said concerning the Evanston Conference by setting up the plea "that union is a good thing and that these brethren were trying to help it along." Why should they help it along contrary to the way their Church wanted it to go? Such a contention is ridiculous. Whether union is a good thing depends upon what kind it is. The Church through her accredited agencies is the proper judge of that matter. She had prescribed other methods for having the issue handled, and had not expected these gentlemen to do what was calculated to reverse her judgments in a conclave in a Northern State. As we see it, there is no excuse for the manner in which the action of our General Conference was virtually knocked out by them at Evanston. The paper adopted at Oklahoma City represented the crystallized sentiment of the Church, South; it embodied the harmonized positions of men of variant views, who, by mutual concessions, had come together on a common platform; and by every consideration of fairness and justice it was entitled to go to Saratoga unimpeached by Southern Methodists before the Church, North, at a single point.

But it may be asked, Was not our plan "tentative?" To be sure, it was; but the word "tentative" as thus used meant something. It meant that here is a program that the Church, South, has expressed a willingness to stand for; but if the Church, North, should feel that she cannot accept its provisions, this is not the final word of the Southern Church. The fact that it was "tentative" certainly did not furnish license for high officials of Southern Methodism to butt in and tell the Northern Church that our Church would surrender practically all of its recommendations. In our opinion, such a procedure was, to express it mildly, highly reprehensible. Why, when President Wilson was negotiating with Germany concerning the submarine warfare and he and his cabinet had drawn up a paper to be submitted to the Imperial Government, and it was reported that Secretary Bryan had informed Dr. Dumba, a German, that that paper had reserva-

ICEBERGS IN THE CHURCH.

By J. G. Cronbach.

I wandered into a church one day,
But no one stood there to welcome me in;
A stranger I was, in quest I know
Of something to help me flee from sin.
There I sat shivering, the cause I learned,
It was of the Icebergs I saw therein!

The music and singing, yes, was grand.
It lifted my soul to heaven on high,
Filling my heart with rapture and love;
"For thee did the lowly Nazarene die"—
I heard a voice say—then I grew cold;
No wonder, I said—the Icebergs are nigh!

An eloquent sermon, next I heard,
About Jesus and Him crucified.
The sinners were moved, the tears came fast,
When told about Jesus, how He died.
But none were converted; no, not one;
For the Icebergs were seen on every side!

The service was over, then all sang
"Praise God from whom all blessings flow;"
Then came the blessing divinely said,
But quickly forgotten, as out they go;
For I saw smiles, and panting, and sneers—
The Icebergs were there and as white as snow!

THE STARS.

By E. H. Randle, LL.D.

The stars are suns, and our sun is one of the smallest of the stars. Some of these night twinklers are so far off it requires their light, flying at the rate of one hundred and ninety thousand miles per second, over fifty thousand years to reach the earth, so evenly distributing their glory as to leave no space as large as the pupil of the human eye unblessed by their light. It fills the universe; so does another star, and another, and so does the light of multiplied millions of stars, every one filling the same space—filled by all the others—in spite of our schoolbooks telling us, "Two things cannot occupy the same space at the same time." With all this mixing of light, the eye can distinguish the light of any one star from that of all the others, and the scientist can analyze it and tell many elements in the composition of the star. Think again! With the lights of billions of stars mixed together, the eye can separate the light of any one star from the billions of others, all occupying the same space at the same time! Wonderful, isn't it!

Suppose we borrow the wings of Light and sweep through the universe. We will try to keep in the plane of the milky way, as our own sun is one of its small stars. We fly nearly two hundred thousand miles per second, toward the bands of Orion; in a few years our sun fades to a glowing star, and other stars begin to grow in size like small suns. But on we go, and in multiplied ages pass suns smaller than ours, and some larger; some whose light has gone out, some whose diameter is as great as the diameter of Jupiter's orbit around the sun, some as great as the diameter of Neptune's orbit, and others still so vast that we are lost in wonder, without language to express our feelings.

Onward we fly, and millions of new orbs of light rise to meet our advancing flight—others recede from our view and fade from sight. We know no up or down; we know no day or night. In fifty thousand years we pass the bands of Orion, the most resplendent glories of the universe—once a sweetly charming picture of our earthly imagination. Onward we sweep, till the long astronomical cycles of time call the present high antiquity, and still the glowing orbs of fire spring to our view, reach their zenith of glory, pass to the rear, and fade from sight.

On! and never ending, on! these resplendent worlds of fire will light our pathway throughout limitless space as long as eternity itself shall endure.

THE WASHINGTON CITY REPRESENTATIVE CHURCH.

By Rev. S. S. McKenney, Special Agent.

Every Southern Methodist is interested in the movement to build a representative Church in the heart of our Nation's Capital. For the past decade this task has challenged the faith, liberality and activity of our great Church. Hence a few facts and figures showing the present status of this enterprise will be of more than ordinary interest.

A score of Annual Conferences have pledged themselves to raise amounts ranging from $1000 to $10,000 each, the total being $99,985. We have upon our books individual subscriptions which range from $1 to $10,000, with an aggregate of $50,747. According to the action of the General Conference, our Board of Church Extension has appropriated for this work $70,000. The local church in Washington City is generously committed to this cause, while the Baltimore Conference, after having contributed $10,000 in cash, also at its last session authorized a campaign for $15,000 additional. From the sale of the valuable lots on which the Mount Vernon Place Church is now located it is quite certain that the assets of this enterprise will be greatly increased, and thus it will appear that we are within sight of the $300,000 which was set as our original goal. However, we must continue our campaign for new subscriptions and urge the immediate adjustment of all outstanding obligations so as to overcome any shrinkage which may occur and meet any other emergencies that may arise. Therefore we earnestly ask and confidently expect the co-operation of all our preachers and people as we rally for the final consummation of this monumental achievement.

The end is now in sight. Our Representative Church, which has been a long-cherished hope, is no longer an Utopian dream—it is soon to be a realized ideal. At a recent meeting of our Commission in Washington plans for the new building were presented, approved, adopted, and placed in the hands of a competent firm of builders for immediate execution. The results of this meeting are given by Bishop Candler, as Chairman of the Commission, in the following official statement: "The Commission to whom has been committed the erection of our Representative Church at the National Capital held a meeting recently at which plans were fixed for the beginning of the actual work of construction immediately. The plans of the architect were accepted and put in the hands of a competent firm of builders. The Commission now desires subscribers who have outstanding subscriptions to this enterprise to make payment of the same in order that the building may go up without further delay."

HELL.

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

"And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments." (Luke 16:23.) In this parable, entitled by Dr. Hurlbut, in his "Story of the Bible," "The poor rich man and the rich poor man," the Savior describes two very opposite conditions or states of the soul immediately after death. In other words, the veil is drawn aside, and we are given a view of heaven and of hell. It does not matter how many notions or conjectures may be entertained about either place—they are useless, unless they are Scriptural. But we have in the Bible descriptions of these two places, the final abodes of the soul—heaven for the Christian and hell for those who reject Christ and live in sin during this life. The attractions of heaven and the horrors of hell should often have place both in the pulpit and in the press. When a man wishes to remove from one country or nation to another to choose a home with benefits and blessings for himself and family, he will endeavor to find out all he can about that country before making it his earthly home. We see those about us, unconcerned, yet hastening on to the place of eternal punishment, and yet we are not concerned enough to earnestly and faithfully warn them of their danger and to tell them what God has said in his inspired Word about the "hell prepared for the devil and his angels," but into which all who reject Christ and live in sin shall be cast to spend eternity. It takes the thunders of Sinai, as well as the love manifested on Calvary, to save sinners.

Mr. Wesley said in his writings about revivals (Bond's Life of Wesley, p. 111), "There may be errors in judgment and some delusions of Satan intermixed with the revival, but that is conclusive evidence that the work in general is not the work of the Holy Ghost. * * * The work may have been promoted by ministers strongly preaching the terrors of the law; but what of that? If there be really a hell of dreadful and never-ending torments, ought not those exposed to it to be earnestly warned of their fearful danger? It may be unreasonable to think of frightening a man to heaven, but it is not unreasonable to frighten him away from hell."

Dr. R. A. Torrey, in a sermon on hell, says: "Undoubtedly the Bible doctrine about the future destiny of the wicked is appalling, but the fact that it is appalling does not prove that it is not true. The San Francisco disaster was appalling, nevertheless it is a fact. The facts about human sin and human suffering—as any man can see for himself in any great city if he will only open his eyes—are appalling, but none the less it is a fact. The wise man will not shut his eyes to these facts because they are so appalling, but will open his eyes wide to the facts and act accordingly."

The same author says: "Shallow views of sin and shallow views of God's holiness and shallow views of the glory of Jesus Christ and his claim upon us lie at the bottom of weak theories of the doom of the impenitent. Men who accept a loose doctrine regarding the ultimate penalty of sin, lose their power for God."

MAKING A YELLOW FLOWER RED.

Some of the readers of the Sunday School Advocate will not know what a California poppy is. The best way that I know to describe it is to say it is about the color of a dandelion. It is a deep, rich gold. It looks something like a buttercup, only it is larger. And the California fields are literally blanketed with them all summer. You cannot imagine anything more golden. But Mr. Burbank made them red. This is the way he did it:

One day he was walking through the fields and he suddenly spied an intensely yellow poppy with a bright speck of red about the size of a pinhead on one of the petals. He put a paper sack over this to protect it. Then he went back frequently to watch the flower. When it came to seed he carefully saved the seeds. Then in his specially prepared gardens he planted these seeds. The next flowers that came were about half red in their petals. He saved the seeds from these, and in only a short time he had produced a beautifully colored red poppy.

Since then Mr. Burbank has changed the color of many, many flowers such as you see about you every day. He has made small flowers large and he has made scentless flowers have the most beautiful perfume.

I suppose that Mr. Burbank often says to himself: "We could do the same thing with folks if they would let us. Or rather folks could do the same things themselves, by finding the good in themselves and making that grow year by year, and eliminating the bad little by little." For instance, Mr. Burbank took an ordinary daisy, white and pure, and by selection made it grow into a large, beautiful white daisy which he calls "The Shasta Daisy."

I suppose Mr. Burbank could, if he tried, make a black flower white. So can people do with souls.—S. S. Advocate.

TOO SMART.

Catherine and Alice were shopping together at a "sale," and at last drew near a counter where some goods were displayed that they wanted.

"I will take two and a half yards," said Catherine to the salesgirl.

The latter was new at the work—taken into the department store to help out on that side. The crowd confused her; she hadn't even become accustomed to handling her pad of sales slips. Two and a half yards at ninety-eight cents would be—she couldn't think in such a babel of voices; she figured on the back of her slip, and then said: "One dollar forty-five, please."

Catherine tilted her head a trifle, did a bit of mental arithmetic, and spoke pleasantly and quietly: "It must be two forty-five, I think."

The girl flushed painfully. "Of course," she murmured; "thank you ever so much."

"Now what in the world did you do that for?" complained Alice just as they left the counter. "You might just as well as not have had that extra dollar. You are quick as lightening at figures, I know; but when you had figured it out in your mind why didn't you keep still? There is such a thing as being too smart."

"I don't think you can accuse me of that," laughed Catherine; "but the amount really was two forty-five, and it would be a fraud for me not to pay it when I knew it. But saying nothing about that part of it, there was the girl. If she had sent in the slip for a dollar forty-five, the examiner would have discovered the mistake, and the extra dollar would have been deducted from the girl's wages—if they amounted to as much as that."

"Well, that is her lookout. Anyway, that's how I look at it. If the conductor thinks I'm reading my paper so earnestly that I must have paid my fare, I don't run to him and beseech him to take my nickel. Last week a restaurant cashier gave me back fifty cents too much change. I didn't call out the fire department; I walked away as steady as you please. If I am smart enough to copy your examination paper without letting Miss Spectacles see me, why, she's the one to blame, not I."

Now, there's a big question that goes with this little story: Which of these girls was really the one that was "too smart?" And will it be too late when she finds it out?—Girls' World.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference was held at Clinton, La., July 11-13, 1916. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. S. S. Bogan, pastor of the Jackson charge. The Conference was called to order at 8:30 a. m. by the presiding elder, Rev. H. W. Bowman. Rev. Henry T. Young was elected Secretary. Nearly all the preachers and a large number of lay delegates answered to the first roll call.

Revs. H. W. May, R. W. Vaughan, R. N. Brown, Dr. R. H. Wynn, and Prof. R. E. Bobbitt were present as visitors.

Reports were called for from the various charges, and they all showed a substantial gain along all lines. A spirit of optimism pervaded the conference from the very beginning. Brothers John Shealers, W. A. Mangum, B. D. Watson, and J. A. McCommack were not able to attend the conference on account of sickness. In addition to Rev. S. S. Bogan, the following brethren preached during the Conference: J. B. Williams, H. T. Young, H. W. May, and C. A. Battle. The presiding elder, Rev. H. W. Bowman, presided with ease and dignity. His rulings were always clear and satisfactory, and his talks from time to time to the Conference were truly inspiring.

Rev. R. N. Brown, representing the Conference Sunday School Board, made an earnest talk on the Sunday school work, and urged that all cooperate in keeping Brother C. V. Breithaupt in the field. Rev. R. W. Vaughan made an eloquent plea for the Orphanage, and warned the brethren against certain individuals who represented themselves as conducting an orphanage in this State. The conference passed a strong resolution concerning these parties, and by vote of the Conference the Secretary was instructed to give it to the press. Dr. Wynn and Prof. Bobbitt both spoke on the work being done by and the plans of their respective colleges.

The following brethren were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference: L. L. Upton, H. C. Murphy, O. E. Townsend, I. D. Wall. Alternates: W. T. Holland, J. A. White. Brother L. L. Upton was appointed Lay Leader for the District.

A resolution regarding "Unification" was introduced, but, for lack of time for proper discussion, was withdrawn and the Conference took no action on this matter.

Rev. J. E. Craig was recommended to the Annual Conference for Deacon's orders.

Rev. P. S. Carpenter was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

Brother W. S. Holmes, Conference Lay Leader, was on the job from beginning to end of the conference. He spoke concerning the Laymen's Missionary Movement, had charts, and impressively did his work before the brethren.

Resolutions of thanks were adopted, expressing the gratitude of the members of the Conference for the gracious hospitality of the people of Clinton.

The next session of the Conference will be held at Amite.

HENRY T. YOUNG,
Secretary

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Major Millsaps is no more. After a long and signally useful life, during which his achievements for Christian education stand pre-eminent in Southern Methodism, Reuben Webster Millsaps has paid the common debt of mankind and has gone home to his reward.

Inasmuch as we are duly sensible of the great and lasting service which his life has rendered to humanity at large and more especially to the people of Mississippi; therefore, be it resolved by the Third Quarterly Conference of the West Point charge:

1. That we commend to the rising generation of Church and State his life-long example of industry, thrift, and honorable dealing, by the constant exercise of which virtues he succeeded in the accumulation of his fortune, thus making possible his large and varied benefactions.

2. That in the death of Major Millsaps the Methodist Church of Mississippi has lost its most prominent layman, and the State its foremost citizen.

3. That, while we mourn his death, we bow in humble submission to the will of God and rejoice that the M. E. Church, South, and the State of Mississippi have produced such a man.

4. That we extend to the family our condolence, praying that his life may be a continuous benediction to them and to us, and an inspiration to every young man who in the years to come may enroll his name on the roster of students at Millsaps College.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: S. B. White, C. F. Capps, L. P. Wasson.

tions in it and was not to be taken at its face value, the whole country was stirred with a wave of indignation and Mr. Bryan in hot haste had to give assurance and prove that the circulated rumor was not true. What, then, ought to be said of these gentlemen who discredited and rendered ineffective an official deliverance of their Church, dealing with matters of the most momentous importance, before it had reached its destination? Shall it be said that the ideals and ethics of secular governments are higher than those of the Church of God?

A Pitiful Effort.

Dr. Ivey's effort to place our observation concerning the Committee of Twenty-five, to the effect that it had been taken out of the hands of our College of Bishops where the precedents would have lodged it, upon a parity with statements discrediting the Oklahoma City plan of union, made to Northern leaders who would act for their Church in the matter, is positively pitiful. We were speaking to our own people, in full recognition of the fact that the provision to which we referred could not now be changed; we were not dealing with a far-reaching issue yet to be determined. Nor did we say that our Committee of Nine would not name a satisfactory larger committee—we hoped that they would; but we wondered why this designative power had not been left as heretofore with our Board of Bishops, in whose conservatism and judgment we have the fullest confidence. The solicitude that we expressed at this point was given voice with the thought of what had gone on at Evanston, Illinois, in our mind. We knew that some of the same men who there had shown such an extreme union sentiment and who seemed so little concerned for the pronouncements of our Church were on the Committee of Nine, and we thought if they were strong enough to do so they might largely fill the new committee with ultra-unionists of their own type. Dr. Ivey will hardly deny that when men have convictions they will find agents to execute them if they can. As a matter of fact, the eye of the whole Church is on our nominating Committee and much concern is felt about their action. It will not hurt anything for that Committee to realize this. It would be nothing short of an unspeakable calamity for our negotiators to be made up principally of such men as those who figured in the conference at Evanston—men who seemingly have already proclaimed to our Northern brethren their willingness to surrender many of the most vital prineiples approved by our General Conference. Is it not important to have it known in advance that only men with an unbroken record of loyalty to Southern Methodism can command the full confidence of the people in the adjudication of this vast and intricate question, which involves all the sacred interests and the very existence of our Church?

Some may think it is exhibiting a high degree of saintliness to affect to be blind to the solemn facts which we have here pointed out, and to talk in pious strains about how "God's will surely will be done," etc.; but we certainly will not play a part in any such pharisaical role. To charge the Heavenly Father with the responsibility for all that takes place in the great ecclesiasticisms of our day, dominated as they are to a considerable extent by worldly and secular influences, is to slander and dishonor him. The sickly, sentimental familiarity which some persons presume to exercise toward the great, infinite God, the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, is in reality nothing else than a pious sort of blasphemy, which is nauseating to the true and humble Christian who really fears and reverences God and seeks the leadership of the Holy Spirit. Dr. Ivey's assurances that we may feel perfectly confident that everything will go on just as it ought in our further union negotiations reminds us of the positive old farmer who is stated to have said: "I know that if you tar fence posts they will last always; I have tried it three times." But, seriously, since the negotiations have not gone on, as they ought to have done in the past, our brother should not get so wrought up if some of us are a little slow to accept his voluble guarantees for the future.

Dr. Ivey's Question Answered.

Answering Dr. Ivey's question as to whether it is the function of a Southern Methodist newspaper to sow the seeds of a groundless suspicion, we answer, No. Nor is it its function to sit in unconcerned silence when men are doing what they ought not to do, to the detriment of the Church. A brotherhood builded upon a truce with unrighteousness or improper doings of any kind is not the true Christian brotherhood. What our confrere has called our suspicion-breeding editorials began when Northern religious weeklies commenced to state that they were assured by Southern leaders that our General Conference did not correctly voice the sentiments of our people. Were we wrong in seeking to ascertain upon whose authority these affirmations were made? Should we have sat in silence and let our General Conference be thus misrepresented before the public of the Nation? Such seems to be the position of our connectional Editor. But, for our part, we think that we did right to challenge these harmful statements; and, in our opinion, it would have been more to the credit of our chief editor, if instead of springing upon us and endeavoring to misrepresent and discredit us, he also had come to the defense of his Church and aided in correcting these wrong impressions that were being made. But apparently he is no longer a Southern Methodist, but has become a sort of Methodistic cosmopolite, whose chief concern is not for the Church that has honored him, but for the wider Kingdom of God and a brotherhood that takes in all men alike, good and evil.

Not a New Bugaboo.

Our friend cannot frighten us by raising the hue and cry that we are a stirrer-up of suspicion and are lacking in brotherliness. We have heard the like of that before. When the Vanderbilt trustees were hatching their plans to eject the Church from that institution and attention began to be called to what they were saying and doing, the immediate reply was: "They are Methodists; they are our brethren; it is wicked not to trust them." But soon those men came into court, and under oath repudiated their official declarations to the Church for forty years; and Vanderbilt University passed from the control of the Church because of a passive trustfulness, begotten by just such a plea as is now being paraded by Dr. Ivey. If the Church had been alert and had tried to put out the schemers against her ownership and control ten or fifteen years sooner, that great university would to-day be ours. At the last General Conference, when, after weeks of struggling, we had won the Vanderbilt fight and had come to elect our Board and officers to care for our educational interests, and objections were made to certain men because of their Vanderbilt leanings, we were piously told that "since the Church had spoken we were all together; that every one could thereafter be depended upon to stand for the Church; THAT WE WERE BRETHREN." This plea availed in some instances, and the Church has suffered by having these men, in every case pertaining to Vanderbilt University that has since arisen, to stand just as they did before. Southern Methodism has been injured far more by a lack of alertness and aggressiveness upon the part of the great loyal element of her membership than by any spirit of suspiciousness that has been spread abroad among our people. Thomas Jefferson said, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty"—it is also the price of safety for both Church and State. It is when the Church sleeps that Satan sows his tares. Why should Dr. Ivey object to our people being informed concerning the union negotiations throughout and closely observant of all that takes place?

We are not disturbed by this bitter attack which our connectional Editor has made upon us. We expected when we entered aggressively into this fight to try to help save the substantial integrity and autonomy of the Church, South, to be misrepresented and maligned. We knew the intolerance of the ultra-unionists (who, by the way, are re-enforced by the whole Vanderbilt influence in the Church)—how any man who differs from them is liable to be branded as narrow, sectarian, unchristian, and a hater of his brethren. And the sad picture of what had befallen Bishop E. E. Hoss when he dared to stand up for his Church in another controversy was vividly in our mind. We remembered how he was assailed as a distruster of his brethren, as an agitator, as a promulgator of suspicion, as a disturber of the peace of Zion, and as being actuated in all that he did by "personal pique" and ambition. And we knew that not even yet has he passed from under the tongue of defamation; that they are still charging him with the responsibility for the loss of Vanderbilt University, and that they will, if they can, blacken his memory with their aspersions after he has passed into the silent grave. (Why, within the past few weeks they have been telling it in some sections that he had to do with our comment upon Bishop Hendrix's course at Saratoga, a charge of which he is as innocent as an angel in heaven.) All this swept before our mind's eye. But it did not deter us from going forward in what we conceived to be the path of duty. It may be that a baptism of fire similar to that through which our honored friend has passed awaits us. If so, we shall try to face it, "calm and unafraid," and with faith in God. If we shall be able to help in any small measure to safeguard our beloved Southern Methodism from any form of union that does not leave enough of it together, as an autonomous body, to keep it true to the people of the South and its own noble ideals, sweet and ample will be our reward. But if the tide of battle shall go against us, and our Church is swallowed up in another great ecclesiastical organization, the fact that we kept our banner flying and did what we could to preserve the glorious legacy bequeathed to us by our fathers will, we trust, be a comforting memory to us through all the years to come.

Dr. Ivey's charge that we have assailed the episcopacy of Southern Methodism and a few other points remain to be noticed. These matters we hope to take up and dispose of briefly in next week's issue of the Advocate.

A GREAT DAY IN SHREVEPORT.

Last Sunday was a great day for Methodism in Shreveport, La. The beautiful new house of worship of our First Church congregation, valued at approximately $150,000, was dedicated by Bishop E. E. Hoss, after he had preached a masterly sermon to an immense congregation at 11 o'clock a.m. Our gifted young pastor at Baton Rouge, La., Rev. C. A. Battle, occupied the pulpit at the evening hour and delivered a suggestive and impressive discourse.

This congregation is perhaps the strongest Methodist flock in this section of the South. The tasteful new structure in which it worships stands at the head of Texas Street, than which there could hardly be a finer site for a church. The salary paid the pastor is $4200 annually. The Sunday school, of which Mr. W. A. McKennon is the superintendent, is one of the largest and best in Southern Methodism. Dr. George S. Sexton, the present pastor, is in his third year, and during his incumbency he has wiped out a debt of $80,000 on this handsome new edifice, thus making possible its dedication. We congratulate Dr. Sexton and his people upon this notable achievement.

JUNALUSKA LAYMEN'S CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

We are in receipt of the following telegram from Dr. E. H. Rawlings, Field Secretary of the Laymen's Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

"Unprecedented interruption of railroad traffic in North Carolina makes it necessary to postpone the Junaluska Laymen's Conference from August 1, to August 15. This conclusion has been reached after a full discussion with the railroad authorities. The program of the Conference remains unchanged. The leading speakers have accepted for the new date and everybody is enthusiastic for a great meeting. Full information concerning this change has been given to the Church along every line of communication."

Let our pastors call attention to this postponement of the Laymen's Conference from their pulpits, and urge those who intended going from their charges not to abandon that purpose. This interference may be made an advantage to the contemplated gathering if the additional time that is thus given to get ready is properly utilized. Let all lend a hand toward making this assembly of laymen at Lake Junaluska on AUGUST 15, 1916, the greatest meeting of the kind in the history of Southern Methodism.

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

Rev. J. R. Jones, of Gulfport, Miss., presiding elder of the Seashore District, writes us as follows: "Please announce that the Seashore Camp Meeting, at the Seashore Camp Ground, near Biloxi, which was postponed on account of the recent storm, will be held August 16-24. Dr. E. C. Moore, of Montgomery, Ala., will do the preaching."

Go to this camp meeting if you can, and help to make it a success. It will give you an opportunity both to be blessed and make yourself a blessing to others spiritually. There are ample accommodations to be had for all who will attend at this most beautiful place on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

BISHOP DENNY A WISE LEADER.

We desire to state, since we have mentioned Bishop Collins Denny as having been present at the Evanston (Illinois) Conference on Union, that he said nothing there pertaining to unification that was not in full harmony with the action of our General Conference at Oklahoma City and with the past history of our Church. Bishop Denny is a true and loyal Southern Methodist, who may always be counted upon to bear himself properly anywhere. If all the Southerners at that gathering had spoken with the restraint that he did touching this question no harm could have accrued to the union negotiations that were officially in progress. It should be borne in mind, however, that he had nothing to do with the calling or the arrangements of this Conference.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS.

In the great crisis which now confronts the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate expects to stand resolutely for the plan of union endorsed by our General Conference at Oklahoma City, as it has generally been construed, namely, as leaving the South proper in a largely autonomous Jurisdictional, or Quadrennial, Conference, holding its own property and electing the Bishops who are to serve it, with our colored brethren in a separate Church of their own. If this plan of union, in its essential particulars, is defeated in the negotiations before the Joint Commission, he proposes, then, to stand for no union at all, but for such a plan of federation as would do away with overlapping and wasteful competition, and secure co-operation between the two Churches where it is needed. If there be those among our readers who, sympathize with our purposes and who would like to assist us in this undertaking, a good way for them to do so would be to help to circulate the New Orleans Christian Advocate generally over the Church. FIFTY CENTS will send our paper to some person for six months—can you not spare this much to help in this great cause? Any amount sent us for this purpose will be gratefully received, no matter how small (the best way to remit is to send stamps or a money order; it costs us ten cents to collect a check). The persons to whom the Advocate is thus sent gratis will be carefully selected and an effort made to have our paper reach in some small measure every part of the Connection. We feel that this action is rendered all the more necessary by the fact that the Nashville Christian Advocate, our General Organ, which is the only weekly that we have that circulates all over the Church, has become an extreme advocate of union, with apparently but little concern for the form of it. Of course, we will continue to publish communications that oppose our views, as we have heretofore been doing. We believe in a full and free discussion of all phases of this great issue.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans, is assisting in a revival meeting at Lecompte, La., this week.

Rev. W. H. Lane, of Foxworth, Miss., reports that he has recently had a fine revival meeting at that place, in which he was assisted by Evangelist Dan E. Kelly.

The New Orleans Methodist Sunday School Union held an interesting session at the Second Methodist Church of this city on July 18. The next meeting of this organization will be held at Felicity Street Church on October 22.

The following friends, to whom reference has not been made elsewhere, have our thanks for two or more subscriptions to the Advocate sent in within the past few days: Rev. M. L. White, Homewood, Miss., 5; Rev. J. M. Sells, Wiggins, Miss., 6; Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, Greenwood, La., 2.

We have in hand a report of the fine meeting lately held at Winnsboro, La., from the pen of Rev. H. B. Thomason, the faithful pastor, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate. It will be published next week. He was assisted by Rev. J. M. Alford, and 33 persons had joined our Church up to the time that he wrote.

A card from Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe (La.) District, reads as follows: "Our son, A. S. Lutz, Jr., arrived at the district parsonage on the night of July 20, 1916." It gives us pleasure to chronicle this happy news, and we extend hearty congratulations to the delighted parents. Blessings on the mother and the little one!

The Board of Trustees of Millsaps College is fortunate in having on it three most capable lawyers, all of whom are useful Methodist laymen: Judge T. B. Lamb, of Eupora, Miss., Hon. W. H. Watkins, of Jackson, and Hon. W. W. Magruder, of Starkville. Any administrative body might count itself fortunate to have three such competent counselors.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, pastor of the Franklinton (La.) Circuit, writes: "We have just closed a fine meeting at Hackly, La., in which Rev. C. A. Schultz did the preaching. Many souls were stirred to a better life. We organized the women into a soul-winning society—25 strong, composed of Baptists and Methodists. Brother Schultz is fine help in a meeting."

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss., who last week assisted Rev. A. W. O'Bryant in a meeting at Mt. Hebron, reports a fruitful series of services. Eight persons were received into the Church on profession of faith. He states that he had the pleasure of dining on July 21 with Rev. G. W. Gordon, of Noxapater, whom he found quite happy with his wife and babe.

Rev. C. M. Martin, a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, who was injured while riding on a wagon last winter and who was in a sanitarium from January 19 to May 8, is, we are pleased to state, much improved physically. We trust that he will continue to grow better until he is entirely well. We thank him for some kind words, conveyed in a recent communication.

Rev. B. E. Meigs, of Bay St. Louis, Miss., sends us a club of 7 subscriptions from his charge, and in his business letter appends the following note: "I think that I can safely say that our church is prospering here, in spite of the influence of Romanism. This is the stronghold of the Romish denomination in Mississippi." Things usually go forward where this tactful and energetic pastor is in charge.

Rev. J. R. Cruthirds, of Nugent, Miss., sends us a renewal of his subscription to the Advocate, seasoned with a few kind words. He thinks that with Bishops Hoss, Candler, Murrah, and Mouzon to lead us, and with such men as Dr. DuBose, Dr. Bradfield, and some others on the tripod to write for our Church, the "Old Ship" will keep seaworthy in spite of the raging billows about her. "So mote it be."

We have regretted to note in the secular papers that Dr. J. E. Wray, a well known minister who wrought in New Orleans some years ago, has resigned his pastorate at Live Oak, Fla., and that he has been accused of having sent improper matter through the mails. He is said to be broken down nervously and it is thought that he is not mentally at himself. This is indeed a sad case. Let prayer be offered in behalf of this brother.

Rev. C. B. Powell, of Plain Dealing, La., writes as follows: "The work is progressing nicely in my charge. So far, I have held only one meeting. I have instituted in our Sunday school a Teacher-training Course, which I hope will prove to be beneficial to us. A baby girl came into our home a few days since. Both the mother and child are doing well." We congratulate Brother and Sister Powell upon this addition to their interesting family.

It was our pleasure to receive a few days since an interesting letter from Mrs. Wiley, of Johnson City, Tenn., the widow of the late Dr. E. E. Wiley, of blessed memory, whose fame is inseparably associated with Emory and Henry College, of Virginia. We were gratified to see that she has sound views concerning the unification movement. We like the kind of Methodists they seem to have about Johnson City, which is also the home of Colonel E. C. Reeves.

Rev. W. I. White, of the Iuka (Miss.) Circuit, writes: "We have just closed a meeting at Campground Church. In old 'campground fashion' we began with dinner on the ground. The meeting was, indeed, a success. The Lord manifested his presence, and the church, which was said to be in a backslidden condition, was graciously revived. There was one conversion. Many praised God aloud and expressed a purpose to live better lives and train their children for Christ."

Our gifted young pastor of Central Church, Meridian, Miss., Rev. H. B. Watkins, has our thanks for a club of 7 subscriptions from his excellent charge. At the close of his letter, Brother Watkins says: "I will send others soon. I would really like to catch up with Rev. T. W. Adams, but he is too far ahead." It takes a swift one to keep pace with Brother Adams. He got his priming at old Emory and Henry in the days when they grew such men as Dr. S. A. Steel, Dr. T. B. Holloman, and Bishop E. E. Hoss. But Brother Watkins is a Millsaps man, which means much.

From a letter from Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, written from Shreveport last Saturday, we extract the following items of news: "Bishop Hoss dedicated the Louisiana Orphanage at Ruston yesterday (Friday), and met with the Louisiana presiding elders in the afternoon. He seems to be in good health now. Dr. G. S. Sexton has done a phenomenal work in liquidating the debt on our First Church here in Shreveport, the total cost of the new house of worship being about $$155,000. The Board of Stewards to-day granted him a vacation and gave him a purse of $500."

We know that it will tax our readers somewhat to wade through the long controversy between Dr. Ivey and the Editor of the Advocate this week; but we hope that they will give the discussion a careful reading. When one is misrepresented and has to quote to set matters straight, it takes space to do so. Moreover, as we hope to show within the next few weeks, everything of value in our Church is involved in this union movement. At any rate, let all give close attention to that part of our extended utterance which shows what went on at Evanston, Ill., where the Oklahoma City plan of unification was virtually nullified by those supposed to be its friends and advocates before it got to Saratoga.

We have in hand a copy of a resolution adopted by the Baton Rouge District Conference, recently held at Clinton, La., which advises the Methodist people within that district and the State of Louisiana against giving assistance to one Mr. E. B. Dillard, who claims to be conducting an orphanage at Jennings, La., and who has as his representative the Rev. Mr. Weems, said to be a superannuate Methodist preacher from Arkansas. Of this matter we know nothing ourself; we are making this statement at the request of the aforementioned District Conference, which is stated to have inquired carefully into certain representations made to it. The resolution was signed by Mr. L. L. Upton, Dr. J. B. Easterley, and Mr. W. T. Holland.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, at Laurel, Miss., fell from a New Orleans and Northeastern train about one mile from Ellisville on the night of July 21, and sustained very serious injuries. He was en route to Hattiesburg, according to the press dispatches, and, being taken ill, went to the rear of the train to secure fresh air and was leaning on the gate of the last coach, which gave way and caused him to fall to the ground, where he laid about three hours before the accident was discovered and he was given assistance. He is now at a hospital in Laurel, and much anxiety is felt concerning his condition. Let the brethren remember him and his solicitous loved ones at the throne of grace.

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING AUGUST 16

Parties attending the Camp Meeting will find a comfortable home at Shadyside Inn. Fishing, sailing, bathing and other healthful amusements. Invigorating climate; salt breezes. Just the place to spend a vacation. Address Miss Mary E. Gowers, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss.

Alice rushed in from the garden where she had been picking flowers. She was badly stung by a bee, and she held on to her finger and sobbed pitifully. "O mother," she cried, "I burned me on a bug!"—Brooklyn Life.

CAMOLETE MERIDEE McLAIN, wife of Rev. D. W. McLain, was born on April 4, 1855, near Liberty, Miss. On November 16, 1876, she was married to D. W. McLain, and for years walked with him the way of life. She was the mother of nine children, two of whom are now in the ministry of our Church.

She passed away from this life at Jackson, La., on July 10, 1916. Though the call was sudden, we are assured she was prepared for the great change to another sphere of being. A large company of friends and four ministers were present at her funeral. Sister McLain was held in sincerest love and esteem by her friends and in tenderest devotion by her husband and children. She did not confine her active service to her immediate household, but her presence blessed and cheered many who were sick. She united with the Baptist Church while young, but the larger portion of her Christian service was spent in the Church of her husband. A good woman, a kindly neighbor, one who oftentimes welcomed the preachers in her home, and who with patience and resignation bore her lot and stood in her appointed place of life, has been called of God to a higher plane of service.

A FRIEND.

It was on April 2, 1916, that the entire community of Merigold, Miss., was plunged into sorrow when the death of Mrs. FRANK JONES was announced. Her illness was of but short duration, her many friends having hardly had notice of her sickness before it was announced that the angel of death had claimed her for God's own.

Mrs. Jones, who was the wife of one of the leading merchants of Merigold, was born and reared in Tate County, Mississippi. She was married to Mr. Jones on April 17, 1903, and came with him to Merigold.

Mrs. Jones in her lifetime was one of Merigold's most estimable women. She was a prominent member of the Methodist Church and Sunday school, and took an active interest in the moral welfare of the town. The esteem in which she was held was shown by the vast concourse of people at her obsequies. The funeral was held at the Methodist Church in Merigold and the interment was made in the Merigold Cemetery. The Church was draped in mourning by the friends of the deceased and the service was conducted by the Rev. W. C. Galceran. Several of the songs loved best by the deceased were sung by intimate lady friends who had known and been associated with her through the last years of her life. A short tribute was paid to her by the presiding elder of the district, Rev. H. S. Spragins, of Greenville. The services were continued at the grave, where the floral offerings—the last tribute of many friends—were many and beautiful. Mrs. Jones leaves behind to mourn their loss a husband, four small sons, a mother, two sisters, and four brothers. We pray God's blessings upon all the bereaved.

NEW ORLEANS LEAGUE UNION.

The New Orleans League Union held its regular monthly meeting at Epworth Church on Tuesday, July 11, with an attendance of 80.

The feature of the evening was an address by Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of our district, who laid special stress on team-work among the Union officers and the various Leagues representing our organization. He diffused a general spirit of optimism among the members present for the future of League work in New Orleans, suggesting that we make our aim "A League in Every Methodist Church in New Orleans."

A selection, "He Included Me," which was the favorite at the recent State Conference at Alexandria, La., was rendered by the Carrollton Avenue League Trio, and Mr. Jackson of Epworth favored us with some fine violin music. A very pleasant and instructive twenty minutes were spent in hearing from the delegates who attended the State Conference. The Standard of Efficiency for individnal Leagues was dwelt upon prominently and every League represented was furnished with a chart setting forth the requirements. It was suggested that individual League policies for the coming year include an extra amount sufficient to send at least one delegate to the State Conference at Lake Charles in 1917, this and the various requirements of the Standard of Efficiency to be kept continually before the Leaguers during the coming year. It was decided to have a Quiz on the Handbook at our September meeting.

Several games were entered into with zest, and, on the whole, we spent a very pleasant and profitable evening.

Woman's Crowning Glory

is Beautiful Hair—coveted by all, but possessed by few. If you have allowed your hair to become coarse, stiff, streaked with gray or void of its original lustre, the trouble lies in the absence of the natural hair oil. There can be no life without food, so unless the hair is well fed with proper oil it cannot be expected to retain its lustre and beauty.

La Creole Hair Color Restorer when applied to the scalp, will restore those ugly, grizzly hairs to their natural color and at the same time leave the hair light and fluffy.

The tremendous success of La Creole Hair Dressing has encouraged a large number of imitations. The merit of this preparation has been proven through fifty years continuous use; and just as counterfeit money never reaches the same high plane of value as the genuine, so none of the imitations of "La Creole" Hair Dressing ever attain the peculiar value of the original. Ask for "La Creole" Hair Dressing and refuse to accept any substitute. For sale by all dealers. Price $1.00. Manufactured by Van-Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

CHINA FIGHTING THE GREAT WHITE PLAGUE.

"Led by the Social Service Committee of the Y. M. C. A., one hundred and fifty men took part recently in the distribution of anti-tuberculosis literature. Some was sold and some was given away," writes Missionary James M. Yard, of Chengtu, West China. "We sold 4500 calendars, telling what to do to prevent tuberculosis. Every street in the city was covered in our campaign.

"It was fine to see the students willing to carry big bundles of tracts under their arms and to sell them on the streets. They were 'serving society,' as they expressed it. But that sort of thing is new in China. Such men have been 'brought up' on the Gospel."

WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SINEEBAUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, backache, headaches, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

To do this, one requirement is proper attention to diet and pure food. Also rest and fresh air, day and night.

SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Sardis District Conference met in the new Methodist Church at Coldwater, Miss., July 10. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. H. Brooks of Senatobia, after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered. On Tuesday the business session convened with Rev. J. H. Holder in the chair. Though new in the eldership, he presided with ease and dignity and added much to the success of the Conference. The morning of the first day was given largely to the visiting brethren who wanted to present their claims and get to other places. Rev. J. B. Randolph represented the Orphans' Home, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the Sunday school work, and Rev. Robt. Selby, Emory University. The afternoon was given largely to hearing reports of the Sunday school work. Most of the pastors spoke encouragingly of progress made in the Sunday schools. The Conference Field Agent has been doing consistent work and the results are beginning to come to light. A great many new organized Bible classes were reported and several new teacher-training classes. An encouraging fact is that the new Sunday school methods are beginning to get out into the country circuits. The Sardis District intends to lead the Conference in the number of organized Bible classes. The Batesville Sunday school gave the best report. The average attendance for the past six months has been 138. Every class in the school of proper age is organized and all the points in the standard of efficiency are fully met. The Sunday school contest was fully discussed and no objections to a properly conducted contest were found. Rev. Robt. Selby preached at the evening hour.

The emphasis during Wednesday's sessions was placed on evangelism. Pastoral evangelism and the "one-to-win-one" campaign were favored. A substantial increase in church membership was shown in those charges where meetings have been held. The educational interests were presented by Dr. J. M. Sullivan of Millsaps College and Rev. B. P. Jaco of Grenada College. Both schools were reported in good condition. Rev. B. P. Jaco preached at night.

Thursday was Laymen's day. A good representation from all over the district was present and the following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: P. T. Callicott of Coldwater, N. A. Wilroy of Hernando, Herbert Holmes of Senatobia, and Mr. Birmingham of Byhalia; alternates, J. D. Turley of Coldwater, and E. T. Keeton of Senatobia. Mr. Chambley of Coldwater was elected Lay Leader. The committee on Lay Activities presented a report favoring the organization of the stewards on circuits into a board and the payment of pastors' salaries monthly in full through the treasurer of the Board, even though the Board of Stewards be compelled to borrow the money to make full monthly payments. The Conference was brought to a close with a sermon by Rev. Melville Johnston of Hernando.

The pleasure and profit of the Conference were greatly increased by three inspirational addresses given by Rev. J. C. Park of Sardis on "Jesus' dealing with the Doubting, with the Delinquent, and with the Idealists." The presence and timely advice of Rev. B. P. Jaco was also a source of pleasure to the Conference.

The Conference voted unanimously that a more loyal and hospitable people than the Coldwater Methodists could not be found. The town was opened to the preachers and delegates and everything possible was done for their comfort and pleasure. Rev. H. G. Roberts and his people have just completed a beautiful new church which is a thing of beauty and will be a joy for years to come.

The next Conference will be held at Hernando. J. H. BROOKS.

TESTIMONY FROM A HIGH SOURCE.

Dr. Henry C. Adams, of the University of Michigan, now Adviser to the Commission of the Chinese Republic on Standardization of Railway Accounts, at Peking, said recently:

"When I came out to China I did not think much of foreign missions or foreign missionaries, but now I take off my hat to the missionaries. I have never contributed much to foreign missions, but when I get home I shall put everything that I can spare into the foreign missionary collection. They are a noble lot of men and women and are rendering a very great service to the people of China."

WAR BETWEEN GOOD AND EVIL.

There is a war raging, it is obvious to everyone, between good and evil, but many men would fain be neutral. They would saunter through life like the country squire who went out with the hounds between the contending armies on the morning of the battle of Edgehill, indifferent to the rival claims of king and parliament.—W. C. E. Newboldt.

Use of Sweet Dreams Recommended By Health Officials and Physicians

And why?

There is more sickness and disease in the path of the mosquito than in that of any other carrier to be contended with.

Keep the mosquito off and the disease is avoided.

Physicians and Health Officials have said that Sweet Dreams is the very best mosquito remedy to be had.

A million users have said that these Physicians and Health Officials have told the truth, and a million indications point to the fact that Sweet Dreams should become your mosquito remedy to-night.

Double strength; just a quarter; everywhere.

SECULAR NEWS.

San Antonio, Texas, is planning for a Pan-American Exposition in 1918—the 200th anniversary of its founding.

Fierce man-eating sharks have been greatly disturbing bathers at the watering places along the upper Atlantic Coast. It is quite unusual for these monsters of the deep to make their appearance so far north.

The Honorable Mr Montagu, who has succeeded Mr Lloyd-George as Minister of Munitions, the latter taking General Kitchener's place. Secretary of State for War, is a Jew. It scarcely needs to be said that he is regarded as a man of great capacity.

The New York Independent has announced that it will support Mr. Hughes for the Presidency. This, however should not cause President Wilson's friends much alarm, as the Independent four years ago supported Mr Taft, who received 15 electoral votes.

Dr. O'Reilly, of the City Board of Health, reports that the number of deaths in New Orleans for the past six months was 539 less than for the corresponding period last year. The figures are as follows: for the first six months of 1915, 3975; for the first six months of 1916, 3436.

General Goethals' resignation as Governor of the Panama Canal Zone has been accepted by President Wilson. It is expected that the great engineer, who has wrought so well, will be relieved in the near future. He has been given the rank of a Major General in the Army and will be retired on the pay allowed those holding that office.

The French and British forward movement on the western front continues slowly but surely to succeed and Russia continues to be quite aggressive on the eastern front. The initiative in prosecuting hostilities seems to have passed to the Allies and the prospect is more gloomy for the Central Powers than at any time since the outbreak of the great war.

Villa seems evidently to have come to life again in Mexico, and, according to reports, is waging an aggressive warfare against the forces of the de facto Government. General Carranza is stated to have said a few days ago that the negotiations with our Government were proceeding quite satisfactorily. He has also been talking of the possibility of holding a Presidential election in Mexico in the not remote future.

A dreadful epidemic of infantile paralysis has been prevailing in New York City for several weeks, which has caused hundreds of deaths among children, and which the health authorities have been powerless to check. The interior country has been quarantining against the great metropolis, and the situation seems to be quite serious. This disease is regarded as contagious, but how it spreads is unknown.

The Orleans Parish School Board has found it necessary to reduce the salaries of teachers in the public schools of the city about 6 per cent, which amounts to about half a month's salary to each instructor. The Department of Research, of which Dr. David Spence Hill was the official head, has also been abolished, and the extra pay granted instructors classed as "superior teachers" was discontinued. By thus cutting it down, the budget of the School Board is said to have been brought within its income, which is estimated at $1,140,000. The Board is stated to be in debt to the amount of more than $700,000.

Hon. John Hessin Clarke, a Federal District Judge at Cleveland, Ohio, has been named by President Wilson to succeed Hon. Charles E. Hughes on the United States Supreme Bench. He was born at Lisbon, O., Sept. 18, 1857; was graduated from the Western Reserve University in 1877, and was admitted to the Ohio bar in 1878. He has been identified with progressive movements, and ran against Mark Hanna for the United States Senate in 1908. He is an orator, a bachelor, and has been a lifelong Democrat. This appointment, though it increases the number of Democrats on the Supreme Bench, still leaves a majority of its members Republicans.

Mrs. John Dibert has added $100,000 to her former donation to the New Orleans Tuberculosis Hospital, bringing the total of her gifts to this institution up to $300,000. The city of New Orleans has donated a site for it and has pledged an annual appropriation of $10,000 to aid in its maintenance. Plans are being matured for a three-story building, with a large recreation room in the center which is estimated to cost $150,000. The following are on the Advisory Committee of the association: Dr. L. Theo Lyons, Dr. Alan B. Elliott, Dr. Luther Sexton, Dr. J. A. Dana, and Dr. T. S. Wilson. Dr. Eldridge Marks and Dr. J. C. Langford were also named as advisers, but found it impossible to serve.

The Boy Deserves the Best.

Will he look back from the vantage point of thirty and feel that you were a wise parent in the selection of a school for him, or will he think that if you had given his case more careful attention, you would have placed him in a school where he would have received better training?

The thoughtful, considerate parent feels that the school to which he sends his son must be equipped and its faculty chosen with the primary end of training the boy to become a man—to teach true Christian faith, to develop manly independence and self-confidence, to inspire high ideals of life and service, to strengthen and develop mind and body alike.

Such an institution is the Morgan School, of Fayetteville, Tenn., which has been built up around the Christian character and wholesome, inspiring personality of Robert K. Morgan, who has been principal for 25 years. Graduating from the Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and Vanderbilt University, Mr. Morgan has devoted his life to the training of boys. He is the man to train your boy. The close, personal instruction and association with clean, high-minded men will help him wonderfully. A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., will bring you a catalog and full information about this school.

MOUNTAIN AND RURAL FIELDS IN THE SOUTH.

The following are extracts from a paper by Mr. John C. Campbell, of the Russell Sage Foundation: "The South as a whole is rural. By South is here meant the nine Southern States of which the Southern Highland Region is a part. This is practically all of the South below the Ohio and east of the Mississippi River. The combined area of these States—Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama—is 345,332 square miles. Its population is 17,521,672, of which 21.7 per cent is urban and 78.3 per cent is rural.

"In the Highland Region of the South the population is about five and a quarter million. It is predominantly native-born American. According to the last government census, 11.7 per cent were negro and 1.7 per cent were foreign-born. Of this population, nearly four and one-half million are rural. In the whole mountain territory there are but six cities of 25,000 inhabitants and more, and but ninety-one incorporate communities of 2500 inhabitants and over.

"There are many regions where there is no cohesive community life—scattered but numerous homes, isolated but with congested home life—homes whose needs a community pastor cannot meet alone, where local agencies are non-existent and non-local agencies inoperative.

"Then will it not be our duty to see to it that there are introduced into these wide and needy fields, in addition to the minister, the skilled Christian physician, the nurse, and the trained rural worker, each working in his own professional sphere, each recognizing the other's work as essentially Christian, and all together exerting a potent influence, corrective of over-developed individualism and an equally potent influence for rural co-operation? This kind of Church work is the harbinger of a better day for the mountains."

Like a Boy at 50 Bubbling Over With Vitality—Taking Iron Did It

Doctor says Nuxated Iron is greatest of all strength builders—Often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks time.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fifteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctored for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M.D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

From the Field

Harmony Church, Iuka Ct.

We have just elosed a meeting at Harmony, conducted hy Rev. W. C. Carlisle of Guntown, Miss. Despite the inclement weather which hrought the meeting to an early close, we really had a revival of "old time," heartfelt religion. At the elosing service singers ceased to sing, speakers hushed in silence, and each one present gave a hearty handshake. The Spirit did his work, and everyone seemed as if the soul were "strangely warmed." Brother Carlisle won the love and respect of the people of Harmony, who declared their enjoyment of the meeting.—Wm. I. White.

Vancleave, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: We are emerging from the storm and find ourselves in the midst of great destruetion. The reports one gets from the daily newspapers do not set forth the real condition of the interior. The destruction of timber was something fearful. The crops were damaged in Jackson County, especially within the bounds of the Vancleave Circuit, to not less than fifty per cent, if not to as mueh as seventy-five per cent. People's houses were considerahly injured by the storm, and in many places all outhouses, barns, etc., were blown down. The Mount Pleasant Church was blown off its blocks, and the New Prospect Camp Ground Tabernaele was demolished. Other churehes on the circuit were considerably damaged. I am rellahly informed that the Pine Grove Church on the Mentorum charge is a wreek. So you can see that we have suffered untold losses in the rural parts of South Mississippi.—W. L. Blackwell, P. C.

Cochrane, Ala.

I would like to infringe upon a few moments of your time to tell you of our meeting at Panola, Ala., on the Cochrane work. Brother A. S. Raper of Shuqualak, Miss., eame to us on the second Sunday in June, and did the preaching for us, and to say he did it well only mildly expresses a fact. Brother Raper is truly a man of God, and filled with the Holy Spirit to an extent that enables him to impress upon the unconverted the danger of living apart from God. As this is my first year on this work, I will only repeat what one of the older settlers said about the attendance, which was in substance as follows: "We have never had as large or more attentive congregations at any series of meetings held here as we are having now."

As to the spiritual interest manifested, I can truthfully say that the whole community was greatly revived, and that a work was done the influence of which on the ehureh and eommunity eternity alone can tell. We had 11 accessions to the Chureh, 10 hy profession of faith, and 1 by certificate. The pastor had charge of the singing, and was assisted by a capable eholr. We ask the prayers of the editor and all the brethren for a great revival in all the churches on this work, and we give God the praise for the one just closed.—Jno. W. Robertson, P. C.

July 17, 1916.

Olive Branch (N. Miss. Conf.)

Dear Doctor Meek: On July 11 we closed a revival meeting of ten days at Olive Branch, Miss., with Rev. J. A. Bowen to assist. We had quite a revival in the Church, and had 17 accessions as a result. Brother Bowen is a fine revivalist, and preaches as "one having authority." He prays like heaven and earth are close together—and so they are to the Christian.

We have begun a meeting at Mineral Wells, Miss., with Rev. B. S. McLemore, of Memphis, to do the preaching and Mr. Irwin N. Price, of Cincinnati, to lead the singing. Brother McLemore is a live wire for Christ, hence a good revivalist. Mr. Price is one of the best singers in the land, and any preacher would do well to secure his services for revial work. A letter addressed to him at Memphis in the general delivery would reach him. We are starting off well here at Mineral Wells. We see and feel the manifestation of the power of the Holy Spirit in every service and are expecting still greater results.

Our charge, especially the church at Olive Branch, has made considerable advancement in the last year. We have maintained a fine mid-week prayer meeting, in which the pastor has not had to lead very many times during the year. Men who had never before taken any part in any public service are leading in prayer and testifying for Christ. We can see a great growth of grace in the Church. And our people are growing in other ways. As an evidence, they have increased the pastor's salary over any preceding year. We have re-covered and made other improvements upon the parsonage and the premises. The ladies have put some new furniture into the parsonage and are planning to do more on this line. We have three good Sunday schools, and all of them observed Children's Day with good results. This is our fourth year here and we hope to be able to turn over to our successor a better charge than it was when we came. Olive Branch is the second town in size in De Soto County, situated on the Frisco R. R., eighteen miles from Memphis. It is clean and progressive. Its citizens are harmonious, law-abiding, and clever.

We have two good churches—Methodist and Baptist. And we have two good schools, one of which, is the County Agricultural High School.—T. H. Porter.

LETTERS THAT INSPIRE CONFIDENCE.

I wish very much that every reader of the New Orleans Advocate could spend sufficient time in my office to read the thousands of letters which I have received from all parts of the country. I have printed several hundreds of them in a booklet, but I wish you could see the originals, for I would like to have you realize the wonderful results which they report in the relief of dyspepsia, indigestion, persistent headaches, rheumatism, gall stones, kidney, bladder and liver diseases, uric acid poisoning and other conditions due to impure blood.

Before my own health was restored by Shivar Mineral Water and I purchased this Spring, and before I received all these letters from sufferers, I didn't take very much stock in advertisements like this. I therefore cannot blame you if you doubt, but, my friend, I am absolutely convinced that the Shivar Spring is the greatest restorative mineral spring ever discovered, not excepting the famous Spas of Europe. I have shipped this water to thousands of sufferers in all parts of the United States and they almost invariably report either permanent restoration or beneficial results. That is why I make the guarantee offer contained in the following letter. Sign it now and mail it.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17J, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

A REVIVAL AT ZWOLLE, LA.

From the beginning of the Conference year the pastor and some of our people had prayed daily for a revival in Zwolle; so on June 18 we began a series of services. Brother W. H. Brown, of Dallas, Texas, did the preaching with the exception of two services, Brother Ware of Noble, La., preaching once, and the pastor conducting one service. Brother Ware led the singing for us part of the time. Brother Brown is a successful spiritual, fearless preacher. He did not fail to warn the people. He condemned card-playing, dancing, picture shows, Sabbath desecration, whiskey and beer drinking, gambling, backbiting and various other, if not all, sins and vices in clear, uncompromising language. The Lord was with us in great power and graciously blessed scores of souls. Some backsliders were reclaimed, sinners were convicted, mourners were converted and Christians were built up and made stronger in the holy faith. There were more than fifty who professed religion during the revival. Some old people were converted.

The services closed Sunday night, July 2, with a large congregation present and a glorious service, during which there were some bright conversions; one member received by certificate, 21 on profession of faith (two gave their names for membership in the Baptist Church), and among the several baptized was a baby a few months old and an old gray-haired man. Many of our people are happier in their hearts and homes. The spiritual life of our church has been deepened. Since the revival we have organized a Junior League with twenty-eight members and several others are yet to join, and our prayer meetings have been better attended and more spiritual. As a whole, our work is in a good condition, and we are confident of closing a most successful year.

MY SUMMER REPORT.

Dear Brother Meek; After many efforts I have succeeded to-day in writing a brief report of myself and affairs.

I resolved the first of this year to add a little new ground to my old garden, but the fencing was a trouble. I had a little money, but whether to spend it, or a part of it, for a fence when none was coming in, was hard to decide. So I wrote a layman to whom I had talked face to face and heart to heart about our Lord and the home of the soul, and said to him: "If you are going to send me any money this year, as you have done at different times, I need a little now, for my garden fence." In about three days I got a check from him for $10, which enabled me to complete my fence. I returned thanks, and confessed my impudence in addressing him thus, but he corrected me and said: "Between ordinary, or so-called friends' 'cheek,' or impudence, is admissible, but our friendship will live while we live, and will cross over the last river and live forever," etc. What a treasure a true friend is!

I find myself weaker in body and mind this year than ever before. I do the smallest amount of manual labor, and in conversation, and in trying to preach, I often lose my line of thought. There are, however, exceptions. The third Sunday in last month Brother Alford had me to take his place in the elegant little city of Columbia, and I had a number of gray heads before me, ladies in particular, and how alert and eager they seemed to be to catch every word that was said to the last, and I gave way to a hearty outburst of joy.

I have written this with suffering, but trust some may enjoy it. Pardon my pencil, Brother Meek.

IN WORK AND IN PLAY the girls of Ward-Belmont are stimulated to their finest interest, enjoyment and achievement in all that leads to their physical, social, intellectual and moral development. Inspired by delightful surroundings and associations and encouraged by the kindly influence and close, personal instruction of master-minds, our young women enter with hearty enthusiasm into every activity of college life.

In the class room or in the saddle, in the swimming pool or in the laboratory, at tennis and basket ball, or in the studio and domestic science, the noblest ideals of efficient, wholesome, practical and cultured womanhood are the common goal of WARD-BELMONT students.

The fifty or more instructors comprising the faculty, are selected for their culture, ability, experience and moral fitness from the leading American and European Universities, Conservatories and Studios. The beautiful campus and buildings, representing an investment of more than half a million dollars, afford every comfort, convenience and facility for the protection and training of body and mind.

In Nashville, "The Athens of the South," the center of Southern education and culture, favored by the peerless winter climate of the beautiful bluegrass region of Tennessee, young women from the best homes of the South, East and West meet in delightful and profitable association to enjoy the distinctive advantages of a thoroughly appointed institution of national prestige and patronage.

In Literary Work, in Music, Art, Expression, Home Economics, and Physical Training, the facilities and instruction at WARD-BELMONT meet the exacting demands of a most discriminating patronage. The Academic Course includes Preparatory, High School and College Work. Session opens September 20th.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 63—No. 31. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3154.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 3, 1916. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

MARY WERLEIN MISSION.

Few people not in actual touch with the work being done at Mary Werlein Mission realize how broad is the scope and how big are the possibilities that it furnishes for the establishment of one of the greatest missions in the South.

It is situated in one of the most congested sections of the tenement district of New Orleans and the conditions which exist there are appalling. The old houses are disease breeders, and the stories of conditions narrated by our missionaries in foreign lands could be told of many of the homes in this section.

The physical conditions are not the worst of the story. The ignorance and superstition of the people concerning Divine things are almost past behlief save to one who goes among them every day.

As the work done is largely reseue work, there naturally comes the expense of feeding the hungry and clothing the destitute. Many of the men who apply for help are too weak physically to work beeause of a lack of food and a lack of sufficient clothing to present themselves for employment. The missIon averages feeding 100 men per month, and clothes as many as can be provided for. A free reading room and free baths are furnished—these being the only free bathing facilities to which men can go in the city. The average number using the baths is 600 per month.

Besides this work among the "down and out men," our missionary, Mrs. Herr, is giving her life to social and evangelical work in the homes of the tenement district. Modern philanthropy, that puts the main emphasis upon preventive work, is apt to look to childhood and adolescence as the only fields for effort. Mrs. Herr believes that the mother in the home is the most important faetor in preventive work. She says that any reform that stops with the child is apt to fall short of permanent success; so, to the mother in the home she tries to go with new inspiration and new ideals of life.

The primary end that Mrs. Herr has in view combines the following activities:

1. Cottage prayer meetings.
2. Fresh air work (picnies, eountry week, ete.).
3. A community parlor at the Mission—reading room.
4. Certain forms of club work.
5. Co-operation with Associated Charities in preventing pauperism, and with the Juvenile Court in preventing crime.
6. Better housing conditions—clean streets and alleys—doing away with open gutters, etc.

These are a few of the things which this community needs most, but the Mission must suit the number of its activities to the financial help available, and this is where the work is handicapped and where it necessarily falters for lack of funds. Ours is a great opportunity; the location is right, because we have social and industrial points of eontact that exist nowhere else. The soul-hunger of the people Is pathetic and appealing. Shall the work at Mary Werlein Mission lag for lack of adequate finances when there are those enlisted who are giving their very lives to Its propagation? Shall we not rally our forees to help to reap the harvest for our Lord?

We believe that the spiritual need of men Is a real need; that there can be no real basis for morality apart from religion, and that Christianity is the final religion. Shall we not then, as Christians, share actively with every man, woman and child our religious hope, striving to bring them into conscious fellowship with the Lord Jesus Christ, which is Christianity?

New Orleans, La. W. E. THOMAS.

"LOVE THY NEIGHBOR AS THYSELF."

Love is a heavenly word. God made it so by giving his only begotten Son to die that sinful men might have eternal life. It was God who loved us first, and he hath said through Jesus Christ, the second person of the Trinity, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." The Almighty hath not dealt with us according to our transgressions nor rewarded us according to our iniquities, but hath shown us unmerited, and therefore unspeakable love and mercy. We ought to respond to his loving kindness by the keeping of his commandments, which were given for our good in this world and in the next. In the giving of commands, both in the Old and New Testament, the word "thou" is used, thus making a direct appeal to the individual heart and conscience. Every command seems to bear upon It the stamp of "Thou art the man" for whom this is uttered. This directness should not be overlooked. God always deals with the individual—he singles him out from among the crowd.

Christ elearly teaehes in the parable of the Good Samaritan that a man's neighhor, on the one band, is he that is in need of assistance, and, on the other hand, he to whom the ability to help and the opportunity for doing so have been intrusted. Some man will always be found capable of conveying or receiving aid of a material or of a spiritual nature, and that man, be he a friend, an acquaintance, a stranger, or an enemy, is our nelghbor. The word "nelghbor," as used by Christ in this instance, is but another name for fellow-man. It is used in the broadest possible sense, including all the men on the face of the earth who happen to be our eontemporaries. There is no man who does not need the love that his fellow-men can give him, and every man has something that he ean give to his fellow-men whieh no other man can—a part of his own individual self. Each has his part to play in the game of life, and, he it great or insignificant in appearance, it is worth the playing. Christ saw fit to state that our love for our neighbors shall be as great as that which we have for ourselves. There is no reason why every one should not have due respect for himself, with St. Paul's safeguard, that he think not more highly of himself than he ought; and a person will have a good opinion of himself, unless he can not, whieh is indeed a sad state for any man to allow himself to fall into. Christ, knowing that every normal man born into the world must have some regard for self until he proves himself unworthy of this, as many do on account of the one-sidedness of their natures, wisely demands that the love which we have for our neighbors shall equal that which we have for ourselves, not only for our own sakes, but also for the sake of our fellow-men. There must be an equilibrium, or in either ease our moral law of gravitation is stronger at one point than at another, and we occupy an extreme and hazardous position, which is not wise; so Christ tells us to love our neighbors as ourselves, but he does not state that we shall love them more than ourselves, though in dealing with them it is well to remember that the first shall be last and the last first. If this commandment is kept, there is no danger of selfishness on the one hand, or of forgetfulness of self on the other, and we think that it would go a good way toward helping to solve our social problems. ROBERT E. MEEK.

SOUND WORDS FROM A HIGH SOURCE.

The colleges and universities of the world have always heen among Its centers of power, and from them have ever come forth mighty forces for both good and evil. From them have emanated both blighting streams of infidelity and heneficent and far-reaching influences for the spiritual quickening of the nations. Such institutions to-day, while they have fostered much that has not heen helpful to Christianity, are not hy any means without those In them who bear up strongly the hanner of the Christian faith. This is true even in Germany, the home and propagator of rationalism and higher critieism. For instance, what nobler message could one wish to read than the following extract from an open letter from Prof. Gustav Warneck, of Halle, to the Edinhurgh Missionary Conference?

"We dare not allow ourselves to be betrayed into the mistake of altering the content of the Gospel message as it was proclaimed hy the apostles. It is universally acknowledged how great at home to-day is the danger of undermining the trustworthiness of the Biblieal Gospel by a destructive critieism, as well as of rationalizing and thereby attenuating its content by modernism. But we should he deceiving ourselves if we refused to perceive that this danger is beginning to threaten us also upon the mission field. And upon this rationalistic depletion of the content of the apostolic Gospel there certainly follows, as is already at this moment the case in Japan, the second, perhaps almost graver danger of syncretism. This, of course, is not merely a question of missionary method, but a crucial question of missionary life. For in the Gospel of Christ, as it was proclaimed hy the apostles and proved by them to he the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, there lies not only the living force to inspire the missionary life at home, but also the power of regeneration for the non-Christian world. The main source of our strength is not in the method, but in the message of this Gospel, in the messengers proclaiming it in the fulness of faith, and In the Christians who have become new creatures thereby."

WHY SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY IS A GOOD PLACE FOR MEN OF WEALTH TO INVEST THEIR MONEY.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

This communication is addressed primarily to men of means—to those whom God has intrusted with more than enough to make life barely comfortable, and who are asking where they can best invest for the glory of God the wealth which Providence has placed in their hands.

Southern Methodist University is the outgrowth of a popular movement. The great foundation which has been laid here, and the great work which has been begun under such auspicious circumstances, owe their inception not to any one man, but to many. With the exception of $200,000 from the General Board of Education, no gift larger than $25,000 has come to the University, and two so large as that. Most of the gifts have been comparatively small, and have come out of the prayers and self-sacrifice of men and women who love God and his Church. No holier offerings have ever been made to God's kingdom than to Southern Methodist University. More than 15,000 individuals have made contributions. The Church has never seen anything like this.

Henceforth the University must depend more on those of larger means. The time has come when we are able to come with confidence to wealthy men and offer Southern Methodist University as an institution offering large returns for large investments. I desire to set down briefly why Southern Methodist University is a good place to invest money.

1. Southern Methodist University is the one connectional university for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, west of the Mississippi River—made such by action of the General Conference. Its claims and opportunities are thus guaranteed by the whole Church.

2. Its attendance during the first year of its history was 706—the largest attendance ever enrolled by any university in America during its first year. Henceforth our problem is not the problem of getting students, but of getting money for dormitories to house the students who wish to come, and endowment that our professors may be adequately supported.

3. The financial management of the University is such as to commend it to men of means. We are happy to announce that the university has met all current expenses this first year. Every teacher has been paid in full and all overhead expenses have been paid.

But note this: Many of our teachers, having faith in the Church and Southern Methodist University, are working for salaries entirely too small. I appeal to men who are stewards of God's money to come to the assistance of these men who for love of God are serving the Church and the cause of Christian education.

4. There are no school buildings in the South equal to those on our campus. A visit to the University and a sight of these imposing buildings will reveal the fact that we have built and are building for the centuries. There is no place where one may be surer that one's money will go on bearing thirty fold, and sixty fold, and a hundred fold long years after his body has gone back to dust.

5. Just before our recent Commencement the executive committee employed expert assistance, and went into the minutest examination of the financial condition of the University, just as the government examines into the affairs of a national bank. Two gratifying facts were revealed: (1) No mortgage or lien lies against the campus, the buildings, the equipment, or the endowment. (Let the significance of this fact be not overlooked.) (2) The assets of the University exceed the liabilities by $2,602,935 (and let it be carefully observed that such liabilities as we have do not lie against the University proper, but against certain property that has been improved and against certain notes held by the corporation). This is the strongest point in this communication. Our trust has been administered in such a way as to commend the University to men of means.

6. The University directly determines the character of teaching done in the small college and the public school. We must have the school and the small college. They bring education down to the people in a close and personal way. But men who teach in these schools have been trained in the University; and what is taught in the University comes directly to the small college and the school. Exactly in this way Chicago and Columbia are giving character to what is taught and to methods used in our colleges throughout the South and West. The point of this paragraph is just this: If Methodism is to influence those who attend smaller institutions, she must have her Universities; else we shall turn over the training of our teachers to others.

7. This brings us to another fact. In all the South there is not one great university. In no list of, say, the fifteen great universities in the United States, would one find named one single Southern University. I find that there are twenty-two universities having membership in The Association of American Universities. Only one of these is in the South, namely, the University of Virginia. The University of Missouri is also one of these; but Missouri can hardly be called "the South," being rather the Middle West. Surely the time has come when the South ought to have her proper part in the educational forces of America. And surely the time has come when Methodism ought to have her proper influence. Certainly there is no finer field to be found in the world. Look at the map of the United States. See what the future holds for this part of our land. Men of means, for love of land as well as for love of Church, do something that is worth while!

8. And once more, consider that it takes large money to build a university. We have barely made a beginning at Southern Methodist University; $2,500,000 is just a good, hopeful 'start.' When we write the word "university," we are not thinking in terms of thousands, but in terms of millions of dollars. A university is a big concern, and cannot be built and maintained without big money. Take, for example, a few figures, which are only approximately correct: Columbia University is represented by $38,000,000; Leland Stanford, Jr., by $30,000,000; the University of Chicago by $26,000,000; Cornell, by $15,000,000; Yale, by $13,000,000. These figures ought not to discourage us. They should call us to larger consecration. Heretofore the South has been poor. We are poor no longer. We also have now our men of large means. These great institutions were not made by popular subscription. They were made great by great gifts from wealthy individuals. Emory University in Atlanta has been made possible by the princely gift of a wealthy and liberal layman who loves his Church and his country and his God. If Southern Methodist University is to be made the great institution which it ought to become, it will be made such by the gifts of the rich as well as by the sacrifice of the poor. In view of the facts here presented, I submit that there is no place within the bounds of our Church, and none in America, where large money will bring greater returns than here in Dallas, at Southern Methodist University.

After the manner of the preachers, let me say "finally" that our Church has certain educational standards which must be measured up to. No institution in our Church can be classified as a university unless it has at least $1,000,000 in productive endowment. While our buildings, our equipment, and our endowment is much more than is necessary to a college in the "A" class, we are not building a college here, but a University. The potential assets of the University make it certain that we shall later have a liberal endowment. But our present need of endowment is urgent, and the opportunity is inspiring. Not that we have set before us the minimum of one million dollars endowment as a goal. We shall go far beyond that. We must take our place with the great universities of the country. But let us first reach the minimum. We invite the closest scrutiny into all the business affairs of the University.

Dallas, Texas.

THE CHURCH HAS SPOKEN.

Dear Dr. Meek: Would it not be well for us to keep in mind just exactly what our Church has said and done in the matter of the question of unification of American Methodism? To what extent are we, as a Church, committed to the principle? Of course, the Church as a whole has never expressed itself, but our last General Conference, acting for the Church, did express its mind in the most explicit terms.

I have just gone over the Daily Christian Advocate of the Oklahoma General Conference. In the number of May 16 appears "Report No. 8 of the Committee on Church Relations and Bible Cause." It was presented the day before, and was sent to the calendar. On the afternoon of May 21, with Bishop Hoss in the chair, the report came on to be heard. The brief discussion was opened by F. M. Thomas, chairman of this committee, who was also a member of the Federal Council which formulated the basis for unification. In his remarks he referred to two members of this Federal Council, and to their work in formulating the report which was submitted to the General Conferences for consideration. In these references he said, "You will find in there (the report) the great brain of Alpheus W. Wilson. He said in one meeting of our Joint Commission: 'Great as have been the achievements of the twentieth century, the greatest achievement of modern times will be the unification of Methodism.'" Referring to another, evidently Bishop Hoss, he said, "You will find written in this document the mind and thought of one who, to my mind, is not only the greatest figure Southern Methodism has produced, but the greatest Tennesseean of this generation." At the conclusion of Dr. Thomas' remarks, W. N. Ainsworth moved that Bishop Hoss be invited to speak to the Conference concerning the report, saying, "Some of us know that no living man has invested more in this tentative plan of union than the distinguished gentleman who sits in the chair"—Bishop Hoss. Then this great and good man arose and spoke, concluding his remarks with the following sentences: "I think you are moving on the right lines. This is not final; nobody dreams it is final; no one man is wise enough to frame a plan of union of all Methodism. We should go on: after a time Almighty God will put his hand in, and this thing will come to pass. We can not cure all the ills of the past by rehearsing them. Some things are buried; let them stay buried until the angel of the resurrection comes. I pray God that the day may come, somehow and at some time, in which all the forces of Methodism may be organized into such a form as to constitute an organized, disciplined army for the spread of the kingdom of God." After this irenic utterance by the good Bishop, he put the question, saying, "If you will adopt this report, please rise and stand until you are counted."

"The entire body arose."

"Bishop Hoss: Now I do not wish to have any mistake about this. If there is anybody here who is opposed to it I want him to arise and stand until he is counted."

"Bishop Hoss: It gives me great pleasure to say to our brethren that there is no dissenting vote."

But what was it the General Conference adopted with such great unanimity and deep earnestness? The entire report was recently published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and it is unnecessary to repeat it here. Let it suffice to say here that the report of the Joint Commission embodied eight suggestions as a tentative basis, "as a plan of reorganization, the merging of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, into one Church." The Committee on Church Relations, having this report of the Joint Commission in hand, recommended that the General Conference, in approving it, make three "declarations." The first was that "The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, considers that the plan outlined in the suggestions as tentative, but nevertheless as containing the basic principles of a genuine unification." The second declaration says, "The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, regards the unification by the method of reorganization, approved by the Commission on Federation, as feasible and desirable, and hereby declares itself in favor of the unification in accordance with this general plan of reorganization." This declaration closes with this statement, "However, we recommend that the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies be formed into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church." The third declaration is an enabling act, empowering our Commissioners to continue the negotiations, and on certain conditions to enlarge the Commission, and to "report to the next General Conference the full details of the plan of unification which may be agreed upon." It closes this declaration by saying that "the name preferred for the reorganization and united Church is the Methodist Church in America."

It would be well for one to read this entire report which the General Conference adopted so unanimously and with such evident earnestness. It can be found in the number of the Advocate for May 25, last. This, together with the quotations I have made above from the Daily Advocate, make plain that a profound conviction was in the mind, and a genuine hunger in the heart, of the brethren at Oklahoma for the reunion of American Methodism. To find less than this in their action one must indict them for sincerity, which I am sure no one cares to do. The words uttered were so explicit, and the action taken so positive, that no one reading these proceedings can fail to see that the sacred troth of Southern Methodism has been plighted to the principle of unification of the American Methodist Churches. To bring up from their resting places the ghosts of the past, which should lie "buried until the angel of the resurrection comes;" to unduly magnify the mistaken zeal or ill advised words of advocate or adversary of unification; to voice suspicions of fair dealings against a majority in a unified Church; to slur the motives of advocates of union; to continually emphasize the difficulties that lie in the way of unification, savor of the very essence of disunion, and can but be provocative of discord and dissension.

Out of the tragic sadness of '44 came the separation. One acquainted with the literature of that event can hardly deny that the division was without passion on both sides. From the heated atmosphere of that New York General Conference the storm clouds over our Church and Nation began to rise. They accumulated until in the early sixties they burst with their pitiless fury. That bloody four years' war was a direct sequence of the division of Episcopal Methodism; for most certainly the estrangements created there were potent factors contributing to the causes for the war between the States. But after having read carefully the whole history of that division, I do not see how mortal man could have avoided it. Possibly it was the purpose of our Father that the division should occur. Our fathers, after much fasting and prayer, sought a via media. But none was found. With grief of the most sable hue, the 150 delegates-elect, every one of whom voted on the first vital issue of the Andrew case, turned their faces homeward, the majority to the North, the minority to the South—but not one who did not carry a heavy heart. There is, indeed, a weary wilderness stretch between then and the time of meeting of the Cape May Commission in August, '76, twenty-two years. In '94 at the General Conference in Memphis a Committee, of which Bishop (then Dr.) Hoss was chairman, brought in a report on Federation. Out of this has grown the Joint Commission on Federation, of which Bishop Hoss has ever since been a member. Through these twenty-two years the lines of divergence have been growing less acute, and now they are becoming lines of convergence. They have not met yet. But, under God, I hope and trust and pray, and shall work, that they may meet, and continue one until they end at the throne of Redeeming Love.

It is as foolish to minify the difficulties as it is to magnify them. There are not just a few minor differences to be adjusted. To teach the public so is to give a false impression. There are real difficulties to be overcome. Some of them are constitutional, some are temperamental. There are many that are imaginary ones. But when our Joint Commission comes together in the fear of God to seek a common basis on which all can agree, the most of these differences will disappear; and, if it please God for us to come together at this time, he will show them a way to solve the two or three real difficulties, which, it appears to me, are soluble.

But the important matter to keep in mind is the FACT that Southern Methodism, through its General Conference, is pledged to the principle of Methodist Union. She has said that she desired it; she has said, perhaps not explicitly, but certainly implicitly, that she believes it possible. To that happy consummation she has directed her agents to co-operate with the agents of other Methodist communions. Shall we now throw obstacles in the way? Shall we continue to keep before our people the difficulties that confront us, and cause our people to despair? "And they brought up an evil report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land through which we have gone to search it, is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof; and all the people we saw in it are men of a great stature. And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, which were come of the giants: and we were in our own sights as grasshoppers, and so were we in their sight. And all the congregation lifted up their voice and cried; and the people wept that night." Others said, "Let us go up and possess it; for we are able to overcome it." And the voice of faith was true. God gave them a great victory. There are difficulties in the way of a unified Methodism. But we are pledged to the principle of unification, and under God's guidance we can overcome these hindrances, unless we are in our own sight as grasshoppers, and give up ere we begin.

It is true the Saratoga General Conference made some recommendations which are not to our liking. It appears to some of us down this way that our Northern brethren have laid a somewhat heavy burden on their Commissioners by these recommendations. But the whole case is wide open yet. They are only recommendations, not instructions, and therefore not binding. If they were, the matter would be halted for the present. But no one understands that their limitations are thus fixed. Dr. Chappell, who was our Fraternal Messenger to that General Conference, in a wonderfully interesting article in a recent issue of the Nashville Advocate, said: "Not a man who talked with me, and there were many who did so, spoke of unification for the sake of ecclesiastical aggrandizement, but all based their desire for it on the high ground that the interest of the great common task to which the two Churches are called requires it. Several of the delegates spoke to me about a world-wide Methodism, but I do not believe one of them thought of the possibility that this great organization should be dominated by the Methodist Episcopal Church. On the contrary, most of them seemed simple enough or daring enough to dream of a union so complete and genuine that each of the bodies entering into it would lose its separate identity, and all of them assumed that such provision would be made for the local autonomy of the several sections of the Church as to furnish each of them protection against any danger of being imposed upon by the others."

A VOICE FROM THE NORTH.

(The following communication was received a few days ago from Rev. George A. Cooke, pastor of the Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, of Wilmington, Delaware.—Ed. Advocate.)

My Dear Brother: I am a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church and have been a member of five Annual Conferences. After twenty-five years in the ministry I profess to know something about Methodism and claim a right to speak for my Church. If you will permit, I should like to say a few words to your readers on the subject of the organic union of Methodism.

I attended the General Conference at Saratoga Springs, but not as a delegate. I took a great interest in all that was done on the subject of Methodist union. I was sorely grieved and disappointed at the shabby way this important matter was treated. There was no discussion upon any phase of the subject, and apparently every effort was made to generate excitement and emotion at the expense of information. If two great Christian Churches are to disorganize and reorganize as one communion, the subject should be approached with caution and candor. The unseemly effort to rush things to a conclusion, as instanced by the action of our Saratoga Conference in planning for an adjourned session in 1918, is to be deplored from every standpoint. I have always lived in the North, but I have a friendly feeling toward Southern Methodism. I hope you will act cautiously and wisely in this matter.

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE A. COOKE.

A WORD ABOUT UNION.

By Bishop E. E. Hoss.

Seeing that some of our Bishops, connectional Secretaries, Conference editors, and other great men are taking the union of the two Methodist Churches as an accomplished fact, "all over except the shouting," I desire to say, as one that has been at least a silent watcher of all the proceedings, that in my poor judgment the end is not yet, and will not be for some time.

1. Not a single thing has been settled—not one. The two Churches stand towards each other exactly as they did five years ago, and will presently proceed to thresh the old straw of past controversies over again, with what result only the future can determine. I hope for the best, and fear the worst.

2. It is true that our Church, in its action at Oklahoma City, made some great concessions in the interest of union, agreeing to give up its historical name, to part with its independence as an ecclesiastical organization and to merge itself into a new Church, in which it would occupy the position of a perpetual minority. What more could anybody have reasonably asked or expected than that? Only one reservation it made, namely, that the General Conference of the new Church should not have the final authority to determine the constitutionality of its own actions. Surely that was not requiring a great deal. Having consented to give up all possibility of controlling affirmative legislation, it certainly had the right to ask for the negative power of protecting itself against unconstitutional statutes by appeal to some kind of impartial judicial tribunal.

3. The Saratoga General Conference, while giving a sort of vague general assent to our "suggestions" as "basic," yet in the same breath bring forward a "recommendation" that means the rejection of this most central stipulation and the substitution in its place of a provision for a General Conference that shall be "a supreme legislative, executive, and judicial body." As a sort of softener to our sensibilities, it is agreed that this "supreme" body may work under constitutional provisions and restrictions." But who is to make these provisions and restrictions effective? Where is any power lodged that can enforce them? No room is left for it anywhere. A body that sits one day to make laws, another day to interpret them, and still another to execute them, is virtually absolute. It is as if the Congress of the United States were also invested by the Constitution with the functions of the Supreme Court and of the President.

The humor of this is almost overwhelming! Did the wise brethren laugh when they proposed to make the General Conference supreme in every possible particular, and then limit it in its operations? Limitations with nobody to see to their execution would he only "a scrap of paper," teliing the General Conference to he good, but leaving it free to he just as bad as it chooses. To suppose that, in the enjoyment of so wide a latitude, it would never trespass upon the fundamental rights of the Church is to suppose a most unlikely thing. No sensible company of Christian men will ever trust its great inheritance of freedom to the mere changing good will of an elective Conference. As matters now stand with us, we are free. But if we consent for one moment to go into a union that gives no shred of guaranty that our freedom shall be preserved, we shall be guilty of a piece of folly without a parallel in the history of Methodism.

Let no man charge me with inconsistency or fickleness. Such a charge is not true. I stand precisely where I stood in the Joint Commission and in the Oklahoma General Conference. A new thing is now before us. Our Northern brethren, not content with our vast concessions, propose simply to swallow us. They have made no concession in return, and it looks as if they proposed to make none. We shall know for certain when we have met their Commission of Twenty-five. They are fine men. I have not a word to say against them. But if they mean to insist on an absoluteism worse even than Leonidas L. Hamline outlined in his "Croton" speech in the General Conference of 1844 then I, for one, am not going with them—and there are others.

As a matter of course, we must meet our Northern brethren with all courtesy and hear what they shall have to say in elucidation of their instructions. If they should decline to offer us anything except the bare privilege of coming into their Church and taking lower seats, it will be our duty to answer that we could have done that any time these fifty years. What we demand, nothing more nor less, is to be dealt with as a full equal in all particulars. On no other basis can we ever negotiate. It is not worth while to talk about it.

I should have kept silent about all these things, if others had set me a good example. But when men of influence are loudly asserting that our proposal for union has been accepted in all its essential features, and that nothing but prejudice now delays the final consummation, I must stand up and meet the assertion with a prompt and vigorous denial. Ask Dr. Spencer whether this assertion is true. OUR PEOPLE OUGHT NOT TO BE DECEIVED NOR DELUDED. THEY SHOULD KNOW THE TRUTH. Nor should we attempt to humbug our Northern brethren. If they are not willing to go forward with the scheme that was adopted tentatively by the Joint Commission and accepted by our General Conference, we shall not blame them. It does not lie within our rights to speak harshly of them, nor to show any ill feeling towards them. They are the Lord's free men and must follow their best judgment. I do not desire a single thing for my own Church that I am not perfectly willing to grant to them also.

SOME FURTHER WORDS TO DR. IVEY.

By the Editor.

We stated last week that we would in this issue of the Advocate notice a few points not covered in our extended reply to Dr. Ivey. First, we desire to say concerning Dr. Ivey's statement in his "postscript" that it is not his purpose to exclude articles adverse to his views on the question of union from the General Organ, and has not been, that we had no means of knowing this when we wrote our editorial, "Discussion in Order," in our issue of June 29. His advice against having anything to say that took cognizance of the difficulties in the way of the movement was so constant and so earnest, that this, together with the fact that up to the time that we wrote and published that utterance, all of the communications that he had printed were favorable to his side, had led us to the contrary opinion. Certainly we had no wish to misrepresent him to the slightest extent.

It should not be inferred from Dr. Ivey's statement that he had printed the gist of one of our editorials, that we were complaining on the score that he had not quoted from us. We have not had the least desire to have our editorials appear in his columns; nor do we feel at all flattered when he reproduces any part of them. Though on the sunny side of fifty, we are past the age when we are tickled by such attention. We have never in our life offered him an unsolicited piece of copy. His little thrust to the effect that we have not reciprocated his recent "favor" should not be misunderstood. Our columns, so far as our space would permit, have been open to disputants on any and all sides of this great issue from the beginning. We will state for Dr. Ivey's information, however, as we have never done so before to him (though we have to others), that, one reason we do not quote oftener from the General Organ is that it circulates to a considerable extent in our territory and we are not disposed to hand out to so many of our subscribers reading matter which they have already seen. We do sometimes publish the same articles that have appeared in the Nashville Advocate, but when this occurrs, except in the case of official communications from some board or Church authority, it is generally when we did not know that they had been sent to our contemporary, or when they were sent to us at the same time and were put in type and we were forced to carry them over because of the crowded conditions of our columns at the last moment. We desire to emphasize the point, however, that it was not so much our confrere's management of his own paper (though we did think that the General Organ ought to be fair to all elements in the Church), as it was what seemed to he his disposition to dictate to other journals and make trouble for them, that called forth our editorial utterance of June 29, which was a plea for the right of discussion, and which, though entirely respectful, led to his severe arraignment of us in the Nashville Advocate of July 14.

About the only other point at issue between Dr. Ivey and us not touched upon to which we think we need to give attention is that which relates to Bishop Hendrix. The temptation is strong to go fully into this matter, quoting what he had to say about the Bishop and his services at Saratoga in the Nashville Advocate of June 2, when the spell of union enthusiasm was fully upon him and comparing it in detail with what he said in his issue of July 14 (we reproduced this in our last issue) after six weeks of cooling down. And we have also felt very much inclined to ask him specifically some questions as to what the Bishop said and did at Saratoga and as to whether he considered them a worthy and ready meeting of every demand and opportunity. But this would take much more space than we have at our disposal and we doubt if our worthy friend would presume to notice interrogations that he might deem rather impertinent, not to say embarrassing.

We will try to group the several points at issue between us relative to this phase of our discussion under three or four heads. 1. The Editor of the Advocate thought that Bishop Hendrix's course at Saratoga and its effects for harm upon the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, were such as to call for public criticism, that, if possible, the injury done might be counteracted. Though we have done so before, we will state again the facts in the case, that our readers may have their minds refreshed as to the grounds of our reasoning and action. The Joint Commission, composed of representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, had matured a plan of union which the General Conferences of the two latter bodies (with some modifications in the case of our Church) had endorsed and passed up to the Northern General Conference. Any further negotiations that might arise, our Church had carefully provided for by appointing a committee of nine able men, who were given specific instructions. Bishop Hendrix had not been on the Joint Commission, is not now on the Committee of Nine, and had received no authority from any official body of our Church to act as her representative and spokesman in connection with the unification proceedings at Saratoga. But when the General Conference Committee of Sixty reported, and an opportunity was extended Bishop Hendrix to say something, while stressing the official relation that he sustained to our Church, he presumed in effect to interpret the action of the Northern General Conference as being substantially acceptable to the Church, South, affirming that the union of the two bodies had thereby been virtually accomplished. In the Daily Advocate (published by the General Conference) he declared, in a conspicuously displayed statement, that "a point of virtual agreement had been reached," and that all that remained to be done was to throw the two General Conferences into a joint body and let them adjust any remaining differences and report through the Joint Commission. He also sent for Dr. Hingeley, a prominent member of the General Conference, assured him there was nothing in the Discipline of the Church, South, against an early union, and influenced him to have the Northern General Conference to adjourn subject to the call of their Bishops, that the merger might have the finishing touches put upon it in 1918, when our General Conference will next meet. Later, in a public address he declared that American Methodists had been wandering in the wilderness and playing the fool forty years (this statement was not merely made in an extemporaneous address as some apologists have stated in the Church press, but was repeated in a widely published interview, of which Dr. Bradfield says the Bishop sent him a typewritten copy); and, furthermore, in the same interview, the veto power of our episcopacy was belittled and all the differences remaining to be adjusted between the two Churches were termed "very minor."

These happenings were reported all over the country in the secular dailies and there was a very general impression in the minds of the people that the union of the two denominations had been practically effected. Not a little excitement prevailed, and ministers passing through the city and stopping at our office stated to us that many of our preachers and people were under the impression that Bishop Hendrix had been officially sent to Saratoga to represent our Church in the union negotiations and was speaking with due authority. Knowing that this was not true, and seeing the harm which was being done Southern Methodism by Bishop Hendrix's course (the present deplorable situation is, in our opinion, one of its inevitable sequences), we felt not a little indignant; so, as soon as we had seen the Daily Advocates and had assured ourself that the Bishop had not been misrepresented, in an editorial under the caption, "Whence His Authority?" we showed that he had not been empowered to do what he had done, and, as he had seized the reins and was essaying largely to direct the whole union movement—a movement of the most delicate nature and the most tremendous significance—we called attention to the character of his leadership in the Vanderbilt controversy and some other things, that our people might be made cautious in following him. And here let it be noted that no one has presumed to call in question the correctness of any statement that we made concerning the Bishop's past course; and that if he was "pilloried," it was by a recital of the facts. Within the past two months, personally and by correspondence, we have been in touch with a number of our Bishops and leading men and not one of them has expressed the view that Bishop Hendrix's course at Saratoga was within the bounds of propriety and his prerogatives. Such was the Editor's course, and such the considerations which prompted him to pursue it.

Now, as we understand him, Dr. Ivey holds that the Bishop's actions and utterances at Saratoga ought to have been passed over by the press of the Church in silence. At any rate, he did so pass them over; yea, he did more than that: he commended them to the extent of writing the following in the Nashville Advocate of June 2:

"That no question can ultimately prevent the union of the two Methodisms that really wish to get together must be taken for granted. The earnestness of the Northern General Conference in this matter was shown in a striking way by the adoption of a resolution to hold an adjourned session of the General Conference in 1918, so that conferences with our General Conference, which will then be in session in Atlanta, may expedite the business of getting together in the matter of unification. This action was foreshadowed by the tremendous applause, equal to an ovation, which was given Bishop Hendrix when in his strong address at the Conference Claimants' Anniversary he said there is no need for the two Churches to wait four years for the consummation of unification. In this connection it should be said that the Northern brethren appreciated the presence of Bishop Hendrix at the Conference, especially on the day when the famous resolutions were adopted. The scene in which Bishops Cranston and Hendrix clasped hands on the platform and brought forth that wild applause which nearly broke up the session was most dramatic and will be historic. As a Southern Methodist I rejoice in the deserved respect and honorable attention shown our Senior Bishop, who proved himself so ready for every demand and opportunity."

If Dr. Ivey is willing to stand by his position, we are willing to stand by ours, and let the Methodist public judge between us. This certainly seems to us to be entirely fair; and there is no need of anybody becoming perturbed about it.

2. Having assured us that he and Bishop Hendrix were as wide apart as the poles on the Vanderbilt issue, and still are, if he holds his same opinions (why this last clause? has the Doctor heard that there has been a recantation?), Dr. Ivey grows pathetic in a plea for the exercise of charity and Christian love. Why, we imagine that we can almost see the tears dripping from the printed lines. He tells us that the Bishop has grown gray in the service of the Church and reminds us that in the course of nature his sun must soon set. But, mind you, this is no plea in behalf of Bishop Hendrix; IT IS A DEFENSE OF THE EPISCOPACY OF SOUTHERN METHODISM. Is not the suggestion here, that of an infirm old man whom the Editor of the Advocate has cruelly persecuted? It would seem so; but, as a matter of fact, the Bishop is quite vigorous both mentally and physically, and we scarcely think that age can be used as an estoppel of a protest against his mistaken doings, when he feels equal to the task of taking the destiny of the whole Church in his hands and would swing it from all its moorings. The Bishop's efforts at leadership were perhaps never more vigorous and aggressive than they are at present. Nor do we think that the service which he has rendered Southern Methodism within the past several years has been of a character to purchase him indulgence to execute, unchallenged, projects that might carry disaster in their wake. We hope that he may have a serene and peaceful sunset, but we are not willing to have it secured at the cost of seeing the glorious heritage bequeathed to us by our fathers, as a result of their toils, sacrifices, and sufferings, swept away. The tender appeal for the display of charity and love should not be allowed to lead us to let the Church, which is vastly more important than any man, be imperiled and wrecked. There is far too much of this in this namby-pamby age. Love is never more divine than when it fearlessly guards and defends its own. The same loving Father who sent his Son to the shameful cross to die for sinful men wields the flaming sword of justice when the higher ends of righteousness demand it. There were notes of love in the exacting commandments of Sinai as well as in the agonies of Calvary. For mistakes recognized and confessed there should indeed be forgiveness and forgetfulness, but not for those which are gloried and persisted in, and the ignoring of which is liable to open the way for others still more tragic and ruinous.

3. Dr. Ivey seems to take the position that the office of a Bishop ought to make the action and utterances of the man who holds it immune from adverse comment—that a Bishop is not amenable to the bar of public opinion and that nothing he does ought ever to be criticised in the public press. He has a perfect right to hold this view, but in it we cannot concur. We think that our Bishops should be highly respected and honored so long as they are faithful and true, but if one of them sees fit to disregard the law of the Church and usurp powers and exercise functions which belong to other bodies, we think that attention may with perfect propriety be called to the fact. To say that there are tribunals to which they are responsible and that they should be left entirely to these, is no refutation of this position, for this is true of every preacher, and such a contention, carried to its logical conclusions, would lift the whole ministry, including even editors, above the plane of any sort of public criticism. Moreover, the Church might suffer untold disasters before these tribunals, according to the operations of the law, could assemble, and there may be hurtful actions that urgently need to be combated that are hardly of a character for such supervisional bodies to take cognizance of them.

If Dr. Ivey can see no difference between the insulting of practically the whole College of Bishops by a hoodlum student body for having obeyed the positive instructions of the General Conference, and criticism of a single Bishop for having gone entirely beyond the pale of the law and the prerogatives of his office, thereby imperilling the sacred interests of the Church, we do not at all envy him his powers of discrimination. He says that the Church will have to reckon with the outcome from our example in the coming years; we reply that his position, that the actions of a Bishop ought never to be called in question publicly, is, in our judgment, fraught with far graver possibilities for evil than is our example, to both the Church and the episcopacy. Southern Methodism has been remarkably fortunate in the character and conduct of the men who have been called to serve as her Chief Pastors. Almost without exception, they have been men of stainless life and a becoming humility of spirit, and seldom have any of them ever deserved criticism. In a ministry of about twenty-five years it has been our privilege and delight to know and honor many of our General Superintendents, and we have quite as many friends among the present panel of Bishops as has Dr. Ivey.

Constantine is credited with having said that if he knew a Bishop had committed adultery, he would say nothing about it lest he should injure the Church. Dr. Ivey need not try to revive that view in these luminous days of the twentieth century; for he will find few, we think, to do it reverence, and none would despise it more heartily than the noble company of leaders constituting our Episcopal College at present.

4. Our brother says that he had never expected to live to see a Senior Bishop of the Church "pilloried," as he calls it, by a Southern Methodist editor. We do not doubt that this statement is true. Bishop Haygood wrote a great book, which was builded on the principle, "No man can draw taller himself," and we think that this proposition is of very wide application. That an editor should be bold enough to speak forth the truth when it involves a conflict with men of position and influence is quite beyond the conception of not a few persons. Our confrere says he would not think of holding even "the humblest preacher" up before "a railing public." We wonder where this overflowing charity, which so bountifully embraces all men, was when he was treating so unfairly this obscure editor's utterances in his great paper which circulates from ocean to ocean. But we must not forget that our preceding editorial, though we do not think it should have done so, seems to have greatly provoked our brother; and we would not have it thought that we hold aught against him in the way of any bitter feeling.

One thing in Dr. Ivey's arraignment was to us really amusing, and that was his imagined defense of the episcopacy of the Church against us. Why, ever since we have been on the tripod we have been accused of being a Bishops' man—of being too largely under the influence of the episcopacy. Now comes this slap upon the other cheek. Truly, one can never tell what a day will bring forth. In reply to our brother on this point, we shall have only this to say: Since we have been on the tripod, the College of Bishops has been severely attacked both in the territory of our paper and in the near-by territory of his paper. When it happened in our jurisdiction, and we were done speaking in behalf of our Chief Pastors, no one of them has ever seemed to feel it necessary to say anything additional. But when it happened where he had sway, Bishop E. E. Hoss appeared to think it needful for him to step into the arena and draw his shining lance to do battle for himself and his colleagues. Why, we have even ventured to defend our episcopacy against the disparagements of the extreme unionists, with all their intolerance. Has he done as much?

Our brother says that our course toward Bishop Hendrix is making friends for him all over the Church. If telling the truth (and no man has challenged the accuracy of any statement that we have made in this connection) has had this effect, then surely these recruits to the Bishop's circle of friendships must have been deserved; and none should be more happy over this outcome than such a promoter of peace and unity as is Dr. Ivey. And, as for ourself, we do not envy the Bishop a single one of them. When men are informed as to a situation it is their inalienable right to decide for what they will stand. The intensity with which our confrere resents the suggestion that he has endorsed Bishop Hendrix, however, seems to indicate to us that he does not feel so sure that his judgment is correct in this respect. Why does he exhibit such sensitiveness at this point?

AMONG THE BRETHREN.

My duty to Grenada College often carries me on delightful visits to my brethren of the North Mississippi Conference. Two recent visits have been especially pleasant. First, I spent a Sunday with the congregation at Coldwater, reputed to be among the most loyal to their church and pastor to be found in the Conference. Under the devout and faithful leadership of their pastor, Rev. H. G. Roberts, they have just completed the work of remodeling their house of worship. They enclosed the old frame structure with brick-veneer, added ten Sunday school rooms, pastor's study, and ladies' parlor, making a beautiful and commodious building, fully equal to the needs of an annual conference session. By invitation, I preached the opening sermon in this house which will be a joy to the hearts of its builders for many years to come. It was good to be there.

More recently, it was my pleasure to worship with Brother J. W. Dorman and his great congregation at Water Valley. This is easily one of the most active churches in the whole of Southern Methodism. It is really and truly a "seven day church." The announcements for the week sound like the program of a real, live efficiency conference. Always standing well in the Conference, this church took on new life under the ministry of W. W. Woollard and built the new house of worship. J. H. Mitchell led them in paying off the debt remaining, besides other good work, while T. H. Dorsey gave four faithful years to building them up in the faith on all lines. Brother Dorman is in love with them and they with him. His regular Tuesday noon sermons to the workmen in the I. C. R. R. shops he reports to be the most delightful and productive of the week. He is doing the work of an evangelist, and making full proof of his ministry.

However, the best part of this church is its great Sunday school, and the leading citizen of Water Valley is its long-time superintendent. Judge J. G. McGowen. Earnest, aggressive, devout, he has followed where the preachers led, conserved their work, developed their converts, and with the spirit of a crusader has used his office and energy to make the town of Water Valley a fit place for these converts and children of the church to live. Starting the new year, as usual, with a new roll, he had registered 802 the day I was there. He wants to make it 1000 by Rally Day, and I plan to go up and see it, well done.

Three years ago, Judge McGowen was elected to the Board of Trustees of Grenada College. At their recent meeting the Board noted his intelligent and active interest in all the details of the work of the institution and elected him President of that body. He had five fine young women of his Sunday school ready to talk with me about entering College this fall when I was there, and others are being trained up in the way they should go. Such work there and elsewhere make the prospects bright for an overflow attendance this fall, and I am happy.

JUDGE REEVES AND SARATOGA.

By Rev. John M. Moore, D.D.

In my article on "Saratoga and Methodist Union," published in several of the Church papers, I said, "The Commission recommended 'that neither the General Conference nor the Jurisdictional Conferences be invested with final authority to interpret the constitutionality of its own actions.' They recommended 'that the General Conference be made the supreme legislative, executive, and judicial body of the Church under constitutional provisions and restrictions.' These do not necessarily conflict."

My good East Tennessee friend, Judge Reeves, took me to task in his article on "Organic Union." He says, "That recommendation is but a restatement of the principle the majority faction held to in the contest of 1844—that the General Conference is a law unto itself and is all-powerful in Methodist Church economy. The two suggestions are manifestly as far apart as the poles."

I think Judge Reeves has misunderstood the purport of that recommendation of the Saratoga Conference. In my opinion they did not mean in this recommendation to declare in favor of an "all-powerful," a "law-unto-itself" General Conference. If so, why did they put in the qualifying clause, "under constitutional provisions and restrictions?" Surely an intelligent body of men, such as that, would not speak in absurdities, and an all-powerful General Conference under restrictions would certainly be a contradiction in terms.

"Supreme" is the English of the Latin Supremus, which is the superlative of Superus, which means upper, above. The synonymns for supreme are highest, greatest, principal, chief, leading, first, pre-eminent. It does not mean absolute, unrestricted, unlimited. An all-powerful General Conference would be absolute in authority, and not simply the highest, the chief in authority. I understand the Saratoga Conference to call for a General Conference, that is the highest, the greatest, the chief, the pre-eminent "legislative, executive, and judicial body of the Church, under constitutional provisions and restrictions." Why did they make such a recommendation? One strong reason is, that many of their leading men in addresses and public articles before the Conference met had declared that the Southern Church was proposing nothing more in the jurisdictional system than the old Scarritt plan of three or four General Conferences, supreme in authority (not absolute), held together by a federal council having only advisory powers. In their recommendation they were hedging against "the supreme" powers of the jurisdictional conferences, against the Scarritt plan which they called "union by division or disruption." They want the supreme (the pre-eminent) legislative, executive, and judicial powers in the General Conference and not in the jurisdictional conferences. By my interpretation, the two recommendations do not conflict. The General Conference may be supreme and still not be "invested with final authority to interpret the constitutionality of its own actions." Is not Congress the supreme legislative body of the United States without final authority to interpret the constitutionality of its own actions? While they doubtless want the General Conference to be the controlling legislative, executive, and judicial body, they have not asked in this recommendation that it be all-powerful—a law unto itself. To interpret their recommendation as Judge Reeves has done, it seems to me, would be to make that great body ridiculous by reason of the use of contradictory terms.

REPORT FROM MINDEN.

Dear Dr. Meek: After a little more than half a year's work in my new charge at Minden, I will venture a brief report. This is an entirely new field to me after over twenty years of continuous service in South Louisiana. On arrival, I was received with a hearty welcome, despite the fact that the congregation was extremely reluctant to give up my predecessor, Brother Shankle, whose excellent work is evident in many ways. Among the evidences of his success is a parsonage not surpassed by any in the Conference.

I have been kept busy continuously trying to do faithfully the work assigned me, and can report several items of progress. Not least among these is the organization of an Epworth League with 45 charter members, which promises to do much for the young life of the Church.

Twice this year the Sunday school has established a new attendance record—a few Sundays ago leaving all previous marks considerably behind. The missionary department has been organized and has assumed a special of $100 for China; and the business men's class, taught by the pastor, has made a study of "A New Light in an Old Land" during the past quarter. In addition to the Sunday School Special, $61 was raised as a missionary special in connection with the week of prayer in January.

Over $200 has already been contributed to the Orphanage. The regular finances of the Church have also made a new record, having, with the budget system, not only paid all local claims, salaries, etc., each month, but having sent in over $100 also on Conference collections.

I have recently held a meeting, without ministerial help, in which the attendance and interest were sustained through fifteen days of extremely hot weather. We will receive as a result 18 members by profession and several by certificate, making a total of more than forty received this year.

Fraternally,

W. WINANS DRAKE.

PRAYING FOR THE PREACHER.

(Brother A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, La., sends us the following humorous clipping, which he cut out of the Nashville Christian Advocate about six or seven years ago.—Ed. Advo.)

Rev. A. J. Notestine, of the North Alabama Conference, sends us a bit of matter for our humorous column. It contains such clean-cut, pointed humor that we have concluded to give it a separate place of its own. Brother Notestine says, by way of comment, that he fears "some of us preachers need this kind of prayer in our behalf." Here it is: "A Brother went to preach at a colored church, and when he called on one of the brethren to make the opening prayer he said, among other things: 'O Laud, give de brudder de eyes of de eagle, dat he may see sin from afur. Bow his lone head in some lonesome valley, whar prayer is wonted to be made. Glue his ear to de gospel telephone, and connect him wid de centrals on high. 'Noint him all over wid de kerosene oil of Dy salvation, and set him afire."

MY STAR.

By Maude M. Kittrell.

Bright, true, and wonderful,
  And larger than the rest,
Shedding rays of purest light,
  My star, I love you best.

You are more constant than all,
  And then much nearer, too;
I could not bear it, should you fall,
  Or even hide from view.

But you are miles above me
  And seem quite distant there;
I stretch my arms up to you
  In longing and despair.

Shall I ever attain to you,
  My bright and wonderful sphere?
Love can work wonders, you know,
  And make the most distant near.

Black Hawk, Miss.

A BOY SOUL-WINNER.

A little boy went to his pastor and asked if there wasn't something that boys could do for the Lord. The pastor said:

"Why, I don't know. You are too small to lead a class, and hardly old enough to be a tract distributor. I don't know what you can do."

The pastor thought a few moments, and then asked, "Is your schoolmate a Christian?"

"No, sir; I think not."

"Then go to work as the Lord shall show you how, and secure his conversion. Then take another and another. I can not tell you exactly what to do, but if you pray, the Savior will show you how to win them."

Some months after this little boy was lying very ill. The doctors had given him up to die. His father went to some afternoon meetings, and when he came home little Willie roused up and asked his father, "Was Neddie Smith at the meeting this afternoon?"

"Yes, dear."

"Did he give his heart to the Lord Jesus?"

"No, I think not."

"Oh, dear!" said the little boy, "I thought he would."

The next day his father left him again, and went to the afternoon meeting. When he came home, Willie asked him the same question and expressed disappointment that his little friend was not converted. The third day Willie was yet alive, and when his father came home from the meeting he asked the same question and received a different answer.

"Yes, Neddie gave his heart to the Savior this afternoon."

"I am so glad," was the answer.

After he had gone, they opened his little box and found a list of forty names. The first one was his schoolmate at the time when he went to the pastor and asked for something to do for the Lord, and the last name was that of Neddie Smith. And every boy on the list was converted. He had taken them one by one in faith and prayer, giving them books to read, showing them texts of Scripture, praying with them, and for them; and the Lord awakened them, the whole forty having been converted through his efforts.

There is plenty to do, and if we are willing the Lord will show us how to do it. The only thing is to be willing to hear his voice, and let him lead and teach us. "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth," and heareth to obey.—Methodist Recorder

A CHILD'S IDEA OF PRAYER.

Little Nellie, who was only four years old, no sooner saw work laid aside than she ran to her mother's knee and claimed a seat there. Mrs. Lee lifted her to her lap, and went on busily thinking of her duties and cares, while she rocked herself and Nellie to and fro.

For a time Nellie amused herself very quietly by winding a string in and out through her fingers, but presently she began talking to herself in a low tone: "When I say my prayers, God says: 'Hark, angels, while I hear a little noise.'"

Her mother asked her what noise was that.

"A little girl's noise. Then the angels will do just so (shutting her mouth very tightly and keeping very still for a moment), till I say Amen."

Isn't this a sweet thought? I wonder if the children who read this have ever thought how wonderful it is that God always hears their prayers. He is surrounded by thousands of angels, all praising Him with their golden harps; and yet, through all the music and all the praises, He hears the softest prayer of a little child kneeling by the bedside. He must be very loving and very kind to children.

We should think He would sometimes forget, and be listening to the beautiful sounds in heaven, instead of the prayer of a little child; but He never does. There is never too much singing nor too many praises there for Him to hear a little girl's noise. Do you not wonder that children do not pray to Him much more and much oftener than they do?—Our Little People.

A STRATFORD BOY'S BIBLE.

How happened Shakespeare to quote and allude to Scripture so frequently (four-hundred and fifty passages are enumerated, Hamlet leading with eighty-seven)? The Bible was in his home. The Bible was read in the grammar school which he attended, a school indeed which opened into a church, as any visitor in Stratford may see.

A social historian remarks that apart from Bibles, psalters, prayer-books, and school textbooks there were probably not more than three or four dozen books in all Stratford when Will Shakespeare was a boy there. The future poet did not have the King James Version. That was issued about the time he was busy with "The Tempest." But the Geneva Version (called the Breeches Bible, because in Gen. 3:7 it had "breeches" for "aprons"), translated in Switzerland by English refugees, was completed in 1560, four years before Shakespeare's birth, and was peddled in cheap editions all over the kingdom. This is the one in which his mind was steeped.

Church-going was probably not the first interest of William Shakespeare's London life. It was the Bible of his boyhood that stored his mind with the ideals, pictures and phrases without which Shakespeare would not be the Shakespeare that we know. Whoever did it for him, whether it was the village minister, the godly teachers in the Guild School, or his own eager spirit, devouring, like Lincoln, the few books that came within his reach, the fact remains that somehow the Bible was a part of the fibers of his thought, and constituted an indispensable item in the furnishing of his mind.

Unless the parents of our day revolutionize their own habits of Bible reading, and give closer attention to the formation of the habit among their children, the mind of the coming generation will lack this vital element. Some who are ready to fight for the reading of the Bible in the public school avoid inquiry as to their practice in their own homes and with their own children. The Bible belongs in the schools. The effrontery of those who would exclude it is amazing. But it is in the home alone that the Book can be so exalted that it will have its rightful place in the mind of the rising generation. Church News

Bishop J. H. McCoy has lately been lending a hand in the educational campaign in behalf of Henderson—Brown College, at Arkadelphia, Ark. An effort is being made to raise $200,000 for this institution.

The membership of the United Presbyterian Church has passed the 200,000 mark, the exact number of [illegible] 200,870. The average salary for [illegible] $870, and the number of Sunday [illegible] to be fully equal to the number [illegible]

President G. R. H[illegible] retired from the headship of the [illegible] College, and Prof. W. H. S[illegible] are both well known Southern [illegible]. Each of them is a capable [illegible] leading.

Rev. William Perry E[illegible] of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was killed at Carlisle, Penn., on July 24, being electrocuted by having a steel fishing rod which he carried to come in contact with [illegible] wire overhead while passing under a railroad bridge.

The Baptists of Mississippi have a campaign under way to raise $100,000 for their Woman's College at Hattiesburg. It is stated that this institution started three years ago with 27 students, and that the enrollment during the last session was 270. This is the only Baptist College for girls in South Mississippi.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, editor of the Central Methodist (Lexington, Ky.), says: "If the preachers desire something fresh on social doctrine, they should read The Bible Champion, edited by Dr. J. Benson Hamilton." We endorse this suggestion. This excellent monthly is published by the American Bible League, 317 East 19th Street, New York City. The price is $1 per annum.

The Holston, Tennessee, Memphis, Louisville and Kentucky Conferences have been requested by the Educational Commission to raise $200,000 for Emory University—$100,000 as a loan fund for young ministers, and $100,000 for a structure on the campus to be known as the McTyeire Memorial Building. The presiding elders of the Memphis Conference in a recent meeting at Dyersburg, Tenn., at which Bishops Murrah and Candler were present, endorsed this program and recommended the appointment of at least three commissioners and a supervising campaign committee of fifteen from the five Conferences expected to co-operate in the undertaking.

BISHOP MOUZON'S STRONG UTTERANCE.

The able article from the pen of Bishop E. D. Mouzon which we are carrying this week well deserves a careful reading. No investment of money can exert a wider influence for good than that which is given to stable and secure institutions of learning. Long after the donor has passed from earth, funds thus applied will continue to bless successive generations. Southern Methodist University has already taken its place, along with Emory University, as one of the twin stars in our widening educational system. Its career has been splendidly begun, and, with the great Methodism of Texas behind it, its future outlook is very bright. Our men of means will make no mistake in giving it financial assistance. The Louisiana Conference is in its patronizing territory; so its Theological Department especially has strong claims upon the Methodists of this State, and, as they can, they should lend it a helping hand.

A CORRECTION.

In our editorial last week, we inadvertently referred to Dr. Dumba as a German. He was the Ambassador of Austria-Hungary, but thoroughly a German sympathizer and supporter. The acknowledgment of this error does not at all weaken the pertinency of the illustration that we used.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Epworth League Institute at Lake Junaluska, N. C., will be held on schedule time—August 8-13. See notice on Page 16.

Rev. O. P. Armour, of Walnut, Miss., writes that his work is progressing in a gratifying manner. This is not surprising, since it is the habit of this faithful pastor to achieve success where he labors.

Mr. W. M. Buie, of Jackson, Miss., will serve as Treasurer of the Board of Education of the Mississippi Conference until the next Annual Conference. All moneys for educational purposes should be sent to him.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Franklinton, La., 3; Rev. J. A. Poe, Sidon, Miss., 4.

The Bulletin of our First Church at Baton Rouge, La., which is about as good a publication of the kind we have ever seen, has been suspended until fall. This congregation, under the leadership of Pastor Battle, is doing a great work.

Mr. H. A. Lee, editor of the City Itemizer of Water Valley, Miss., an esteemed and useful member of our Church at that place, died on Wednesday, July 19. The press dispatches state that the widow, Mrs. Lee, has assumed the management of the Itemizer and will continue its publication.

Dr. S. A. Steel's great address at the dedication of the new Church Extension Building in Louisville, Ky., last May, which is entitled, "The Challenge of the Church," has been put in pamphlet form. It is well worth reading and preserving. A copy may be had by writing Dr. W. F. McMurry, 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached a scholarly and evangelistic sermon at the Parker Memorial Church last Sunday morning. His text was, "Timothy, my son in the faith." After the sermon, Mr. Paul Renshaw made a statement to the congregation in the interest of the Mary Werlein Mission.

From a letter from Rev. J. H. Felts, the able and untiring presiding elder of the Holly Springs (Miss.) District, we extract the following: "Dr. H. G. Henderson hopes to return home in about twenty days. I am giving my vacation to serving the Holly Springs Church in his absence. I am preaching to fine congregations and visiting from house to house. I am hot and happy."

Bishop W. B. Murrah was in New Orleans last Friday and paid the Advocate office, in which he is a great favorite, an appreciated call. He was looking well and was in excellent spirits. From New Orleans the Bishop went to Fernwood, Miss., where he had an engagement to dedicate a church at Kokomo, one of Brother Saunders' appointments. He was expected to preach at Tylertown at night.

Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, tarried a while in New Orleans last Thursday. He was on his way to Franklinton, La., where official duties were calling him. He stated that his late district conference was an occasion of much interest, and he reported that all the pastors in his "diocese" are laboring faithfully and achieving a good measure of success.

Writing under date of July 26, Rev. Paul H. Grice, of the Morton Circuit (Miss. Conf.), says: "Upon my arrival home from the Divinity School I found that the wind had blown down two of my best churches, and that crops also were considerably damaged. We hope to have these churches rebuilt in the near future. In spite of my absence from my work on account of affliction, things seem to be moving along fairly well with us. We have a choice people to serve."

Rev. Robert Selby, Commissioner for Emory University, has moved to Jackson, Miss., that he may be more centrally located for the carrying on of the great work committed to his hands. His address is North Jefferson Street. Let the brethren take notice and govern themselves accordingly. It is to be hoped that our pastors will write Brother Selby and open their pulpits to him. The future of Southern Methodism to no small extent is bound up in Emory University.

Rev. Wm. Schuhle, together with Mrs. Schuhle and his son, came to New Orleans from their home at Lafayette, La., last Tuesday. Brother Schuhle had expected to attend the Laymen's Convention at Junaluska, N. C., and was en route there; but when he learned that the meeting had been postponed, he returned home. Mrs. Schuhle and the babe proceeded to Alabama, where they are visiting relatives. Brother Schuhle was looking well and spoke encouragingly of the work of his charge.

The pulpit of our First Church at Baton Rouge was filled by Rev. W. E. Thomas, of this city, on Sunday, July 23, both in the morning and evening. Brother Thomas states that he was greeted by excellent congregations, and that his visit to the Capital City of the State was a most delightful one. He was assured that our Methodist people there will give substantial assistance to his Italian Church enterprise in New Orleans. Brother Thomas was booked to spend last Sunday at Minden, La., with Brother Drake and his active flock.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, the capable presiding elder of the Columbus (Miss.) District, assisted Brother T. E. Gregory in a meeting at Flint Hill Church last week. The services were in every respect a great success. There were about 25 conversions at the altar, and 17 persons united with the Church. Brother Woollard states that Brother Gregory is doing a fine work in his field, and that conditions are most promising. Brother Woollard is assisting Brother Bowlin, of the Cedar Bluff Circuit, in a meeting at Siloam Church this week.

Hon. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, Tenn., and Mr. W. M. Buie, of Jackson, Miss., were in New Orleans last Tuesday and paid our office a highly appreciated visit. They were both quite well, and evinced a keen interest in the general affairs of the Church. Mr. Fitzhugh has lately attracted the attention of the whole country by his brilliant and effective prosecution of delinquent officials in impeachment trials in Tennessee. Mr. Buie is a nephew of the late Major R. W. Millsaps, and is one of the wealthiest and most substantial business men in Mississippi.

From a recent number of the Clarion Ledger (Jackson, Miss.), we take the following: "Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, was in Jackson yesterday en route to Flora on a matter of business. Dr. Cooper is delighted with the outlook for his school next September. He states that Whitworth College has attained to a standard which under the new State law will give its graduates the right to teach without standing examinations, and that Louisiana also accords them this same privilege." A bright and widening future seems assured for this excellent institution.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, has recently returned home from Lake Junaluska, where he went to attend the institute for Sunday school workers held there. He says: "It is a great privilege to get in touch with the leading thinkers of the Church. A man never finds out how little he does know until he gets in touch with men who do know. Blessed is the man who can go somewhere." See Brother Gladney's schedule of appointments for a series of institutes which is given elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

The 1916 Church Extension Hand Book has come from the press. It is up to the usual high standard of this publication, and reflects much credit on our great Church Extension Secretary, Dr. W. F. McMurry. Copies have been sent to all the pastors in the Church, and to every layman officially connected with the Church Extension work. A few copies yet remain, and as long as these last they may be had upon application. The address of the Church Extension Board is 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky. The increase of the Loan Fund last year broke the record, the amount being $133,192.89.

METHODIST UNION.

Rev. S. J. Davies.

III.

And now arises on the scene the shade of Joshua Soule, Bishop of the Methodist Church by virtue of the suffrage of his compeers and brethren. This worthy man at the session of the General Conference of 1820 refused ordination after election on the following grounds (I quote his words): "In consequence of an act of the General Conference passed this day, in which I conceive the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church is violated, and that episcopal government, which has hitherto distinguished her, greatly enervated by a transfer of executive power from the episcopacy to the several Annual Conferences, it becomes my duty to notify you, from the imposition of whose hands only can I be qualified for the office of superintendent, that under the existing state of things I cannot, consistently with my convictions of propriety and obligation, enter upon the work of an itinerant general superintendent." Now from what I can gather the delegates maintained their position, and voted to defer action on this question four years, but finally, on the advice of Bishop McKendree, so arranged the matter that Soule was ordained. The action of the General Conference and the Annual Conferences by which final action should be taken were by no means harmonious. The question as to the supremacy of authority was practically unsettled until 1870, when this proviso was passed by the General Conference. "When any rule or resolution is adopted by the General Conference which, in the opinion of the Bishops, is unconstitutional, the Bishops may present to the Conference which passed said rule or regulation their objections thereto, with their reasons, in writing, and if the General Conference shall, by a two-third vote, adhere to its action on said rule or regulation, it shall then take the course prescribed for altering a Restrictive Rule." This action of the General Conference was duly confirmed by a large majority of the Annual Conferences, and so was crystallized into one of the constitutional principles of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I write thus fully on this subject to refresh the memories of some, and inform others. So fifty years after Bishop Soule's contention the Church endorsed and ratified his position. The Methodist Episcopal Church still holds to the view taken by some of the stanch defenders of the rights of the General Conference to pass on the actions of its Bishops in every rule and regulation. This is what may be termed the fundamental differentiating principle. Who is wise enough to provide a method of agreement? I hold that we have wisdom, patience, and good common sense enough to solve the dilemma, or cut the Gordian knot. At least there is nothing to be lost in trying, if ruled by the spirit of our common Lord.

This, with the relation of the Negro to the Church, seems the crux of the affair—the two apparently insurmountable obstacles that stand in the way of union. The colored brother has given the Nation much trouble in national and political circles, but has, in himself, given but little trouble in the Church. He has been singularly amenable to the doctrine and polity of the Church as administered for him and toward him. The Colored Methodist Episcopal Church clings to the skirts of our Church as a lone child to its mother. They still look to us for guidance and help in all their efforts for the uplift of the race. I hold that united Methodism can and will place them in such relation to the Church as to command their racial self-respect and welfare. Furthermore, the Church can amend her constitution through the suffrage power inherent in the Annual Conferences. It is absurd to argue that free men may not change or modify restrictive rules that stand in the way of progress. "Ubi episcopus ibi ecclesia" will not stand the test of enlightened Protestantism. The seat of authority, so reads the New Testament, lies in the body of the Church. Bishop Hoss argued earnestly, a few years since, that the Church of to-day had a right to settle her polity, with reference to the order of Bishops. Has she not the same liberty in all things, for surely his contention reached the basic principle of Church administration; for the Bishops are constituted and set apart by the delegated council of the Church.

In conclusion, I wish to express my appreciation of the courteous spirit evinced by Dr. Meek in his reference to the thoughts expressed in former contributions of mine. His view-point is far removed from mine, yet he grants to another freedom, and credits one of diverse views with sincerity.

I also note, with regret, that the preachers in charge and presiding elders so far are very reticent in expressing their views through the press on this subject. Leading laymen have had little or nothing to say. Let us hear the voice of the entire Church. I believe a large majority favor union.

SECTIONAL CHURCHES.

Rev. A. H. Williams.

Sectional Churches have been spoken about in some American quarters, and sharply condemned; but may it not be true that all churches are sectional, more or less, and that they should be so? Local attachments are among the essentials in fine character. Defective fidelity at home is a prophecy of bad faith abroad. "Go teach all nations" was the command, but "beginning at Jerusalem" was also included; "Love thy neighbor," but simply "as thyself." Trueness to self and to local conditions is the groundwork from which is projected the power for successful going abroad. "Use the telescope," said a Methodist Bishop, "but also use the microscope." Patriotism is dead without the love of one's own land.

The earth itself is sectional, and only a fractional part of the universe, and of the solar system; nor does this earth pause for a moment to federate with Jupiter, or to enter into organic connection with the sun, nor even to assume the nebulous attitude of belonging a very little at many locations and not so very certainly to any particular section, but moves distinctly in its appointed orbit to fulfill the high designs to which assigned of God. Like the Author of all things it is engaged by day and by night and comes in "on time" once in three hundred and sixty-five and one-fourth days and so many minutes and seconds, and such has been true of the earth from creation's dawn unto the present, so far as we have information. Even the sand grain has its place, and the smallest star which sheds its light in the dome of the heavens is there for a purpose in the handiwork of the Supreme Creator. So also Churches may be local or sectional and fulfill a sublime mission in the plans of God for the good of humankind. All people of intelligence have discovered the fact that the Church must plant the kingdom of Christ in the regions beyond, and, as may be possible, "go teach all nations," and erect the standard of the Cross in all parts of the earth; but a "base of supplies" must exist very distinctly and with proper support and protection, in order to be in position to extend the helping hand and to go abroad for good.

Mr. Asbury, the apostle of the American Methodist Church, said: "This is the country for me," and was assured of his "call" to this particular work, and he lived and wrought and died in his adopted territory.

The Church of Christ, of course, like the religion of Christ, is everywhere essentially the same, and none may change the purpose for which it exists. "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body;" and of the children of Israel, as they came from Egyptian bondage, it was said, "They drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ." (1st Cor. 10-4.) And later said the Saviour, "Upon this rock will I build my Church;" but the Church of Christ is divided into well-defined squadrons, or Churches. Even a great army may not be handled with success and sufficient quickness without divisions, regiments, etc. It is the Spirit and purpose and teachings of the Church which creates the unity, and not simply organic connection. Even a man does better without "too many strings on him." (The Methodist pastor is in peril at that point.)

The Methodist Episcopal Church was independent at Baltimore in 1784, and possessed methods peculiar to itself, and was led of God and prospered. This same was true of the M. E. Church, South, in 1844, at a time when providential conditions demanded liberty of preference and freedom of action, and a great work was wrought at a crucial period of the Methodist movement in the southern section of the big American country, the culminations of which are a benediction to many millions to-day, and are perpetuating with increased efficiency and power; and many other millions are occupants of "the mansion city" as a consequence of the attitude assumed by this prominent and successful Church. Organic connection with the American Churches was considered unimportant by the Japanese branch of the Methodist "Mustard Stalk," which originated in keeping with the prophecy of Christ concerning his method of Church propagation, as mentioned in Mat. 13:31, 32.

Reciprocity has its place in a community of nations, and also must this be true in God's great community of Churches; but liberty of locomotion and independent freedom are conditions of national prosperity, and this also must be true of greatest Church efficiency and success. Everywhere it is recognized as a fact that "our sufficiency is of Him," and also that "neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase," and that the "Lo I am with you" is the supreme qualification for Christian work, but the best possible methods most in harmony with God's word and with good intelligence always must be at a premium in efforts to extend the Kingdom of Christ, that greatest results for good may follow. Special devotion, therefore, to a given department of God's Church, with a never-failing attachment to a particular people and section, would look to be essential to Church existence and to Church perpetuity.

Strongs, Miss.

THE MODERN REVOLT AGAINST CHRISTIAN MORALS.

One of the marked characteristics of modern thought is the widespread rejection of the Christian ideal of conduct. There was once a time when men everywhere, no matter what their intellectual beliefs, accepted the Christian ideal of character and conduct, so that J. S. Mill expressed the general view when he said that the modern skeptic could not do better than so frame his conduct that it should meet with the approval of Jesus Christ.

It cannot be said, however, that this is any longer the case. In constantly increasing numbers those who reject Christian beliefs are also rejecting Christian standards of life and conduct. Nor is there anything surprising about this. As L. S. Thornton says in his recent book, "Conduct and the Supernatural":

"The repudiation of Christian moral standards is a direct and entirely natural result of the earlier rejection of Christian dogma. No doubt, far-seeing theologians foresaw all along that this would be the case; but those who repudiated the Christian creed did not themselves see it. It is indeed safe to say that they had no suspicion of it. There are still, perhaps, a few pedants who declare that the essence of Christianity is to be found in the Sermon on the Mount, and that one can be a good Christian by practicing the imitation of Christ, without taking any notice of the traditional dogmas. Such people are living in a fool's paradise; for all around them at this moment are living proofs of the fallacy of their opinions. If there is one thing that can be said with absolute certainty about this whole movement with which we are dealing, it is that the revolt against Christian ethics is due to the previous repudiation of the doctrines upon which it is founded. The two things, belief and conduct, are indissolubly bound together; they are parts of one whole, as the roots and the fruit are both alike parts of one tree, originally connected."

It would be well, it seems to us, if there was a clearer recognition of this truth on the part of Christian men and women. Too many of them fail to perceive that the Christian life is the fruit of Christian faith, and hence that if Christian beliefs were to disappear from men's convictions, it would not be long before Christian ideals of character and conduct would also disappear. In the long run, the two stand or fall together, so that those who are doing most to eradicate Christian beliefs from the minds of men are at the same time doing most to eradicate from their minds Christian ideals of character and conduct.

If this were more generally recognized, we would not find so many saying that as long as men manifest the Christian virtues in their daily lives, it is a matter of no great moment what they believe. No doubt, Christian beliefs are valueless if they do not issue in Christian lives and no doubt many continue to manifest many Christian virtues after they have given up Christian beliefs, especially if they are living in Christian communities, but that does not alter the fact that Christian ideals of character and conduct are themselves the fruit of Christian beliefs, and that if Christian beliefs were to sink out of men's minds it would not be long before Christian ideals of character and conduct would be a thing of the past.

Doctrines are not life! Certainly not. No one, as far as we know, ever said they were. But does it follow that they are not indispensable to life? In fact, we might as well say that apple trees are useless as long as we have apples, as to say that Christian beliefs are useless as long as we have Christian lives, seeing that the connection between the two in the one case is no more vital than it is in the other.—The Presbyterian.

HIGHLY COMMENDED.

Dear Doctor Meek: I write to express my appreciation of the article on "Organic Union," by Colonel E. C. Reeves, which was recently published in the Advocate. He shows himself a master with the pen in the discussion of Methodist principles, law, and history. No article has appeared in the Church press on the question of the merging all the Methodisms into our organic body that is so illuminating and convincing as this one. I trust that every one who takes the Advocate will read it. Colonel Reeves' reasoning is such that no logical mind can find a fallacy in it, and his argument is based on historical facts that every student of Methodist history must acknowledge. His conclusions are overwhelmingly convincing. He voices my heart and mind. I hope that the whole Church may be given this article.

Yours for the greatest Conference in the history of our Laymen's Movement.

E. H. RAWLINGS, Field Sec'y,
Laymen's Missionary Movement,
M. E. Church, South.

RINGGOLD, LA.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you allow me space in your valuable paper to make a partial report of my work? I am praising God for victory in His name. My work is moving on in a very satisfactory way. When I arrived on the charge it was somewhat run down and the people seemed discouraged. With our Christ to lead, I have tried to revive each church and get it in working shape. I have 6 churcnes, and all of them at this writing are at work. God is blessing our labors in this field both spiritually and financially. One of the churches on the work was in bad repair, and we have succeeded in raising the money to overhaul and paint it at a cost of $214. Every feature of my work seems to be on the upward move. I have held three revivals on the charge. At Rocky Mount I had Rev. T. J. Martin to assist me. Many souls were made to shout the praises of God, and we received 11 persons into the Church on profession of faith and baptism. Brother Martin is growing weak in body; but, thank God, he is strong in the Lord.

Our next meeting was at Old Castor. Rev. A. C. Searcy assisted me at this point and did some fine preaching. The Lord was in the meeting and his Spirit worked in the hearts of the people. There were 25 bright conversions. Some of them belonged to the Church, but realized that they needed something besides church membership. We received only 4 members in this meeting, but the Church received a great spiritual uplift.

From this point we went to a mission point that has been taken care of by Rev. T. J. Martin for 10 or 12 years. He has faithfully looked after this people through this time without charge to them. He ask me to assist him in a meeting there and I consented. We began last Monday at 11 o'clock, and it was a hard fight, but the Lord gave us the victory. At the closing service last night we received 29 members into the Church—13 of this number was on profession of faith, being baptized—the others coming in by vows. We organized a church and appointed officers. The services closed after much of the old-time shouting and praising God.

I have four other meetings to hold on the charge, and we are trusting Christ for victory in each of them. Brethren, pray for me.—J. F. Dring.

GIVE MISSIONS ITS PLACE AND SEE WHAT FOLLOWS.

Rev. J. C. Park, Sardis, Miss., reports that during the first five months of this year his Sunday school gave more missionary money than the entire Church paid the whole of last year. They paid more than four times as much the last Sunday in May as they paid on the same Sunday last year. The Treasurer of the Sunday school reported to him that heretofore they had not been able to meet their expenses for literature with the entire collection in the Sunday school, and carried over a debt from last year. They have now paid this back debt for literature, and at the end of the first five months have $55 in the treasury to the credit of the Sunday school, after giving more than one hundred dollars for missions.

I think the war is drawing to a termination. In my belief it will end suddenly—no man, nor power, nor set of powers will end it. The people of all the belligerent nations and the people of the world will throw up their hands in a supplication to Almighty God for the end of the horror. The next ten years will surpass in world significance anything of which we have ever read or dreamed.—John R. Mott.

Often they lead to those pulmonary troubles which are responsible for more than one-tenth of all lives lost through illness.

Heavy colds which develop deep-seated coughs or cause inflammation of the air-passages and persist in spite of medication, weaken the system to a point where resistance easily is overcome—and asthma, bronchial and pulmonary troubles are the result. Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Southern Methodist Church has 2000 Wesley Bible classes with approximately 200,000 members. Our army is steadily growing.

It is said not one in ten thousand studies the Bible systematically, that it is not connected with some department of the Sunday school.

The thing that makes the Bible such a power for good is not organization, but it is the study of God's Word. The organization is a means of harnessing and transmitting that power to the point where it is needed. Leave out Bible study and the organized class would have no more power for good than an organized base ball team. The class that studies the Bible until the soul is saturated with God's thoughts, filled with God's Spirit, is able to perform any task that comes up.

We believe that child nature needs to be nurtured; but we must learn anew that the adult ever needs to be nourished out of the deep things of God's Word, even down to old age. This is one of the reasons why the grown people should never leave the Sunday school.

Why do we have so many dead churches; so many formal, powerless prayer meetings? Why is it so hard to get church members to pay God his tithe? Why does the church machinery stop still the minute the preacher turns aside for a rest? The answer is, the individual members are out of touch with God through the study of his Word. The organized Bible class is the best means God has devised for the infilling and constant growth of the spiritual nature. This fact is being demonstrated daily.

Our Church has six Divisional Field Secretaries and eighteen Conference Field Secretaries. Eighteen of this number attended the institute held for them at Lake Junaluska from July 11-22. Miss Minnie Kennedy, Dr. W. W. Alexander, Dr. J. W. Shackford, Dr. C. D. Bulla, Dr. E. B. Chappell, Dr. H. C. Howard, Dr. A. P. Few, and Bishop Hendrix gave instruction of a high order. The fellowship with one another was sweet, our lives have been enriched by the experiences of the men on the firing line, the fresh vision of the Master, and of the whitening field makes us fall upon our faces and cry out in our helplessness, "Who is sufficient for these things?" We go back into the greatest work, with the largest program that God has given to man, that of giving the whole gospel to the whole world, through the whole Church until He shall come again. May God help us!

Mr. A. L. Dietrich has agreed to help me hold county institutes in the following places: Indianola, August 8; Leland, Aug. 9; Cleveland, Aug. 10; Clarksdale, Aug. 11; Hollywood, Aug. 12; Belen, Aug. 14; and Charleston, Aug. 16. Mr. Dietrich does this work without cost to our Board. He is one of the best instructors our Church has in the field. We can not get his services again this year. Other conferences are clamoring for him. The Institutes are to be held for the benefit of preachers, superintendents, teachers, all officers, stewards, and all who desire a deeper work of grace. We are depending on the church where the institute is to be held to secure a large attendance upon these meetings. Do not be afraid of working too hard to get the people to attend these meetings.

SECULAR NEWS.

Miss Arabella Eugenia Smith, the author of "If I should Die To-night," and many other poems, died at Santa Barbara, Calif., on July 25, 1916. Miss Smith also wrote works in prose.

President Wilson has communicated to the Mexican Government his willingness to appoint commissioners to meet like representatives from Mexico to devise ways and means to settle the border troubles between the two countries and to promote generally harmonious relations between them.

Emperor William of Germany has issued a patriotic appeal to the people of his empire to endure heroically the hardships incident to the war, even if the tide of battle should to some extent go against his armies. He still claims to think that his forces are certain of victory, but the undertone of his utterance indicates that he is beginning to realize that the hand of fate is against Germany and that there is disaster ahead.

The prohibition party in its recent national convention at St. Paul, Minn., nominated Ex-Governor Frank J. Hanly of Indiana for President, and Dr. Ira D. Landrith, of Nashville, Tenn., for Vice-President. These nominees, though they have no chance to be elected, are the peers in point of ability and character of the gentleman who will bear the standards of the Democratic and Republican parties. We do not think, however, that it is to the credit of the Prohibition party that such a man as Mr. William Sulzer, who was impeached as Governor of New York, polled 181 votes in the convention.

James Whitcomb Riley, known as the "Hoosier poet," died suddenly of apoplexy at Indianapolis, Ind., on July 22, 1916. He was born in Indiana in 1854, and was in his early years a sign painter, a fiddler, and a newspaper reporter. His poetical writings are voluminous and his style is unique. His verses deal largely with the commonplace things of nature, and his education and literary acquirements were limited; but, like Robert Burns, he touched and stirred the hearts of the masses of the people, and his fame is secure. He wrote much for children, and he was a great favorite with the youth of Indiana, who for many years had made his birthday an occasion of much interest. Mr. Riley was never married.

Small Wounds Often Fatal.

Not Equipment But the Man Makes the Difference in Schools.

A man to whom you may trust your boy with absolute confidence is Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tennessee.

During the past twenty-five years, Mr. Morgan has built up this training school for boys around his own long experience, and his study of boy nature and of the problems of giving the boy the mental preparation, physical well-being and spiritual strength for an honorable, manly, successful life. He has chosen his faculty, equipped his school, and ordered its conduct, with one purpose in view.

Mr. Morgan is a graduate of the Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and the Vanderbilt University. He is a man of strong, wholesome personality and deep Christian character—an inspiration to every boy who comes under his care. His close, personal relations with his students, his attention to their work, their talents, their special needs, have given his school a position of high distinction. The citizens of Fayetteville have recently presented him with a $15,000 building as an addition to his school.

RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Ruston District Conference met in the town of Sibley, La., on July 29, 1916. Rev. A. L. Harper, the pastor of the Sibley charge, was the delightful and painstaking host. The Conference was heartily welcomed and was delightfully entertained, and the Methodists of the district would be glad to meet with the kind people of Sibley again.

The attendance was good, about 60 pastors and lay members being present, who, with a number of elect ladies from out of town and the people of the community, together with the brethren representing particular interests, made a large and interested company. Dr. R. H. Wynn, Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, and Mr. R. O. Randle and Mr. W. S. Holmes were the connectional visitors.

Mr. R. O. Randle, a prominent attorney of Monroe, La., presented the cause of Church Extension in a most masterly way. This cause ought to find a new and more important place in the thought of both preachers and laymen after this.

Mr. W. S. Holmes of Baton Rouge, La., prominent in business circles, and a leader in church and Sunday school work was present, and in a most thorough and interesting manner represented the Laymen's Movement. Brother Holmes, as the Conference Lay Leader, is doing a much needed work in arousing the laymen to the great opportunities for service in the Church. His address was timely, thoughtful, and to the point; good results will surely follow.

Mr. W. M. Spinks, of Ruston, the District Lay Leader, had charge of the program devoted to laymen's work on Wednesday. All phases of lay activities were considered. This feature was one of the most interesting and profitable of the conference.

The work of the Woman's Missionary Society was presented to the Conference in a program in charge of the ladies. This department of Church work is growing in this district.

The reports of the pastors showed progress along many lines. Prominent features of this progress are improvement in the financial condition of the district: debts have been paid, salaries are in advance of those of last year, and the methods are improved. Another feature of this advance is in the Sunday school, both as to numbers and the quality of work done. There has been some net increase in the church membership. Meetings are in progress and the spiritual interest is increasing.

One young man, M. H. Anders, son of Rev. Geo. D. Anders, of the Louisiana Conference, was licensed to preach. Presiding Elder Carter delivered a most appropriate and impressive charge to the young man at the time the license was granted.

Three young men were recommended for admission on trial into the Annual Conference, as follows: J. F. Dring, M. W. Moncrief, and M. H. Anders.

The following were elected lay delegates to the next Annual Conference: L. M. Green, P. K. Able, N. R. Grigsby, and J. F. Dring. The alternates are Judge R. B. Dawkins and F. E. Marsalis.

The Conference by unanimous vote expressed itself as favoring Methodist union.

Dr. R. H. Wynn wears a smile all over his face. He is getting better looking and seems younger these days, and all because he has an unusually strong faculty and a bright prospect for the opening of Centenary College. There is no better place for a boy than right there in Centenary with Wynn.

Vaughan can't keep from smiling; the thing will just play over his countenance in spite of him, and all because the debt on the Orphanage is paid.

And Breithaupt wears a festive countenance, too, and all because of the things he sees in his mind's eye when he beholds the Sunday schools of Louisiana a few years hence.

Carter is an unusual presiding elder. Nothing is hurried, but there is no waste of time; everything is considered with care, and then, too, he sells books and papers and distributes tracts and printed information concerning the work of the Church.

The Conference will meet with the brethren of Winnfield next year.

FINE RECORD AT MONROE.

My Dear Dr. Meek: The third quarterly meeting for First Church at Monroe was held last Monday night. The reports showed a gain of 131 in the membership and a decided improvement in the financial situation, every indication pointing to a full financial report at Conference. The indebtedness which has hovered over the congregation for some years, according to the reports, is provided for, and the pastor was authorized to name a building committee to take up and push the work of building the long-talked-of and much-needed Sunday school annex. The congregation is thoroughly alive to the need of the new annex, and will push the work vigorously, though all recognize that conditions have been much more favorable for the project at any time during the past several years than now, and nothing but the imperative need of the improvement would have secured the endorsement of the quarterly conference at this time. We will hardly get to the work of actual construction for some time yet, but will have no unnecessary delays. The committee in charge will be the best possible under all of the circumstances, and I have no fear but that the work will be well and expeditiously done.

Our church steeple was struck by lightning several days ago, and damaged to some extent. The loss was covered by insurance.

Brother Lutz is in high favor as presiding elder in the district, and is doing a most excellent work. Albert S., Jr., is behaving himself very nicely under the circumstances.

My wife is suffering, and has been for some time, with a succession of carbuncles.

I am heartily in favor of the union of the two Methodisms, and I see no "grave dangers" to threaten the way if the over-ambitious candidates for the episcopacy and the sticklers for ecclesiastical law will just keep quiet.

My physical health is greatly improved, and I am having splendid summer congregations.

With best wishes,

THOMAS H. MORRIS.

NOXAPATER, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: We closed our meeting at Noxapater on the night of the 3rd Sunday with 11 accessions, 10 of them being on profession of faith and one by certificate. Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Louisville, Miss., was with us from Monday morning until Saturday night and did fine work for us.

Our third quarterly conference was held at Plattsburg, 10 miles away, on the Saturday before the 3rd Sunday, and was a pleasant and profitable occasion. Rev. W. W. Mitchell, our untiring presiding elder, was at his post and preached three sermons at Plattsburg and rode to Noxapater and preached there on Sunday night. He had a great crowd, and it was truly a great sermon.

I will begin to-morrow (Sunday, July 30) at 11 a. m., a meeting at a place six miles from Noxapater and will be engaged there for two weeks before I will be given another chance for rest. We are expecting great things, for we shall preach the old-time Gospel. Pray for us.

SELF-SUPPORTING CHURCHES IN MISSION LANDS.

Opponents of foreign missions have sometimes asserted that after a century of work and the expenditure of vast sums of money, there is not a single self-supporting church on the mission field. Yet one mission board (Northern Presbyterian) in 1914 reported 1406 churches entirely self-supporting. There are other boards that report more than a thousand each. Full statistics on this point are not given anywhere, but altogether there are many thousands of self-supporting churches.

THE COMMISSIONER IN TROUBLE.

"When the cat's away the mice will play;" so I recall as a lesson of my children. The Elder's in the other end of the district, and I've been so busy trying to arrange diplomatic relations with the weather man that more than once there has been a threatened break with the allied powers of heat, books, sermons, people and Elder, to hunt some "lovely bowers of innocence and ease." But—

"It's easy enough to be happy when the world goes along like a song,
But the man worth while is the man with a smile when every thing goes dead wrong."

And old Jupiter Pluvius has, with his daily visitations, caused many of my plans to "gang a'gle."

These daily tropical rains are causing much mental distress among the farmers in this section, but with an early cessation of them all will yet be well. The Delta planters are claiming finer crop prospects than for many years.

Since my last, little of Methodist news from this end of the district has reached me. Good old summer times in the parsonage, I learn, "and all's well that ends well." A goodly number of laymen have expressed to me their disappointment that Major Millsaps did not leave the bulk of his fortune to Millsaps College; and yet how many of these who are thus bemoaning this loss to the institution have responded to his oft-repeated and marvelously liberal proposition to duplicate every dollar that the Church would raise in the interest of a great school for the Methodists of the State? For myself, this was not a surprise. Six hundred thousand dollars itself is not a small figure, and if the Methodists of Mississippi will only rally to the support of the College in patronage, as its liberal founder has done in gifts, it may easily rank with the best in the South. Well does Professor Sullivan say the best endowment is a loyal patronage, and a membership of 120,000 Methodists in Mississippi should easily give a full matriculation of students.

Have I read anything concerning UNIFICATION? Well, yes; but not all—who that has a flock of more than half a thousand can? and who in these torrid days is able? Yes, I have kept at least in the line of the procession; I suppose, I have tried to hold myself on the plane of neutrality and read much pro and con, but haven't yet found myself ready to fall over myself in the direction of Saratoga.

A re-reading of the communication on "Organic Union" by Colonel E. C. Reeves, which has appeared in both the Nashville and New Orleans Advocates, pleases me much, and until further testimony shall have been presented I'm willing to rest. To date, that deliverance suits me as well as the boy's did who wrote out his prayer, pasted it on the headboard, and nightly went under cover saying, "Them's my sentiments."

When a youngster I read an experience given by the famous Georgia humorist, "Bill Arp," which seems appropriate just here. Bill said that when the war broke out between the States, Mr. Lincoln issued a proclamation for the rebels to disperse; and in pursuance with such edict he went out into a pine thicket and bellowed and roared, tossed dirt into the air, twisted young pine trees up by the roots and called lustily to Bill Arp to disperse, but to no avail. Bill couldn't see it that way.

WOMAN'S COUNCIL DAY, LAURA HAYGOOD SCHOOL.—Miss Olive Lipscomb.

You would have enjoyed our Sunday school service this morning if you could have understood it. We had a Woman's Council Day and told the girls all about the people who are doing the Home Base work, and they were tremendously interested in it all, too. First, Miss Lester told a little of the history of the Council—who its first officers were and who the present officers are and a few things about Scarritt. Then Miss Pyle told a little of the history of the Laura Haygood School—who Miss Haygood was, how she planned the school, how the money was raised, how different societies gave the money for different rooms, windows, doors, etc., and how it has grown little by little, until now it is one of the best high schools in China. Then I told (through an interpreter, of course) about our literature, The Voice, The Young Christian Worker, the books and leaflets on different countries, and how the people know what to give money to and what to pray for. Miss Watkins told how the money is raised—the babies', childrens', girls', young ladies', and women's dues, the specials, the scholarships, our own salaries, and who supports us, and other things, like Miss White's boat, the new church, etc. So now our girls know all about how the work is carried on and will know better how to appreciate it. We wanted to do all this while the Sunday Council was in session, and we mean to do that every year after this; but the tent meeting was going on then, and we could not do it this time. Miss Bennett, Miss Gibson, Miss Head, Mrs. Trueheart, Mrs. Lipscomb, Mrs. Hargrove, and all the rest came in for a share of the talk and now all are well known in Soochow.

I do wish you all could come to a meeting of my study class. Last night our subject was "The Child," and we talked about teaching ignorant mothers how to care for their babies, playgrounds, story-telling, all kinds of institutions for children; and lots of other things that China must have, and the girls were much interested. Lots of it they had never heard of, of course. One of the graduates of the school who is now a teacher in the lower grades led the class, and one of the seniors is to do it next time. I just make out the outlines, get the books together for them to read, go over the lesson with the leader, and then try not to do too much of the talking when the lesson time comes.

SIGNS OF HARVEST IN MEXICO.

Methodist workers in Mexico report many encouragements in the lives that are being touched and changed. For example, in Queretaro a married couple who for years had prayed to images received the Gospel with such joy that they immediately destroyed the image they formerly worshiped. They are now worthy members of the Church, and through their influence others have come into the fold.

A soldier in the present revolution while away from his family was converted to the Protestant faith and came home almost dreading the task of imparting the news to his family. His joy can be imagined when he discovered that the family had also been converted and were faithful attendants at the services. It was indeed a happy re-union.

At one time a Catholic family came to the parsonage in Mexico City for refuge and of course, were asked to be present at the daily family worship. When they left they said to their hosts, "Please pray for us, for we see that you have a most direct and beautiful way of talking with God and we want you to intercede for us."—Missionary Review of the World.

NECESSITY THE MOTHER OF INVENTION.

They were issuing a natural science reader from the press of the West Central Africa Mission. It seemed that such a text-book without any illustrations would be a tame affair. But there were no cuts available. So Dr. Stokey set himself to make some. Pouring a thin coat of plaster of Paris over a model, he then carved out the figures from pictures found in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. No one could mistake "the camel" and "the lion." The ingenuity of our missionaries is constantly being witnessed. It is interesting to learn that Dr. Stokey thus unwittingly repeated the first experiment of the engravers in making metal cuts.—Missionary Review of the World.

APPRECIATION OF THE BIBLE.

The following extract is from a letter written by a convert in Japan: "Many thanks for your kindness in sending me the book I requested. I never knew there was such a trustworthy God. I found the encouraging, everlasting life in the Book when I was reading it. It is impossible to expect the eternal life in my religion; and, moreover, on the contrary, it shortens my life and cause me to be unhappy. But how trustworthy a God you have! Peace and eternal life in him! I am very glad to hear that, and I wish to believe in him. If it is not too expensive, I wish to have your God in my house dedicate. Please kindly let me know the details."

TETTERINE WHEN OTHERS FAIL

That's the great thing about Tetterine skin remedy. It does insist upon relieving the severest cases of Tetter, Ringworm, Eczema, Itch, Acne, Pimples, etc., when others fall down. Mrs. S. E. Hart, Cross Trails, Ala., says: "I used Tetterine for tetter which has been running for 5 years. Nothing gave relief until I used your remedy and one box made a final cure." 50c at druggist's or by mail from Shuptrine Co., Savannah, Ga.

Like a Boy at 50 Bubbling Over. With Vitality—Taking Iron Did It

Doctor says Nuxated Iron is greatest of all strength builders—Often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks time.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact a young man he really was notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxuated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endnrance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fifteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctored for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M.D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily asaimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

---, and in Africa, "Sweet Dreams Worked Like a Charm"

A man sailed from New Orleans last July for Africa.

He was entering a country that he knew suffered from the ravages of mosquitoes.

In one of his cases he put four bottles of Sweet Dreams.

Upon his return to the States he wrote a letter saying what he had done and added, —"and in Africa Sweet Dreams worked like a charm."

A former traveler had told how the Africans kept off the deadly tsetse fly. An American developed the idea into a remedy for keeping mosquitoes off. And thus the African idea went back home—only for a new purpose.

But "it worked like a charm."

Sweet Dreams is the greatest mosquito remedy ever made.

From the Field

Marion, Miss.

Our revival meeting up at Marion, Miss., began on Sunday, July 16, 1916, and closed out with the evening service on Thursday, July 20. We were ably assisted by Rev. D. E. Vickers, of Matherville, Miss. Brother Vickers is a good man and a most excellent preacher and his sermons from day to day were of a lucid type. We had one accession to the Church, and our membership generally has, in our opinion, been greatly built up spiritually.—Hilary S. Westbrook.

Taylor, Miss.

Just a few words about our work. Everything is moving off nicely in this charge. We have recently closed a very gracious revival here at Taylor. Rev. J. A. Bowen did the preaching. The church was greatly revived, sinners were converted, and Methodism was very greatly uplifted in this community. We have doubled our membership here this year. With the kindest of wishes for the Advocate and its faithful editor, I am

Yours fraternally,
R. G. LORD, P. C.

Clayton, La.

Dear Brother Meek: We closed a good meeting at Clayton, La., last night. At 4 p.m. yesterday, on the bank of Tensas River, I baptized four children, and following this I baptized seven adults in the river. In the church at night I baptized three more persons and then received 16 into the Church, which doubled our membership at that place. The preaching for nine days was done by Brother C. F. Staples, and it proved the power of God unto salvation. Praise the Lord!—W. J. Porter.

July 25.

Rocky Springs, Miss.

We have just closed a good revival at Willows, one of the appointments of the Rocky Springs charge. Rev. J. M. Smith did the preaching, which was logical, wholesome, and evangelical. The singing was conducted by Rev. C. A. Massey. Both the singing and preaching were of a high order and brought good results. There were 25 accessions to the Church and about 100 persons pledged themselves to live a better life. I heartily recommend the two young brethren who assisted me to any pastor in need of their services.—C. H. Strait, P. C.

St. Tammany Charge, La. Conf.

We have just closed a good meeting at Fitzgerald Church, on the St. Tammany charge. Brother N. E. Alford, of Magnolia, Miss., was with us, and preached at the day services. The pastor did the preaching at night. We had rain and high water to hinder us, but the people came right on, and though the meeting lasted only four days, we had 12 accessions—all young people from fifteen to twenty-five years old. So we think that a good work was done. The Lord is blessing us on the work. We baptized four children to-day. God bless you in your work.—J. S. Rutledge, P. C.

Raceland, La.

Dear Brother Meek: Will you please give me space in the Advocate to say some things about the revival services that Brother Martin Hebert recently held here at Raceland Prairie? We had a very good meeting. We had seven accessions to the Church; eight persons were baptized. I am sure that Brother Martin Hebert is just the leader that we need here in this French mission because he can preach in both French and English. I hope that we can have him often here on Bayou Lafourche to assist in meetings at different places. He preaches some great sermons, accompanied with the power of the Holy Spirit. I pray to God that our work may go on and on among these French people, as well as among the English. Let us pray that we may have a great year for the advancement of the Kingdom of God.—A. D. Martin, P. C.

Durant, Miss.

Durant, Miss., has been blessed by a union tent meeting, which closed on Sunday, July 23. The congregations were large. By actual count the evening congregations ranged from eight hundred to twelve hundred. The Spirit of God was present at every service. The one purpose in every Christian's heart was to save the lost. The people lost sight of church differences, and placed the emphasis on those cardinal doctrines on which all agree; hence love pervaded the very atmosphere. Many forgot their personal differences, and made up and became friends. There were many conversions among those who were members of the Church. The greatest result of the meeting was in the regeneration of the church members. With two exceptions, those who were converted were adults. A goodly number joined some one of the churches here. Many enrolled for service in the Sunday schools. The preaching was done by the local pastors and our presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Mitchell. The music was conducted by Brother P. M. Boyd and his wife. They are cultured and consecrated musicians, and they sing with great power. Brother Boyd's address to men delivered during the meeting was the greatest I have yet listened to on that subject. Many of our preachers will be interested to know that Brother Boyd and his wife are no longer associated with an evangelist, but are free to assist pastors in their meetings.—T. M. Bradley, Pastor.

Winnsboro, La.

We have just closed a very successful revival at Winnsboro in which we were assisted by Rev. J. M. Alford of Columbia. Thirty-two new members have already been received as part of the results, while several more have given their names for membership, but were not present to be received. New life has indeed come into our church.

We have received a total of 53 into the Church on the charge this year, and have two more revivals to hold. We have three large and vigorous Sunday schools on the work—one at each Church. They are well organized and are doing a great work in developing our young people. Our Sunday school enrollment is far ahead of the register of church membership.

The good people of Crowville have built a splendid church this year. I have never seen anywhere a more zealous working spirit than that in evidence at Crowville. The building will soon be completed, out of debt, and ready for dedication. Greatly to our disappointment, we failed to secure any help from the Board of Church Extension, but we are forging ahead.

We have a most excellent Missionary Society at Winnsboro. The organization at Crowville is called the Ladies' Aid, but is doing unsurpassably well. A seven-room parsonage was completed two years ago and has been well furnished from pantry to parlor by the good women. Our next meeting will be held at Boeuf Prairie, with Brother Alford as the preacher.

Brethren, I most heartily commend Brother Alford as a revivalist. He preaches the old time gospel with great fervor and power, and all his meetings are fruitful of good results. —H. B. Thomason, P. C.

ORPHANAGE DEDICATION.

Friday, July 21, was a great day in the history of our Louisiana Conference Orphanage work.

In the presence of all the presiding elders, a number of other preachers, the trustees of the institution, and a concourse of friends, Bishop E. E. Hoss solemnly dedicated the beautiful building in Ruston to the noble Christian service for which it was erected.

At the noon hour proceeding there was spread a royal barbecue, prepared by the master hand of Brother Bob McClendon, and the assembled guests, along with the large Orphanage family, did full justice to the occasion. At three in the afternoon, on the upper veranda, the dedication services were conducted. Scripture was read and prayer offered by Rev. J. L. Hoffpauir, the building and grounds were officially presented by Hon. S. D. Pearce, President of the Board of Trustees, and the Bishop made an appropriate address, followed by the impressive words of dedication.

It is certainly a matter that should stir up the most profound thanksgiving to God on the part of Louisiana Methodists, that our Orphanage work is on so secure a foundation. In this, the tenth year since the work was begun in Ruston, we have a plant consisting of 127½ acres of good land, on which are situated the institutional home now taking care of 106 children, and the Superintendent's beautiful Memorial Home, all entirely free from debt, and a nucleus of endowment. Surely God has favored this work from its beginning.

A telegram was read from Rev. C. C. Wier, whose faith and works gave the Orphanage its existence and whose absence was much regretted. Mr. J. N. Shealy, Superintendent of the Baptist Orphanage in Lake Charles, was present and spoke brotherly words of congratulation.

Under God's direction, Brother Vaughan has done a monumental work for Methodism and the kingdom of God in Louisiana in carrying the Orphanage work forward to a splendid consummation.

EPWORTH LEAGUE INSTITUTE TO BE HELD AS ANNOUNCED.

Lest the postponement of the Laymen's Missionary Conference should lead to the conclusion that the Epworth League Institute also will be interfered with by the storm damage, it is announced by the Central Office of the Epworth League that the Institute will be held at the time appointed at Lake Junaluska, N. C., August 8-13. By that time railroad trasportation, if not altogether normal, will afford all needed facilities to delegates attending from every direction. A great program has been prepared and all the speakers are expecting to be present and take their parts.

"TAKE HEED TO THYSELF."

St. Paul was not only a man of great intellect, great energy, and great achievements, but also of great experiences. He often in his life touched the invisible spiritual forces and was by them strengthened and enriched. His conversion on the road to Damascus was so remarkable that it has ever since been one of the outstanding events of Christianity; and he never got away from the effects of what then and there occurred. He was after that, indeed, a new person, having aims, ideals, and purposes altogether different. Thenceforth he had a new knowledge, new hopes, and gave himself with all the ardor of his being to a new work.

But this was not his only uplifting and enlarging contact with the living Lord and the unseen things of the spiritual realm. We find him in the Book of Acts (22:17) telling of a vision that came to him in the Temple at Jerusalem, and in the twelfth chapter of Second Corinthians he modestly but impressively refers to occasions when he was caught up into the third heaven and into paradise and heard things that it was not lawful to utter. With these additional spiritual exaltations came afflictions, but with them also came increased knowledge and power. It was these and other experiences in which he came into conscious touch with the risen Christ that made Paul such a stalwart and heroic exponent and propagator of Christianity. He was in his utterances no mere echo of other men—no mere repeater of second-hand truths that he had picked up in books, or schools, or in his associations with other persons. What he taught, he knew to be true—it had been perceived and realized in his inmost consciousness so unmistakably that he could not doubt it.

It would be presumptuous to say that in this day we may have the same revelations as to spiritual things and as to our ascended Lord that St. Paul had, for he was a "chosen vessel," a special instrument, in the hands of God for an unusual and difficult work; but it is certainly possible for us to come realizingly into touch with Christ and to commune with him and learn to know him. What we are to preach or teach is given in the Holy Scriptures, but its significance is not fully understood until a man has himself found Jesus and knows that he is able and willing to fulfill the precious promises contained in his written Word. Therefore, a knowledge of Christ as one's personal savior and a full faith in his power and readiness to save others is the first and foremost requirement for truly effective service, both as a soul winner and in the work of building up Christians. This is a truth which can not be too strongly emphasized in this day when so much stress is being laid upon other kinds of equipment—and, to a considerable extent, rightly so.

It is only as it is verified in one's own consciousness that religious truth can be vitally and successfully taught. One cannot hope to lift others higher in spiritual attainments than one's self has gone. It is when the soul speaks out of its own knowledge that other souls are touched and moved. There is, so to speak, a soul language by means of which the spiritual natures of men can communicate with one another. It is in this that we must talk if we would convey a real knowledge of Jesus and the deeper things of the Spirit.

The great achievers in the Kingdom of God have been men of rich and full religious experiences—holy men. This was true of Moody, Finney, Spurgeon, Wesley, and Paul. And their times of contact with the Master were never wholly in the past—they were daily and unceasing. Having learned to know Him, they ever wanted a deeper insight into the glorious truths of which he was the embodiment. Having had his heart "strangely warmed," the great Wesley saw that it never again grew cold. This is a lesson that we need to lay to heart. Every Christian should in a sense be a mystic: he should ever see the unseen—ever keep in touch with Jesus. A dwindling spiritual experience means a decreasing efficiency in service. Loss of contact with the living Christ takes away all spiritual power. Therefore, "take heed to thyself." Cling to the quiet hour. Study the Bible, and pray much. A workman who does not keep up his own health and strength is unfit to toil for others.

A QUESTION IN THE BACKGROUND.

The Methodist Church in Canada has recently been wiped out, having merged with the Presbyterians and Congregationalists, and some of the Methodist papers in the United States, both North and South, have been proclaiming this to be an occurrence to get happy and shout over. We are not able, however, to join in this jubilation, not feeling assured that it is a great forward movement in the developing Kingdom of Christ, as some are so loudly affirming it to be. John Wesley declared that he had never known a church to prosper spiritually that did not have the doctrine of Christian perfection constantly held up before its members as a thing to be eagerly and persistently sought; and how is this great doctrine to be proclaimed and insisted upon in the mongrel new Church in Canada? And who will now preach the doctrine of a universal atonement, and that of the witness of the Spirit to a definite, unmistakable salvation? We are by no means convinced that a oneness of human effort in the work of the Church, procured by shelving the great spiritual truths for which Methodism has stood in the past and which have done so much for the salvation of men, would prove a gain, rather than a loss, even if such an amalgamation should bring such co-operation, which we consider very doubtful. In the "Great Commission" the continuation of the Divine presence, which alone can give true success in bringing men to Jesus, was made contingent upon the execution of the Master's injunction, "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

Commenting upon this amalgamation of Churches in Canada, the Western Christian Advocate (Cincinnati) of July 26, says:

"Bishop Hendrix and Bishop Cranston, respective heads of Methodist Union Committees, South and North; the Rev. Dr. W. H. Roberts, prominent member of Presbyterian unity plans, the Rev. Dr. W. T. Manning, the Episcopal leader who fathered the Commission on Faith and Order; and the Rev. Dr. Peter Ainslie, the Disciples' unity champion, express the view that the Canada experiment will have very great influence upon unity plans in the United States. There is to be prepared a statement of the Canada negotiations for use at the World Conference, whenever that shall be held."

The foregoing statement deserves careful attention. There is no doubt that the ultimate aim of the extreme union faddists who are at work among us is to wage a warfare against all denominationalism. Evidence of this abounds. Both Bishop Cranston and Bishop Hendrix have in effect elsewhere declared that the union of the American Methodists will be but an initial step toward a union of all the Protestant bodies. So the question in the background in this union movement really is, Shall Methodism be disintegrated in the United States, as it has been in Canada? Southern Methodists would, we think, do well to take this question into consideration now, before our Church has become too much involved in this anti-denominational movement. It is certainly one that will have to be reckoned with in the not-far future. If we are to enter into a unification arrangement with the Northern Methodist Church, which is already considerably infected with this spirit, it ought to be with such a reservation of indestructible autonomy that we can put the breakers on this trend toward the obliteration of Methodism, if we should so desire. Otherwise, being tied up with a much larger body, there is little telling into what we may be dragged in the course of a few years. It is the part of wisdom always to look intelligently ahead.

VALUABLE VOLUME FOR THE ASKING.

The Seventieth Annual Report of the Board of Missions, covering the year 1915, is a volume that should be in the hands of every pastor and leading layman. Its two hundred and sixty pages are full of interesting and valuable information from beginning to end. There are reports from the secretaries and treasurer of the Board, and detailed reports of our missions in China, Korea, Cuba, Mexico, Africa and Brazil. These reports from the field afford a complete survey of all the missionary activities of the Board, as seen by the missionaries themselves. In addition there are the minutes of the annual meeting and directories of missionaries, Conference Missionary Secretaries, Conference Boards of Missions, Conference Lay Leaders, General and Conference Evangelists and Conference Committees on Evangelism. A copy of the Report will be sent without charge on application to the Board of Missions, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee.

THE INSPIRED WORD.

By J. H. Sammis.

"The book contains not God's Word," they say.
Man thought his thoughts. He did not speak, but they
The concept of the substance is divine.
But reason must assay the ore we mine."
"That can't be true," says one, disposed to doubt;
The word is human—so he rules it out.
He has a notion, say, concerning sin,
The thought's divine—and so he reads it in.

Thus with his scissors and his pot of paste,
Each suits a revelation to his "cultured" taste;
Amends the sacred text and writes instead
What God Almighty would, or should, have said:
Explores the depths of the Unfathomed Mind,
And naught beyond his plummet's reach can find;
Then renders us, what time his task is done,
His Jack-o'-lantern for our glorious Sun.

Not so the Scripture: "God spake all these words"—
"Words which the Spirit teacheth,"—"words," "words," "words," Precept, prediction, prophecy, and song;
"Thy word," not thought, says one, "was in my tongue."

Till tunes are played with neither note nor horn,
Till souls of men are without bodies born,
A wordless thought remains a thoughtless word,
A fool's conceit to contradict his Lord.

Our holy writings are inbreathed of God,
The word, the letter, the title, and the yod.
God taught the prophet and impelled his pen
From "In beginning" to the last "Amen!"
And woe to him whose vain, presumptuous thought
Shall add thereto or dare diminish aught.

—Presbyterian.

THE BEST GIFT.

Let us seek earnestly this best gift of God—a clean and pure heart; for we may be sure that as we grow in grace, so only shall we grow in the knowledge of God; and yet again, as our knowledge of Him increases, so shall our holiness; so that beholding Him we shall be changed into the same Image.—Dr. Magee, late Archbishop of York.

AN ELOQUENCE THAT COUNTS.

"Silence is sometimes eloquent. The stars do not speak—they shine. Yet they are eloquent in their beauty and tell forth the praises of their divine Creator. One of the significant statements of Christ concerning the Christian life is, 'Ye are the light of the world.' A light is made to shine, and Jesus Christ has lighted the souls of men with a flame of divine glory in order that they may shine forth into the hearts of other men, and thus illumine their lives and lead them to Christ."

WHEN REVELATIONS COME.

It is in the still times of life—often when the soul has been hushed by the violence of some great sorrow—that we obtain that clearest vision of God's glory in the pure, forgiving, mothering, saving Christ. We should remember that when the transfigured Christ made His appearance to the lonely three it was in the solitude of Hermon's summit, when the sun had sunk beneath the trembling sky line of the great sea, when the sounds of the busy life in the world below had died away and the low-lying landscapes had faded into a misty blur. It was then that the face of Jesus "did shine as the sun." So it is in the still chambers of the heart which holds its breath in awe and love that Christ appears "the fairest among ten thousand and the One altogether lovely." It is there that we learn the real secret of the Lord.—Unidentified.

"Tempests that beat us to the clay
Drive many a lowering cloud away,
And bring a clearer, holier day."

CALM AND CAREFUL CONSIDERATION CALLED FOR.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

Not a few good people seem to misunderstand the present state of the question concerning "unification" between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and their enthusiasm on the subject is not justified by the facts.

That they should so misunderstand the matter is not a very strange thing. The press dispatches sent out from the General Conference at Saratoga were themselves misleading, and for this we can not seriously blame the press agents. The atmosphere of the Conference seems to have been such as might easily impress a newspaper reporter that more had been done with reference to "unification" than really had occurred. The honored and beloved Senior Bishop of the Church of our Northern brethren had published a book on organic union in advance of the General Conference, and at the General Conference he preached a sermon on the subject of union with the Southern Church which stirred considerable emotion. Naturally the sermon did not deal definitely with details, and was addressed in the main to the sensibilities of the audience. Indeed the memory of the venerable Bishop seemed to have failed him about the "plan of unification" which as a member of the Joint Commission he had helped to frame; for in the course of his sermon he alluded to it as a plan of unification "that our sister Church of the South has put before us," whereas it was not a plan of the Southern Church, but the plan of the Joint Commission which was ignored four years before by his own General Conference. This sermon, however, and other things, created impressions upon the attendant press agents, which caused them to imagine results had been achieved which have not yet been accomplished, and which may never be brought to pass.

Naturally the public, including many members of our own Church, fell under these misapprehensions; but it is time their minds were cleared up.

It goes without saying that most, if not all, Southern Methodists approve the "plan of unification" which the Joint Commission, composed of Representatives of the Northern Church, the Southern Church, and the Methodist Protestant Church, framed before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church met in Minneapolis in May, 1912; but any reasonable interpretation of the action taken by the Northern General Conference which met at Saratoga in May, 1916, would seem to justify the conclusion that this plan of the Joint Commission has less chance for adoption now than it had before that Conference assembled.

Let us look at the facts: The Methodist Protestant General Conference approved the plan when it was laid before it, and our own General Conference, at Oklahoma City, in 1914, approved it with small amendment. But the Northern General Conference has appended to a general and indefinite approval of it certain "recommendations" that amount to a virtual substitution of the plan with an entirely different, if not contradictory, proposal. We are bound to believe that the "recommendations" adopted by the General Conference at Saratoga express with perfect sincerity and candor the minds of our Northern brethren. It is true that these "recommendations" are put forward as "tentative," but they certainly express what our Northern brethren sincerely mean and intend. This is the more evident when we consider that their General Conference, held in Minneapolis four years ago, ignored entirely "the plan of unification" which the Joint Commission had adopted; and, furthemore, the action taken at Saratoga was foreshadowed by declarations made by many of their leading men before the General Conference assembled at Saratoga in which they expressly opposed "the plan of unification" which had been recommended by the Joint Commission in which their representatives participated and which our Methodist Protestant brethren had approved and which our General Conference had accepted.

We can hardly expect that they will recede easily from these "recommendations." They do not wish such a General Conference as was proposed in "the plan of unification." On the contrary, they wish a General Conference of practically unlimited powers, composed of Negroes and white people, and legislating for every section of the united Church. The plan they propose lacks any adequate protection for minorities, and if adopted would virtually dissolve and absorb the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and put all it is and all it has under a General Conference of unlimited powers composed of representatives of both races.

"The plan of unification" which was adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church and by the General Conference of our Church may be regarded as an irreducible minimum in so far as a majority of our people are concerned. We may be sure they will never consent to such a General Conference as that proposed by our Northern brethren in session at Saratoga, and if they did consent to it Methodism in the South would be greatly and irreparably damaged. Some tell us we must make some concessions, but they do not specify the points which we can safely yield. Moreover concessions were made by our representatives in the Joint Commission when "the plan of unification" was framed. What further shall we concede?

On the other hand, we can not seriously expect that our Northern brethren will recede very materially from the "recommendations" which they have put forward at Saratoga. It is but just to believe that they were perfectly sincere in expressing themselves as they did, and it is doubtful if their General Conference could have been induced to take any action on the subject which did not contain the "recommendations" set out in the report which was adopted. At their General Conference in Minneapolis they did not even risk a discussion of "the plan of unification" which had been framed by the Joint Commission.

Besides all this, they have considerable properties in the South, which I imagine their people would be very slow to turn over to a Quadrennial Conference composed mostly of our people. In a recent issue of the New York Christian Advocate (July 20, 1916) it is reported that they have at Sebring, Florida, a church soon to be finished which will cost not less than $12,000. At Boaz, Alabama, they have a school for which they have recently completed a dormitory at a cost of $25,000. They are building in the city of Atlanta a church, within a stone's throw of our St. Mark's Church, which, when completed, will represent an investment of about $100,000. They are completing churches at Tarpon Springs, Florida, and at Hogansville, Georgia, and at many other points in the South, although their white members are small in numbers. Now, it is hardly possible that they will turn over these properties to us easily, and it is difficult to see what we would do with the properties if we had them. For example, what would we do with both St. Mark's Church and the Warren Church in Atlanta that are within a very few blocks of each other?

At Chattanooga they have a University of some proportions. Does anybody suppose that they will readily turn that property over to our people? And if they did, what would we do with both it and Emory and Henry College?

They have a large fund, known as "the Livingston Fund," given by one of their wealthy laymen a few years ago, for the express purpose of building Northern Methodist Churches in Florida. Will they turn that "Fund" over to the Southern Quadrennial Conference? If so, what would we do with it, if we were faithful to the trust created by the donor of this fund?

These facts, and many others, suggest to us that there are great difficulties in the way of any "plan of unification," and that the difficulties have not been diminished, but rather increased, by the action of the Northern General Conference at Saratoga, which action was by no means so favorable to the plan as the action taken by the Methodist Protestant Church and the action of our own General Conference several years before their Conferenee met at Saratoga.

In truth, when our General Conference of 1914 adjourned, the report of the Joint Commission had reached all the General Conferences of the three Churches whose representatives had participated in framing it; two of them—our own and the Methodist Protestant General Conference—had approved it in the main, and one of them—the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1912—had ignored it. But the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church held at Saratoga in 1916 could no longer ignore it after the other two General Conferences had adopted it, and that body virtually presented a substitute for it, This means that much work must be done over again, if anything substantial and valuable is to be achieved.

Of course, our Church will appoint its Commissioners, and they will meet with the Commissioners of the Northern General Conference to discuss the matter with them in brotherly-kindness and Christian candor. Nothing less could we do in justice to ourselves. This we will do in perfectly good faith.

But let no one suppose that thoughtful men among us expect "unification" to be accomplished at a stroke of the pen. It can not be achieved by haste or by any program of mere hurrah. It is too serious a matter to be dealt with after that fashion.

It is amazing for anybody to suppose that two General Conferences meeting simultaneously in 1918 could consummate the whole matter. The Constitution of our own Church requires such a matter to be submitted to the Annual Conferences, even if perfect agreement had been reached by all parties and the agreement approved without amendment by the General Conference. Of course, we will respect and obey our Constitution, and it would be very unjust to snppose that our Northern brethren will he quick to disregard their Constitution. They were too hasty by half when they accepted the suggestion of simultaneous sessions of the General Conferences to consummate their plan in 1918; but they will correct their mistake on second thought.

This is a matter for very serious and careful discussion, and it will be thoroughly discussed, whether men wish it so or not. The Church membership of even one man is a very sacred thing, not to speak of the Church membership of many thousands of people. And these good people can not have their Church relations disposed of without a most deliberate consideration of the whole matter. Nor will they consent to ignore the history of the past, as if it were an utterly shameful thing to be hidden out of sight. No great movement was ever brought to a successful issue by ignoring past history. If we are to have any union in the future worth the name, it must be brought to pass in the light of all that has gone before, and care must be taken that evil things of the past he not repeated and that good things of the past be invlolably preserved in the future.

The fathers of Methodism who separated sadly in 1844 were not a set of god-forsaken sinners, but they were divinely guided men, who separated wisely that the work of God committed to the people called Methodists might be preserved in every part of our country, and God has blessed their labors and established the work of their hands. Methodism in the United States would not be the powerful thing it is to-day, if the fathers in 1844 had loved a mechanical union more ardently than they did the Kingdom of God. Perhaps if "the plan of separation" to which they agreed had been more faithfully and religiously observed much waste of resources might have been avoided and greater results accomplished by their successors. We shall do well, if our devotion to God's cause at the present time shall be equal to their fidelity and wisdom in 1844.

A re-united Methodism is a thing which appeals very strongly to the imagination, but a triumphant Christianity in every part of the country appeals even more strongly to the Christian heart.

We could by a forced and premature and hasty "plan of unification" set up more strife in our country, especially in the South, than we could promote peace and Christian unity.

We have seen the effort of a majority to merge the Cumberland Presbyterian Church into the Northern Presbyterian Church. Following that effort, there has been litigation in the courts, alienation of brethren and even division of families, and still there is a Cumberland Presbyterian Church. It is impoverished and enfeebled, but it is still in existence and is likely to continue.

It is easy to conceive of a "plan of unification" that would spread strife among the Methodists of the North and seriously damage Methodism in all those States: and it is quite easy to conceive of a "plan of unification" that would work similar results in the South.

The litigation and strife and contention which would follow would be as much greater than that which has followed in the case of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church as the Methodist Churches are larger and more extensive than was that body.

In view of all these things, and others which might be mentioned, it behooves our people to be calm and united among themselves. God will not forsake us if we continue true to Him. We shall neither honor Him nor promote our own piety if, in an effort to unite with another branch of Methodism, we make more division among ourselves.

God is blessing us in all departments of our Church life and His favor has been with us through all these years. In the desolate period following the Civil War when many of our Churches were taken from us by the military authorities, and when our people were poor and peeled, the divine blessing so rested upon us that the Southern Methodists rose up out of their desolation and rebuilt the waste places of our Zion. In all of the years that have elapsed since then the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night have attended our Church. Now, when we are stronger and more prosperous than ever we may still claim the divine favor and walk under the divine guidance.

Let us be calm and fix our hearts on nothing else than doing the will of God. Let us not entertain such enthusiastic expectations that we should feel utterly undone if our over-sanguine hopes were not fulfilled. We will readily accept a "plan of unification" which does not hinder the work of God committed to our hands, and we will not undertake to force upon any other branch of Methodism a plan that would hinder their work.

And let no man lecture us by irrelevant appeals to the ways of the world. Some have been ready to say "business men get together, why may not two Churches unite? and if the politicians get together, why may not two Methodisms yield all their differences?" In reply it is sufficient to say that a matter of Christian expediency, to say nothing of a matter of Christian principle, is not a commercial thing nor a political thing. Just because it is a higher thing than these it can not be handled in the same way. On a notable occasion Herod and Pilate made friends, but in the transaction can not be found the motive or model for Christian fraternity. The German Kaiser, the Emperor of Austria, and the Sultan of Turkey have composed their differences under the stress of political necessity, but we could hardly expect the Lutheran Church of Germany, to harmonize so easily with both the Romanism of Austria and the Mohammedanism of Turkey. In the life and work of two great Churches something more sacred than that which is handled by commercial and political bodies is involved, and we can not deal with Churches with the compromising methods of the commercial and political world. As a matter of fact, there is more real unity among all the Churches than ever existed between the forces of either the commercial or the political world, and the maintenance of this unity does not require that all Christians get into the same ecclesiastical organization

Equally irrelevant, and more improper, is an exhortation to "union at any price" based on our Lord's intercessory prayer in which He prayed for His disciples, saying, "Neither pray I for these alone but for them also that shall believe on me through their word, that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee that they may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou has sent me." The unity for which our Lord prayed is that spiritual unity of believers with the Father and the Son to which reference is made in another Scripture, in which it is said, "He that is joined to the Lord is one spirit." As Dean Alford says most truly, "This unity has its true and only ground in faith in Christ through the Word of God as delivered by the Apostles, and is therefore not mere outward uniformity, nor can such uniformity produce it." It is such vital unity as subsists between the Father and the Son; for so the very words of the prayer declare Will any sane and serious mind entertain the impossible, if not blasphemous, conception that the ineffable relations of the Godhead are expressed by any form of organic union or mechanical sameness of earthly organizations. This unity of believers with the Father and the Son may be even hindered by mechanical pressure to force Christians into one organization. Such has been the case with the Roman Catholic Church. An ecclesiastical syndicate, although it were large enough to comprehend all in the earth who profess and call themselves Christians, including all the Romanists and all the Protestants and all the communicants of the Greek Church, could not promote this unity of the Spirit. Such an obese organization would probably destroy it, just as the unholy ambition for a world-church suffocates faith in Christ and ends in a worldly Church.

The matter of unification which is now before the three leading bodies of Methodists in the United States can not be brought to a wise and Christian settlement by any or all of these specious and irrelevant appeals. It is a matter to be settled by patient, deliberate and religious consideration of all the issues involved with a view to doing that which will promote most effectually the Kingdom of God. Wise conclusions can not be reached by short cuts and slogans of sentimentality. Methods of haste and hurrah are unsuitable to the issue before us. Least of all can methods of devious diplomacy and dextrous manipulation be employed.

This grave matter has been flippantly described too frequently as a case of courtship and marriage. If that method of discussion must be allowed, let us remind ourselves that Christian marriage "is not by any to be enterprised, or taken in hand unadvisedly, but reverently, discreetly, advisedly, and in the fear of God." Hasty marriages generally end in brawling households.

Whatever form of union, or unification, or federation may come out of all these discussions and negotiations, it is devoutly to be wished that it may bring the end of strife and not mark the beginning of sharper contentions. Friction on the border has been had, but discord and division at the centers of the Churches and throughout all their length and breadth, would be unspeakably worse. Border warfare is to be deprecated, but civil war everywhere would be intolerable. The South knows by experience the horrors of a civil war which involved the whole Nation, but the battles of which were mostly confined to Southern fields; and we do not wish to repeat the experience ecclesiastically.

Let our preachers and people stand unitedly, and go forward with the work of the Lord committed to their hands. Nothing of supreme moment has occurred yet in all this matter of unification, and if anything of moment had occurred, it would still be for us the part of wisdom and piety to stand together and do our work in the fear of God, and thus merit the divine favor "We he brethren," and "the Canaanite and the Perizzite dwell in the land."

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS AND ELSE

Mr. Editor: Your two editorials in the July the 9th issue of the Advocate on "The Effort to Stifle Free Speech" and "Bishop McConnell on the Episcopacy" have interested me. I heartily agree with your contention in the first that the editor of his organ, just as the preacher in his pulpit, could not maintain his self-respect to say anything of the temper of the twentieth century democratic world and its obligation to the trust assigned him and be careless as to what he should write or should not write, or should speak or should not speak. To allow such a restriction of the right to free speech would be to concede as true Mr. Carnegie's contention that the Church is "too narrow for broad education." If the Protestant press of this democratic country is not emancipated, then where may we hope to find freedom of speech?

But here on your own ground, Mr. Editor, "we have somewhat to say against you," for in the recent Vanderbilt controversy, in which you so vigorously opposed the policy of the trustees, along with the editor of the Nashville Advocate, you seemed to have maintained a policy directly opposite the one enunciated in this editorial, as far as giving the readers and supporters of the Advocate the same privilege for which you are here contending for the editor. For, as we understood your policy, you shut out practically all of those who held views different from your own, and so your readers were forced to hear only one side of a question that involved very greatly their ecclesiastical interests. And now, if according to the divine declaration, "with what measure you mete it shall be measured to you again," some should try to silence you when you differ with their way of thinking, you must at least take it gracefully and not be wrought up over-much. But in the present question of full and free discussion in the matter of the union of the two Methodisms you are certainly right, and we must heartily commend your democratic attitude, and trust that it shall be maintained to the end. Both the editor because of his official responsibility, and the people because of their proprietary interest, certainly have the right to freely express their views on such questions in their Church paper, and if this privilege were not granted them in their own organ, they would be forced to resort to the secular press, or else "stifle" their convictions and not say what they think they have a right to say, and in some instances what they ought to say. This would go far to confirm Mr. Carnegie's contentions that the secular educational agencies are broader than are the ecclesiastical, and so would be a great reflection on the Church.

As for my part I believe that the members, as well as the Bishops and editors, not only have the right to do so, but for the safety of the Church should be encouraged to express their convictions and wishes on a question of so much concern to their Church. If for no other reason, such a paper would be readable and not a canned-goods factory where everything is put up according to a certain censorship brand, and so would be of such interest as to be subscribed for and read. And, furthermore, if history teaches anything it is that a heirarchy that can control the educational and expressional forces of a church is the hardest thing in the world to reform or to cause to make progress; and an episcopally censored, or an editorially monopolized, press would be dangerous even to Methodism; and the day that she allows such to be the case, she might as well write "ichabod" over her doors. And it is not always a question as to whether the views of the writer are right or wrong—it is the greater question of one's right to free speech in the press of his own Church that he is part and parcel of, and has a right to a say in its management.

As to Bishop McConnell's statement that the Northern Methodists had "evolved" a democratic episcopacy, we agree with the idea of our Northern contemporary that such an evolution would be a good thing if true, and in this case disagree with the Bishop demurred. We don't see why, at this stage of the Church's progress, a superintendent can not keep his commitments by virtue of his orderliness and inspiration without being armed with all sorts of ironclad authority and legal power. And when we hear a Methodist preacher must solemnly vow to reverently obey, and follow with a glad mind and will the godly admonitions of his ecclesiastical superiors we think of a Pope, and hope to see the day when this institution is "evolved" from our ecclesiastical forms. If our ministerial brotherhood is a fraternity of equals, and the most to be said of a "superior" is that he fills a different office in the distribution of labors, we can see no necessity for such a vow of obedience. What the ranks of the membership and preachers in the Church need and crave is the inspiration of a brotherly leadership, and not the rod of authority, and anything that brings this about more generally is an "evolution" in the right direction.

And, to our mind, there will be one advantage of the American Methodisms' uniting and making a government de novo, just as did the Methodisms of Japan a few years ago. Some obsolete pieces of the machinery in some of the bodies uniting that need modifying or discarding can be remade by a united conference of modern ecclesiastical statesmen, looking at all questions from the viewpoint of the several bodies, and the wisdom they have gained in the use of their several peculiar pieces of church machinery, as, for instance, the Methodist Protestants in not only recognizing the "laity rights" of women, but also in ordaining them to the ministry. And also their experience in an elective presiding eldership, on account of which they withdrew from Episcopal Methodism in 1824; and a non-episcopal Church government. Likewise the Northern Methodists can before this new constitution-making body more perfectly set forth what they mean by a "democratic episcopacy," and its advantages over an "autocratic episcopacy," if they be advantages. And thence, if for no other reason than the progress towards the ideal church government, to say nothing of the immense gains in other directions, we hope to see American Methodisms soon "in one fold" and "with one shepherd."

P. O. LOWREY.

Donaldsonville, La.

(Brother Lowrey is mistaken as to our policy during the Vanderbilt controversy. Our columns were freely used by disputants on both sides. We published articles from Dr. Winton, Mr. Bingham, Chancellor Kirkland, and others favorable to the trustees. We did turn down some articles criticising our Bishops when they were being attacked severely through the secular press for carrying out the instructions of the General Conference.—Editor Advocate.)

PALMETTO LETTER.

Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

So Dr. Ellis thinks I was in my "nighties," whatever that is, and saw a ghost. Well, if it made the rascal laugh, maybe it saved him from an operation for appendicitis, so did him some good, anyhow. I am glad you put his letter alongside of one from Bishop Hoss. Was Hoss in his "nighties" when he wrote his serious protest against certain utterances at Saratoga by our Senior Bishop? Dr. Ellis feels assured that Bishop Hendrix will not surrender us. I yield to no man in high esteem for Bishop Hendrix. I believe him to be incapable of acting contrary to his highest conviction of what is right, and am perfectly sure that what he said at Saratoga was the utterance of a great love for the Church. But Bishop Hendrix has lived all his life out of the South. He naturally looks at this subject of Methodist union from the standpoint of Kansas City. He is utterly out of touch with the conditions in the South Atlantic and Gulf States. He certainly underestimates the danger to us down here of re-opening the race problem as union with the Methodist Episcopal Church on their plan will eventually do.

In this connection I would remind Dr. Ellis of what he was too young to know anything about—that what he calls "nighties" played a great part in redeeming the South, and the terror of the ghosts started the way to peace and good government from the Potomac to the Rio Grande. So much for the subject. But Dr. Ellis is mistaken when he thinks I am "skeered." I am told he is a Calvinist and so to be frank about it, these "tropic" storms have made it a little too cool for nighties. But when Dr. Ellis announced that the organic union of Methodism North and South was to be consummated "before the roses bloom in June," if a fellow was in his "nighties"—bent sheet, I suppose he means—he would have to get a move on him to get dressed in time.

Seriously, Dr. Ellis, the alarm caused by the Saratoga speeches is to my mind proof that we are not ready for union. The situation is full of explosive sentiment. The very fact that we can't state our side of the case without the other side charging that we think they are insincere is significant. I have never thought that the Methodist Episcopal Church was insincere in their action at Saratoga, but I do believe that they acted under the mistaken idea that we are ready to unite on their plan of one supreme General Conference, with supreme legislative, executive and judicial powers. And I think it was very reasonable to conclude that it is high time for those of us who know that such a plan will not suit us to speak out.

I wish I had Dr. Ellis' faith in the Commissioners, but I haven't, for one reason, because I don't know who they are to be; and for another, because I know the tremendous "push" of this union sentiment. It is far stronger than some suppose. And yet I am as sure as that I am sitting on this chair that if it comes on the Saratoga plan it means the disintegration of all that remains of the Old South. To me the great thing involved is the final and irretrievable loss of our distinctive ideals. We had to separate to save them, and did save them, by separating. We are two peoples down at bottom. We think and act differently about many things. We can unite on the plan that our Church has proposed, because that allows us to keep the control of our local affairs.

Pooh, pooh, it as they may, Dr. Meek; laugh as much as they please at "nighties" and "ghosts," it means the invasion of the South by Northern ideas, and I prefer ours. Am I a reprobate for that reason? But I mean to keep in a good humor about the whole business. It takes two to unite, and I'm one, so I have an individual veto on the Saratoga scheme. I think it is our side that have a right to kick, when our Senior Bishop called us "fools," even though he included the whole family in the category. Such an impeachment of the solemn history of the past by a man of Bishop Hendrix' eminence and representative character seems to me to justify the dignified and earnest remonstrance of every true Southern Methodist; and, while abating nothing of my high esteem for Bishop Hendrix, I am glad those of us who feel the wrong done to the memory of our heroic leaders by his utterance are represented by Bishop Hoss' protest.

They may down us, Meek, but tell the bright boys like Ellis that some "ghosts" won't "down" for all his rollicking laughter. Let's cut a watermelon, and let the "union" limousine roll on to its inevitable precipice!

AS A PASTOR SEES IT.

Dear Dr. Meek: I suspect when the rank and file of Southern Methodists are heard from it will be found that we are a long way from union with the Methodist Episcopal Church. After the so recent experience of the Cumberland Presbyterians, which has resulted in the loss of so much to them, I suspect there will be some serious weighing of all considerations before the Southern Methodist Church consents to union with the Northern Church. There are many reasons why I think union of the two Methodisms should end with agitation:

1. I think our friends who are so enthusiastic for union are mistaken when they claim that the feeling between the North and the South is a thing of the past. I am glad to believe there has been no active antagonism among Christians of the two sections; but I do believe there is a feeling, and that every effort to minimize it, and count it as nothing, is only arousing it, and will yet cause expressions that will separate us farther. Because the majority of Southern Methodists were not active participants in the struggle of the sixties and the division of the Church, is no reason why they should have forgotten it, or be mistaken as to where the cause of justice suffered most.

2. While it is mighty nice to talk of the "Tentative Plan" and the "nearness of the day," and "the bright and glorious day when Methodism will be one great united host," I fail to see where any concession has been made by our Northern brethren which in any measure changes or removes the causes or conditions which caused the separation. The same things that have always been between us are as present to-day as at any time, and I do not believe they will ever consent to have these conditions removed.

3. I think we have too much at stake to consider the proposition. We as a Church have, as it were, just entered upon our most splendid career. We own more church-houses and parsonages, more schools and colleges, and more eleemosynary institutions than ever before. A new vision has come to us concerning hospitals, and with these come, born of adversity and in the providence of God, our great Southern Methodist University in Texas and Emory University in Georgia. Surely God is looking approvingly upon our work, and, with his blessing, we have a most glorious future. Shall we be controlled by sentiment, or what not, to surrender our heritage and prospects? I think not. Union with the Methodist Episcopal Church according to the Saratoga Plan means the giving over of our educational institutions to others whose ideals and ours are vastly different. Little would be the voice we would have in the management of either of our Universities when once they had fallen into the hands of our Northern brethren. And these cost too much to surrender. But you say, this is not a money consideration and the value of these institutions should have no bearing. All right; surrender them, then when the second separation comes (which I think would be inevitable), money to restore them would be a great consideration. I am not injecting the money consideration. I think the offer of "a million and a quarter dollars in case of union" by "Non-Church Member" should not only serve to keep alive the memory of the insult that another million dollars gave us, but should also cause every Southern Methodist to spurn this offer as an unholy thing and as prejudicial to the interests of the Methodist Church and hurtful to the Kingdom of God.

4. I think the position of the Northern Church on the Negro question will, and should be, an insurmountable barrier to union. According to their recommendations, we have no assurance that Negroes will not be members of our General Conferences; in fact, it looks like if we unite they will be thrust upon us, whether or no. The Southern Methodist Church is a good friend to the negro—this has been proven. We know our relation to him and our duty toward him fairly well, at least better than our Northern friends can tell us. We can best promote the glory of God in our work with Negroes in separate bodies. For this we will contend.

5. Being in the minority, as we are, we can never consent to unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church with one General Conference with "supreme legislative, executive and judicial authority," the constitutionality of whose acts are to be determined by itself. Never! I believe this is going to be the verdict of the rank and file when they speak. Instead of giving up our church autonomy, our name, our possessions, and casting out a large number who would not unite, let us be brotherly, fraternal and co-operative. The field is large, the opportunity is ample, and, under the guidance and blessing of God, both Churches can best do their work as now organized. Let's stop this unnecessary agitation and get to work more earnestly for the coming of the Kingdom. May the good Lord, whose we are and whom we serve, prevent us from mistakes which would be hurtful' S. A. BROWN.

A SMALL AND NARROW VIEW.

Mr. Editor: It is said that there are some persons who favor union with the Northern Methodists because they think it will get them out of the South and enable them to take over some near-by congregation of that denomination. If the latter part of this statement be true, it is certainly a small and selfish consideration to govern one when interests so vast and intricate are involved. It is about on a parity with a candidate for constable or some other insignificant position trading his vote and those of his friends for Governor or President with others in order to secure the little office to which he aspires. Surely there must be some mistake as to this feature of this report. I cannot bring myself to believe that there are any among us who would let a mere little local consideration weigh more with them than the far-reaching fundamental and connectional interests of Southern Methodism.

And as to getting the Northern Methodists out of the South by means of the Saratoga scheme of union, that is the joke of the season. On the contrary, they would by it be brought increasingly into this section. If this form of union should ever come, a wonderful disillusionment will await all who may be nursing any such fancy as this.

B. J. DODSON.

A PERSONAL STATEMENT.

The writer has received many inquiries both by letter and in person concerning his present relation to the Southern Assembly at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, and as there seems to be some confusion and uncertainty on the question, I have prepared the following statement for publication in our Church papers:

When I accepted the position of General Superintendent of the Southern Assembly it was clearly stated that whenever the time arrived to press the fight for State-wide Prohibition in Virginia, it would be necessary for me to lighten my labors in connection with the Assembly that I might have sufficient time to do effective service for the Prohibition cause.

At the beginning of the year, 1914, the Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia decided that the time had come to press the battle for State-wide Prohibition, and passed a resolution requesting the Commissioners of the Southern Assembly to release me from my duties in connection with the Assembly so far as might be necessary for the successful prosecution of the Prohibition work in Virginia. The Commissioners formerly agreed to this arrangement, and elected Mr. H. J. Sloan and Mr. J. Dale Stentz as Assistants to the Superintendent in the carrying on of the Assembly work. The passage of the Enabling Act, the fight at the polls for State-wide Prohibition, the raising of the funds to pay the debt incurred in the State-wide campaign, the election of a favorable Legislature in 1915, and the passage of the Prohibition law in 1916 completed the aggressive program of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia.

Since January 1, 1914, therefore, it has been impossible for me to do any active work in connection with the Assembly, but only to act along with the other Commissioners. The fact, however, that it was possible to give only a small amount of time to the work of the Assembly has not in any way changed my relation to the Assembly, or my interest in its work, and my confidence in its final success. I am as firmly convinced as ever that there is no single movement of the Church which has in it the promise of greater practical results. I am very glad that the pressure of work in other directions has lightened sufficiently to enable me to give much more time to the Assembly, and to be present at all of the Conferences this summer.

So fully convinced are we in Virginia of the great need of such an Assembly to the Church and of the possibilities of Lake Junaluska that, although Richmond is over 100 miles from Lake Junaluska, a party of Virginians have joined together to build the Virginia Lodge, a house with 80 rooms, in order to furnish a place where comfortable accommodations can be had at a moderate rate. If the preachers and laymen of every Conference will take similar action and determine to build a Conference Lodge in time for the summer of 1917, the future of Lake Junaluska as a great summer rallying place for our Methodist people will be firmly established. We have more beautiful surroundings and a more delightful climate than any other Assembly Grounds on the globe, and we can, if we join together, make it in a few years to be the pride of our entire Church. Shall we not have that prompt and hearty co-operation?

UNION FAVORED.

At a called meeting of the preachers of the M. E. Church, South, of New Orleans on Monday, August 6, 1916, in the parlors of the Y. M. C. A. building, the matter of the union of American Methodism was given careful consideration, and the Secretary was instructed to send to the New Orleans Christian Advocate the following resolutions for publication:

"Be it resolved by the undersigned preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of New Orleans,

1. "That we hail with great joy the promise of the early union of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that we pledge our enthusiastic support to the efforts that are being put forth to consummate this end.

2. "That in view of the fact that the General Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have voted unanimously in favor of union and have authorized the appointment of commissioners to formulate the plan to effect such union, we hereby express our confidence in these commissions to be appointed and furthermore pledge our prayers and co-operation in support of this great movement, hoping that it will ultimately result in the unification of American Methodism.

THE DEVELOPING SOUTH.

From an address by United States Senator J. E. Ransdell of Louisiana.)

The South is the only section of the United States which, in the last ten years, has shown a steady increase in rural population, in addition to an increase in the urban population.

The sixteen States which are known as "The South"—Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia—comprises one-third the total area of the United States, but it is populated with only 37 people to the square mile.

Between 1900 and 1910 farm values in the United States increased 109 per cent; in the South they increased 136 per cent.

In the northern agricultural States the crop growing season is from 115 to 140 days of the year; in the South it is about 250 days.

The average highest temperature in summer in North Dakota is three degrees higher than the average highest summer temperature in Louisiana. Sunstrokes, which are a matter of daily occurrence in the North during the summer months, are rarely known in Louisiana.

The South has not had a case of yellow fever in eleven years. Due to a persistent campaign waged by State and local health authorities, assisted by the Federal Government, the South has become the most healthful section of the country.

Sixty per cent of the total gain in value of farm products of the United States in 1915 over 1914 was furnished by the South, with its one-third of the total area of the United States. In other words, the South is advancing three times as fast agriculturally as the rest of the country.

As an evidence of its diversification of crops, the value of the farm products of the South in 1915 (exclusive of cotton) was four times the value of its cotton crop.

During the seven years from 1909 to 1915, inclusive, the corn crop of the South doubled, the oats crop trebled, the wheat crop trebled, and the hay crop doubled.

The South has between 400 and 500 corn club members who are yearly raising more than 100 bushels of corn per acre. In 1915 a South Carolina farmer raised the greatest recorded yield of corn per acre—256 bushels. In the competition among boys' corn clubs throughout the United States, an Alabama boy won first prize with a yield of 232.7 bushels per acre.

Cotton is no longer a "negro labor" crop. The white farmers of the South produce 62 per cent of the yield of cotton and 68 per cent of its market value.

Louisiana corn grades higher, when tested by United States government standards, than Illinois corn.

Louisiana pasturage will carry two head of live stock per acre eight months; the best pasturage in the North will carry one head of stock to two acres for only six months.

Louisiana produces 47 per cent of the rice produced in the United States and operates 55 per cent of the rice mills of the country.

Since 1882 the mineral production of the South has increased 1100 per cent, jumping from 8 per cent of the total mineral production of the United States to 22 per cent of the total.

Of the 57 useful minerals mined in the United States all but two—borax and platinum—are mined in the South, and nine are found exclusively in the South.

The South has twice as many coal deposits as all of Europe (Russia included), more than 50 per cent of the total coal deposits in the United States, and about 50 per cent of the iron resources of the nation.

The South produces 52 per cent of the petroleum of the United States.

Louisiana produces all the sulphur in the United States. Fifteen years ago the United States imported 167,000 tons of sulphur. The Louisiana sulphur mines now supply all the domestic markets of the United States and have changed the import deficit to an export surplus on the books of the nation—exporting $[illegible] tons.

The South produced 52 per cent of the natural gas of the United States, Louisiana standing second in the list of States producing this commodity.

The salt deposits of Louisiana are practically limitless; enough to supply the world for generations.

The South has 625 billion feet of uncut marketable timber, and of this Louisiana has 120 billion feet, or approximately one-fifth. Louisiana is the greatest lumber-producing State in the United States. The largest sawmill in the United States is at Bogalusa, La.

In the improvement of public highways, the South has advanced in 10 years from the poorest section of the United States to where its average is on a par with the average for the entire United States. The mileage of improved highways in the South has increased 300 per cent in ten years, and the expenditure upon good roads has increased 500 per cent.

NEW DEPARTURES IN THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Two important departures have recently been made by the Epworth League. The financial system has been centered in the Conference Epworth League Treasurer. All League money hereafter is to be sent directly to the Treasurer of the Annual Conference Epworth League, except that which is raised for purely local purposes. The League Treasurer will distribute the money according to instructions.

The other departure is to employ a Field Secretary for each of the three divisions of Epworth League work. The Eastern Division embraces all the Conferences bordering upon the Atlantic, from Maryland to Florida, eleven in all. The Central Division embraces the Conferences in Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, ten in all. The Western Division embraces the Conferences in Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas, eleven in all.

The Eastern Division was not inclined to undertake to support a Field Secretary.

With the exception of a single Conference in each Division, both the Central and the Western Divisions voted unanimously in favor of the Divisional Secretary, and made liberal appropriations for this purpose. It only remains now to collect the funds in order to be in a position to employ the two Secretaries that have been provided for.

The Divisional Secretary will have headquarters within the bounds of his Division. He will spend his entire time in the field. His duties will be to hold Rallies, conduct Institutes, visit weak Chapters, organize new Chapters, and promote the Summer Conferences of the Epworth League in his Division.

The Divisional Secretary will be elected by the General Epworth League Board, and work under the direction of the General Secretary. The disposal of his time within the bounds of any Annual Conference will be determined by the Conference Cabinet in consultation with the General Secretary. His schedule of visitations ought to be fixed in the conference of Presidents each fall.

It will be seen that, in either of the two Divisions, the Field Secretary will be able to give an aggregate of at least five weeks' service to each Conference group. In this time he will be able to conduct several series of Institutes, help the District Secretaries meet their problems, and be of great service to the entire Cabinet.

It will be the policy of the General Board to use the Divisional Secretaries largely in developing the Epworth League in the rural regions.

The aim will be to choose thoroughly prepared and finely endowed young men for this important work. Graduates who have scored success in the pastorate and who know the Epworth League are available.

This forward movement in the Epworth League is to be supported by relying upon three resources: Conference dues, the proceeds from the Chapter Membership Fee, and the Anniversary Day offering on the second Sunday in May. Two of these resources should be immediately available—namely, the Conference dues and the Chapter Membership Fee. A call is being made upon all the Chapters in the Central and Western Divisions to remit these funds at once to the Conference League Treasurer.

Nashville, Tenn. F. S. PARKER.

SOMEWHAT PERTINENT.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church (Northern) at its recent session at Saratoga took some very radical actions according to one of our exchanges. One of these was to strike out the word "devil" from their ritual. It is said that in that Church there are a great many destructive critics who have long sneered at the idea that such a being exists. If this be true, we wonder how the Methodists explain their doctrine in regard to "falling from grace." The other action referred to was very closely kin to this one. From their baptismal formula they cut out the expression "conceived and born in sin." This is serious indeed. The Bible teaches the universal corruption of human nature, as one of the foundation facts of the gospel, which shows the need of salvation. If these two doctrines, so clearly taught in the Bible, are to be given up, what else will be likely to follow? If the Northern Methodists are giving up the teachings of the Bible in this, it seems that it would be well for the Southern Methodists to be a little careful about uniting with them, as it is proposed that they shall do. The Southern Methodists are very sound as a class on all the fundamental doctrines of the Scriptures. —Presbyterian of the South.

WHEN THE WEATHER IS CLOUDY.

"The weather is cloudy this morning," said Maude's father.

"Why, father, the sun is shining brightly!" cried Maude.

"Oh, that sun! But I meant the inside weather."

Maude's sister Susy looked up from her plate. Her face was dull and cross. But she turned it quickly away from her father. She must have known what he meant. "What is the 'inside weather,' father?" asked Maude.

"Oh, when anybody in the family comes to breakfast late, and wishes there was something good to eat, and wishes our canary bird wouldn't make so much noise, and wishes that old school wouldn't begin so early, why then I think the inside weather is rather cloudy, don't you think so, too?"

Maude looked at her father a minute and then laughed. "Father makes inside sunshine, anyway," she said.

HOW A BOY WON.

One of the most noted men in this country is Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and the story of his rise to fame and fortune will interest every boy.

This story is told by an engineer for whom Mr. Schwab as a boy carried the chain. Everybody knows how Mr. Schwab began life as a grocer's clerk at Braddock. Next he carried a chain at Homestead, and later was a draughtsman in the Carnegie works. While holding that place young Schwab came under the notice of Capt. William R. Jones, who was general manager of the Carnegie plant, and whose name was synonymous with everything good and manly. Captain Jones was killed at Homestead by accident some twenty-years ago.

The story is that Captain Jones at that time needed the service of an expert draughtsman. He applied to the head of the draughting department for a man, asking for the best man in the place.

"I have no best," said the chief. "They are all good."

Captain Jones went away. The next day an order was issued that to complete a certain piece of work, all of the draughtsmen should work two hours overtime each day for several weeks without pay. All the draughtsmen grumbled except one man. Captain Jones came along the next day and said to the chief of the draughting department: "How do the men like that order?"

"They don't like it, and all are grumbling except one man," was the reply.

"Who is that man?" asked Captain Jones.

"Schwab."

"Give me Schwab," said Captain Jones. From that day the young draughtsman's success began.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

THE LANGUAGE OF CHICKENS.

Chickens speak a language easily understood. A fuzzy toddler six hours out of the shell has five distinct calls. The loudest is the lost note, when it loses sight of its mother or finds itself out in the cold. It is loud and shrill—"Pee-ee-op! Pee-ee-ee-op!" The hunger note is as shrill, but yet more plaintive—"Yeap! Yee-ee-ap!" As soon as eating begins it changes to a satisfied chittering "Wit-wit!" After eating the chickens grow sleepy and cry to be covered with a tremolo note: "Yee-pl-leep!" The "chir-r-r!" of fright or astonishment is the quaintest of all. At this note given as a grating call of warning from their mothers, even the youngest run to cover. If one hen sounds it at sight of a hawk in the sky, every other will repeat it. If a hundred hens are clucking to their broods, in the same inclosure, the voice of each is unmistakable to her own family. Even more wonderful is the hen's ability to differentiate her brood from the rest. There is something clownish in the cackle of a rooster that only does it to express a pained astonishment or as chorus for the hens; but by his crow he runs the whole gamut of expression—hope, fear, defiance, triumph, love, rage, vanity, and ineffable conceit. It is the hens without families that are the true barnyard gossips, chuckling and chattering or else wallowing in light earth, pecking it lightly as they scratch and wallow.—Presbyterian Journal.

HOW TO KILL PREACHERS.

Few people, if arraigned in court, would plead guilty to the charge of killing their preachers. Yet many a pulpit is red with the blood of a murdered minister. Multitudes of church members not only kill the minister's influence and ambition, but also kill him mentally, morally and physically. It is from this point of view that some one has written the following rules, guaranteeing that if followed carefully they will kill any preacher on earth. Read them and see if you are killing your preacher: (1) Stay away from church, especially on bad days, when the crowd may be small. (2) Stay away from the Wednesday night service because you know there will be only a handful present. (3) When the service is over, leave the church in a hurry, without speaking to the preacher a word of encouragement. (4) When you get sick, don't let him know it, and then abuse him for not coming to see you. (5) Never invite him or his family out to dine in your home. They never enjoy a social hour. (6) Pay just as little as you can on his salary, and then grumble about that. This makes him feel good. (7) Never give him anything except what you promised. This might make him think you appreciated him. (8) Always have some fool excuse when he wants you to do a little work. That's what you pay him for. (9) Never call at his home, but raise old "Billy Cain" because he doesn't visit you once or twice a month. (10) Don't ever offer to help him in any way, for he might think you were "butting in." (11) Act as coldly and indifferently toward him as you can, and he will think you are dignified. If these eleven doses fail to kill him, they will undoubtedly break him from preaching and force him to leave.—Biblical Recorder.

IN FAVOR OF UNIFICATION.

Be it resolved by the Ruston District Conference of the Louisiana Annual Conference:

1. That we rejoice in the progress made toward the unification of American Methodism as evidenced by the action of our own General Conference in 1914, and of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, recently in session at Saratoga.

2. That we earnestly hope that under the leadership of the Commission provided for by the two General Conferences, the plan may be speedily carried forward to completion in a unification which will overcome the hurtful discussions of the past, and glorify God in the extension of his Kingdom.

3. That we urge all our people to unite in prayer for the guidance of the Holy Spirit in carrying forward the plan for unification.

4. That these resolutions be given to the New Orleans and Nashville Christian Advocates for publication.

Signed: J. G. SLOANE,
Secretary.

Church News

The Kentucky Wesleyan College conferred the degree of LL.D. upon Miss Belle Bennett at its recent Commencement. This distinction was well merited by this gifted daughter of Southern Methodism.

According to a press dispatch, the contract has been let for the Representative Southern Methodist Church in Washington City, this being done last week. Bishop Candler, Dr. W. F. McMurry, and Dr. George S. Sexton, of Shreveport, have been the active leaders in carrying forward this great enterprise.

At the urgent request of many of the citizens of Atlanta, Mr. Asa Candler has consented to become a candidate for Mayor of that city. It is claimed that the Georgia metropolis is in urgent need of a business administration of its affairs, and that this fact has led to this demand for the candidacy of this able Southern financier.

Trinity Church and First Church, Dallas (Southern Methodist organizations) will be merged. A new centrally located house of worship will be erected, and the new organization will have a membership of about 1700. Out of this movement will also come another church which will serve Highland Park and Southern Methodist University.

The Baltimore Southern Methodist of July 27 was an educational number. On the front page was a picture of Cokesbury College (probably imaginary), the first American Methodist College, and of a group of the buildings of Emory University. It was a highly interesting edition, and reflected much credit upon Rev. Carlton D. Harris, the gifted editor of that publication.

One of the livest papers in Southern Methodism is the Central Methodist Advocate (Lexington, Ky.) Dr. Mann has the editorial instinct in a marked degree. And, furthermore, he is a Southern Methodist who is devoted to his Church, and who believes in both its doctrines and polity. The Church is likely to have large use for this gifted Kentuckian in the coming years.

CHURCH UNION.

(Dedicated to all ultra-unionists.)

They tell us that God has ordered it so:
That this is true I'm sure I don't know;
But some brethren great, if not over-wise,
Affirm it's a fact and not a surmise.

And I've been thinking if this is true,
His will must embrace more Churches than two;
Then let's all throw off our narrowness now,
And join in a cosmopollte pow-wow.

Let Baptists abandon the creeks and pools;
And Southern M. E.'s stop acting like fools,
And from the desert of folly return;
Though God never speak, though bush never burn.

Let Calvinist friends the "five points" deny,
And the High Church folks their notions decry;
Let the Adventists eat rabbit and pork,
Rest on Sunday, and on Saturday work.

Let holy jumpers sit stiff and sedate;
And the Pope deny his lordship of State;
Unitarians glad welcome will find,
Whether or not they own Christ as divine.

The Universalists will join, for sure,
And help to further this union so pure;
They will come a joyous message to tell,
Having abolished the doctrine of hell.

The Quakers will give up their broad-brimmed hats,
The Salvation Army their drums and caps;
While darkeys will shade this picture of peace,
For race distinctions forever must cease.

The process of union is close at hand;
Its secret has long been taught in the land;
For the fetters which seem our "sects" to bind
Are naught else than "errors of mortal mind."

Deny them, and lo! they vanish away;
The negro looks white, and night is as day;
Jarring discords of earth-born division
Symphonize under the spell Elysian.

So, if one great Church by God is decreed,
And for those we have there's no longer need,
It's good to know a plan is quite ready,
By the grace of Mary Baker Eddy.

Decatur, Miss. W. A. HAYS.

A GREAT STATESMAN.

The Hon. David Lloyd George, who has succeeded the lamented Lord Kitchener as Secretary of State for War of the British Government, is showing himself to be a statesman of not only brilliant intellectual gifts, but also of a sincere concern for the welfare of the people of his country. One of the latest measures that he has proposed is the "acquisition of the land in Great Britain by the State by compulsory purchase for cutting it up into small farms." It scarcely needs to be said that this would be vastly beneficial to the people of the British Isles. It would probably do more to secure the future greatness of England than almost anything else that could be done. The masses of the population of any nation ought to own their own homes if they are expected to attain to the highest type of citizens. To be mere tenants does not open the way to the fullest development of manhood and womanhood and the holiest patriotism. In his statement bearing upon this matter, Mr. George says: "The land system of Great Britain is a ghastly thing. The percentage of cultivated land is lower than in any other country of Europe. This state of affairs is due to the factious and unbusinesslike methods of the landlords."

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

We are carrying on another page a statement from Dr. F. S. Parker concerning a plan lately developed for more aggressive Epworth League work in Southern Methodism. In our opinion, this movement is timely, and we are glad to see it inaugurated. The prevailing lack of knowledge of the doctrines, polity, and history of our Church is little less than alarming. If Southern Methodism is to continue to exist, this serious defect must be speedily remedied. Here, as well as in Bible study and in the various kinds of Christian work, is a great field for the Epworth League. Let our pastors lay hold of this arm of service and turn it to account for the religious instruction and training in service of our young people. The League is broader in the scope of work to which it opens the way than either young people's missionary societies or Sunday school Bible classes. The Church needs it, and this special effort to strengthen and extend it is much to be commended. Let everybody lend a helping hand in making this latest forward movement a success. Especially do the League Chapters need to raise and send in the funds expected of them without delay. The preachers in charge should help them to do this.

BISHOP CANDLER'S GREAT UTTERANCE.

So much is being said pro and con on the subject of Methodist unification that it is possible that some of our readers may be disposed to pass over unnoticed some of the articles bearing on this important issue. We trust, however, that none will fail to give Bishop Candler's great utterance pertaining to this matter, which we are publishing in this number of the Advocate, a careful reading. Surely, no man among us is more entitled to a thoughtful hearing at the hands of the two million Methodists of the South than this faithful servant of the Church, who for eighteen years has been one of our chief pastors. His ability to construe the significance of the measures passed by the General Conferences of the Churches involved in this unification movement and to size up the present situation is unsurpassed by any man in American Methodism, North or South. More than once we have heard Bishop Hoss say that he possesses one of the greatest brains that has ever been in our episcopacy. Of his devotion to Southern Methodism and to the interests of Christ's Kingdom, there can be no question. His life has been poured out in arduous and unselfish service, as a libation upon the altar of his Lord. Not only has his strength been freely spent to build up the Church all over the homeland, but he has largely made our Methodism in Cuba. And when our educational system was disrupted and menaced with ruin, he stepped self-sacrificingly into the breach and brought order out of chaos, and hopefulness out of a state of almost despair. Through his influence Emory University has come into existence, with property holdings reaching up into the millions. Not in a single instance has his leadership hindered or hurt the Church; on the contrary, it has been a constant and far-reaching power for good. Shall we brush aside lightly his counsel in such an hour as this for that of men who lack his intellectual stature, his experience, and the marks of service which he carries? We do not believe that conservative Southern Methodists will do anything of the kind. They know the value of the views of such men as Bishops Wilson, Hoss, and Candler, and they will not fail to give them careful consideration.

THE "BORDER STATES" NOT MOST INVOLVED.

Some have said that the proposed union of the Methodisms of America is one which concerns our Church in States along the border more than it does the States farther to the South—that in the former there would necessarily be a considerable amount of readjusting, but that in the latter things would go on just as they have heretofore. If the union referred to is to come along the lines laid down at Saratoga, we cannot at all concur in this view. With Negroes in a Quadrennial Conference of the reorganized Church and in the General Conference in large numbers, with Northern ideas as to their political and social rights and privileges being spread among the colored population of the South by the dominant majority, and with Northern Methodist Bishops presiding over Southern white Conferences, the States whose interests would be most involved, as we see it, would be those in which the Negroes are numerous or in the majority.

We do not write this to stir up excitement or prejudice, but to emphasize a fact that should not be overlooked in the future negotiations that are to take place. The Northern Methodist view as to what should be the political and social status of the Negro is largely at variance with that of a majority of our people, as the utterances in their papers clearly show. Is it not well to consider what might result in a considerable portion of the South from a largely increased Northern influence of this kind—an influence that would tend to undo the work of such statesmen as Senator George, of Mississippi, and others who have rendered a like service in other commonwealths—great and good men? We need to get our eyes open and to be careful as to what we shall do. It is no time to be blind to stubborn facts, or to engage in careless experimentation.

As we have before said, we are not in any sense whatever prejudiced against our "brother in black." We were nursed by Negroes in infancy; we grew up among them, and we have had dealings with them all our life. We believe in their Christianization, in their education, and in the full protection of their life and property. For this we have uniformly and uncompromisingly stood, and our record in this respect is beyond impeachment; but it is our reasoned conviction that the welfare of both the Negroes and the white people will be best subserved by having the colored man clearly to understand that he is to have no social intermingling with the whites and that political activity is not wise for him under present conditions in the South.

It is idle to say that a Church would have nothing to do with these things. Such a contention belies all the history of the past. Through its schools, its press, and its administration, it could not but exert a powerful influence. And the Protestant Churches have never at any time been more disposed to take a hand in all social and political matters than they are at present. Witness the recent attempted intereference of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America with the Japanese race question on the Pacific Coast. If the Church, North, wants unification with the Church, South, let it aid in gathering the Negro Methodists in the United States into a separate ecclesiastical organization, holding fraternal relations with the reorganized Church. The Negro Methodists have done best when they have had their own independent Churches, anyway. There are in the Methodist Episcopal Church only about 350,000 Negroes, while in the A. M. E. Church there are 620,000; in the A. M. E. Zion Church, 568,000, and in the C. M. E. Church, 240,000—these last three being independent bodies. The significance of these figures is well worth noting.

Our General Conference, at Oklahoma City, certainly did a wise thing when it declared for having the Negro Methodists of the United States gathered into a separate Church as one of the conditions of the proposed unification.

MRS. JAMES ATKINS DEAD.

The press dispatches have announced the death of Mrs. Atkins, the wife of Bishop James Atkins, which occurred at their home at Waynesville, North Carolina, on August 1, as a result of paralysis, after a brief illness. Mrs. Atkins is stated to have been an accomplished and most superior woman, who made her Christian influence widely felt for good. Bishop Atkins will have the sympathy of the whole Church in his great sorrow.

A NEW PAMPHLET.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, B.D., has just had to come from the press an eight-page pamphlet (exclusive of the cover), entitled "Why I Am Not A Baptist." It is, as he expresses it, "a comparison of the 'one-only-true-Church' claims of the Baptists with the similar claims of the Roman Catholics, and a contrasting of them with the catholicity and democratic practices of the Methodists." This pamphlet may be had by writing the author at Donaldsonville, La. The price is 10 cents a copy; $1 a dozen; or $7.50 per hundred.

AN URGENT MATTER.

To the Preachers and Members of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Please take at once the collection for our superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans who have claims on our Conference Fund. They urgently need their money. Many of them are looking to the Joint Board of Finance for their only means of support. Please push this collection and send the money to the treasurer, Mr. S. A. Tomlinson, Gulfport, Miss.

J. M. MORSE,
President of Board.

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The Seashore Camp Meeting will begin at the Seashore Campground, near Biloxi, Miss., next Wednesday. It will be under the direction of Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Rev. E. V. Calhoun, of the Mobile District. Rev. E. C. Moore, of Montgomery, Ala., will do the preaching.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. G. Shankle is reported to be delighting the people of Mansfield, La., with his pulpit work.

Rev. C. P. Moss, of Tchula, Miss., is meeting with a good measure of success in his labors in that young station. He is held in high esteem both as preacher and pastor.

Rev. T. J. Halfacre is conducting a revival meeting at Sessums, Miss., one of the appointments of his charge, this week. He has with him Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Starkville, Miss.

Vickshurg Methodism is fortunate in having as its two shepherds Dr. T. B. Holloman and Rev. L. L. Roberts. They are both hustlers, as well as forceful expounders of the Word.

Rev. B. F. Lewis, our working pastor at Hazlehurst, has one of the best Sunday Schools in the Mississippi Conference, and all the other departments of the work in his charge are in a healthful state.

Rev. K. W. Dodson is winding up a four years' pastorate at Lake Charles, La., which has been notably successful. It has been Brother Dodson's record to leave substantial achievements behind where he has wrought.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpaulr's quadrennium as presiding elder of the Lafayette (La.) District, has been characterized by a gratifying growth of the Church in the territory under his supervision. He is a safe and faithful leader.

What about the young people from your charge who are going off to college? Have you sent their names to the representatives of the Methodist institutions in your Conference? If not, look the field over and do this at once.

Rev. J. L. Neill, the Sunday School Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, preached an excellent sermon at the Mississippi A. and M. College last Sunday morning. It was listened to attentively and made a fine impression.

Dr. George S. Sexton, of Shreveport, La., visited Washington City last week in the interest of the Southern Methodist Representative Church which is to be construeted there. He has had a large part in making possible the realization of that noble enterprise.

A note from Rev. W. V. Shearer, of Shannon, Miss., informs us that he has lately been in a ten days' meeting with Rev. B. T. Fuzzell, at Henning, Tenn. Many souls were saved and there were about ten additions to the Church. Brother Shearer has the evangelistic gift.

Rev. J. F. Foster, of Shreveport, La., is, we regret to state, ill at the Touro Infirmary in this city. He was on his way to the Seashore Campground some days ago, when he was stricken with his present illness and stopped in New Orleans. His condition, we are glad to say, is not considered serious.

We received a brief note from Brother J. D. Barbee last Monday, which was written from faraway Seattle. He stated that he was well, but somewhat weary with his journeyings. The Northwest is a great country, as he sees it, in many ways, but is sadly in need of a more vigorous type of Christianity.

Rev. William Schuhle, our scholarly pastor at Lafayette, La., passed through New Orleans last Monday en route to Auburn, Ala., where Mrs. Schuhle and his infant son are visiting relatives. He will likely spend next Sunday in Atlanta, and from there he expects to go to the great Laymen's Missionary Conference at Lake Junaluska.

From a note from Mr. Robert Somerville, of Greenville, Miss., we take the following: "Rev. J. T. Lewis' daughter, Alberta, was operated on for appendicitis last Saturday, July 5. My last information was that she was doing well." Our sympathies are with Brother and Sister Lewis and Miss Alberta in this hour of affliction, which we hope will soon pass.

We take the following from a letter from Rev. J. H. Felts, of the Holly Springs (Miss.) District, written on August 7: "We had Bishop Murrah with us here yesterday. How he did preach! His analysis of the First Psalm was as masterful a presentation as I have heard in many days. He had a great hearing, and our people are rejoicing over his coming."

We are sorry to learn that the health of Brother J. J. Rogers, of Tupelo, Miss., has not been good for some time. Brother Rogers has long been one of the foremost business men of Northeast Mississippi, and a useful and highly esteemed member of our Church. We trust that a favoring Providence may soon bring him a larger measure of physical vigor and strength.

We make grateful acknowledgement to the following friends, whose kindness has not been mentioned elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. H. B. Thomason, Winnsboro, La., 3; Mrs. Effie Monaghan, Nettleton, Miss., 5; Dr. T. B. Holloman, Vicksburg, Miss., 2; Rev. J. V. Bennett, Monticello, Miss., 2; Rev. C. W. Crisler, Hattiesburg, Miss., 2; Rev. George Yeager, Fannin, Miss., 3.

Rev. S. A. Brown, our capable pastor at Kosciusko, Miss., has lately been assisting some of the brethren in meetings. He has recently been with Rev. W. F. Rogers at McAdams on the Sallis Circuit, and with Rev. W. R. Williams at McCondy, one of the appointments of the Buena Vista Circuit, at each of which places a helpful series of services was conducted. This week he was due to be with Brother Rogers again at Shrock.

Under date of August 1, Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District, writes us as fellows: "Rev. Roy H. Kleiser, our pastor at Satartia, Miss., underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Jackson Sanitarium this morning. He stood the ordeal well and the indications point to a speedy and complete recovery. Let the brethren remember him in prayer." We are sorry to be apprised of Brother Kleiser's illness, which we hope will be of brief duration.

Mrs. John Brown, of Oxford, Miss., sends us two copies of the Oxford Eagle, which tell of a unique picnic given at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Calloway on the Fourth of July, 1916, which was largely attended, and at which the people over fifty years of age were the guests of honor. The Eagle of July 13 contained two interesting pictures of groups of persons which were taken on this occasion, and a thousand extra copies of that number of the paper were issued to meet the demand that there was for them. We extract the following concerning this notable gathering from a personal letter from Mrs. Brown to the Editor: "It was good to be there. It was religious and soul-lifting. We sang the old-time songs, prayed and told our experiences, and many persons came near shouting. The oldest person present, a lady, was placed in a chair, and, after she had been crowned, everybody shook her hand, while we sang 'How Firm a Foundation.'" It was like Brother and Sister Calloway to arrange this happy affair, which seems to have brought sunshine into so many hearts and lives. They are among the choicest citizens of the good old county of Lafayette.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT NOTES.

The brethren of the district have been busy, at home and abroad, in revival meetings.

Among his many other duties, Rev. J. T. Leggett, our presiding elder, has been able to assist in good revivals at Heidelberg and Kingston, Laurel.

Rev. O. S. Lewis continues to do hard, conscientious work at Shubuta. He has recently organized a flourishing Epworth League, in which he expects his capable young people to develop into strong leaders.

The many friends of Brother and Sister Corley will be delighted to learn that Sister Corley has about fully recovered from injuries received in a runaway a few weeks ago. "Prince," their faithful twenty-year old "colt," became frightened and forget his age.

Pastor C. A. Schultz, has just recently finished a revival tour. He was at Stonewall, then up in Yazoo County with Brother Oliver; then down into Louisiana at Hackly, and back by the way of Matherville, where he and Brother Vickers had a gracious revival. He has engaged Revs. Watkins, Hogg, Sutherland, and Decell for the meetings on his own work.

Evangelist D. E. Kelly, the inimitable, has held splendid revivals at three points in the district DeKalb, Scooba, and Shubuta. It is stated that he will give the entire month of Sepetmber to Meridian. At this time there will be a city-wide revival campaign on. Simultaneous revivals will be held in all the Protestant churches. Let much prayer be made for this campaign.

NUNTIUS.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

On the morning of July 15, 1916, death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Mason of Sun, Miss., and bore away the gentle spirit of their daughter, SALLIE, who had suffered for some time from an attack of heart trouble. All that loving hands and a skilled physician could do was done for her, but only death brought relief. Death claimed this young lady in the very beginning of her young womanhood, as she was abont 23 years of age. She had a quiet, lovable disposition which endeared her to all who knew her. During her long illness she was one of the most patient sufferers I ever knew. For though the pain she was forced to endure was most intense, she was very seldom heard to complain. She was a member of the Carr's Methodist Church, having joined early in life. She leaves a father, a mother, two brothers, and five sisters to mourn her death; but they will grieve not as those who have no hope, for we know that one whose life had been so pure as hers is now with God and other pure spirits like hers.

A FRIEND.

Mrs. ALICE M. BRYAN was born on December 29, 1829, and died on July 18, 1916, at the home of her nephew, where she had gone to make a visit. She had been in feeble health all the year. She said, "I must make Bud one more visit," and we thought the change might do her good. But the Lord called her. She never lived to get back to her earthly home, that of her adopted daughter. She never had any children of her own and had been a widow 32 years. All her married life was lived near the Liberty Chapel Church and her house was always a welcome place for the preachers. Many will remember her. But oh, how we miss her! She had been my constant care for two years. She was nearly blind, which was a sad affliction, for up to that time she could always find something to do for somebody. She could not read in her last days her Bible, which she loved so well. Farewell, dearest one! She has entered into that rest which remains for the people of God. Our loss is her gain, and the parting will only be for a short while; for we shall meet all our loved ones on that blissful shore where none ever say good-bye.

Her adopted daughter,
JOSIE S. COOK.

At Rose Lawn, Natchez, Miss., the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clara Kaiser, on the 13th day of June, 1916, in the ninety-first year of her age, Mrs. EMMA RAWES closed her eyes in the sleep from which one day she shall awaken at the Master's call.

Born in England on July 12, 1825, she came with her parents when six years of age to Natchez, where she had lived ever since. In early life she professed faith in Christ and united with the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, of which she remained to the end of her long life a faithful and consistent member. On August 12, 1851, she was married to Mr. Robert Rawes, with whom she lived happily for fourteen years, to the time of his death. Of this union six children were born, of whom three are now living: Mr. George Rawes, of Helena, Ark., and Mrs. Clara Kaiser and Mrs. Emma Cartwell, of Natchez. When she married Mr. Rawes, he had a little daughter two years of age. With the tender love of a true mother, she took this little one to her heart and reared her as if she were her own child. She is now Mrs. Alice C. Barr, of Natchez.

A devoted wife and affectionate mother, she filled that honored place in the home with joy and sunshine. While a sufferer for several weeks before her death, she bore it all with uncomplaining resignation and fortitude. She welcomed her departure with eagerness to meet face to face the Savior to whom she had committed her life in her girlhood days, and whom she loved and trusted with an abiding faith. Surrounded by her loved ones and friends, her gentle spirit took its peaceful departure.

Her body rests in the cemetery, but she herself has joined the innumerable hosts of the redeemed, who, rejoicing with joy unspeakable and full of glory, await the resurrection of the just. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

C. F. EMERY.

The subject of this sketch, PETER J. HARVEY, was born in Marion County, Miss., on April 26, 1845, and died at his home at Chinquapin, Miss., on May 16, 1916. Brother Harvey was thrice married. His first marriage was to Miss Missouri Wheat, on August 16, 1866. She was not spared to live with him very long. On Oct. 21, 1869, he was happily married to Miss Emily Stewart. Her pure, self-sacrificing love was an inspiration to him in meeting the responsibilities of a growng family until the good Heavenly Father saw fit to call her home. Of this union eleven children were born, four of whom have passed away. Three daughters and four sons still live to cherish the memory of the consecrated life of their sainted father. Feeling the need of a companion in the evening-tide of life, on April 20, 1907, he was married to Mrs. Alice Smith, who still survives him.

Brother Harvey gave his heart to God and united with the Methodist Church in the year 1868, from which time he served continually as Sunday school superintendent until the time of his transplanting came. He had also served the Church as steward almost continually since 1870. Brother Harvey was not only ready to give the Church his best service, but he was useful to his community in many ways. He was one of the main workers in getting the new county of Pearl River formed. He served as a member of the Board of Supervisors of that county for four years, as Justice of the Peace for 16 years, as County Surveyor 8 years, and filled an unexpired term as sheriff. He also served as postmaster 11 years and taught school a number of years. He was indeed a valuable man to his community, always striving to be on the right side of every problem of life. He leaves a wife, seven children, 9 step-children, and a number of other relatives and friends to mourn his departure. But we do not grieve as those who have no hope, because his living testimony was, "I am ready." May God bless the bereaved ones!

DON'T USE SOAP
on your hair. It is too strongly alkaline and will do a great deal of damage. The hair should be of a soft and silken texture. Each individual hair is of delicate construction and requires scientific, careful treatment. If your hair is harsh, dry, course and scanty, then you are not giving it proper treatment. The hair needs food just as the rest of your body, and in order to keep your scalp nourished and your hair plentiful and beautiful, you should supply it with the proper food and treatment. The Creoles of Louisiana possessed a formula for keeping the hair beautiful and for many years kept the secret to themselves, but now you may enjoy their discovery by using "La Creole" Hair Color Restorer, the same recipe which the Creoles used. It darkens hair in the natural way and keeps the scalp in healthy condition. For sale by all reliable dealers. Price $1.00. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

YOUR BOY IS YOUR ALL—IF HE IS LOST, ALL IS LOST.

Who are your boy's associates? The character of a boy's associates is a most powerful factor for good or evil in the shaping of his life. Your boy's greatest danger is local associates. They teach more than you. If they are bad, what is the remedy?

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, of Fayetteville, Tenn., has given this question profound study during the 25 years in which he has built up the Morgan School, a training school for boys, of which he is principal. Mr. Morgan has devoted a long career to the training of boys. He knows boy nature. The close personal association which he has fostered between his boy students and himself, his carefully chosen faculty, his careful attention to the boy's work, his thoughts, his talents and his special needs, are some of the features which have given his school its high standing.

Mr. Morgan is a man of inspiring, wholesome personality and deep Christian character. He has built his school to give the boy thorough mental, physical and spiritual preparation for an honorable, manly life. He is a proper man to train your boy.

A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., will bring a catalog and full information of this school.

Sunday School

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITOR'S REPORT.

The following paragraphs are from the report of Dr. Chappell, the Sunday School Editor, made to the General Sunday School Board at its meeting at Lake Junaluska on July 11:

Speaking of the net gain of 109,156 in the circulation of our Sunday school periodicals, the Doctor says: "This is the largest gain for any single year in our history—a most encouraging fact when we take into consideration the fact that the general financial conditions throughout the South have been far from normal. I think there can be no doubt that the increased interest in Sunday-school work growing out of the activity of our field workers is largely responsible for this excellent showing. It will be observed that the per cent of increase of the Graded Courses was 21, whereas that for the Uniform publications was but 4½ per cent.

"A year ago you voted concurrence in my recommendation that the workers' Council be enlarged. I am glad to report that the enlarged periodical has been most cordially received, words of commendation coming to us from every part of our territory. Owing to some unforeseen difficulties which have arisen, however, the circulation has not increased as rapidly as I anticipated. These difficulties we hope to overcome and I confidently expect to see the Workers' Council become one of our most popular publications.

"New Graded Courses—The Fourth year of the Senior Graded Course, entitled 'The Bible and Social Living,' is now on the press and will be ready for use by October 1. Provision has been made for the complete rewriting of the first and second years of the Intermediate Graded Course and the work will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible. Provision has been made for a thorough revision of the Beginners', Primary and Junior Graded Courses. These courses have now been in use for a number of years, and although they have given quite general satisfaction, various defects have been discovered which the elementary experts by whom they were written desire to remedy. The revised courses will doubtless be a decided improvement on those now in use."

From Dr. Chappell's report I give you the following figures as to the circulation of some of our Sunday school periodicals: The Visitor, 154,000; Boys and Girls, 61,000; Workers' Council, 14,000; The Magazine, 122,000; Adult Student, 138,000; Senior Quarterly, 138,000; Home Department Quarterly, 68,000; Intermediate Quarterly, 310,000; Junior Lessons, 215,000; Our Little People, 228,000; Primary Teacher, 6000; total for all Graded literature, 202,667; grand total of all, 2,202,622.

Meridian, Miss. A. L. DIETRICH.

THE BREAKING DOWN OF CASTE IN INDIA.

The following comes from Rev. F. E. Jeffrey, of Aruppukottai, a Congregational missionary:

"Things are certainly moving in India. A marvelous revolution is in progress. Twenty-five years ago the writer was stoned for innocently taking a low caste Christian through the Brahmin street. The other day he sat down to a banquet with college students of all castes, including three divisions of Brahmins. All were served by servants of low caste extraction. In Bombay, on December 28, an all-India inter-caste dinner, organized with the avowed object of doing away with caste differences, was held. Of the 450 guests from various castes, 225 were Brahmins, 50 were Indian women, and 20 were the so-called 'untouchables!'"

BILLIONS EATEN UP BY WAR.

Calculations of economists and statisticians have fixed the aggregate cost of all armed conflicts from Napoleon I. to the present day at less than one-half the sums absorbed by the present European conflict. The Napoleonic wars, which lasted 20 years and which are considered the most sanguinary in the history of past times, cost about $15,000,000,000. The Crimean War cost the countries taking part in it about eleven or twelve billions. The War Between the States in America cost about $7,000,000,000. The war between Prussia and Austria in 1865 cost only $500,000,000. One hundred billion dollars will be the cost of the present European war if it lasts another year, according to Jean Finot, a French statistician. He says that if the war lasts three years the losses will reach a total unheard of in the past. The British estimate of the exclusively war expenses of the allies puts the cost up to June 30, 1917, as follows: Great Britain, $15,250,000,000; France, $14,175,000,000; Russia, $14,000,000,000; Italy, $4,200,000,000; Belgium, $2,700,000,000; Servia, $700,000,000; Montenegro, $650,000,000; Portugal, $50,000,000. Thus the total is shown to be $51,725,000,000, while Germany's expenses, which to date are about $10,000,000,000, will be at least $13,000,000,000 by June 30, 1917; Austria's about $10,000,000,000; Turkey's, $600,000,000; Bulgaria's $520,000,000, or a total of $24,120,000,000 for the Teutonic allies. The expenses of Japan add to the general total.—Thomas F. Logan in Leslie's.

RENEW YOUR HEALTH IN NATURE'S WAY.

It is wonderful how quickly and surely Nature regenerates the health and vital powers, even from the most serious and chronic diseases, after the blood has been thoroughly purified from its accumulated poisons by drinking the water from the celebrated Shivar Mineral Spring. This water possesses the peculiar power of dissolving and literally washing out the poisonous impurities from the blood, putting the stomach, liver and kidneys and all other vital organs in perfect condition so that the recuperative power of Nature may effect their cure. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, neuralgia, gallstones, liver or kidney diseases or any chronic ailment (except cancer and consumption), you are cordially invited to accept Mr. Shivar's remarkable guarantee offer, which is equivalent to a three weeks' visit to his Spring with no charge for the water if you report no benefit.

It is a grave mistake to assume that your case is incurable simply because remedies prepared by human skill have not seemed to benefit you. I believe this is the most wonderful Mineral Spring that has ever been discovered, for its waters have either restored or benefited nearly 100,000 sufferers, while less than two in a hundred have reported no benefit. Match your faith in this Spring against my pocketbook by signing the letter below.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-E, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Stopped Most Terrible Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Denison, Texas. — "After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's stepsister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. LOWERY, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

A Cough May Lead to Tuberculosis

Distressing and dangerous complications may follow if you neglect it. Even when so serious a stage is reached, Eckman's Alterative may bring relief. For more than twenty years it has been widely used in such cases with beneficial results.

As with any medication employed in this trouble, the best results are obtained when the patient pays strict attention to diet and gets plenty of rest and fresh air.

Because of its easily assimilable content of calcium chlorid, this preparation is effective where a tonic upbuilder is indicated. As a corrective of nightsweats it has proved most useful. It may be tried with absolute safety, since it contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

DALLAS A. DAWSON.

Dallas Athalone, son of William Madison Dawson and Elizabeth (Jones) Dawson was born in Amite County, Miss., on Jan. 1, 1843. His mother was a widow Haygood when she married his father. His mother dying when he was six months old, he was taken by William Haygood and wife, in whose care and training he remained until the breaking out of the Civil War in 1861. In this home that was childless, a mother was found for the motherless babe, and a babe for the childless mother. She was a mother to him in every way that she could be.

On the breaking out of the War between the States he enlisted in the Confederate army as a volunteer in the 45th Mississippi Regiment, Company E, under Captain R. H. McNair. He served throughout the war in the infantry of the Army of Tennessee. Being at home on a sick furlough, he was not with his command when it surrendered and was paroled at Greensboro, N. C. He was under Johnson, Bragg, and Hood; and was in the battles of Shiloh, Franklin, Missionary Ridge, Chickamauga, Atlanta, and Chattanooga. He was in the famous charge made by Jacob Sharp's brigade at Franklin, Tenn. He was a member and chaplain of Stockdale Camp No. 324, U. C. V., at the time of his death. He passed through the four years of war and received only a slight skin wound.

He was married on July 12, 1865, to Miss Elizabeth Nesmith in Amite County, Mississippi, who preceded him to the better land by a little more than two years. Of this marriage eight children were born, six of whom are living. He moved to Lawrence County, Mississippi, in 1879. One cause of his move was that he might care for his foster mother, which he did, until she died. He spent the last ten or twelve years of his life near Topisaw Camp Ground in Pike County. In December last he gave up his home and went to live with his daughter, Mrs. Ferguson, near Holmesville, Miss., where he died Wednesday morning, May 17, 1916. It is not known just how early in life he joined the church, though he did so when quite young. His people were all Baptists, and the impression is that he first joined the Baptist Church, coming into the Methodist Church after his marriage. Because of a lack of church conveniences, he let his membership lapse, but renewed it again at Topisaw Camp Ground in 1881. From that time on to the date of his death, he was active in the work of the church. He served the church as steward, trustee, Sunday school teacher, and was frequently a delegate to the district conferences. On Sunday before he died, he attended Sunday school in the village church at Holmesville and sat in the class, notwithstanding that it was difficult for him to talk, because of the disease that was slowly but surely taking him off. He loved his Church and was interested in all of her work. The end came peacefully and without a struggle. I was his pastor for three years and lived neighbor to him during this time. I saw him first the day we arrived at the Topisaw parsonage and I was with him pretty often, and I always found him a true citizen, husband, father and Christian. He was one of the most careful and painstaking Church officials that I have ever seen. Whatever the pastor, or church called on him to do, he always did promptly and according to the Discipline.

He seemed to peculiarly love music and was one among the older members who would always come to the choir and sing just as long as his voice was strong enough, and he invariably comes to my mind almost every time I hear the song, "I Love to Tell the Story," for so often during my pastorate at Topisaw he would select this song and sing it very earnestly.

He was very careful as to the needs his pastor and would often bring things to the parsonage that he thought we might need; he was the only man of the immediate community who was at the parsonage to welcome the new preacher (this writer) when he arrived at Topisaw in December, 1911, though another man braved some bad weather to meet us at the depot and bring us to the parsonage. It will be hard to find another person to fill his place as a law-abiding and progressive citizen and as a loyal Church member and church official but he filled his mission and has gone to receive his reward.

One of the leading preachers of the Mississippi Conference, Rev. W. J. Dawson, who is pastor at Bolton, is a son of the subject of this sketch, and how carefully and prayerfully did he watch the achievements of this son, whom he called "Willie," and how glad his heart would be made when Willie paid his regular visits. It seemed a special providence that Brother W. J. was at his bedside when he passed away, as the end came very suddenly and unexpectedly.

The children are sad and they will miss him so much, but their loss is his eternal gain. In this time of sore bereavement, we extend the family our sincere sympathy and prayers.

His friend and former pastor,
J. A. WELLS.

Among those receiving decoration at the coronation of the Emperor of Japan was Madame Yajima, the President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Japan. During the Russo-Japanese war this lady, then 75 years of age, supplied 20,000 comfort bags to the army and navy.

850 MEN IN CHINESE Y. M. C. A.

The following letter from Eugene E. Barnett, formerly of Florida, now Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Hangchow, China, tells a surprising story of the success of association work in that city:

"The membership of our Association now exceeds eight hundred and fifty men. Our auditorium seats less than a fifth of them, but once a month we rent the largest hall in the city so as to bring them all together. On these occasions they present a great sight. Students, government clerks, young business and professional men, railway, postal, and telegraph employes, teachers and officials are all in evidence. Among them is a sprinkling of returned students from the universities of America and Europe. Whenever I see them together I am thrilled by the thought of the potentialities they represent. Win these men to Christian ideals and Christian living and who shall doubt that the kingdom of God is at hand? We need your prayers, not so much that doors be opened, but that power be given us to enter the doors which already swing wide before us."

SOME MISSIONARY ITEMS.

It is said that Dr. Stewart, who lately died in Africa, was asked, "Why don't you civilize your people and then make them Christians?" He answered, "We don't do work twice over; when we have made them Christians we have made them civilized."

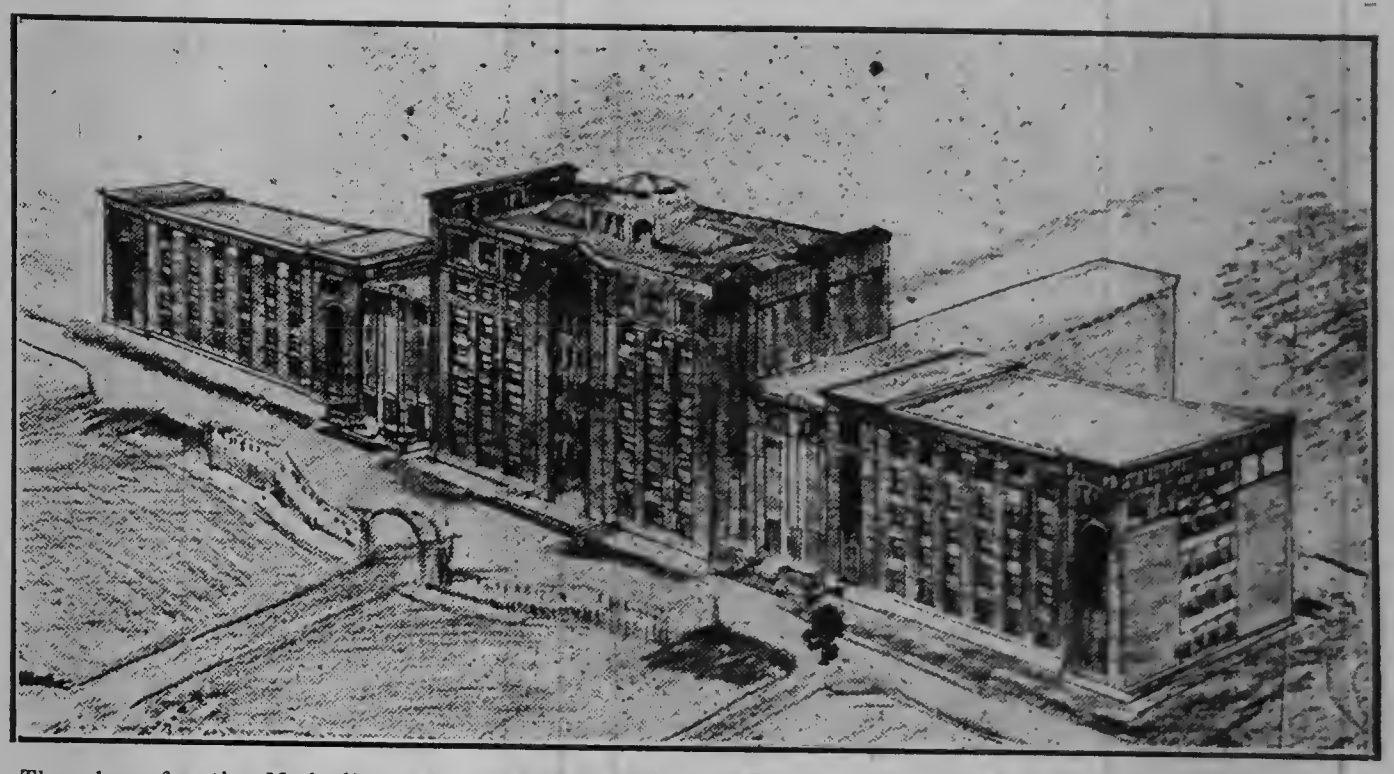
MEMPHIS METHODIST HOSPITAL



The plans for the Methodist Hospital to be built in Memphis by the Memphis, North Arkansas, and two Mississippi Conferences have been accepted by the Building Committee, and it is determined to make it the most modern and best equipped institution of the kind in the South.

The building will consist of five units, the center unit having a front of 200 feet and being seven stories in height. On either end of this will be a unit, or wing, of 124 feet frontage and five stories high. Two units, similar in length and height to the end units, will extend to the rear from either end of the center building. The complete hospital will contain about 500 rooms.

The lower floor of the center building will be given to offices, corridor, consultation rooms, dining rooms, etc., and the entire seventh floor will be devoted to operating rooms and the sterilizing apparatus. The eight operating rooms will assure readiness for any emergency, and the dangerous delays occasioned by the operating room being in service or being prepared will be a thing of the past, neither to threaten life nor vex the busy surgeon longer.

Two elevators, one at either end of the center building, will afford convenient and ample service.

The old Mallory residence will be left standing fifty feet in the rear of the center building to be used for a nurses' home.

It is the purpose of the Building Committee to erect the center building and the two end wings, or the three front units, this fall and winter. This will give the hospital a frontage of 450 feet and will afford room for 300 patients. The hospital will be 350 feet away from the noise of the street cars, with a beautiful grove between, and the patients will secure a quiet that will greatly aid their recovery.

A competent landscape gardener will be employed to arrange and beautify the grounds. The committee is determined to give those of the great territory that come to Memphis for their hospital service the very best institution that is to be found anywhere, and to give Memphis another institution to be proud of, and a show place for its visitors.

THE GIDEONS.

The Gideons were started in a hotel bedroom in Wisconsin in 1899. Now there are 3500 members. They announce their mission as being "to sell goods, to bring Christian influence to bear on commercial travelers (of whom there are 600,000 in the United States), and to put Bibles in hotels." Three hundred thousand Bibles have already been so placed. Gideons are said to be buying 50,000 Bibles a year at present, which makes their society the largest single purchaser of Bibles in the United States.

ITEMS FROM THE FOREIGN FIELD.

Sungkiang, China.

Miss Irene King in writing of the District Conference at Sungkiang gives the following incident: "At the Sunday afternoon love feast in Church one church member got up and testified. Mr. Tsah said to him, 'Well, brother, if you love the Lord, aren't you willing to give up those bad pictures you have been selling here on the streets?' The man consented. Mr. Tsah said, 'Then bring them, and we will burn them after the meeting.' The man did so, and the brethren sang 'Onward, Christian Soldiers' around the bonfire. After the fire, Mr. Tsah took a dollar ont of his pocket and offered to pay the man. The man said, 'No: only allow me the privilege of selling Bibles in the place of these.' Mr. Tsah then turned over two packages of Bibles to him."

Songdo, Korea.

Miss Lillian E. Nichols writes as follows: "I am going to tell you of the interesting incidents of the graduation exercises just as soon as I find time. We have sent four of our girls up to Seoul to study in the Northern Methodist Kindergarten Training School. We are glad to have them go, for we think the work they will be able to do when they return will surely be very much more effective than if they had not gone. They are full of enthusiasm over the prospect of studying more. One of them, said to me yesterday on the train, 'Yon will be sure to have a place for us to teach in just as soon as we get through, won't you? I saw one of my friends as I was on the way to the station, and he told me he would have his little twin daughters ready to come to me when I got back.' She is a born teacher, sweet and gentle with the children."

Kobe, Japan.

In speaking of the Lambuth Memorial School, Miss Bonnell writes: "With the beginning of the new school year, April 10, we opened with seven new pupils, every one promising but one. This makes nineteen in all. One woman is self-supporting; one is sent us by the Southern Presbyterians. This new term has also brought us what I have long prayed for, viz: One of the Japanese preachers, a member of the Annual Conference, was regularly appointed by the Bishop to our school. Unfortunately, he was given the pastorate of a church also, so that we get only one-half of his time. But he will see that he cannot possibly do justice to the work; so I think all of his time will be given to us next year. He is one of the very best in the Conference, a graduate of Drew Theological Seminary and well qualified for the position in our school. It has taken six years of waiting with continual requests to secure this; so we are encouraged to wait expectantly for other good things. I am pleased with the progress on all lines in the school; in the character of the women coming in (we refused a good number), in the classroom work, and in the amount and quality of practical work we are able to do. The pioneering is about over, I think."

Colegio Americano, Porto Alegre.

Miss Andrews: "Our school opened on the first of March. We had a good opening, for which our hearts went up in gratitude to our Heavenly Father. More matriculated than during any previous month of March for several years. I have such a fine class in Sunday school. It is composed of young ladies. We have a social meeting once a month here in the college. I wish you could see them. There are twenty of them, and all such nice-looking girls. I feel that it is a great privilege, as well as a great responsibility, to have charge of the spiritual development of these young lives. I also direct a missionary meeting once a month in the League. This requires a good deal of time, as all the material has to be translated. We feel that much of our success this year is due to the prayers of the women at home. Continue to pray for the work here in Porto Alegre."

Our Work in Saltillo.

Miss Lelia Roberts writes: "All of the eight normal students in the senior class are Christians, and after they gradnate they will go wherever their services are most needed. Our Normal Department has supplied not only these teachers, but those in charge of our schools in San Luis Potosi and Durango. They also are helpers in our Guadaljara school, and others are teaching in twelve States of Mexico. No other school under the control of the Council in Mexico has supplied so many trained Christian workers. Both Brother Castro, our pastor in Saltillo, and Professor Allvares have written me of the fruitful union revival services they have held recently. The churches that engaged in holding the services were Methodist, Presbyterian, and Baptist. That sounds good, does it not? They tell me that after the first service no Protestant Church in the city would hold the congregations, and they met in our assembly hall, which will seat nearly 700 persons, by crowding them. The attendance was not less than 500 after the first service, and there were eighty-four candidates for membership in the different Churches at the close. Our collections in Sunday school range from thirty dollars to sixty-five dollars (Mexican) every Sunday. As an offset to the decree prohibiting the teaching of religion in private schools, our Sunday school has organized itself into a vigorous propagation body by appointing members of the Propagation Committee from every class. The outcome of the revival services shows that they are doing effective work. The Methodists have by far the largest membership in the city."

Cienfuegos, Cuba.

"The need in the city of Cienfuegos is great. Of course, the opportunities for Christian service are greatly in proportion. Our Colegio Eliza Bowman is the only school in the city that offers for girls the opportunity of preparing their studies beyond the fourth grade. Our school is growing, having enrolled more than ninety the last half of the year. It is not only growing in members, but in prestige. The entertainment and exhibit of work that is held at the close of each school year was more largely attended than ever before."

From the Field

Pine Grove, La.

Dear Advocate: We have just closed one of the greatest revivals that was ever held at Killlan's Chapel. There were 30 accessions to the Church—29 by profession of faith, and 1 by certificate. Brother J. E. Craig did the preaching. He appealed to the people to rise to a higher and better plane of living, and set forth Christ, and him crucified with power and conviction. This church is doing a splendid work. At my next appointment we are going to get up a club of subscriptions to the Advocate.—B. D. Watson.

Boyce, La.

Along with a fine club of 11 subscriptions, Rev. W. W. Perry, of Boyce, La., sends us the following note: "The last nine of these were secured last week while in a meeting at Fellowship Church, of which Rev. A. A. Phillips is pastor. Whatever else I may have done out there, I have given some families the opportunity of securing good reading for one year. This makes 74 new subscribers thus far toward my goal of 100. It looks as if I shall make good this purpose. At any rate, I hope so. Our people are somewhat affected by the summer feeling, but otherwise all is going on well in my charge.

"The Rapides Camp Meeting will begin August 5 and continue through August 8. Dr. R. H. Wynn and Rev. H. B. Perritt will lead in the preaching. This will complete the regular meetings in this charge for this year. Up to date, I have received 57 members into the Church and yet have 8 to take in, and still there is a good part of the year before me. There are some splendid laymen on this work, who stand ready to help the pastor in every way. This accounts for a large part of his success."

Coushatta, La.

One of the most successful religious meetings ever held in our town, not in accessions to the Church, but in a true Christian spirit came to a close on last Sunday night, when standing room in the Methodist Church was at a premium, and quite a number of people were forced to stand on the outside. Rev. A. H. Parker, our beloved pastor, in his usual earnest, convincing manner did most of the preaching. Mr. Parker is an earnest worker and seemed to put his whole soul and mind into this meeting, as well as did all the other church workers. The presiding elder was here and assisted in the meeting the first part of the week. The singing was led by that Christian gentleman, Mr. R. H. Oliver, assisted by our home talent. The singing was good and was highly enjoyed and appreciated by all. Rev. and Mrs. Napper rendered valuable assistance in the music. Taking the meeting as a whole, it was a grand revival in a religious spirit. Great interest was manifested throughout the meeting, and it was largely attended by the people of the town and surrounding country.—The Coushatta Citizen.

Benton, Miss.

Whe O-o-o-o! Nothing the matter, but we must take time to whistle. We have had lots of rain lately. It rained in the fields, in the gardens, in the roads, and in the pastures; but it did not rain in the parsonage. The preacher is "dry" at home and in the church. We have covered the parsonage, built a back porch, ceiled the back hall and screened it, papered the side room, bought new curtains, varnished the furniture, whitewashed the outside of the house, built a stove flue, put in a bath tub, put up a water tank, and built an automobile house. And the end is not yet, but is in sight.

The Ladies' Aid Society at Midway have put a carpet on the pulpit platform of the church and runners down the aisles and painted the floor, and are going to put in two back windows to keep the preacher cool.

We have two excellent Sunday schools: one at Midway, and the other at Benton, and we are doing all that we can to bring them up to the "standard of efficiency." The people of the Benton charge believe in doing things; in fact, we have to "get a hump" on us because we are surrounded by working people. The Benton charge is bounded on the east by Rutledge, on the south by Adams and "Big Black," on the west by Sullivan and Jackson, and on the north by Jackson and the North Mississippi Conference. We must keep up the spirit.

The time of our revivals is near at hand, and we are praying that there may be still greater improvement made spiritually. The true, wide-awake community is one whose temporal and commercial interests are brought up by the spiritual growth; as Ezekiel saw and described in his vision, "As the Spirit moved the wheels moved with it." We hope to tell you many good things in our next letter. Pray for us.

J. F. CAMPBELL.

SOME GOOD MEETINGS.

Dear Dr. Meck: If you will give me space, I should like to report two good meetings that I have just been in. The first meeting was at Frantam's Chapel, on the Brooklyn charge. Brother Denis Fordham, the pastor, started the services on the third Sunday in July, and I went out Monday morning and preached until Thursday night, when the meeting closed. Despite the down-pour of the rain, the people came and great interest was manifested. We had 22 accessions to the Church, and raised money to cell and paint the church and buy an organ for it.

The other meeting was at Douglas, on our own charge, where we did all our own preaching. We began Saturday night before the fourth Sunday in July and continued until the fifth Sunday at 1 a. m., preaching twice a day. The Spirit of the Lord was present from the start until the close. We had 20 accessions when we ended the services. The church met the fifth Sunday night to organize a prayer meeting, and Brother A. T. Holstead preached and four more gave their names for membership. In sending me the names of those who joined Sunday night, Brother S. D. Rinehard said: "The good work goes on, and it is impossible to estimate the good the meeting has done." He and others also said they had never seen anything like this revival at Douglas, in point of interest, behavior, etc. At the close of the meeting, the people showed their appreciation of my efforts by making me a present of a purse of $18. For all these things, we give God the praise. Our next meeting is at Indian Village, then we are to go to Brother W. T. Woodward at Forest, La., on the Oak Grove charge, and thence back to Brother Fordham at Lapine, La., on the Brooklyn charge. We ask the prayers of all the Advocate's readers.

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 200% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a well known Specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: If you were to make an actual blood test of all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. The food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In some cases it is worse than foolish to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

SOME PROBABLE SEQUENCES OF THE WRONG KIND OF UNION.

Undoubtedly the most outstanding feature of the action of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church concerning the union of American Methodism is its indefiniteness. Strange to say, Zion's Herald in referring to the paper adopted has made the following observation: "The response is straightforward and plain, without equivocation or evasion of any kind; its meaning is as clear as crystal." This utterance is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that Dr. J. F. Goucher, of Baltimore, who served on the special Committee of Sixty, and who was accorded the distinction of presenting the report of that body to the Conference, in his statement submitting it, among other things said: "The method of statement may not be quite satisfactory to some of the Conference, because, as I have heard it remarked, it is not definite enough; it is not specific enough; it is not detailed enough. But in the judgment of your Committee that is one of its chief excellencies." We think that any fair-minded reader who carefully examines the deliverance made at Saratoga Springs will concur with us in the view that respecting the matter of explicitness, Dr. Goucher correctly characterized it in the foregoing comment, and that our distinguished Boston contemporary was strikingly in error in the claims which it set up for the pronouncement that was sent forth.

Manifestly, in discussing an enactment that is so vague and uncertain as is that which was passed by the general assembly of our Sister Church, what one says must be recognized as more or less hypothetical. Assuming, however, that the Church, North, means to stand, as Dr. C. B. Spencer, of Kansas City, who is on the Northern Commission of Twenty-five, has declared, against leaving the Church, South, substantially in a single Quadrennial Conference, with full autonomy as to all local matters, we wish to give what we conceive to be some of the sequences that would probably follow from a union of the two Episcopal Methodisms upon such terms. In a single editorial, we can do little more than merely to state these results, leaving the explanation as to why we think they would come to pass to some other time.

Some Things Likely to Follow.

1. We believe that union of the kind mentioned with the Northern Church would open upon Southern Methodism the floodgates of higher criticism and rationalistic religious teaching to a much larger extent than has yet been done. It is well known that our Church is much more orthodox than the Methodist Episcopal Church. In the Bible Champion (New York), Dr. J. Benson Hamilton, its able editor, who is a brother of Bishop J. W. Hamilton, and Bishop Franklin Hamilton, has for the past three months been giving a large amount of space to the work of pointing out the extent to which the Sunday school literature of the Northern Methodist Church is permeated with this species of modern infidelity. The disclosures which he makes in this respect are truly startling and painful. He furthermore shows that that the Chicago Book Concern has brought out for collateral Bible study by its adult classes and students in colleges a series of volumes which are shockingly unsound and heretical. One of these, "New Testament History," by Dr. H. F. Hall, of the Iliff School of Theology, according to a review by The Bibliotheca Sacra, among other things, pronounces St. Luke "an untrustworthy historian," and declares that there was no Bible at all until 150 years after the crucifixion; and it contains a bibliography in which "prominence is given to books which discard all the miracles of the New Testament, including the resurrection of Lazarus and the bodily resurrection of Christ." Would Southern Methodism be helped by a complete amalgamation with a denomination which stands for such instruction of its youth and which would be sufficiently strong to dominate in their joint councils? We hardly think so. We are ready to submit detailed proof of what we have here affirmed, should it be desired by any one. Dr. Lyman Abbott, who was a visitor at the Saratoga General Conference, said some weeks ago in The Outlook, in effect, that the outcome of the present union movement would depend largely upon the extent to which the Church, South, has become liberalized in her theology, the Church, North, having gone far in that direction.

2. Union upon the Saratoga plan with the Northern Church would likely mean the disruption and injury, if not ruin, of our present splendid educational system, in which our schools are Church-owned and Church-controlled. As is generally known, the hold of the Church, North, upon its institutions of learning is, as a rule, very slack. Time and again we have had it thrown in our face during the late Vanderbilt controversy that its Board of Trustees were offering Southern Methodism as much power and voice in its management as the Methodist Episcopal Church has in the holding and control of most of its educational plants. An amalgamation with the Northern Church of the kind that seems to be in contemplation by the ultra-unionists would, in our opinion, likely mean the loss of all that we have been standing for so resolutely in our great battle against the secularization of our educational work. With two-thirds of the reunited Church standing for a loose educational policy, how could we hope to maintain successfully our present attitude respecting this most important question?

Northern Church Secular and Political.

3. Such a union would also, in all probability, result in making our Church less Methodistic and more secular. The spirit of the itinerancy has been considerably impaired in the North. As we have many times said in these columns, it is now a very common thing to observe in some paper the advertisement of a Northern Methodist preacher for an exchange of pastorates with some other brother. The Northern Methodist denomination is perhaps the most political Church in the United States, with the exception of the Roman Catholic. We have even read of some of its Bishops and pastors taking the stump for candidates for the Presidency of the United States. The General Conference, lately in session at Saratoga Springs, adopted extended resolutions declaring for woman suffrage in State and Federal elections. Whatever one may think about the wisdom of giving women the vote, we respectfully submit that this is a question with which a spiritual Church of Christ should have nothing to do. It is a political and governmental issue. Note also the following, which we take from Zion's Herald of May 17 (Page 633): "The mention of the name of Mr. Justice Charles E. Hughes during Bishop Hughes' address brought the great audience to its feet; it is very evident that the Justice is a favorite with the Conference." Think of a great religious gathering deporting itself in such a manner at the mere mention of the name of a prospective candidate for the Presidency, as Mr. Hughes then was! If our Church should become amalgamated with a much larger one possessing such a political spirit, would it not be liable to become infected with it? Are we willing to see our beloved Southern Methodism, which has hitherto found quite enough to do in attending to the Master's business, mixed up in all sorts of secular affairs?

Southern Social Conditions Involved.

4. But by far the most serious possible outcome from a general merging of Northern and Southern Methodism is that which relates to the eight or ten millions of Negroes in the South. The attitudes of the two Churches toward our "brother in black" are widely different. The best element of the Southern white people feel kindly toward the Negroes. They are anxious to see them Christianized, and they want them to have educational advantages and opportunities for moral and material advancement; but they believe in the maintenance of the racial integrity of the Negro and that he should be made to understand clearly that he is to cherish no hope of his people ever intermingling with the white population. And they, furthermore, hold that it is best, both for his own good and that of the white people, for him to leave politics alone, being assured of a fair and just protection of his life, freedom, and property interests. With this conception in view, they have framed systems of laws and builded their State constitutions.

Now, as we understand it, the convictions of the Methodists across the Ohio, like those of the Northern people in general, are not in harmony with this status of things. While not openly pressing the matter of social equality, the effect of their teaching is to encourage the Negroes to believe that they should ride in the same coaches on the trains and in the same parts of

GRANDMOTHER'S BIBLE.

This is grandmother's Bible, just as she left it when
She went upstairs in the darkness, not to come down again.
Night after night she read it, with old hand on the page,
Spectacles on the kind old eyes that were tired and dim with age.
Night after night we saw her, deep in her thought and prayer,
Then came the night we missed her—looked and she was not there.

Not there—yet the candle was burning—her glasses lay on the Book;
The chair and the chimney corner looked just as they used to look;
And we went to her room to find her kneeling down by her bed—
Just as if she were praying, but the life and the spirit had fled.
Eighty years in God's service, daughter, mother and wife;
Now she had gone to praise Him still in that higher life.

Eighty years in God's service, and for seventy she had read
Some part of the holy teaching before she went up to bed.
In days of joy or sorrow, when famine came to the farms,
And the little child that was dearest went from her loving arms,
When daughters left her in marriage, when she yearned for her soldier son,
Grandmother turned to her Bible, and murmured, "Thy will be done."

Somebody closed the Bible, somebody moved her chair
Out of the chimney corner, that we might not miss her there.
Yet we feel she is somewhere near us, not quite has she gone away
From her children—and children's children—who learned at her knees to pray.
Something helpful and holy lies like a fragrant spell
'Twixt the covers of grandmother's Bible whose pages she loved so well.

THE SECRET OF IT.

The real reason of religious indifference to-day is the pressure of the world. When professing Christians forsake the courts of the Lord and neglect the means of grace, their desertion has its deep-seated cause in worldliness. The fault is in themselves. * * * The disciples who went back and walked no more with Jesus were the ones of whom Jesus said, "But there are some of you that believe not." Those who desert the Christian cause do so because of unbelief. Their profession does not have back of it the new birth from above. They follow their natural bent when they forsake Christ. The pressure of the world, finding no resistance from any inner grasp of Christ, bears them along into the ranks of the deserters.—The Christian Intelligencer.

SAVED TO SERVE.

Thomas Waugh.

The rule of the early Church was that of the Word of God—only saved people to touch saving work. In Acts 6, 3, we see the apostles would allow none but spiritual men to work even in a church soup-kitchen. It is dangerous for alien hands to touch the ark of God. The rejecters of Christ can not do the work of Christ, and are never called upon to try. Divine sonship must be reached before divine service is accepted. It was a "son" who received the command, "Go, serve!"

We must be members of the Lord's family to be deeply interested in and fitted for the Lord's business. True service is born of love, and we do not love those whom we reject and refuse. Our Lord never says, "Give me thy service," until we have responded to his "Give me thy heart." He wants us first and ours afterwards, and the Holy Spirit never sanctions nor acknowledges in his church the service of unsaved people.

ORGANIC UNION OF METHODISM.

By Joseph E. V. Hargrove.

The unification of the Methodist bodies of the United States is becoming the paramount issue of the day with all the Methodists of this country. It is a vital question and our people should be thoroughly informed of its progress and the probable results by a free and fair discussion of the plans offered for such a union.

The Southern Methodist Church through its General Conference at Oklahoma City in 1910 adopted a plan which it offered as a basis of organic union with the other Methodist bodies of the country, which plan suggested a General Conference with two houses with full legislative power over all matters distinctly connectional, and three or four Quadrennial Conferences with full legislative power over distinctively local affairs and suggested that neither of these Conferences be invested with final authority to interpret the constitutionality of its own acts, and that all powers be exercised under constitutional provisions and restrictions. In addition thereto, it suggested that the negro memberships of the various Churches be formed into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united Church.

The Northern Church at Saratoga last May in passing on the plan suggested by the Southern Church suggested that the General Conference be made the supreme legislative, executive, and judicial body of the Church, under constitutional provisions and restrictions, and that the colored membership of the reorganized Church be constituted into one or more Quadrennial Conferences.

We have here the tentative plans of the two Churches and the question now is whether these two plans present differences that can be reconciled without much difficulty, whether they go to the very heart of the government of the reorganized Church, and if so, can our people afford to recede from our suggestions and accept the suggestions of the Northern Church?

There are some of our leaders who contend that we are practically agreed, and that the differences are only of minor detail; and these men are high officials of the Church, and men whose opinions have been highly prized by the Church; but the matter is of such vital consequence to the Methodism of the South that we cannot afford to allow their high position to so dazzle us as to make us blind to the truth as it exists.

These differences are vital to the questions at issue; they reach down to the very roots of the government of the Church, and was the very rock upon which the Church split in 1844. It was the unwarranted interference of the General Conference with the executive power of the Bishops that caused the split then. Will we repudiate the act of our forefathers in establishing an independent Church by agreeing to vest supreme executive power in the General Conference? They refused to accept the proposition that the General Conference had supreme executive power; our Church for nearly three quarters of a century has held out against this proposition, has grown in power and influence by vesting the executive power in the episcopacy and others appointed by the General Conference. Shall we now say that we have all this time been wandering in the wilderness, and are now willing to repent and enter again into the promised land of supreme power with all branches of the government vested in one body?

Dr. John M. Moore, in the Nashville Advocate of July 28, tried to explain that the differences were of minor import by saying in effect that the Saratoga Conference did not mean exactly what it said. He said: "By my interpretation the two recommendations do not conflict. The General Conference may be supreme and still not be vested with final authority to interpret the constitutionality of its own actions. Is not Congress the supreme legislative body of the United States without final authority to interpret the constitutionality of its own acts?

This reference to Congress was rather unfortunate to Dr. Moore's argument, for he must know that while Congress is the supreme legislative body of the United States, it is not the supreme judicial body of the United States. The judicial powers are vested in another distinct body, and the executive powers are vested in still another distinct body—these three powers of the government are vested in different bodies, tribunals and persons. Experience has taught us that this is the most ideal form of government; it is the only way by which the rights of the minority will be safeguarded. It is the chief glory of our government, and by this means we have formed a more perfect union, established justice, insured domestic tranquility, and promoted the general welfare of the citizens of our commonwealth.

The Oklahoma plan is patterned after our civil government, in which certain powers are delegated to the general government under proper restrictions, while the States and people retain all powers not so delegated. It is the Jefferson idea. The Saratoga plan centralizes the powers of government in one body, and would create an ecclesiastical oligarchy, with autocratic power as great as that of the Czar of Russia or the Pope of Rome. The Saratoga plan would destroy the autonomy of the local Churches, and be the cause of friction, and might finally end in a disruption greater than that of 1844. The Oklahoma plan would give to the General Conference full legislative power over matters distinctly connectional, and the Quadrennial Conferences full legislative power over distinctly local affairs, but would deny to each of these Conferences the judicial power to pass upon the constitutionality of its actions, to that extent separating the legislative and judicial powers. The Saratoga plan would take from the Quadrennial Conferences all legislative power and make the General Conference not only the supreme legislature, but the supreme judicial and executive body of the Church. These functions, it says, shall be exercised under constitutional provisions and restrictions. But who shall pass upon these constitutional restrictions? The only answer is that the supreme judicial authority is the only authority that can pass upon the law and constitution of the government. In our national government all judicial power is vested in the Supreme Court and inferior courts. The Supreme court is the court of final authority passing upon all questions of law and the constitution, and its opinions govern all other authorities. If we should in our ecclesiastical government make the General Conference the supreme judicial body, it would necessarily follow that this body would have final jurisdiction of all questions involving the law and constitution of the Church, and in that event would have supreme authority to pass upon the constitutionality of its own actions.

Supreme means highest in authority or power; applied to courts it means the court of last resort whose opinions control all other courts; and one of its chief functions is to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation, and in the past it has been a great bulwark to American liberty, and has prevented the encroachment of legislative and executive powers, and has kept them within the limits authorized by the Constitution.

The Oklahoma plan would separate the negro Methodists into a separate organization. In this it recognizes the fact that the negro question has been the cause of the greatest friction between the different sections, and would remove this cause for further friction, feeling that the North and South look upon the negro from entirely different points of view. The Saratoga plan would retain the negro in the re-organized Church, regardless of the trouble and dissension it may cause.

Greenwood, Miss.

"Unconsecrated prosperity is the greatest menace of the American Church."

THAT "ANSWER TO MEXICAN MISSIONARIES."

Dear Doctor Meek: Kindly permit me to say a word in regard to an article which appeared in the Advocate some weeks ago. The writer, Miss Martha Nutt, calls it "an answer to a protest published by a small group of missionaries." Perhaps you have observed the disposition on the part of all who advocate this readjustment question to mimify the work, workers and everything belonging to the Southern Church in Mexico, while they magnify everything belonging to other Churches. You will not have to go very far to ascertain why they hold this very peculiar opinion.

That protest was signed by twenty-eight missionaries: nine preachers, one physician, nine wives of missionaries, and nine young lady missionaries. All are regularly accepted missionaries who have been on the field from four to thirty-four years. There are twelve American preachers who retain their membership in these Mexican Conferences and all of these except three signed that protest. One of these three is in Cuba and one is in Texas, and, though he seems to hold a brief for the manipulators of this scheme, it is generally understood that he does not intend to return to the work in Mexico. So when this subject is reduced to its last analysis, that protest was signed by every missionary (preacher) who expects to finish his ministerial career in this field with one exception, and that one is more or less neutral on the subject. Of course, Miss Nutt may not have known these things, as she remained so short a time on the field and has been so long out of the work.

It is strange that those missionaries who, because of large families and small salaries, poor health, "misfits" or "peculiar circumstances," can not remain in the work, are the advocates of the Cincinnati plan, while the missionaries who stand at their post "in weariness and painfulness," in watchings and anxiety, and are resolved to finish their course with joy and the ministry they have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God in Mexico, vigorously oppose the scheme as unwise, impracticable and hurtful to the interests of the Kingdom of Christ.

"Endorsed by Others."

They tell us that this scheme was endorsed by 68 people at the Panama Congress. I desire to call attention to some facts in this connection that should not be forgotten when you go to make up your verdict on this subject:

1. Every one mentioned as having taken part in that meeting is a member of some other Church. No Southern Methodist is mentioned. All were outsiders! What sacrifices have they made? What territory have they surrendered? How many Annual Conferences do they propose to destroy in order to carry out the plan?

2. If my memory is not at fault, there were in that meeting eleven missionaries and Mexican preachers from Mexico. At most, the number of workers from Mexico was very small, while the rest of the "68" were bishops, secretaries, members of the Boards, Y. M. C. A. secretaries, Bible Agents, outsiders, and sightseers. I desire to say here and now, that I for one am tired of Y. M. C. A. secretaries, Bible Agents, etc., meddling with the work in which I have spent years of toil and thousands of dollars in money.

3. In that meeting "of 68" people who talked so beautifully on Mexico there was not one male missionary of the M. E. Church, South, from Mexico. Not one. And what is more striking, there was not in all that number "of 68" one Mexican representative of the M. E. Church, South. It is an easy matter to have resolutions unanimously adopted either in Cincinnati or Panama if those opposing them are not present.

4. Whatever union the Protestant forces have effected in China and Korea has been accomplished without ignoring the men on the field and destroying the work of forty years, and precipitating a spirit of suspicion and discontent among the natives from which it will take many years to recover.

5. The "instance of interdenominational co-operation in the Philippines" is not a parallel case, for the Methodists and United Brethren are so near alike it is not difficult for members to go from one Church to the other. That is not like turning 2000 members over to the Baptists and Disciples. That is a very different question.

6. The statement that "the time has come when we are concerned more about the coming of the Kingdom," etc., is misleading. So far as my observation goes—I have been nearly half a century in the Methodist Church—there never was a time when the Methodist Church sought members at the expense of the Kingdom. On the contrary, her chief concern has been to "spread Scriptural holiness over these lands, and in doing this she has necessarily built up a great constituency. She has been ready to form an alliance with all who love Christ and has sent thousands of converts into other Churches. While standing upon a really catholic platform, she has never discredited denominationalism, and she has done more to evangelize the world than any other agency since the days of St. Paul. I am convinced that she will do more to establish the Kingdom of Christ and help other denominations by sticking to her own peculiar methods and doing her work in her own peculiar way than she will by adopting the methods of other Churches, or by trying to imitate them in running off after intellectualism, on the one hand, or formalism, on the other. Whatever hurts the Methodist Church hurts the Kingdom.

This recent fad of "unification and co-operation" is, at the bottom, an effort to destroy denominationalism. A few days ago I was in a great convention of a Church whose ministers devoted much time to deriding denominationalism and urging all to join their Church. When a representative fresh from the Panama Congress told them that some years ago Mr. Robert Speer had said he did not think the Presbyterian Church would be in existence a hundred years from that time, and when asked a few weeks ago if he still held that opinion, he replied that he did but had shortened the time, there was prolonged and vociferous applause. Now, it might be for the best interests of scriptural Christianity if some denominations were destroyed and the time may come when it will be best for the Kingdom for Methodism to cease to exist, but I do not believe that time has come, and I shall do all I can to defeat any plan that tends to hurt her influence and impede her progress at home or on the foreign field, whether that plan is advocated by Bishop, Secretary, or what not.

Dr. Pinson's Reply.

As this readjustment question has been referred to the General Conference, and I expect to answer Dr. Pinson's reply at length before that time, I desire to make but one or two observations on that subject at this time.

The reply says: "We are solemnly told again and again that we 'give away,' 'relinquish' vast property values and get nothing in return." A careful reading of the protest will show that this statement is a mistake. We did not say we are to "give away property values" at all. The only place where our language could be so construed is at the close of the statistics where we say, "the above is what we are to abandon or give away." On page 9 we say again and again: "We relinquish to the Baptist territory in which we have three local preachers," etc. "We relinquish to the Disciples territory in which we have so many members," etc. "We relinquish to the Congregationalists territory in which we have 9 congregations," etc. It is the territory we are to relinquish, but leave the disposition of the property exactly where the Cincinnati Plan and the Secretaries left it; that is, we do not mention it at all. Dr. Pinson says: "An equitable exchange of property or its purchase in all cases at a fair valuation is a fundamental part of the Cincinnati Plan." There is not a word in the minutes of that Cincinnati Conference as to what will become of the property. There is not a syllable in any of the booklets sent out by the Secretaries telling what disposition will be made of the "property values." The only word on the property question is contained in that letter signed by Dr. Cook and Miss Head and published in the Nashville Advocate soon after the Cincinnati meeting, and they fail to tell us of this "fundamental part of the Cincinnati Plan." Please note their statement: "Officers of boards gladly accepted the risk of sacrificing valuable properties, of disappointing and perhaps wounding their constituency at home and on the field." This language certainly intimates that the officers of the Boards were so glad to enter into this scheme that they were willing to do almost anything. If we are willing to sacrifice two thousand members, why should we raise such a row about sacrificing a little property? Which are the more valuable, immortal souls or a few houses? Bear in mind that I have quoted the only item on the subject published by the Secretaries until this "reply" of Dr. Pinson's saw the light. How could they expect the missionaries to be informed on the subject? Dr. Pinson does not tell us what will be done with the Church buildings, like those in the State of Durango, which is occupied by our Church and the Southern Baptists, who do not enter into this scheme and may not need our buildings.

The Statistics.

Had Dr. Pinson read our protest with proper care, he would have seen that we say: "We give you the following facts taken from the Minutes of three conferences of 1911, the last published. These do not represent present conditions as to members and local preachers, but they indicate the work in its normal conditions." We knew there might be errors in many items, but thought they would be as liable to fall on one side as on the other. We now know there are mistakes on both sides. For example, we report the two church buildings and Palmore College at Chihuahua as being worth $150,000, Mexican money; Brother Cox estimates the college alone at $40,000, gold, while the Woman's Council puts it at $115,000, gold. A proper study of the "protest" will show that we did not say Seth Ward College is worth $30,000, but that the American church, the American parsonage, and Seth Ward College at Torreon are valued at $30,000. We did not say that Laurens Institute is worth $75,000, but we did say the church building and Laurens Institute at Monterey are valued at $75,000, Mexican money. The Institute was valued at $50,000 by Rev. W. F. Quillian when he was in charge of the school. Dr. Pinson did not know that a great deal of improvement had been made on the hospital at Monterey and a church building finished at Villaldama since Brother Cox made his report on property values. Surely Dr. Pinson did not take the trouble to inform himself on the subject before rushing into print.

As I say, we took these statistics from the Minutes of the Conferences, and I suppose that they are as nearly correct as Conference Minutes generally are. We gave the items so that they could be scrutinized and corrected when necessary. I could continue the subject to the end of the chapter, but this is enough to show that he that lives in a glass house should be careful how he throws stones, and that it is wise to study a document before trying to refute it.

SOME PROBABLE SEQUENCES.

We trust that the white people in all that they might in view the privilege of exercising the right and of voting when as much as one negro in any local race. The administration of the National Executive, Congress, or our judgment whether by omission or commission, to foster and encourage such a movement on the part of the colored membership of this section. We have seen a vision of some of their possibilities and the reason why they must not abandon their work in the South was that they felt it to be their duty to try to change the atmosphere prevailing in the Southern States in this respect. Would they have less desire to do this in a united Church than they have now? We do not think it likely that they would.

So much will the Southern Methodist Church gain from opportunities in this direction really larger than those that are now within their reach, and moreover the culmination of the uniting process would place all the Negro Methodists in the United States—1,500,000, with their vast number of adherents—largely under their influence. It would not be necessary for them in seeking to work out their aims to undertake to fill the Southern States with ministers trained in the North; they could do this even more effectively by seeing that Southern men with Northern ideas were elected to the bishopric and other connectional offices. And with them overwhelmingly in control of a single supreme General Conference, this would be easy for them to do. Well may Southern Methodists take warning from the type of men in our Church that they are now given to calling into their councils—most of whom care are far from being Southerners in their sentiments, and who apparently care little or nothing for the delicate and menacing problems with which the ablest statesmen of the South have been anxiously wrestling ever since the Civil War. For our part, we shall never be willing to see our Church made an agency through which alien hands can disturb political and social conditions in the Southern States.

Some Unwarranted Affirmations.

It is a very common thing now to hear it said that it was necessary for Methodism to divide in 1844 to preserve its interests in the North and in the South, but that the time has now come when the same high interests that called for division in the decades of the past demand that union shall be effected. This is easy to say, but where is the proof to sustain this affirmation? The white people of the South still feel that they must stand solidly together politically for self-protection, and no assault, however cunning or powerful, has ever been able to break that solidity. That a "Northernized" Church would be in a better position to serve the people of this section efficiently, is a proposition that does not commend itself to reason. On the contrary, such an influence from without would, in our opinion, tend to discredit and hamper the Church, South, in the work that she needs to do in the splendid territory which a kindly Providence has given her. The list of denominations with which she must compete in these parallels does not include the Northern Methodist Church, to any considerable extent—except in a few localities, where Northern immigration has helped it, its efforts among the Southern white people have generally been lamentable failures. Let the suspicion be spread abroad in the fair land of Dixie that the Southern Methodist Church is governed by Northern influences, and the other Southern denominations will outstrip her and take away her crown. Indeed, we would not be surprised, if the Saratoga scheme of union should go through, to see large secessions from her membership immediately follow.

One may talk about a restored union and sectionalism being dead; but, as a matter of fact, no really Southern man has been elected to the Presidency since the War between the States. No [illegible] party would dare for the moment to nominate a man regarded in the South for that high office. Practically the vote of [illegible] Wilson's life rests in the [illegible] that there [illegible] Southern [illegible] Everybody knows that if he had [illegible] in favor of [illegible] he would not have [illegible] Democratic [illegible]

A PUBLIC TRUMPET BLAST.

It is often charged by anti-prohibitionists that we prohibitionists are unreasonable and that we get our noses so hot that we can't think straight. I want to get my nose so hot that it will forget its natural color and turn the hue of the setting sun. And I want to get so hot that I can't see! I am impatient in my hatred of the liquor traffic. Its awful history fell upon my childhood for fifteen years and marked me indelibly here in my native city and there by and will be there as long as life lasts.

[illegible] you are interested, if you have a heart in you instead of a piece of ice, just come [illegible] with me to look in fear with all your eyes in your head. When I lived in North Texas, in a nearby county town was a young woman, who a little while before had stood at the altar with her groom. In their little cottage home she was preparing supper. Out in the yard were a number of children. Her husband passing by, was lured in by the smell of the glass and the lot. He went in and drank and drank. Passed and came again, and imbibed. Fury came in. He went to his little wife on with was making biscuits. He went in with that drunken fury that unmanned a man and a devil and said, "Where is my supper?" His wife said, "Darling, I am hurrying as fast as I can." He said, "I will show you how to hurry." He went over to where she stood and grabbed up a butcher-knife that was on the table, took that under hand that a little while before he had clasped in a loving embrace at the altar of God's Church, laid it down on the biscuit board, took the butcher-knife, and cut off one finger after another while she screamed and cried. Then, taking her by the hand and holding the bleeding stump in his, he dragged her to the stove, and on the red hot surface he seared the stump until it was burned to a crisp. Crying, and fainting, and dying, she tried to break away from him. Once more he dragged her back to the board and said, "I will teach you to keep my supper waiting." He took the other hand and repeated the same awful operation. Finger by finger, he cut them off, dragged her once more back to the stove and seared the stump. When the neighbors came afterward they found her dead. They found the trail of her blood, where she ran from the kitchen to the dining room, and then to the parlor, and then back again to the kitchen, he pursuing her like a demon of hell, and catching her and killing her. They buried her with those two poor seared stumps crossed upon her breast. Men, if that were your daughter or your sister, would you say: "Wait, wait, wait; let liquor have seven more years of its hellish opportunity?" Or would those bloody hands, or those seared stumps, lifted before your face, make you cry: "Away with academic arguments! away with the foolishness and fallacies of the anti's position!"

Those hands stretched out to me plead with me so that I am the implacable enemy of the liquor traffic unto the knife, and the knife to the hilt, until it dies forever. And, Christian men, I dare you to think of another bloody hand, the hand of Jesus Christ. Take your ballot against submission, your ballot against prohibition, and put it in the pierced hand of the Son of God, and say to him, whose name you have named as your own, if you are a member of the Church of Christ, that you believe that ballot represents the spirit of Christ. You would not so blaspheme!

JOHN WANAMAKER ON BILLY SUNDAY'S WORK.

Robert Edwin Meek, son of the Rev. R. A. Meek, D.D., editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, recently wrote John Wanamaker, the merchant prince of Philadelphia, requesting him to express his opinion of the "Billy" Sunday cam- [illegible] paign [illegible] Philadelphia. [illegible] Mr. Wanamaker [illegible] reply [illegible]

"I have your letter [illegible] Philadelphia [illegible] I believe [illegible] for two months [illegible] the whole [illegible] could be done for Philadelphia [illegible] audiences [illegible] he was here before."—The Times-Philadelphia

NEW YORK ADVOCATE TAKEN TO TASK.

Every well informed person on the question of Methodist Unification knows that the two main points at issue are the powers to be given to the General Conference, and the relation of colored Methodists. The Methodist Episcopal Church suggests that the General Conference be clothed with supreme legislative, executive, and judicial authority, and that the negro membership be constituted a regular part of the whole Church with proportionate representation in the General Conference. Our Church desires a General Conference limited by constitutional provisions, and a re-organized Methodism with autonomous divisions, having jurisdictional conferences with constitutional limitations, and that the colored Methodists have one separate church under their own control, and holding fraternal relations with the re-organized Church. These differences are fundamental, and unless one Church or the other can see its way to yield, we can not see how a union can be accomplished.

Therefore we respectfully submit that the following statement made by the editor of the New York Advocate in the issue of July 26, is not proper and right while negotiations for formal unification are pending. Here is the statement:

"In New Orleans the white ministers of the two Churches have recently formed a Methodist ministerial union for the discussion of matters of common interest. In California, the Epworth Leagues of both Churches are holding their first Joint Institute at Asilomar. All along the line the laymen and ministers show a disposition to take the matter into their own hands and act as if union were complete, however official editors and Bishops may protest."

We do not believe that laymen and ministers "all along the line" should be encouraged "to take matters into their own hands" and "act as [illegible] were complete." We are sorry that the [illegible] of the editor of the Christian Advocate [illegible] Advocate has approval of [illegible] methods. If the New York Advocate [illegible] a good opportunity of saying so [illegible]

Right [illegible] makes the chief papers of our [illegible]—with a few respectable exceptions—[illegible] of the Savings part of Methodism. We [illegible] to reproduce a list of articles [illegible] against unification, contained in the [illegible] general reference of the religious [illegible] United States, written by an editor [illegible] Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

[illegible] of the editors of our papers will seem [illegible] Methodist Unification have [illegible] that a union based on a text of the General Conference, and the Negro Methodist [illegible] provided for in the Savings Clause [illegible] will not be accomplished.

Another thing we want to say, in the interest of brotherly kindness and fairness, is that we do not take the Christian Advocate New Yorker and other prominent Methodist papers, should make [illegible] of the resolutions passed by the [illegible] Conference, and the Epworth League [illegible] in California, and Union [illegible] at previous meetings in New Orleans, and [illegible] the able discussions of the fundamental difficulties in the way of union which have recently appeared in our Church press from such representative men as Bishop E. E. Hoss; Editors Meek, Hollifield, Lovett, and Braddock; and Rev. J. E. Harrison and J. W. Hill of Texas and Rufus E. C. Reeves, of Tennessee—The Central Methodist, Lexington, Ky.

THE PRISONER.

You have a little prisoner;
He's nimble, sharp and clever,
He's sure to get away from you,
Unless you watch him ever.

And when he once gets out he makes
More trouble in an hour
Than you can stop in many a day,
Working with all your power.

He sets your playmates by the ears,
He says what isn't so,
And uses many ugly words
Not good for you to know.

Quick, fasten tight the ivory gates,
And chain him while he's young!
For this same dangerous prisoner
Is just your little tongue.

WHISTLING HELPED.

Edgar's mother was not very strong. They could not afford a servant, and, anyway, she thought that boys should learn to do some things about the house. Now and then she called on Edgar to set the table, or wash the dishes. One evening when she was not feeling well and was especially tired, she said as she arose from the table, "I have washed the dishes twice to-day. I wonder if my small son could wash them once?"

Now Edgar was just planning to have a delightful play with his Maltese kitty. He did not relish the idea of giving up something he liked for something he disliked, but very slowly he managed to say that he guessed he could try.

Mother went into the living room and seated herself in a comfortable rocker, to enjoy a much-needed rest. Presently a very whiny voice called from the kitchen, "Mother, do you want me to wash this old toast pan?"

Now Edgar was very fond of milk toast, but eating the toast and washing the pan in which it was made were two very different things.

"Yes," replied his mother, "but there is something else which I want you to do even more than that."

Of course, Edgar wished to know what it was.

"Take the whine out of that sweet voice of yours," said mother.

"'Peak like oo do when oo laugh," piped up little Dorothy, from her stool at mother's feet.

"Yes," added mother, "if you speak as you do when you laugh your voice will make a silvery tinkle which we all love to hear. Dorothy has told you the way exactly."

"Thank you, Dot," said Edgar, "that reminds me of a tiny poem I read to-day—'It is better to whistle than whine.' So here goes;" and he at once began to whistle a merry tune.

After that it was surprising how easily and neatly the dishwashing went on. Soon the dreaded toast pan even was as clean and dry and shiny as any dishwasher could make it. He was through in time to have a good romp with the kitty after all.—The Presbyterian.

HIS OWN MASTER.

"I am my own master," cried a young man proudly, when a friend tried to persuade him from an enterprise which he had on hand; "I am my own master!"

"Did you ever consider what a responsible post that is?" asked his friend.

"Responsible, is it?"

"A master must lay out the work which he wants done, and see that it is done right. He should try to secure the best ends by the best means. He must keep on the lookout against obstacles and acidents, and watch that everything goes straight, or else he must fail.

"To be master of yourself you have your conselence to keep clear, your heart to direct, and your judgment to instruct. You are master over a hard lot, and if you do not master these things they will master you.

"Now, I could undertake no sueh thing," said his friend. "I should surely fail, if I did. Saul wanted to be his own master, and failed. Herod did. Judas did."—Our Young Folks.

OBEYING OUR GUIDE.

It is never safe to disobey those who are wiser than ourselves. A traveler tells us he once went up a mountain more than ten thousand feet high. On the way his guide pointed out a place where a man met with a severe accident a few years before.

"How did it happen?" asked the traveler.

The reply was, "He did not obey his guide. He would go by a way against which I had warned him."

Even so, we must obey our heavenly Guide, if we would journey safely on to the promised land. —Unidentified.

THE POWER OF JUDICIOUS PRAISE.

Some years ago, in a poor schoolhouse in a back district, a boy at the foot of the class unexpectedly spelled a word which had passed down the entire class.

"Go to the head of the class," said the master, "and see that you stay there. You can, if you work hard."

The boy hung his head. But the next day he did not miss a word in spelling. The brighter scholars knew every word in the lesson, hoping there might be a chance to get ahead, but there was not a single one; Dave stayed at the head. He had been an indifferent speller before, but now he knew every word.

"Dave, how do you get your lessons so well now?" said the master.

"I learn every word in the lesson, and get my mother to hear me at night; then I go over them in the morning before I come to school; and I go over them in my seat before the class is called up."

"Good boy, Dave," said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way, and you'll do."

Dave is to-day the manager of a large company, and he attributes his start to the words: "Go up to the head, and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."—Presbyterian Advance.

THE SOURCE OF ALL GOOD.

"Forget not all his benefits." A boy was bringing home a loaf of bread, and one said: "What have you there?"

"A loaf."

"Where did you get it?"

"From the baker."

"Where did the baker get it?"

"He made it."

"Of what did he make it?"

"Flour."

"Where did he get the flour?"

"From the miller."

"Where did he get it?"

"From the farmer."

"Where did the farmer get it?"

Then the truth dawned upon the boy's mind, and he replied, "From God."

"Well, then, from whom did you get that loaf?"

"Oh, from God."

Here is a boy who, in the last resort, acknowledges God to be the giver of good. In this materialistic age man says: "My business supports me and my family." Men deal with God only as a last resource, and, yet go on hoping to sneak into God's heaven when they have done with this world, but the God of Sinai is thundering out to this age: "Thou shalt put me first and the baker second."—G. Campbell Morgan.

If we would fill the world with the sweet savor of the precious ointment, we must be content to be broken boxes.—Meyer.

Church News

The Baltimore Southern Methodist [illegible] announced that Bishop Eugene R. [illegible] Hendrix would preach on the Bull Run Battlefield on August 8.

The Presbyterians of Mississippi have raised $57,000 in their campaign for their correlated school system in that State since January 1. Mrs. P. H. Enochs, of Fernwood, Miss., [illegible] gave $1000 to this cause.

At the National Doctrinal Congress of the Christian (Campbellite) Church, held in Canton, Ohio, last week an effort to have the regulations of that denomination so modified as to make possible the reception of members from other Churches that do not practice immersion without rebaptism, failed.

Dr. James Cannon, Jr., Editor of the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate, has recently made a strong and conservative editorial statement on the subject of Methodist unification. Dr. Cannon is too clear-visioned a leader not to see important differences between the Saratoga and Oklahoma City enactments.

Rev. John W. Hoffman, D. D., a pastor at Duluth, Minn., has been elected President of the Ohio Wesleyan University, which office was left vacant by the election of Dr. Herbert Welch to the episcopacy at the late session of the General Conference of the Methodist Church. Dr. Hoffman was born at Noblestown, Pa., July 11, 1867, and was educated at Washington and Jefferson College. His theological training was received at the Yale Divinity School and Princeton Theological Seminary.

There is to be a new structure at Hiwassee College (Tennessee), which, while serving the institution, will be memorial in character. The rooms are to be named for persons by those contributing the amount required for their construction, and the names of the persons thus honored will be inscribed on the doors. The Abingdon District (Virginia) has taken one for Bishop Waterhouse; the Morristown (Tenn.) District has taken one for Bishop Hoss; the Knoxville District, one for Dr. D. Sullins; the Morristown Epworth League, one for Dr. R. N. Price, and Lafollette, one for Dr. Frank Richardson.

"THE EARTH IS FULL OF THE GOODNESS OF THE LORD."

This optimistic note of the psalmist should tend to inspire with hopefulness and courage every Christian man, woman, and child who, because of the outward show of the forces of evil in the world, are inclined to become despondent and to look upon the dark side of life. Too often one sees the evils, mistakes, and misfortunes in this life, and fails to note that out of evil good may come, that mistakes are for those that make them, as well as others, to profit by, and that those happenings which are commonly counted as calamities often bring hidden blessings and perfect things in the moral, or religious, realm which could not be brought about by any other means. The Holy Spirit is abroad in the world to-day working in the hearts and lives of men and accomplishing great wonders. In the past He has contended for the souls of men, and now he still strives for and with them against wickedness in the high and low places of the world's society, against the too often unconsciously possessed weaknesses of the flesh, and against the wiles of the devil, never failing to take the things of Christ and show them unto men, and never ceasing to try to impress them upon the human mind and conscience and to bring home their true significance. Were it not for the work that the Third Person of the adorable Trinity has done and is doing, every good thought, word, and deed that proceedeth out of the heart of man would have been stifled long ago. As long as the Spirit of Truth abides with us (and he is to be with us always in the present world) leading us as a "kindly light," we shall be able to look around us and see, so far as we are capable of doing, God's goodness on every hand in the many blessings that are showered upon us daily in spite of our many shortcomings, being in number more than we can count. And since God has done everything possible for the happiness and best interests of his children in the present life, where preparation for the life beyond the grave must be made, may we not say that His goodness fills the earth? Nay, more; it fills the universe.

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

THE CHURCH DEFENDED.

One not infrequently hears the Church sneered at as not being progressive—as not keeping pace with other organizations and agencies in the world in the modernization of its methods. The Congregationalist and Christian World refuses to countenance this view and comments as follows upon this oft-heard complaint:

"What has been the awakening power in India? The Church. What awakened Japan? The Church. What started all the stir that there has been in China? The Church. Who gave the impulse and push to the great temperance movement which is now making the water wagon the band wagon? Members of the Church. When the sisters organized the Woman's Christian Temperance Union there was something doing. Prohibition was a faroff hope until they put the power of their passion into it. Now the warring nations of Europe have been compelled to adopt it in order to make stronger men for the terrific strain of the great struggle. Does any good movement start up in any community that you do not find Church members at the front end of it? Puncture the tire of one of these movements and you have to call in the Church to fix it. It makes one tired to hear the Church criticised as too slow and not up-to-date, when it is anywhere from ten to a thousand years ahead of its generation, and when everybody who starts a reform either borrows his ideas from the Church or begs for its money to pay the bills. It is where the Church bells are ringing that you hear the sound of the going."

COMMISSIONERS NAMED FOR SOUTHERN CHURCH.

The following are the names of those who were appointed by the Committee of Nine at Tate Springs, Tenn., last week to act with a like Commission from the Church, North, in conducting the further negotiations that are to take place concerning Methodist unification:

Bishops—A. W. Wilson, E. E. Hoss, Collins Denny, W. A. Candler, and E. D. Mouzon.

Ministers—Rev. Frank M. Thomas, D.D., Louisville, Ky.; Rev. W. J. Young, D.D., Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. John M. Moore, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. C. M. Bishop, D.D., Georgetown, Texas; Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. T. N. Ivey, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., Jackson, Miss.; Rev. H. M. Du Bose, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. W. N. Ainsworth, D.D., Macon, Ga.; Rev. A. J. Lamar, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.

Laymen—Judge M. L. Walton, Woodstock, Va.; Dr. H. N. Snyder, Spartanburg, S. C.; Mr. Percy D. Maddin, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. R. S. Hyer, Dallas, Texas; Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Conway, Ark.; Dr. R. E. Blackwell, Ashland, Va.; Judge J. L. Kelley, Bristol, Va.; Mr. T. D. Samford, Opelika, Ala.; Mr. J. R. Pepper, Memphis, Tenn.; Judge E. C. Reeves, Johnson City, Tenn.

Alternates—Bishop W. B. Murrah, and Bishop James Atkins; Rev. W. A. Christian, D.D., Richmond, Va.; Rev. E. V. Regester, Alexandria, Va.; Rev. C. H. Briggs, Sedalia, Mo.; Hon. H. H. White, Alexandria, La.; Judge E. W. Hines, Washington, D. C., and Hon. G.T. Fitzhugh, Memphis, Tenn.

It is stated that the Joint Commission of the two Methodist Churches will likely meet during the Christmas holidays.

Some may be anxious to know what the Editor of the Advocate thinks of the complexion of the Commission named for the Church, South. He does not care to express himself at this time on this point any further than to say that, as one who believes that the Oklahoma City plan of unification should represent the well-nigh "irreducible minimum" that the Church, South, should stand for, he does not feel reassured by the personnel of this body, taking it as a whole. We think that it is particularly regrettable that there should be men on it who have already expressed to Northern brethren a willingness, if necessary, to surrender many of the most vital features of the scheme of union endorsed by our General Conference. We write this in sheer justice to the great interests that are involved, and without any intention of impeaching the motives or the sincerity of any one of these brethren.

We hope that the Joint Commission will meet at the earliest date practicable, and that the complete results of its deliberations will be given to the public immediately following its session. It behooves every preacher and every member of the Church to be thoroughly alert as to what is taking place in connection with this movement. The future of our Church should not be left to any small company of men, but should be determined by the sentiments of the great masses of our people. If they want union of any kind, they should have it; and if they do not want it, it should not be forced upon them. There are some who hold that the next General Conference will have power to determine the question of union without having the determinative features of the issue to come back to the Annual Conferences (this view will be more fully explained later), hence the next session of that body will be by far the most important ever held in the history of Southern Methodism. So, in naming delegates to it the Annual Conferences should sink out of sight all partialities, prejudices, and personal considerations of every kind, and send representatives who are in accord with their views, whatever they may be.

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY IN NEW ORLEANS.

We have in the last few issues of the Advocate carried several articles concerning the missionary work which our Church has either in operation or in contemplation in New Orleans. The truth is, Southern Methodism has a great and promising field in this largest of distinctively Southern cities, which she should be swift to take hold of and energetically cultivate. Not only ought our Connectional Boards to be alive to the situation here—they have done a good deal, for which we are grateful—but near-by Methodist churches in this and adjacent States ought to count it a privilege to assist in this greatly needed work. Why not write Rev. W. E. Thomas (817 St. Charles Street), the capable and consecrated director of our missionary activities here, and send him a check to help them along; or invite him to come to your town and talk to the people with a view to enlisting for this work their sympathy and assistance.

As a matter of fact, we should be up and doing as a Church all along the line in this growing center of population and commerce. Here are gathered nearly 400,000 people and the ends of the earth are at our very doors. We ought to have at this place a resident Bishop to lead our forces; and we hope that after our next General Conference it may be the good fortune of New Orleans Methodism to have one of its own rearing—one who understands the situation in this cosmopolitan city and whose whole heart would be in the task of strengthening and equipping our Church in this municipality and the surrounding country, that it may measure up worthily to its weighty responsibilities and inspiring opportunities. Wise and influential leadership would count for much in such a field as this.

ADDITIONAL LIGHT REQUESTED.

In his dissent from Bishop Candler's great utterance on the question of Methodist unification in the Nashville Christian Advocate last week, Dr. T. N. Ivey in one paragraph said: "There was great enthusiasm at Oklahoma City when our resolutions were unanimously adopted." And in the succeeding paragraph he declared: "There were but very few Southern Methodists who believed that our Oklahoma proposition would receive any showing whatever at Saratoga." Now, what we should like to know is this: If the members of our last General Conference did not think that their resolutions would amount to anything, what were they so enthusiastic about? These statements of our worthy confrere have left us somewhat perplexed, and we hope that he can find the time to help us out of our state of confusion. Surely he will not deny us this request.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of New Orleans, left last week for a visit to New York.

Rev. H. T. Young, of Amite City, La., is having a successful pastorate in his present field. He is a zealous and efficient worker in the Master's cause.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church, has been teaching Spanish in the Tulane Summer School. He is said to be very proficient in that increasingly important language for Southerners.

The place for Methodist students is in Methodist schools. What are you doing to help our Methodist school men to get them there?

The presiding elders in the Advocate's territory are beginning to announce their fourth rounds. The Annual Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi will soon be in sight.

Dr. Felix R. Hill, Sr., has been at his post as pastor of old Fellcity Church all the summer. This worthy veteran has not lost his skill in shepherding the Master's sheep.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin is winding up four years of notably successful service on the Jackson (Miss.) District. The work of the Church has made commendable progress under his administration.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, the presiding elder of the Shreveport District, has gone to California on a visit. While passing through Dallas, he paid the Texas Christian Advocate a call, which that paper seemed greatly to appreciate.

Rev. R. H. Harper preached a strong and helpful sermon to a good summer-time congregation at the Parker Memorial Church last Sunday at 11 a. m. He is one of the most capable and promising young ministers in the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. J. F. Foster, of Shreveport, La., was able to leave the Touro Infirmary, where he had been ill for a number of days, last Friday. The Editor called to see him last Sunday, and was disappointed in not having that pleasure, but was rejoiced to learn of his substantial improvement.

Rev. C. A. Battle, of Baton Rouge, La., was in New Orleans last Monday, having been called here to see one of the members of his church who was ill at the Touro Infirmary. His pulpit was filled most acceptably last Sunday by Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District.

Read Judge E. V. Hughston's clear and discriminating discussion of the differences between the Saratoga and Oklahoma City plans of union in this week's number of the Advocate. Judge Hughston, who resides at Greenwood, Miss., is the Lay Leader of the North Mississippi Conference and an able and clear-visioned lawyer.

Rev. L. C. Wilson, our energetic pastor at Grand Cane, La., writes as follows: "I am having some success in the Master's work here, and I expect to make a good report at Conference. I am serving an exceelent people." Brother Wilson's letter brought us six subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we extend to him our hearty thanks.

A letter from C. A. Bowen, who is connected with the Woman's College at Athens, Ala., stated that his father, Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Tupelo, Miss., was reeuperating at his home from an attaek of illness due to having become overheated. He reported that Brother Bowen was steadily improving and was hoping soon to be able to resume his work.

Rev. N. B. Harmon, of Magnolia, Miss., recently assisted Brother F. B. Ormond in a suceessful meeting at Muddy Springs, in which there were 6 accessions to the Church. He went last Friday to the Topisaw Camp Meeting, where he, Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Greenville, and Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Fernwood, had been booked to do the preaching.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions, sent in within the past few days: Rev. J. V. Bennett, Monticello, Miss., 2; Rev. J. T. McVey, Lorman, Miss., 2; Rev. S. L. Pope, New Albany, Miss., 3; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Bolton, Miss., 2; Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Franklinton, La., 3.

Rev. A. B. Barry, of Pachuta, Miss., forwards us the names of three subscribers, with a check to correspond, and in his business letter appends the following note: "The work is progressing finely in this charge. Our revivals are just beginning. It is our purpose to increase the circulation of the Advocate within the bounds of this work to the greatest possible number."

Rev. John W. Ramsey, of Heidelberg, Miss., sends us the following interesting note: "I have just closed a great meeting for Rev. W. E. Dickens, of the De Soto charge, which resulted in a revival in the Church and 6 accessions to its membership. Men who had not been speaking stood at the chancel and shook hands in the presence of the congregation, settling their differences."

We take the following from a letter received from Mr. R. H. Reeves, of Asheville, N. C., a brother of Col. E. C. Reeves, of Johnson City, Tenn.: "I like the sound of your bugle calling to arms the defenders of Southern Methodism. As regards 'the Johnson City Methodists,' we have more like them in Asheville, N. C., and I predict that two years hence you will have a greater following than now."

Rev. J. H. Feits, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, writes as follows: "Some good meetings are being held in the territory under my supervision. Brother J. A. Bowen is in great favor with the people in these parts. Some of our ministers are giving a good account of themselves. Caffey is doing especially good work. Pate, of the Waterford charge, has just closed a good meeting, doing his own preaching."

From Montpelier, Miss., Rev. W. L. Graves, the pastor, writes us as follows: "We have closed a meeting of unusual interest at Palestine, one of the appointments of this charge. Many were blessed, 16 have already united with the Church, and there are yet others to come. Several will join other Churches. The preaching in these services was done by Rev. O. L. Savage, of Webb, Miss. My people were delighted with his work."

We desire to express our high appreelation of the fine service which Rev. W. W. Perry, of Boyce, La., has rendered the Advocate this year. He has sent in 74 new subscriptions. The work of circulating the Conference organ among his people is one with which this faithful pastor has been concerning himself for several years. The truth is, he is one of the live wires of the Louisiana Conference along all the lines of Church activity.

We extract the following from a personal letter from Rev. J. L. Neill, of Jackson, Miss., written on August 9: "I have just reached home from a trip to Lake Junaluska, stopping over at the Mississippi A. & M. College on my way back. I had the privilege of preaching on the College Campus last Sunday at 11 o'clock a.m., and I filled the pulpit of our church in Starkville at the evening hour, being greeted by a splendid congregation. It was my first visit to that place, and I enjoyed it very much."

The Memphis Commercial Appeal, the South's greatest daily newspaper, published last Sunday Bishop Candler's masterful utterance concerning the proposed unification of American Methodism. Mr. C. P. J. Mooney, the editor of that distinguished journal, is easily one of the foremost leaders of thought and progress in the Southern States. In the great fight for civic reform that has lately been going on in Tennessee he has made his paper one of the most potent factors on the right side.

It is our purpose to reproduce Dr. Ivey's last reply to the Editor in the next issue of the Advocate, along with such comment as we think it calls for. As our answer to him was in two installments, we preferred to delay in making our response, so that in case he had anything additional to say we could try to get everything before us that we might deal with the whole matter at one time. We shall weary our readers in what we shall further have to say as little as we think the cause of justice will permit.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell is giving a good account of himself as presiding elder of the Durant District. The brethren speak in high terms of both his preaching and work of administration. In the excellent service which he is rendering he is keeping up the standard which two of his brothers had set before him in this capacity. The lamented Rev. Paine Mitchell adorned this office, and the Rev. J. H. Mitchell, now our pastor at Indianola, has left monuments of his efficiency in it in many places in the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. G. H. Thompson, the presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, writes: "Rev. M. L. Burton, our pastor at Richton, Miss., who is now at the Inge-Bondurant Sanitarium in Mobile, Ala., has been advised by his physicians to surrender his pastorate and go to the mountains for the remainder of this year. He will spend the time in Virginia. Rev. W. B. Alsworth, who has been serving the Biloxi Mission and Mississippi City, will succeed Brother Burton at Richton." It is with much sorrow that we have learned of Brother Burton's illness, and we sincerely hope that his sojourn in the mountains will result in the complete restoration of his health. Let the brethren remember this faithful and useful worker at the throne of grace.

Speak your mind candidly concerning the question of the union of the Methodisms of the United States, if you wish to do so, but remember that other brethren have the same right. When one's Church home is involved, and if certain developments take place one may have to find a shelter in some other fold, one should be accorded the right of a hearing. This issue has been largely discussed in the North, and why should it not be discussed in the South? Perfect frankness in dealing with men and measures is needed, but disputants should not suffer themselves to become angry. Let the light be turned on searchingly, and let everything that may be embraced in this movement be noted and duly considered. This is just, proper, and wise.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, says: "The work in this district is doing well. There have been several gracious revivals. The Caseyville Camp Meeting, conducted by Rev. D. E. Kelly, was a pronounced success. Robert Edward Simpson, Martin McCormick, and Clarence Norton will appear before the district licensing committee on August 22. These young men give promise of much usefulness. This makes six persons who have applied for license to preach within the last two months. Four of the six will attend college. We must help them. I know of eight young men who need assistance in their college courses. The future of Methodism will be assured if we can have a spiritual, educated ministry."

GALLOWAY MEMORIAL FUND FOR SUPERANNUATES, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Four years ago the Conference Endowment Board, aided by the Joint Board of Finance, commenced the collection of a fund to be known as the Galloway Memorial Fund for Superannuates. The Treasurer Rev. T. J. O'Neil reports the following as the result:

First Year	$ 131.68
Second Year	435.59
Third Year	718.84
Fourth Year	1147.56
	$2433.67

Of the 156 charges in the Conference not more than 23 of them have responded to the request any one year. West Jackson was the largest contributor, and Moss Point next.

SEVEN THOUSAND DOLLARS MORE ADDED TO THE $18,000 NOW AT INTEREST WOULD ENABLE THE CONFERENCE ENDOWMENT BOARD TO ASSIST THE JOINT BOARD OF FINANCE IN RETIRING TEN OF THE OLD PREACHERS ON $500 ANNUALLY. $1000 of the $7000 is already secured. If we do not get the $6000, it will be because only a few of the smaller charges ask for, while the larger charges make no effort to secure it.

The West Texas Conference has launched a campaign to raise a Conference endowment fund of $100,000, $20,000 of which has already been secured. Bishops E. D. Mouzon and J. H. McCoy are announced to represent the cause at Dallas early in the fall. Heed this call of the Endowment Board and we can properly care for at least ten of our old preachers.

Magnolia, Miss. N. B. HARMON.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Mrs. W. O. FRIDGE (nee Mary Harriet Offutt) was born on November 17, 1851, and died on July 11, 1916. She was married to Mr. W. O. Fridge on March 3, 1871, by the Rev. Ruffin T. Davis. Of this union were borne eight children—six boys and two girls, one of whom died when quite young. Her six sons were the pall-bearers. Sister Fridge joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1874 at Black Water Church, being received by the Rev. Newton Young. She was confined to her bed for several weeks, before the end came, but she bore her suffering with patience. She said that she was prepared to go when her time came. We laid her remains to rest in the Magnolia Cemetery on July 14, at 3 p. m., many relatives and friends being present. May the God of comfort be with the sorrowing ones during this dark hour!

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. SUSIE P. DUNNAM was born on June 23, 1856, at Deerpark, Ala., and she fell on sleep at her home fifteen miles west of Meridian, Miss., on April 15, 1916. She was married to T. J. Dunnam on February 12, 1874, and for years she walked happily with him the rugged way of life. The deceased is survived by her husband, five daughters, and two sons. She was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, and she loved the Church of her choice. Sister Dunnam loved her home, her husband and her children with that love that makes labor sweet. Loved ones, weep not as those who have no hope. Your loved one has just gone home to be with God. "That's all." Though death comes as a foe and deprives us of physical life, Christ comes as our friend and robs death of its sting and the grave of its victory, and offers us eternal life. Sister Dunnam's funeral was conducted by the writer, on Thursday, at 10 a. m., and the interment was made in the New Hope Cemetery, surrounded by many weeping and grief-stricken relatives and friends. She will be greatly missed. "Peace be to her ashes!"

For your spirit dwelleth there,
And with thoughts more high and holy,

COUNTRY CHURCH DAY.

"The Rural Church as a Community Builder" was the theme of discussion at the A. and M. College to-day, August 6, when several hundred people from the college, Starkville and the surrounding country met in the grove on the college campus (this being the first affair of this kind to be held here), to celebrate "country church day." Old time songs were sung, led by H. Will Nelson of the local Y. M. C. A., and immediately after the morning session dinner was served on the grounds by the ladies of Starkville and the campus. The object of the meeting was to devise a plan to co-ordinate the work of the country farm demonstration agents with that of the country church workers for community uplift.

Rev. J. L. Neal, of Laurel, who has made a comprehensive study of the rural problem in the south, addressed the morning session on "The Church and the Community," beginning with the statement that if Mississippi is to remain what has been termed "the Gem of the States" it will be because the people of her homes makes her so. As outlined by the speaker, a community is a compact of individuals for mutual welfare. The community is declared to be what the church makes it. The church's duty being to bring God in the homes, to give moral code, to give vision without which progress is impossible, and to give better equipped ministers for the instruction of the people.

The country preacher be continued should be a man who is well educated, equipped to preach to the largest city congregation or to the poorest country community. He should be a college bred man, interested in farm work, but a farm expert but having a knowledge of practical agricultural and an expert in the things of God. The duty of the men of the community is to build better churches, arrange better church grounds, consolidate neighboring churches of the same faith, support the institutions of the church and to propagate her faith.

He was opposed to the community church movements, by which it is proposed to consolidate churches of different denominations, saying that this plan was sure, sooner or later, to bring discord. The demonstration agents may assist in community uplift by working to create an interest in church activities, by living Christian lives and by taking a leading part in church and Sunday school work, he said.

The church, pastor and the demonstration agent must work together for the good of the community, he declared, and the failure of any one of these to do his part will mean the failure of the community effort.

He then quoted the great Mississippi statesman who said that the greatness of our country lies not in her walls, nor in her halls, nor in her master minds, but in just such homes as are found in her rural communities, where the people live with God in the homes.

With such material as we have, he said, Mississippi must build her country communities.

The afternoon session was opened with old-fashioned hymns, followed by an address by the Rev. Mr. Byrd, of Mount Olive, field secretary of the Baptist Sunday School Board of Mississippi, whose subject was "The Supreme Task of Life." He urged that the work of preparation to live a Christian life is much more important than the preparation for farming, banking, or any other profession in life.

The supreme task of life, he declared, is to serve God. He urged the equipping of country Sunday school rooms, saying that this form of schooling is much more important than the public or high school.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

For treating boils, cuts, bruises, skin abrasions, burns, sores, etc., it has no equal. It allays pain and prevents blood poison which is so often the result of small wounds being neglected. Sunday School

AN EXAMPLE IN ARITHMETIC WITH A LAMENTABLE ANSWER.

There are 20,000,000 "teen-agers" in America; there are 3,000,000 "teen-agers" enrolled in the Sunday schools; there are 2,250,000 "teen-agers" who leave the Sunday schools before maturity. This gives us 750,000 who stay in the Sunday school through tbe adolescent age, and 19,250,000 of this age are out in the world and out from under the influence of the Sunday school.

What does the Church derive from tho 750,000 which she holds in her schools? Answer: She draws, according to reliable data, 95 per cent of her preachers, 85 per cent of her church converts, 95 per cent of her church workers, 75 per cent of the churches organized. On a 10 per cent investment the church declares a 90 per cent dividend.

Why are the 19,250,000 outsiders not in our schools? is a question that the churches will have to answer, and in some cases this will be hard to do to the satisfaction of the Master, and I fear that with shame in many cases we will have to hang our heads and say that we did not go after them with the proper spirit, nor did we stay with them as we should when we got them in many instances.

Of course the whole Church of Jesus Christ is responsible for a large part of the aggregate, and if this is so the M. E. Church, South, is responsible for her part, and if this is true Louisiana Methodism is responsible for her percentage of these non-attendants, and if this is true, each district is responsible for its part, and if this is true our individual Church is responsible for her part, and if this is true each individual member of our individual church is responsible in some way for her share of negligence which in a large degree produces this lamentable state of affairs.

The following goals were set for each district in this Conference to be reached and passed if possible by the time the Annual Conference convenes this November in Baton Rouge:

	New W.B.C.'s	T.T.C.'s	H.D.'s	New Schools.	For New Schol-ars.	Missions
Alexandria Dist.	15	15	15	7	600	$450
Baton Rouge Dist.	16	16	16	8	640	480
Lafayette Dist.	13	13	13	6	520	390
Monroe Dist.	11	11	11	5	440	330
New Orleans Dist.	11	11	11	5	440	330
Ruston Dist.	17	17	17	10	680	510
Shreveport Dist.	17	17	17	10	680	510

The Shreveport District has already passed the goal in new members enrolled, as 782 were reported at the District Conference.

If each departmental superintendent for each district will take from this table his required amount of increase for his district and go to work to double it we can easily pass the goal.

New Orleans has more than doubled her goal for Missions as a special, as $780 had been pledged at their District Conference, which was tbe first district conference held this year.

Remember the standard of efficiency will require a C. R. H. D. and a Children's day in every church on every charge.

Let the active chairman, together with the presiding elder, the pastors of his district, and the district secretary push the organizing of new schools.

WORK AMONG THE LEPERS.

The other day I preached at the leper colony and baptized a young man, writes Rev. S. M. Erickson, a Southern Presbyterian missionary in Takamatsu, Japan. He had been in the hospital for about a year. This work among the lepers is encouraging, but it is sad to see one's Christians disappearing, a piece at a time. Some fellow is short an eye or an arm or a limb nearly every time we go there. One has to be prepared for all kinds of surprises also. Last time while I was preaching to the Christian lepers the non-Christians carried a coffin containing the corpse of a man who had just died into the hall where my meeting was being held. The meeting went right on. Last year sixty-nine people were baptized in connection with the work in this province. Since my last report I have baptized several.

GOD'S WORD.

The more you know of God's Word, the more you can know God's Word; and the more you are living by God's Word the better you can understand God's Word. But if you keep it at arm's length, and dally with it, and play around it, then years may pass without your having progressed one whit.—John A. Broadus.

Your Greatest Problem—That Boy Of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, bis associations his ideals, bis inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects in the men to whom it entrusts its greatest affairs, be they business, professional, religious or social.

Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. He is a graduate of Webb School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., and the Vanderbilt University.

The boy deserves your most careful thought. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Fayetteville, Tennessee. today, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

Every Cold Should Be Considered Serious

So say the best medical authorities. Unless promptly checked, often they lead to chronic bronchial and pulmonary troubles which may prove fatal.

If your cough or cold has not responded to treatment—and remember, medicine should not be solely relied on—timely use of Eckman's Alterative may give you relief.

For more than twenty years it has been benefiting sufferers from these disorders. It is especially indicated where the system demands lime, for it contains calcium chlorid so combined as to be easily assimilated by the average person.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER MANGUM.

The reason I have not looked after renewals of the Advocate sooner has been due to illness in my home all the summer and part of the spring. Our twin boys were taken sick in May and were sick until July. One of them died on the morning of July 5. My wife and I both had typhoid fever. I am just getting over the fever. My charge and my good presiding elder have given me the month of August in which to rest, but I have so much to do that I think I will return to my work two weeks sooner. My charge is doing nicely in spite of my necessary neglect of it. I had planned in the early part of the year for my meetings, etc., to, with the assistance of my presiding elder, the work has been moving on. Brother and Sister Bowman and our many other good friends have taken the best possible care of us during our illness. When we left the sanitarium we were not taken into the district parsonage until we were able to make the trip home. We are now on our vacation. In our great grief and sorrow the Lord has proven His great love and care for us, for which we feel very grateful. I will give you an account of our work later. Only one meeting has been held.

Dr. John R. Stewart, Secretary of the Superannuate Endowment Fund of our Church, suggests that the Annual Conferences take up the work of raising Conference endowment funds for superannuates. This can be done without conflict, but, on the contrary, in close co-operation with the plan of a great connectional endowment fund. As Dr. Stewart states, some legislation by the next General Conference will be needed to work out a plan of co-operation; but the Annual Conferences can make their plans to take up the work even before the next General Conference session.

Mr. J. J. Gray, Jr., of Rockdale, Tenn., who some time ago made a gift of $25,000 to Emory University, has made another $25,000 contribution to the university. With the $50,000 contributed by this generous layman of the Tennessee Conference the Board of Trustees of Emory University will erect an out-patient building for the clinical work of the School of Medicine. It will be called the "J. J. Gray Clinic." Affiliated with the School of Medicine will be a new memorial hospital, to be erected at an early date. There will be additional buildings for the Medical Department. When all these buildings shall have been completed, the medical plant of the university will be worth $875,000, including its endowment of $275,000.

On August 10 six young ladies under appointment of the Board of Missions for service in China and Japan sailed from Vancouver, British Columbia, on the Empress of Russia for their fields in the Far East. Five are missionaries returning from furloughs: Miss Ella Sue Wagner, Big Stone Gap, Va.; Miss Bertha Smith, Marshall, Mo.; Miss Bertha Tucker, Crawfordsville, Ga.; Miss Alice Dean Noyes, Macon, Ga.; Miss Annie Bradshaw, Lynch, Va. Miss Mary A. Blackford, who was consecrated at the last meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council, goes to China to take up her work there. Accompanying these young ladies will be Miss Belle H. Bennett, President of the Woman's Missionary Council, and Miss Mabel Head, Secretary of the Foreign Department (woman's work) of the Board of Missions. Miss Bennett and Miss Head will spend some months visiting our mission fields in the East.

TYLERTOWN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Just a few words from the Tylertown charge, to report our China Grove meeting, and a few other happenings. The rain greatly interfered with our services, but, notwithstanding the downpour every day, we did not miss a service, and a fair congregation greeted us each day. We had a large crowd the two Sundays, beginning on the third Sunday in July and closing the following Sunday. The preaching was done by Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, one of our Conference evangelists. The strong gospel sermons preached by him will not soon be forgotten and the good they did will tell for time and eternity. Brother Norsworthy's preaching appeals especially to the intelligent thinker, and you often hear the remark, "He is a great preacher." To our pastors who want a real revival and are willing to stand by the helper, I heartily commend Brother Norsworthy. He really helps the pastor and leaves him and his people closer together, instead of coming in between them, as is sometimes the case with an evangelist. One of my stewards, Brother J. W. Caraway, who runs a sawmill near China Grove Church, and who has the best interests of his laborers at heart, made arrangements for us to hold night services at the mill, where Brother Norsworthy preached till Wednesday night. Much good was done by these services. We received 7 members into the China Grove Church. We shall not hold our meeting at Tylertown till fall, when we hope to be able to secure the services of Brother Norsworthy.

The writer had the great pleasure of spending the fifth Sunday at Knoxo with Brother W. H. Saunders, the wide-awake and energetic pastor of the Fernwood charge. It was the occasion of the dedication of the nice and commodious church there, which is the second of the kind built by him in the charge. He was fortunate in securing the services of our own Bishop Murrah to dedicate the church and to preach a strong and uplifting sermon to his people. We also were fortunate and greatly pleased to have him preach for us at Tylertown that night, as so many said, a really great sermon. Not only is Bishop Murrah a great preacher, but his honored presence and influence are a benediction in the home. Brother Saunders began his meeting at Knoxo with the dedication of the church, and was ably assisted by that sweet-spirited and strong gospel preacher, Rev. J. L. Sells, of our Conference. It was our privilege and pleasure to hear him twice. Brother Saunders will give an account of the meeting. We are still planning for a new church building here at Tylertown, and hope to be worshiping in it before this time next year.

But for fear this letter is already too lengthy for a busy editor and the space that should be given to the great and important issue of "Church Union," I close by giving you my hand in congratulation on the stand you have taken, and shall say that with Hoss, Candler, Steel, and Meek in the gap, we may "arise and follow our guides and fear no danger."

I promise to send in a list of renewals to the Advocate soon.

Aug. 8, 1916. T. B. COTTRELL.

SOME GOOD REVIVALS.

Dear Dr. Meek: May I have space in your paper to tell a little about our meetings? We began holding services here at Porterville on the second Sunday in July. Rev. A. J. Davis did the preaching and did it well. We did not have any accesions to the church, but I never have seen a meeting where the Christian people were as burdened as they were here. They seemed broken up at every service. We know the meeting did good; grown men took a definite stand for Christ, and we are expecting some accessions from the meeting. At least five people were converted and everybody was strengthened; men and women are praying in public and testifying who had never been known to do the like before.

On the fifth Sunday in July we held a meeting at Chapel Hill, near here. Here we had a real revival. Men and women, and boys and girls took a definite stand for Christ. We saw old men broken up during that meeting and moving out who had not been accustomed to taking any part in services. Since the meeting the people have started a prayer meeting, something never known in that community before, as I understand, and I know of no one who would lead in public prayer before.

On the first Sunday in August we went to another church, Union, and started a meeting. It was good. We had men and women moved upon that I never had seen touched before. Our help in these last two named meetings was a man who believes in the old-time altar services and who preached to the people most effectively. On Tuesday of the meeting we had a young people's service, and at the close we witnessed a remarkable scene. Everybody, except three or four, in the house knelt at the altar and as close as they could get there, and the power of God was wonderfully present. I received one person into the Church. My brother, Rev. Leland Clegg, did the preaching at Chapel Hill and at Union. The general state of the charge is much better than it was. The finances are a little ahead of last year at this time. Pray for us. R. H. CLEGG, P. C.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT NOTES.

Rev. J. T. McVey, of the Harriston Circuit, has organized a church at Tillman with 31 members, many of whom were received on profession of faith. A building committee has been appointed, and the prospects are bright for the building of a house of worship. One new church has already been constructed under McVey's administration, and will soon be ready for dedication.

Rev. J. E. Williams, of the Gloster charge, will finish a new church before the meeting of the Annual Conference.

The Methodists of Roxie are getting ready to tear down the old church building, and build another in a more desirable part of the town.

Rev. C. H. Strait, of the Rocky Springs Circuit, has added 65 new members recently. He was assisted in some meetings by the Revs. Smith and Massey, two local preachers.

Rev. C. H. Herring, of the Woodville Circuit, has employed Rev. W. E. McGahagin, a local preacher, to assist him in four or five protracted meetings, and they are swinging around the circuit. The presiding elder dropped in upon one of the meetings, and preached several days.

The district parsonage at Gloster has been insured, and as additional funds are received the insurance will be extended.

This scribe is neither rejoicing nor worrying over the unification of Methodism. A hunter should not sell the hide before he kills the bear. Plenty of time to vote after we see the ticket, or the bill of specifications. For the present we will watch and wait.

"You are wrong, and we are right,
Come to us, and we'll unite,"

will not be apropos.

HOPEWELL CHURCH, TREMONT (MISS.) CHARGE.

Dear Brother Meek: We are delighted with the prospect for spiritual development, not only in this community, but throughout the whole Tremont charge. There are five churches on the work. Our pastor, Rev. L. H. Floyd, is young in the ministry but strong in the faith. He is a loyal, conscientious, prayerful worker for his people and Master. His people love him and admire his Christian character. They realize that he is deeply interested in their spiritual welfare. We have just had a very enjoyable revival at Hopewell, beginning July 23 and ending July 31. The pastor's father, Rev. D. M. Floyd, of Memphis, assisted in the meeting. He is an able man and fought sin with his whole soul and body. The preaching was plain and to the point, so that a wayfaring man could not fail to understand. The revival was not of the type that scares large numbers into confession who usually backslide before the preacher gets out of the county. Our services were the kind that leads a person to hate sin because of its hideousness and to love righteousness because of love for the Master. There were 7 accessions to the Church—five by confession, and two by letter. The church seems to be in fine order. The whole membership have expressed themselves as intending to stand by the church and their pastor. We expect greater things in our church as time rolls on. We are thankful for the zealous man we have for a leader. We wish to express our appreciation to Rev. D. M. Floyd for his services while among us.

Respectfully,
W. R. CROUCH.

UNION MEETING OF W. M. S. AT PETAL, MISS.

Mrs. McGilvray, Superintendent of Study and Publicity of the Petal auxiliary, writes of a very interesting union missionary meeting recently held in their church. She says: Our union is composed of three Methodist societies of Hattiesburg—Main Street, Court Street, and Broad Street—and our two societies, the adult and young people's, at Petal. These union meetings are held every fifth Monday, the union being entertained each time by one of the societies composing it. When the meeting is held in Petal the ladies of the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches are always invited. At this last meeting, on July 31, the ladies of the Batson Methodist church, which is about seven miles out in the country from Hattiesburg, were also present. Nearly two hundred women gathered in the Petal church, and Mrs. W. C. Hearst, President of the local auxiliary, presided over the meeting. A well prepared program was rendered and the following subjects were ably discussed: "Religious Education in the Churches," "Co-operation in the Churches," "Our Opportunity of Revealing Christ," and "The Pastor as a Community Builder."

No account of a meeting in Petal would be complete without some mention of its Y. P. M. S., which is under the leadership of that splendid, consecrated young woman, Miss Millie D. Hearst. The young people added much to the enjoyment of the afternoon by their sweet, touching rendition of that beautiful song, "Nobody Told Me of Jesus."

The social hour was made pleasanter because these same young people served a delicious ice course. Altogether, it was an occasion long to be remembered, for the hospitality and Christian fellowship of this auxiliary bears the stamp of genuineness.

MISSION STUDY—WHERE?

Arthur C. Tippens.

I wonder if, with mission study taken for granted as an essential part of the work in woman's missionary societies and young people's societies, there is with all of us a tendency to overlook some most promising fields for mission study open in other organizations of the Church.

1. For instance, there are the Sunday school with its various departments and classes, groups organized, and ready for the mission study teacher. Why might not a Sunday school teacher take up for one quarter, instead of the regular Sunday school lessons, one of the fascinating mission study courses offered this year?

It would mean deepened spiritual life and a broader outlook for the class. The adult classes, the intermediate classes—even the junior classes—would find mission study wonderfully interesting and attractive. Personally, I have just for one quarter used with a class of intermediate boys Dr. Pell's graded course, "Heroes of Faith in China," with splendid results.

2. The Prayer Meeting. The pastor looking for something to increase the attendance at prayer meeting and to carry out a series of programs that will stimulate study, show God's wonder-working power in the world, and with a continuity of thought, will find some of the short courses in mission study just what he needs. A number of books have been prepared with this purpose especially in mind and have been widely used in prayer meeting groups. Among the books used in former years are "Doherty's Two Books," "The Call of the World" and "Efficiency Points," and Dr. Shailer Mathews' book, "The Individual and the Social Gospel." For this year there is a most attractive book by Mr. Robert E. Speer on "The Unity of the Americas," carrying out the mission study theme for this year—"The Two Americas." In the press notices the book is described as a "text-chapter book discussing relations in commerce, education and religion between the two Americas. Do not miss the opportunity for a mission study class in your prayer meeting.

3. With groups of men, the board of stewards, the church missionary committee, or any group of men that can be gotten together for a few weeks, there is an opportunity for reaching with the missionary ideal the heart and life of the Church in a way not offered by any other group or organization. In past years "The Call of the World" has been perhaps the most popular book with these groups, with "Efficiency Points" a close second. This year Mr. Speer's book, "The Unity of the Americas," is recommended for a short course, or if an eight weeks' course is desired, the book by Bishop Stuntz, "South American Neighbors," or the one by Dr. John M. Moore, "The South To-day," should be used.

Any Group.

After all, the problem of mission study is not that of the group. No matter where we turn we find a group of some sort. The Missionary Committee, the Board of Stewards, the Epworth League, the Sunday school, the Woman's Missionary Society, the prayer meeting, or any group of people drawn together by a common religious interest is your opportunity. A gentleman once organized a Travel Club out of a band of street urchins, using "Uganda's White Man of Work" as the basis of his work, and such enthusiasm was aroused that by special request of the boys the club was continued with another book when "Uganda's White Man of Work" was completed. The same experience has come in all sorts of groups and will come as long as there are consecrated men and women, boys and girls who are willing to undertake a hard thing for the Kingdom in the leadership of a mission study group, and as long as there are hearts that thrill to the appeal of the heroic and are open to the call of human need.

Mission Study—where? Anywhere, provided there is one willing to teach and others willing to learn.

A TRIBUTE TO MRS. YEAGER.

We note in a recent issue of the Times-Picayune the death of Mrs. A. C. Yeager, who passed into the Great Beyond Tuesday, August 8. It is with genuine sorrow we learn of the passing away of this good woman. At one time she was quite prominent in the missionary work of North Mississippi, editing their Conference Bulletin when our work in this paper was first inaugurated. Much of the success of our first year was due to her prayers and unfailing interest. She seemed to feel deeply the responsibility resting upon her, and never failed us a single week during the entire year, and it was with regret that we saw her give up her work on account of removal from the Conference.

She possessed a rare degree of sympathy, and no sweeter memory comes to us than that of our arrival in this our first itinerant home. As we stepped into the parsonage, almost the first [illegible] greet the eyes was a letter [illegible] familiar handwriting. It was [illegible] home, their welcome to the new [illegible] the sweetest advice, and [illegible] of sunshine and her faith ours. [illegible] an incentive to [illegible] a better, truer life. Only a woman [illegible] with the Holy Spirit could have [illegible] and the inspiration to others that she [illegible] will. Those who knew her more intimately could tell of greater, nobler deeds, but we feelingly pay this little tribute to her, knowing that through her beautiful life a blessing came into [illegible] We extend our sympathy to the loved ones who are left behind, and point them to the Father, who was ever the Guide and Counselor of her who has gone home to dwell with him forever more.

From the Field

Smithville, Miss.

We have just closed a good meeting at Asbury, one of the appointments of the Tremont charge. My father, Rev. I. C. Floyd, did the preaching, which was logical, wholesome and evangelical. Both the singing and preaching were of a high order, and brought good results. There were 2 accessions to the Church: one of them was Brother Ingers' little girl, and the other my son, for which I am so thankful. About 60 persons pledged themselves to live a better life. We were greatly helped by my father's preaching. It was with great fervor and power.—L. H. Floyd, P. C.

Seventh Avenue, Meridian.

Dear Dr. Meek: Sunday was a great day with us at Seventh Avenue Church. Four precious souls ploughed their way through to victory, and as they arose from the mercy-seat, where Jesus answers prayer, it was good to see and hear them rejoice over the fact that Jesus had kissed away all of their sins, and had given them beauty for ashes. And we had three accessions to the Church. Our congregations are steadily increasing at each service. I have a good people to serve. God bless the Advocate, and the faithful, wide-awake Editor.—Hillary Westbrook.

NEW CHURCH TO BE DEDICATED.

Dear Advocate: Please announce that we will dedicate the new church at Pleasant Valley, one of the appointments of the Guntown and Baldwyn charge (Corinth District), on the third Sunday in this month, August 20. Rev. Thomas H. Dorsey will preach the sermon and dedicate the church. All former pastors are invited to be present at the dedication. My third quarterly conference will be held on Monday, and the presiding elder will remain for our meeting. With best wishes for our splendid paper,

I am yours fraternally,
W. C. CARLISLE.

MISSIONARIES PIONEERS OF COMMERCE.

In 1913 the San Francisco Associated Chamber of Commerce sent a representative party of merchants to China to promote friendship between China and America, and to increase and develop commercial relations. Seeing that the missionaries were the pioneers of commerce in China, the commissioners were unintentionally drawn into the consideration of that subject, which at the start was considered entirely outside their province. At first they were divided in their opinions—about one-third in favor, one-third against, and one-third undecided. But at the last meeting held in Hongkong the question was put squarely to the twenty-five commissioners, and a unanimous vote recorded in favor of missions. In the opinion of the commission, if the missionaries had not pioneered the way, the commerce of China would be very small indeed, and it certainly would not be safe for foreigners to go into the interior.

KITCHENER'S WORK.

Kitchener will be remembered for four great constructive works of organization, carried out in Egypt, South Africa, India, and England. In each case his work was creative and revolutionary in conception, and carried out with the utmost precision in every least detail. No man touched the world-extended British empire at more points, or touched it with such decisive, fateful effect. It may be said, indeed, that the integrity of the empire, in the twentieth century, is the work of Kitchener. Four dangers arose, in regions separated by vast continental spaces; in each region, Kitchener met the danger, piercingly diagnosed the cause, and patiently and courageously overcame it. Every honor within the power of his countrymen to give him was offered to Kitchener; yet all honors fall short of his immense attainment.—From "Kitchener of Khartoum," by Charles Johnston, in the American Review of Reviews for July, 1916.

ENGLISH MISSIONS CALLING FOR MEN.

The Anglican missions in India are suffering severely from the war, not so much in money as in men. The Rev. W. E. S. Holland, principal of St. Paul's Cathedral Mission College at Calcutta, writes to a friend in this country that two of the men on his staff have been killed, and two or three others who were to have come out have enlisted. He makes an appeal for two first-class young Americans. They should be unmarried, with university qualifications, and ready to fit into a self-forgetting brotherhood of service. An ample salary will be paid, free quarters supplied, and travel expenses met on a five-year agreement.

Iron the Greatest of All Strength Builders," Says Doctor

A Secret of the Great Endurance and Power of Athletes

Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Make Delicate, Nervous Rundown People 200 Per Cent. Stronger in Two Week's Time in Many Cases.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Most people foolishly seem to think they are going to get renewed health and strength from some stimulating medicine, secret nostrum or narcotic drug, said Dr. Sauer, a well known specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, when, as a matter of fact, real and true strength can only come from the food you eat. But people often fail to get the strength out of their food because they haven't enough iron in their blood to enable it to change food into living matter. From their weakened, nervous condition they know something is wrong, but they can't tell what, so they generally commence doctoring for stomach, liver or kidney trouble or symptoms of some other ailment caused by the lack of iron in the blood. This thing may go on for years, while the patient suffers untold agony. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, rundown people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tinctures of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray while many another has gone down into inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sauer is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents is widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy, in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The Manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.

GRENADA COLLEGE NOTES.

The campaign for funds for Grenada College has resulted in securing about $30,000 in cash and subscriptions to date. Only a few days ago a good woman pledged $1000 on the annuity plan, to be paid when collections for the year are made. Commissioner Jacobi has recently given a good part of his time to canvassing for students. Even with two of us in the field it is impossible in the 15 weeks of vacation to reach all of the 160 pastoral charges, to say nothing of reaching the more than 900 individual congregations. We are doing our best and trusting the faithful pastors to recommend the school to their people.

Several thousand dollars are being expended in improving the buildings and equipment this summer. A new roof has been put on the main building, while every room in the entire premises is being painted, papered, and screened with best galvanized wire net. During last session a heating plant was installed in senior hall, giving hot water heat in all three dormitories. The rooms in this building are doubtless the most beautiful and commodious to be found in any school in the South. We now have room for 25 more boarders than at this time last year.

A teacher for science has been added to the faculty, and the laboratory equipment demanded by the Classification Committee is to be in place at the opening of the session. The preparatory department has been separated from the college and necessary additions made to that faculty. The department of education has been added with a nine-hour course intended to fit teachers for their work and to comply with the laws of Mississippi granting exemption to graduates of four-year colleges having this course and meeting other conditions. The State Board of Examiners have not as yet made up their final schedule of regulations under this law, but Grenada College has for several years past measured up to all the "tentative regulations" submitted by the said Board to the various schools of the State for suggestion and amendment. We confidently expect our qualifications to be recognized at the proper time, along with such other schools as may be found ready.

The management of the College is endeavoring to meet all reasonable demands made upon it. The literary course is divided into seven departments and is taught by seven thoroughly prepared teachers. The music department is in the hands of four experts, two of whom have had foreign training under the old world masters. In art, expression, and domestic economy, as well as in piano and voice, diplomas are awarded on completion of the given course together with two years of college work, thus giving diplomas to those students who are not able to complete the four-year college course. The cost is found by comparison to be less than in any other Church or private college for girls in the State, and the cost for music and other extras is less than in any State institution. Let no North Mississippi Methodist fail to investigate Grenada College fully before patronizing another school. A post card will bring a catalog. Fraternally,

Grenada, Miss. J. R. COUNTISS.

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Having read everything that I have seen on both sides of the Union question and having thereby trying to keep up with the matter, I have been impressed by some few things that have come under my observation. I have noticed that the pro-unionist have been inclined to claim that as the Church has spoken concerning the matter, those who are opposed to it should keep quiet and say nothing concerning the matter.

Has the Church really spoken concerning the matter? If we regard the General Conference as the Church, it has; but if not, it has not. I am inclined to think that the Church has not spoken. How many of those who were delegates to the last General Conference let it be known that they were in favor of union before they were elected delegates? I do not expect that there were very many. I think there is too much inclination on the part of a great many to take things for granted. The fact that a man has been elected a delegate to the General Conference is not proof that the membership of the Church in his Conference is represented by him at all. His opinions and acts may often be far from the wishes of the Church at large in his territory.

Then, why should they be afraid of the most thorough discussion of the matter, if they are so sure the Church is so anxious for union? It looks as if there might be some fear on their part that the Church at large would not indorse the course that is being pursued in this matter. I do not think we should have any "star chamber" methods in a thing that so vitally concerns the welfare of the Church of God as this does.

If Union is so much to be desired, let us have the most thorough discussion of it, giving the reasons why it so much to be desired, so us doubting Thomases may be brought into the light. I think those who are opposed to union are open to conviction; but not by the method of abuse. The plea that "we are brethren" is all right if it holds good on both sides of the question; but as long as it is invoked in behalf of those who are in favor of union alone, while the most unbrotherly and unkind things are said about those who are opposed to union, it is not worth while. So, let us have the most thorough discussion of the matter from both sides.

Editorial

"Only a seed, but it chanced to fall
In a little cleft of a city wall,
And, taking root, grew bravely up,
Till a tiny blossom crowned its top.
Only a thought, but the work it wrought
Could never by tongue or pen be taught,
For it ran through a life like a thread of gold,
And the life bore fruit a hundredfold."

We were riding on a street car a few days since with a young official of a certain Methodist Church, and in the course of our conversation, to our astonishment, he asked us if our Church had not come to recognize the value of dancing. Never perhaps was there a time when there was more need to acquaint our people with the history, the polity, and the teachings of our Church than now. Let us have a vigorous and widespread revival of this form of instruction.

It is as a regenerating, rather than a reformatory, force that the Christian Church wields the mightiest influence. Reformation has to do with the surface of things, while regeneration touches their inmost and deepest centers. The Church alone promises to make of a weak and fallen man "a new creature," and this she can do only as the power of the Holy Spirit operates through her. Take this power away, and whatever else the Church may possess, she has been stripped of her distinctive glory. The spiritual equipment of any congregation overtops all else in importance.

The dreadful epidemic of infantile paralysis now prevailing in New York City serves to illustrate anew how little man knows. The Nation's greatest physicians are standing perplexed and baffled as to the cause and means of propagation of this terrible disease. What humanity knows compared with what it does not know is as a grain of sand in the vast, encircling desert, or as a glass of water scooped up out of the widely extended ocean. The amazing thing to us is that the human race should have ever developed an egotist.

Charity is a noble virtue, but it loses its nobility when an attempt is made to exercise it at the expense of truth and justice. God's love is never permitted to interfere with his righteousness. If such were the case, he would be a weak and imperfect being. It is well enough to spread the mantle of charity over the wrong-doing of others if it can be done without injury to any person or cause; but to make statements in extenuation of what one has done in a manner to misrepresent the facts and mislead the public is highly reprehensible. Few things are more despicable than untruthfulness masquerading in the guise of brotherly love.

EVER UPWARD.

Is there not too much arrested growth in the Church in this day? We fear so. The physical body of man soon reaches its maximum of development, but the Christian soul should never stop expanding. Well worth meditating upon are the memorable words of St. Paul, perhaps the foremost Christian of all time: "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do—forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth to those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." So, no disciple of Jesus should be satisfied with a stationary experience in spiritual things. Rather should he be able to say with the poet:

"I'm going by the upper road,
For that still holds the sun;
I'm climbing thro' night's pastures,
Where starry rivers run;
If you should think to seek me
In my old, dark abode,
You'll find this writing on the door—
'He's on the upper road.'"

WAS HE SUCH?

Zion's Herald, in a recent issue, in calling attention to the anniversary of the birth of Bishop Matthew Simpson, claims for him the distinction of having been "Methodism's foremost preacher." That he was a master in the pulpit and that some of the sermons that he has left behind are worthy of enthusiastic praise, there can be no question. We have read and re-read his great discourse on "The Resurrection of Christ," and as a piece of sermonic literature we give it rank with the best productions of the kind that it has been our privilege to see. But was he the greatest orator that American Methodism has produced? We should not like to pass upon this question, since there have been in the several branches of Methodism in the United States many men of commanding pulpit eloquence, who lived at different times, and concerning whose gifts of utterance there is no proper basis of comparison. The personality of a minister has so much to do with the effectiveness of his preaching that it would not at all do to judge of the relative merits of clergymen in this respect by an examination of the printed sermons which survive them.

The late Major Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss., who was educated at old Asbury College (now Depauw University), in Indiana, heard Bishop Simpson preach during his student days and frequently referred to his brilliant and stirring messages. We remember, on one occasion, to have asked him how he thought Bishop Simpson as an orator compared with Bishop Galloway, and he promptly replied that he considered the latter the more eloquent of the two. And we have known few men whose judgment concerning such a matter we would accept with so little reservation as we would that of Major Millsaps, who had a clear, discriminating mind and who possessed excellent taste.

The truth is, Bishop Galloway was an orator among orators. He had an inspiring presence, a fascinating, flashing eye, a magnificent voice, an imperial imagination, a soul that thrilled with passion, grace of gesture, and splendid dramatic action. We have often thought that if he had belonged to a Church that was congregational in government and had been called to some prominent pulpit in New York, his fame as a preacher would perhaps have rivaled that of Beecher, Brooks, and Spurgeon. At any rate, he was a pulpit star of the first magnitude, and is worthy of a place in any galaxy of the mighty masters of persuasive speech that the Wesleyan movement has given to the world.

POSTPONEMENT OF FALL OPENING OF EMORY UNIVERSITY.

The opening of the fall term of "The Lamar School of Law" and "The Candler School of Theology" of Emory University has been postponed from September 14 to September 27. This postponement is made on account of the delay in finishing the new buildings, the continued and excessive rains having made work difficult and having also hindered the railways in delivering material on time. The work is now so far advanced on the new buildings that it is certain they will be ready for occupancy by September 27.

Atlanta, Ga. WARREN A. CANDLER.

DID IT PAY?

A woman died the other day who had lived in the world above fourscore years. She was reputed to be worth over $100,000,000 at the time of her death. She had no permanent residence. Most of her time was spent in New York and New Jersey, but she paid taxes in neither State—her name was not on the tax-lists of either. She claimed that her residence was in Vermont, where she did own some property upon which she paid taxes amounting to some $2000. But it is said that she did not reside in her own house on the occasion of her annual visits to the neighborhood.

But her will, in which the bulk of the estate is bequeathed to her son and daughter, has been probated in Vermont. In that State no inheritance tax is levied. The logic of the facts points quite plainly to the inference that the foresight and extraordinary skill which this woman showed in making investments and conserving her wealth were also successfully employed in the art and all too common practice of tax-dodging. With her living hand she kept the tax-gatherers off her income, but a leading journal raises the question whether her dead hand will prevent the States of New York and New Jersey from collecting the vast inheritance tax to which one or the other is entitled under the law.

Another question is the old, old question, Did it pay to live as she lived and do what she did for all her millions?—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Mississippi Conference Sunday School Work

The various articles grouped under this head in this week's issue of the Advocate were collected or prepared by Rev. J. L. Neill, of Jackson, Miss., Sunday School Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference.—Ed. N. O. Advocate.

THE DISTRICT ORGANIZATION.

H. F. Tolle,

Chairman Mississippi Conference S. S. Board.

A man said to me the other day, "The Methodist Church is the most perfect organization on earth." He had just asked me regarding a certain Sunday school man and his connection with the Tennessee Conference. Turning to my last "Hand Book," I was able to give him the information he desired.

With an organized class, organized school, organized district, organized Conference, and all heading up in a General Board, we are able to keep in pretty close touch with every school, and, if our organization were perfect, with every scholar. We cannot afford to leave out as important a part of our machinery as the Organized District. Through this organization, the workers of the Sunday schools of the district are brought together in District Institutes. Here these workers, under the influence of experts, often receive the first real vision of the work they love. With this vision, a desire for better methods, better equipment, better preparation takes possession of them; and not only a desire, but the possibility of satisfying that desire. By comparison and encouragement the standard will be raised, missionary programs introduced, Children's Day observed, Orphanage collections taken, Bible and teacher-training classes organized—in fact, the whole tone and influence of the Sunday school lifted and strengthened. At these Institutes promising workers will be discovered and developed; drones, knockers, and failures will either be reconstructed or removed; more and better literature will often be introduced; each school will be made to feel it is a part of a great organization and Church. At an institute we get "Vision, Vigor, Victory."

These are some of the reasons for the Conference Board being back of the District Organizations and Institutes.

THE SUPERINTENDENT AND THE DISTRICT INSTITUTES.

Hon. V. H. Howie,

Jackson District S. S. Secretary.

The Superintendent should attend the District Sunday School Institute for the following reasons:

1. To get acquainted with his co-workers and swap ideas with them.
2. To increase his interest and intensify his enthusiasm for the work.
3. To learn what others are doing and profit by their mistakes and successes.
4. To broaden his view.
5. To get knowledge and inspiration that will help build up his school and increase its interest.

PRESIDING ELDERS' VIEWS.

A Word of Exhortation.

Rev. W. L. Linfield,

Presiding Elder of the Newton District.

I trust that a large number of our pastors and Sunday school workers will make it convenient to attend the District Sunday School Institute. It is the purpose of the Sunday School Board to furnish such information and instruction at these gatherings as will improve the quality of the work done in the schools. If the excuse so often heard, "I am not capable of teaching a class, or taking charge of a work, or the highest appreciation of educational needs, or a due sense of insufficiency is the first necessity to usefulness, surely this is the opportunity to make preparation for more effective service. Let us come to these institutes to learn and return to our places ready for that better service.

Of Great Importance.

Dear Brethren: There is a greater interest and enthusiasm in the Sunday school work of the Church to-day, such as perhaps have never existed before. The Church has come to recognize the Sunday school as furnishing a great opportunity for service and religious training. The demand for trained and efficient leaders has never been what it is now. Institutes and Conventions are held that information may be had, and that leaders may be helped to a better efficiency for this great work.

The institute for our district will be held at Wiggins, August 27 and 28. I hope to see workers there from every part of the field and from every Sunday school in the district. Let those who cannot be present Sunday, come Monday. Let's lead the Conference in attendance.

Sincerely,

Gulfport, Miss. J. R. JONES.

THE STANDARD OF EFFICIENCY.

The General Sunday School Board has adopted the following Standard of Efficiency for our Sunday schools: —

1. Cradle Roll.
2. Home Department.
3. Wesley Bible Classes.
4. Teacher-training Class or Students.
5. Our Church Helps, Graded or Uniform, with Graded Organization.
6. Missionary Instruction, with Offering.
7. Temperance Instruction.
8. Definite Decision for Christ Urged.
9. Annual Observance of Children's Day, with Offering as Required by Our Discipline.
10. Workers' Council Regularly Held and Session of School Every Sunday.

It shall be the duty of the Superintendent to see that the Sunday school is organized according to the Standard of Efficiency established by the General Sunday School Board. (Discipline, Par. 263.)

There seems to be a STANDARD for everything under the sun. Even those who claim they are unable to attain the STANDARD OF EFFICIENCY may become 'STANDARD FAILURES.'—J. M. Way.

MAKING FOR EFFICIENCY.

A. L. Dietrich,

Divisional Secretary, Gulf Division.

The year 1915 registered an increase of 122,000 in the Sunday school enrollment of the Southern Methodist Church, and this on top of another large increase the year before. Of course, this great influx of members calls for an increased number of teachers and officers.

At the same time that this filling up of our ranks was taking place, the qualifying standards in all departments of Sunday school work were raised, so that the task imposed on (or rather assumed by) the Church is a double one: that not only of furnishing an increased number of teachers and officers, but at the same time of furnishing more efficient ones.

What do we mean by efficiency? Dr. Cope's idea of efficiency is "intelligence, ability, and energy so related and organized as most economically to produce the largest desired effects." And that answers very well. That's just exactly what we are trying to do in the Sunday school world—to so relate the intelligence, ability, and energy of our workers as to produce a maximum of desired results with a minimum of outlay.

Somewhere among my possessions is a [illegible] of a [illegible] newspaper printed in January, [illegible]. One of the departments is [illegible] Foreign Intelligence. Among foreign news of importance [illegible]. Now, a little experience teaches us that most of our workers are about as [illegible] that [illegible]. Intelligent—[illegible] has been forced to them. In other words, our Sunday school people want to know more of the why and the how of this great task of religious education that is engaging the attention of the Church at this time. In order to satisfy the demand which has been created by the necessity of supplying more and better workers, the Church will have to recognize that there is such a demand, of that recognizing it, [illegible] to meet it, [illegible] and lived in the [illegible]. Like [illegible]. Each [illegible] the Methodist Church is making strenuous efforts to [illegible] the reach of every [illegible] some sort of help. Specialists [illegible] employed, institutes and conferences for workers held, books published, magazine [illegible]—several avenues opened by which aid might be given.

The Mississippi Conference, not to be outdone by her neighbors (other denominations), nor by other members of her own family, has put in the field one of the best Conference Field Secretaries we have, and the preacher who fails to co-operate heartily with Brother Neill will simply display his ignorance of a good thing, and so is to be pitied more than blamed. But so far I have not heard of a single such failure, which is highly complimentary to the said Conference.

All the Districts in the Conference have voted to adopt the plan of district organization recommended by the General Sunday School Board, including the Annual District Institute, and, following out that line of action, Brother Neill and the Presiding Elders have arranged a complete series of District Sunday School Institutes covering the entire Conference, the dates and places being stated elsewhere in this paper. Now, these institutes are planned with the single idea of helping local Sunday school workers to get a firmer grasp on the great and good work they are engaged in—look at the program, published in another column, and you will see that this is so. And by thus helping the local workers to become more efficient through becoming more intelligent, it is believed we shall help the Church meet her problem of supplying more and better workers.

It is urged upon every pastor and superintendent to see that all officers and teachers of their Sunday schools attend the institute for their district. Please don't let any other meeting or engagement stand in the way of attendance upon these meetings if you have the best interests of the Kingdom at heart.

We want to treat you all so handsomely that you will want to come again and again. We want to persuade you that our town is a splendid place to do constructive work in our Sunday school plans that will tell mightily for the glory of God and the advancement of His Kingdom. We await your coming with keen anticipation because we feel your presence will bring us blessings and inspiration that will lead to greater endeavor on our part. Yours faithfully,

Meridian District.

The Meridian District challenges every other district in the Conference on attendance at the District Institutes.

Rev. J. L. DECELL, Waynesboro, Miss.

Newton District.

We are ready for the Sunday School Institute. The presiding elder, the local pastor, and the good citizens of Newton are all ready for the coming of the Newton District Sunday School Institute, which is to convene here at Newton, September 2-3.

We want you to come. Pastors, superintendents, teachers and Sunday school workers, we are extending to you a cordial invitation to attend this Institute.

We want you to come to our town and partake of our hospitality, and let us get better acquainted. And let us exchange ideas that we may be better equipped to do the great work to which the Master has called us. We shall expect you on the date named above. Don't disappoint us.

Yours in the Work,

W. W. GRAVES, P. C.

Brookhaven District.

Dear Brethren: The pastors, Sunday school officers and teachers, and all Sunday school workers of the Brookhaven District are not only cordially invited, but earnestly urged to attend the District Sunday School Convention to be held in the city of Hazlehurst, Monday and Tuesday, September 4-5, next. Ample accommodations will be provided for all who attend, if the pastor is notified beforehand of an intention to attend.

The greatest agency the Church of to-day has for the reclamation of the race is the Sunday school, and this department of Church work has been almost completely revolutionized within the past decade. It is of vital importance that all Sunday school workers get in touch with our leaders and put their individual schools abreast of the times.

Be sure to be with us, and carry back all there is for you and yours. B. F. LEWIS.

Jackson District.

To the Pastors, Sunday School Superintendents, and Teachers of the Jackson District:

Dear Friends and Fellow-Workers: In behalf of the good people of Canton, I extend to you a cordial invitation to attend the District Sunday School Institute, which will be held in our progressive little city, September 6-7. No effort will be spared to make the Institute helpful and inspiring, and every wide-awake teacher and superintendent who desires new light and better equipment for the great work of teaching the young should by all means arrange to attend this important meeting. If you are like the most of us, you can stand a great deal of good treatment. Such treatment the citizens of Canton are ready to bestow upon you by day and by night, if you will come and share the good things of the Convention with us. All Sunday school workers who expect to attend the Institute are requested to forward their names at once to Rev. M. M. Black, Canton, Miss. M. M. BLACK.

Port Gibson District.

"Please write a hundred-word letter of welcome and send to Brother Neill by August 17." This is the message that comes to me as pastor of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, where the Sunday School Institute for the Port Gibson District is to be held September 8-9, at which session we are to have with us Dr. E. H. Rawlings, of Nashville; Brother A. L. Dietrich, Field Secretary for the Gulf Division, and Brother Neill, Field Secretary of the Mississippi Conference. Now what more can I say than that we shall be delighted at the coming of these brethren and shall most heartily WELCOME any and all who may attend? T. B. HOLLOMAN, Pastor.

"JUST A FEW WORDS IN CONCLUSION."

(This editorial, from the pen of Dr. T. N. Ivey, appeared in the Nashville Christian Advocate of August 4.)

In writing several weeks ago our editorial, "We Be Brethren," our central and only purpose was to voice once and for all a warning and protest against a spirit of distrust and suspicion that we felt was being "consciously or unconsciously fostered" throughout the Church in the discussion of the unification of the Methodisms. This editorial has called forth a heated twelve-column reply from the editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, whose previous article had largely formed the basis of our editorial in question.

We feel that it would be neither kindness to our readers nor edification to the Church to carry on that kind of controversy which would have to follow the kind of reply which the New Orleans Advocate has made. It would be very easy for the editor of the Christian Advocate, as he sees it, successfully to answer that reply. It would be a cheap glory, however, which would not be worth a bauble to the cause of unification. It would be every whit as easy to make counter criticisms, but that would not make sleep any sweeter.

But aside from all this, what would be the use of carrying on a controversy in which the two parties agree on the central and only doctrine in evidence? In the same issue of the New Orleans Advocate in which is contained the editor's lengthy reply is his announcement that he expects to stand resolutely for the plan of union indorsed at Oklahoma City. Now, whatever the Nashville editor may believe in the future, he believed in Oklahoma City, has believed since, and believes now in that same plan of union now indorsed by the New Orleans editor, even to the latter's fullest construction of its meaning. Would it not be supreme folly, everything else being equal, to carry on a controversy now that the two parties are agreed? Would any provocation, any certainty of so-called personal victory on the one side or of so-called personal defeat on the other side justify such a controversy?

Our readers will indulge us, as the preacher says, in a few more words. Whatever may be the character of the New Orleans editor's lengthy reply, we feel impelled by a sense of fairness to state that he denies having impugned the motives of the Saratoga Conference, of the Northern Church, or of any one else, of having applied his strictures to every Southern visitor to Saratoga, and of having expressed the least hint that anything there had gone on secretly and under cover. He also denies, as we interpret his language, that the paragraph which we copied from his other editorial (the "secret-clique" and "under-cover" paragraph) was intended by him to apply to the Southern Methodists who were at Saratoga. Of course, we accept his word and give him full credit for intentions in alignment with his denials. We must say, however, most emphatically that we cannot admit for a moment that fugitive newspaper references to unnamed parties can furnish any basis whatever (that is, just basis) for the writing of that "secret-clique" paragraph, no matter to whom it was intended to apply.

In reply to the New Orleans editor's complaint that we "carefully kept out a certain part of his previous article" which was necessary to his meaning, we would say that we knowingly kept out nothing that we considered germane to propositions discussed by us. If there was any seeming lack of connection in the case of the other editorial quoted from, it was due to the omission of certain bracketed words which were in some way omitted in the final draft. We might truthfully retort that he left suspended in midair our paragraph on the negro question (Evanston) and thus left out the vital part. But let all that go. What's the use now, since we are arrayed on the same side of the great unification question? Of course we bear no ill will to the New Orleans editor. We have always given him credit for sincerity and ability. We will forget all the hard things he has said. We feel that he can be a great help to the cause. As editor of the official organ we purpose to give openly, constantly, and faithfully our best efforts to the actualization of the unification measure indorsed by the General Conference which elected us.

THE EDITOR'S REJOINDER.

The foregoing utterance, as has been stated, was made by Dr. T. N. Ivey in the Nashville Christian Advocate of August 4. That our extended reply was any more "heated" than was his arraignment of us we scarcely think any fair-minded man will affirm; and as to the saying of "hard" and discourteous things we are quite willing to leave it to the public as to who in that respect was the first and greatest transgressor. It should be kept in mind that when the Doctor dragged the discussion down to the low plane of accusing us of "unworthy innuendo," of comparing us to hoodlums, and prostituting a Church paper to base and improper functions, he was answering an editorial in which, though it reviewed his course and plainly took issue with him, there was not one harsh or abusive word, nor a single sentence that called in question his motives or his sincerity. We expected that our brother would perhaps reply to us with vigor and emphasis, but we did not think he was capable of making an assault upon us of the kind which followed.

He now tells us that he thinks it would have been "very easy" for him to have successfully replied to our extended answer to his arraignment in our issue of July 27, but that he preferred, for reasons satisfactory to himself, not to do so. We will not be immodest enough to say that Dr. Ivey could not have maintained himself in the discussion of the issues which he had raised—as to that we do not know—but the fact remains that he did not do so. We rather think that before he deserted the field after having made his furious and incriminating protest against certain improper things which he affirmed had been done, and of which an emphatic denial had been made, it was due both himself and us, as well as the public, to show that there was real ground for his action in so vehemently protesting, and that he had not made a Don Quixote charge against evils that had existed only in his own excited imagination.

We have in the course of our career witnessed some remarkably strange spectacles in public debates, but we do not recall one which quite matched Dr. Ivey's leave-taking exhibition of what he was pleased to term "FAIRNESS." Let us specifically note his course in this particular.

1. He accused us of having impeached the sincerity and impugned the motives of the Northern General Conference. We asserted in reply that we had done nothing of the kind, and demanded the proof to sustain his charge. Every consideration of justice demanded that he should either make good his allegation, or admit that he had erred in his interpretation of our language. But he has done neither. Instead he has announced that he acquits us of having done this on the ground of our subsequent assurance that we had not meant to do anything of the sort.

2. He charged us with having made the impression upon the public that "EVERY Southern Methodist visitor to the Saratoga Conference was engaged while there in some hidden and unworthy work." We showed in our reply that none of our language could be applied to any but INTERFERING "ultra-unionists from the South" (having no reference whatever to visitors in general), and that we had not suggested that anybody at all had been engaged in "hidden work" at Saratoga, the manner of interference we had referred to being carefully explained in a paragraph immediately following which he had kept out of his paper. Here again, without admitting that he was mistaken, he exonerates us on the ground of a subsequent disclaimer, still occupying the position that our original language fully warranted his first inference.

3. He took our editorial which appeared in an entirely different part of the paper and which dealt with a wholly different matter, coupled it with another, garbled it, and specifically applied references which were made to unknown parties that certain Northern Methodist papers had spoken of without giving their names, to Bishop Hendrix and the Southern visitors at Saratoga—thus making us say things concerning them that we had never remotely thought of doing. We demonstrated in our answer to Dr. Ivey that he had done this, in a way that was utterly beyond question, but instead of admitting that he had unintentionally wronged us, here is what he has to say on this point: "He also denies, as we interpret his language, that the paragraph which we copied from his other editorial (the "secret-clique" and "under cover" paragraph) was intended by him to apply to Southern Methodists at Saratoga. Of course, we accept his word and give full credit for intentions in alignment with his denials." Let the reader note that there is not here the slightest acknowledgment of the rank injustice that was done us, but that the whole attitude of the Doctor is that what he did in garbling and misapplying our utterance was entirely warranted, and that it was a gracious act upon his part to believe what we later said about the matter.

We desire to say most emphatically that we have not asked, nor do we desire, anything at Dr. Ivey's hands based on the ground of any subsequently made assurance upon our part. Our language was never susceptible of any such meaning as he evolved out of it, and he cannot show that it was. He distorted it in an indefensible manner (we do not say intentionally), and the way in which he has sought to wiggle out the predicament in which he placed himself without making the proper amends, lacks much of being to his credit. If he can reconcile his conscience to the course which he has pursued, then all that we have to say is that we greatly pity his conception of journalistic ethics, to say nothing of common honesty and manliness.

The Editor of the Nashville Advocate further says: "We must say, however, most emphatically that we cannot admit for a moment that fugitive newspaper references to unnamed parties can furnish any basis whatever (that is, just basis) for the writing of that 'secret-clique' paragraph, no matter to whom it was intended to apply." This is quite a climbing down on the Doctor's part from his first flamboyant pronouncement that "ABSOLUTELY NOTHING had been adduced to give it a basis," when immediately preceding our inquiry were three carefully quoted statements from reputable sources upon which it was avowedly predicated. Now he shifts his ground (adroitly putting his modifying words in parenthesis, as if he were really making no change), and affirms that there was no "JUST" basis for our interrogatory. We respectfully submit that when men differ as to such a matter in a newspaper discussion, the fair and honorable thing to do is reproduce the utterance and let the public judge for itself as to whether or not the basis was adequate. Did Dr. Ivey do this? Nay, not so. And as a result of his unfair treatment, the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate is being very generally misrepresented and attacked by the Northern Methodist press; but his responsibility for this widespread injustice done a brother does not seem to give our connectional Editor the slightest concern.

His characterization of the quotations upon which we based our inquiry concerning the unnamed and unknown parties who were represented as interpreting the mind of our Church contrary to the action of our General Conference as "FUGITIVE NEWSPAPER REFERENCES," is really amusing. They were taken from serious editorials of considerable length in Zion's Herald, the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, and the Central Christian Advocate, official Church journals of the Church, North, fully as respectable as his own and quite as ably edited. Yet he would "pooh-pooh" their statements away as "fugitive," because they are not to his liking.

We did not make complaint, as Dr. Ivey says, because he had left out portions of our editorial necessary to make its meaning clear—our meaning was clear enough in what he quoted, if he had not distorted it—what we did, was to ask our readers to note how carefully Dr. Ivey had kept out of his paper any of the arguments we had adduced to sustain our contention. His befuddling utterance about "omitted brackets," etc., we do not pretend to understand.

As a kind of offset to his indefensible mutilation and misapplication of our utterances, our brother charges that we left in midair his utterance on the Negro question at Evanston, missing the vital point. We have never intentionally misquoted any opponent or any passage in any public discussion that we have ever had, and we cannot permit our confrere to make this impression. We did not reproduce the whole of that paragraph because we were greatly pressed for space and we did not think that the omitted parts at all affected the significance of the portion that we copied. But since he has made this insinuation, we give here and now the entire passage that our readers may judge for themselves:

"The 'key difficulty' is not the Negro question, as formidable as that question is. In the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we think that we can appreciate the gravity of the problem in the Methodist Episcopal Church. There can be with us no insuperable difficulty in the way of the Church membership of the Negro. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from 1844 to 1870, and even now he is found here and there in this Church. We have learned, however, that he thrives best ecclesiastically apart from, though not altogether without the supervising help of his white neighbor. So far as his acting as legislative dynamite in the sacred precincts of the episcopacy is concerned, we have no more serious fear than is common to our brethren in the Methodist Episcopal Church. We believe the solution of the Negro problem is to be largely with the Negro himself. Having confidence in him, we cannot believe that his problem is insolvable." (Italics ours.)

As will be seen at once, Dr. Ivey, while expressing the view that the Negroes do best in a Church of their own, clearly indicated a willingness, if necessary, to yield this point, and he also impliedly assured the Northern brethren that he believed the Church, South, would be ready to do so, if this should be exacted of her. The fact is, in quoting our brother in our former extended editorial, we inadvertently omitted the words, "WITH US," in the above italicized sentence, and hence failed to give the full strength of his statement as to the South's willingness to surrender on this issue, should the Church, North, demand it. He clearly lifted this question out of the class of "insolvable problems" on the ground that our denomination would not go to the extent of letting it stand in the way of union. Nor should it be forgotten that the Doctor did not include this passage in the portion of his address that he printed in the Nashville Advocate last March.

Dr. Ivey's jaunty effort to make it appear that he had led us to clamber onto the Oklahoma City platform, and that we are now together should not deceive anybody. Before he wrote his severe arraignment of us we had clearly stated that we had never written a line that was designed to be in opposition to the plan approved by our General Conference, as it had been generally interpreted. His utterances have not at all affected our position. We have dwelt in our discussions chiefly upon what we regard as the impossible features of the Saratoga scheme of union, because the chief menance to the Oklahoma City plan up to the present has lain in the effort to make it appear that the two enactments are substantially the same, whereas they are radically and fundamentally different, and because at Evanston the plan of our Church was discredited and weakened by prominent Southern ministers and officials.

His declaration in favor of the Oklahoma City plan is about the first utterance of the kind that Dr. Ivey has made. He can scarcely be said to have been standing for that plan when he was using the General Organ of the Church to generate enthusiasm in behalf of the "WHY" of organic union, while shutting wholly out of view the "HOW" of it. He was not standing for it at Evanston when he represented our Church as willing, if necessary, to surrender on the Negro question; nor did he there, as far as the record shows, so much as open his mouth in its defense when it was being nullified by others in his presence as to practically every essential point. And let it be noted that he does not even now promise to stand for it in the future. Only a few days ago when Bishop Candler pronounced that plan to be an "irreducible minimum" with a majority of Southern Methodists, he at once took issue with him on that point. But he has not presumed to tell us what further concessions he would have made, except as to our "brother in black." For our part, we do not hesitate to say that if the enactment of our last General Conference looking to the unification of American Methodism had to conserve it only such champions as Dr. Ivey, we should have no doubt at all as to what fate would overtake it.

THE NEW CHURCH AT BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have about finished demolishing the old Methodist church here and will begin the erection of our new house of worship by September 1. Mr. I. C. Garber is the contractor, and Mr. John Gaisford, of Memphis, Tenn., is the architect. The building, when complete and furnished will cost about $42,000. We hope to have it ready for occupancy by January 1, 1917. You must come up and preach in it when it is finished. You are giving us a great paper.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR WHITWORTH.

Dear Brother Meek: It is just three weeks until the opening of Whitworth College, and the indications are that the attendance will be larger than it was last year. The rooms are being rapidly taken. About sixty new girls have written that they will matriculate, and we are hearing daily of others who expect to come. The prospect is that the new and old students together will tax the capacity of the boarding department. Young ladies who contemplate entering would do well to write concerning rooms at once.

The Faculty has been enlarged and strengthened. Dr. Cooper is a great school man. He looks closely after the students, and a young lady is as safe at Whitworth as she would be at home.

The opening sermons will be preached this year by Rev. W. H. Morgan, of the local Baptist Church, and Rev. W. H. Hill, of the local Presbyterian Church, the former delivering a message at 11 a. m. and the latter preaching at the evening hour.

SCHOOL OPENING.

The Mississippi Conference Training School will open for work on September 6, 1916. Let all students who expect to attend reach Montrose by that date. Rev. Rolfe Hunt, D.D., has been elected Principal, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Prof. R. C. Pugh. The School is fortunate to secure such a man as Dr. Rolfe Hunt. We are planning for and expecting a great session. Our faculty for the next session is very strong and we are prepared to give the boys and girls who attend our school good advantages.

MAJOR MOHLER DEAD.

Dear Dr. Meek: Major E. G. Mohler, who for sixty-four years had been an active member of the Methodist Church, died last night at his home in Long Beach, Miss., after an illness of eight weeks. Major Mohler lost the wife of his bosom six years ago. She had walked with him for two years. The loss of his good wife hastened his end. Brother Mohler is survived by nine children, one of whom is Rev. E. G. Mohler, Jr., of the North Mississippi Conference. In 1861 Major Mohler graduated at the Virginia Military Institute. He served four years in the Civil War and since then had been engaged alternately in the mercantile business and in farming. He died at the ripe old age of seventy-seven.

TO THE PEOPLE OF LOUISIANA.

Dear Friends: We are busy arranging to hold 150 meetings in Louisiana in the interest of national prohibition. We shall have some of the best speakers this nation affords. Please cooperate with us. Let us not have a break in the schedule that I am working out. Our people who are paying already will not be asked for additional subscriptions; and this statement will be made by every speaker. Help us in our fight against the greatest curse in this world—the licensed liquor traffic.

"ENDURE HARDNESS AS A GOOD SOLDIER OF JESUS CHRIST."

Speaking as a veteran of the faith, and out of the abundance of his experiences and from the knowledge that they brought him, St. Paul addressed these words of advice to Timothy, his beloved son in the gospel, in his Second Epistle to him. The Christian life is a warfare unlike any other, and hence is unique. As St. Paul puts it, he who espouses the cause of Christ wrestles "not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Endurance is patience put into practice. It is a quality which every skillful man of war must possess, since the value of a soldier depends to a great extent upon his ability to surmount difficulties. He who would be a follower of Christ will find much to endure in this world, for there is no secular soldier who is put to as great a test as the Christian warrior. He must bear his own cross and help others to bear theirs, being content to follow in the footsteps of his Lord and Savior, for the servant is no greater than his Master, or the soldier than his general, nor does he deserve better treatment; and he must suffer all persecutions that make for the glory of God and the establishment of his kingdom among men.

The hardness that awaits the true Christian is summed up in one of the beatitudes. "Men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my safe." Soldiers of Christ are given cheer and consolation in the next verse: "Rejoice and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." We can hearken unto these words of the Savior, for he not only spoke as one with authority but he was clothed with it by the Father. As for St. Paul, he was a man that not only taught what he, through the guidance of the Holy Spirit and by means of the special revelations that God made to him, recognized to be the truth, but he himself lived as he would that others should. Upon nearing the end of this life we find him saying "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." In these words his great career is summed up even as truly as the Master's was, when upon the cross he said, "It is finished." Happy is the Christian soldier who overcometh all things and remaineth faithful unto the end, for a crown of righteousness is laid up for him.

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

A PRAYER.

James Whitcomb Riley.

Dear Lord! Kind Lord!
Gracious Lord! I pray
Thou will look on all I love,
Tenderly to-day!
Weed their hearts of bitterness;
Scatter every care
Down a wake of angel-wings
Winnowing the air.

Bring unto the sorrowing
All release from pain,
Let the lips of laughter
Overflow again;
And with all the needy
O divide, I pray,
This vast treasure of content
That is mine to-day!

THE CALL TO THINK.

But few people to-day are doing any thinking of their own. What little they do needs crutches. Take time to think! Time to think! Think! We take our thoughts like our clothes or breakfast foods, ready made, predigested. In India the people are saturated in silence; they are trained to think. They produce philosophers. In America the people are immersed in materialism; they are trained to get. An industrial race has resulted. But some one does a deal of thinking for the rest. Sometimes his thoughts so overwhelm him that he imagines he is thinking God's thoughts after him. And he is. God is the source of all thought. That is why thinking is so important. The Hebrews stressed it. The psalmists believed in the democracy of thought. "Commune with God on thy bed and be still. * * * meditate day and night, * * * write these words on my heart, * * * bind them about thy neck, * * * think on these things." From Moses to Paul the leaders that made Palestine the holy land spent much time in silence and urged the people to meditate and pray.

The Christian religion, starting with prayer as the thought center, needs to give new emphasis to the need of Christian meditation as the vital preparedness for Christian worship and service. Otherwise Christianity will be lost in forms and a perfunctory humanitarianism. Christianity is life, liberty, freedom. Jesus taught that it was the truth which would set men free. The truth is not snared in a book; it is wrought out in a soul.

"Come ye apart into a desert place and rest awhile." The call is the Master's. He calls to rest from care, from bodily tire, from the confusion of the crowd. He calls to silence, to meditation, to prayer.—New York Christian Advocate.

THE SABBATH AND ITS OBSERVANCE.

The word Sabbath occurs 137 times in the Bible, and Sabbaths occurs 35 times, and hence in both forms, the word occurs 172 times. The Sabbath is called "the seventh day" 22 times and "the seventh" once. It is next to the oldest institution in the world, which is marriage, as far as our knowledge extends. The word Sabbath literally means rest. It also means a holy, or sanctified day, for God said of it: "My holy day." (Isa. 58:13); and again it is written: "And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it." (Gen. 2:3). The first Sabbath was observed on the very first day after the world was finished and ready for business. When the feast of the tabernacles was instituted, God said: "On the first day shall be a Sabbath" (Lev. 23:39); and on the first day of the week after Christ rose from the dead he met with his assembled disciples, for John has written: "Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut, where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst." (John 20:19). On the same day of the week he met them again: "And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said: 'Peace be unto you.'" (John 20:26). Paul wrote: "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." (1 Cor. 16:2). The word Sunday is not in the Bible and we should not wonder at that fact when we remember that it is an Anglo-Saxon word, and therefore was not in existence when the Bible was given to the world. It was the name of the first day of the week with the Anglo-Saxons, who worshiped the sun that day, and hence it meant the day of the sun.

Now, since Sabbath means "rest" and too, since God wants it observed on one day in each seven, therefore the first day of each week is not only as good as the seventh day for its observance, but it is better than that day in this, that Christ rose from the dead on the first day of the week. Great carelessness obtains as to its observance nowadays, we are sorry to say. This should not be, and would not be, if every one loved God, as he must love him before he is fit for dwelling with him. Our Savior said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments" (John 14:15), and John wrote, "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments, and his commandments are not grievous" (John 5:3). Keeping the Sabbath is one of the commandments. All unnecessary secular business should be omitted on that day, such as the riding on railroad trains, depositing and receiving mails, social visits, buying or selling, etc., and each and every one, therefore, should strive to keep the Sabbath as God has commanded, not only in the details just given, but in every particular required. I am now in my thirty-eighth year in the itinerancy and have had as many as fourteen appointments in one charge, but I have never ridden on a Sunday railroad train, nor a street car on the Sabbath, nor employed a livery outfit on that holy day. I have never patronized the post-office in any way whatever, nor sent or received a telegram on that day of God. How professed Christians can afford to desecrate God's holy day by riding on trains, in autos, or in any other way and neglect Sunday school, the Church services, etc., I can not understand, unless it is due to self-seeking irrespective of self-respect, and especially the glory of God.

God is jealous of his holy day, and therefore as an incentive to us to keep his holy day, he assures us that if we shall regard it as his holy day and not have our own pleasure on it, but honor and keep it, we shall be blessed with the very best earth can afford. (Isa. 58:13, 14). Nehemiah atributed the captivity of the Jews and its incident evils to their profaning the Sabbath, and then declares: "Yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel, by profaning the Sabbath." (Neh. 13:15, 15, 17, 18). I have not only commented upon our rule on Sabbath observance, but I have preached to each congregation in my charge on it. Let us preach it and live it more and more.

Wesson, Miss. ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

A REMINISCENCE OF BISHOP KEENER.

Rev. B. Carradine, D.D.

In the Sam Jones meeting at the Seashore Camp Ground, held in the eighties, the evangelist had a singer and leader with him who reminded me, with mingled feelings of pain, amusement and sorrow, more of a little tufted cockatoo than anything I ever saw in pantaloons. He wore a short sack coat, tight trousers, standing collar and plastered hair with a pompadour in front, and hopped, skipped and jumped around waving his little baton, crying out, "Now let the ladies sing!" and "Now let the gentlemen sing!" and "Now let everybody sing!" until I felt that an electrified, talkative popinjay was before me.

Bishop Keener sat next to me—a man of marvelous intellect, with a John Wesley-like face and manner—preaching when in the pulpit with wonderful unction and power. He could not keep from groaning behind his palmetto fan, while occasionally he whispered to me, "Now look at him," "Just see him now," "Just behold that antic," etc.

Years have passed, and the little pulpit-crested pintado with his tuft and baton has passed away into oblivion, and not a soul recalls him, unless it be some little belle's heart whom Addison long ago dissected and found in it just such a mannikin. But Bishop Keener still lives in the affection and recollection of myriads with his majestic face, his spiritual, cultured sermons, and his life that stood out for righteousness and pulpit courage and manliness like a Gibraltar from a perfect ocean of human life.—The Gospel Herald

TO THE PUBLIC.

In view of the fact that there may have gone out an erroneous impression because certain charges have been lodged against our pastor, Rev. C. A. Schultz, because he has taken a bold stand in the school trouble at Daleville, Miss., we, the undersigned, official board of the Daleville charge, Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, desire for the public know that we, as a board, endorse and approve of our pastor's stand for right and righteousness, and that we most heartily appreciate his enthusiasm and courage for a cause that he believes just and honorable.

We would earnestly insist on the public withholding judgment in the case until the facts are made public through the proper channels.

DO YOUR DUTY.

Do your duty, little man,
That's the way!
There's some duty in the plan
Of every day.
Every day has some new task
For your hand;
Do it bravely—that's the way
Life grows grand.

Do your duty, sing the stars,
That so bright
Through the midnight's dusky bars
Shed their light.
Do your duty, says the sun
High in heaven;
To the dutiful, when tasks are done,
Crowns are given.

Crowns of power and crowns of fame,
Crowns of life;
In glory burns the victor's name,
After strife.
Do your duty never swerve—
Smooth or rough—
Until God, whom we all serve,
Says, "Enough."

NED'S WAY.

"Ned can't be beaten," said Uncle Jack. "At least, you can't make him own he is beaten. When his 'lines' break, he ties them; if they break again, he ties them again; if they break a third time, there is a hard third knot in a half a minute—no time lost in grumbling. He seems, small as he is, to understand that there isn't the least bit of use kicking over things because they are just as they are, not as he would like to have them. But he understands, too, that things can be changed to suit Ned, and that Ned is the one to change them. When things do not move fast enough to suit him, do you catch him losing his temper, flying to pieces and throwing tools? Not a bit. He is just as vexed and disgusted as anybody else would be, but he sets his lips tighter and uses every bit of his temper to make things come his way.

"A fiery temper, sizzling hot, is like a strong horse very much excited. If you can keep him harnessed and guide him, he will do an immense amount of work; if he gets away from you, he will do a fearful lot of damage. That is where Ned comes out ahead—he makes his temper work for him. His anger is harnessed with 'I will' and 'You shall;' he holds it tight and drives it hard—and he wins nine times out of ten.

"Did you ever see an old cow trying to open a gate? She lifts and nuzzles and pushes with her nose and her horns; the latch falls back and back and back again, but the old cow simply lifts it again and again and again. She doesn't know how to give up. Whether he is working arithmetic problems or his 'automobile,' Ned always reminds me of that old cow. He will try one way about three times, then sit and think a minute, and then begin some other way."—Presbyterian of the South.

LOST AND FOUND.

Ralph was kicking up the dust along the road on the way home from the little corner store, when he came upon a bundle lying in the road, where perhaps it had been dropped from a passing automobile. It was a long, nobby, interesting bundle, and he picked it up, and ran the rest of the way home. He gave mother the spool of thread, and then took the bundle out to the barn without saying anything about it. Then when he opened it he found a bow and a dozen arrows. Now, for a month Ralph had been wanting a bow and arrows, and hinting to the family that they would be an acceptable gift. So far no one had taken the hint. Yet here they were, almost as if they had dropped out of the sky. He handled them lovingly. He felt there was nothing else in the world he wanted so badly. He fitted an arrow in, and shot at the old straw hat that hung on the barn door. The arrow pierced the hat. It was a fine bow. He wanted to take it to the orchard, and put up a mark to shoot at. But suppose the boy that really owned it should see him!

Then Ralph was ashamed. The bow was not his. He was hiding in the barn because he didn't dare let anybody see it. And the real owner probably was wishing for it very much. Ralph quickly hushed that bad little voice that said, "Finders, keepers."

"Things that you find don't belong to you unless you've tried to find the real owner, and can't do it," said Ralph, stontly. And he knew that was right. He went outside. Nearly all the boys of that end of town were at the ball game over in Singer's pasture. Ralph went to one group after another. "I found a package in the road," he said. "Whoever lost it can have it if they describe it so I know it is theirs."

In the third group Jamie Rainess jumped up and ran to Ralph. "Say," he whispered, "was it a bow and arrow? I lost one to-day."

"Yes," said Ralph; "come over to the barn and I'll give it to you."

"That's the one," said Jamie as soon as he saw it. "My! but I felt awful to lose it. I'm glad to get it back. I just didn't know what to do about it."

He took it, and ran off home, and never even invited Ralph to come and play with it. But Ralph was happier than when he had had the bow. He felt all right inside now, for he knew he had done the right thing.

But such an astonishing thing happened two days later. When Ralph, after an all-day visit from home, returned in the early evening, he found the house brilliantly lighted and a large number of young people assembled at a party given in his honor. And before it was over Jamie presented him with a bow and arrows exactly like the ones he had returned, amid a general clapping of hands. But suppose Ralph had kept those that he had found in the wrapped package. How different everything would have been! And not the least thing that Ralph would have had to reckon with would have been his conscience.—The Southern Churchman.

THE ORIGIN OF BRAZIL'S NAME.

Brazil, which in later years has come to the front in commercial importance, received its name because of a very hard, reddish colored wood, which grows in great abundance in many parts of the country. So brilliant is this wood when a log was split open, that the Portuguese gave it the name of "braza," which means "live coal." In speaking of this country the Portuguese often referred to it as the place of the live-coal wood and gradually the word "Brazil" was used, until finally the country was known by no other name.—Presbyterian of the South.

OCEAN DEPTHS

The deepest regions of the ocean are commonly close to the shore, and are believed to have been caused by the crumpling inward of the earth's crust due to the pressure of the near land. Such is the "Tuscarora deep," a long, narrow trough which extends northward from Japan along the coast of Asia; its bottom being more than 27,600 feet below the surface of the sea and 12,600 feet below the general level of the ocean's floor. An even more profound abyss is the Aldrich deep close to the Tongan and Kermandec Islands, which sinks to a depth of 30,930 feet.

The greatest yet found, however, is the Swire deep off Mindanao of the Philippines, this being 32,089 feet, or 3,089 feet deeper than Mount Everest, of the Himalayas, is high. However, one gains an idea of the rarity of such abyssal regions from the fact that of the 9750 soundings that have been made and reported in water over 1000 fanthoms in depth, only seventeen were greater than 4000, and only three exceed 5000 fathoms in depth. The greatest recorded depth of the ocean is only 409 feet more than six miles.—Scientific Monthly.

DR. WIER'S VIEW.

My Dear Brother Meek: I have been wanting to write to you for some time past, thanking you for your deliverances in the Christian Advocate in opposition to the proposed readjustment of our missionary territory in Mexico, a readjustment which would involve an exchange of some of our territory, church members, and property with some other denominations. I hope such a readjustment and exchange will never be made.

I wish also to endorse your position in regard to the plan of Methodist unification proposed by the late General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

God has greatly prospered us, as the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We had some 400,000 members at the close of the war between the States, and now we number over 2,000,000 members. Let us strengthen the bonds of Christian brotherhood between the Methodists North and South. There are points of contact where we may get closer together without organic union.

Various reasons suggest themselves why we do not seem ready to be merged into one supreme General Conference. And it would seem to be the order of providence that we should maintain our automony as the "Methodist Episcopal Church, South," whatever plan of unification or federation might be adopted.

Your friend and brother,

Starkville, Miss. T. C. WIER.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

We meet—one another, and friendship expands
As eye catches eye, and as hands welcome hands.
The touch of good fellowship fills up the soul,
And each is inspired by the zeal of the whole.

We meet—the dear Savior, unseen and unheard,
We leap to the vision, we feed on the word;
His presence, so loving, so wise, and so strong,
Is felt in each moment of prayer or of song.

We meet—our ideals; exulting we see
The grace that our living might blessedly be.
We burn with the joy of that promised delight,
And spring to achieve it in heaven-born might.

So meeting, we practice the life of true men:
So parting, we part but to gather again.
Till soon—how the spirit awaits it and yearns—
We shall meet in the meeting that never adjourns.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT.

Next to the office of pastor, the Sunday school superintendent holds the most responsible position in a church. Being at the head of the forces that are organized to teach and train religiously the youth of the congregation with which he is connected, his obligations are indeed weighty and much is very properly expected of him. The following are what we conceive to be some of the essential things for an efficient superintendent:

1. He should be a CONVERTED man, with a definite and clear experience of salvation. This is true, because the chief end of all instruction in the Sunday school is to make and develop Christians, and one who has only a theoretical knowledge concerning this greatest of all human works is not prepared to lead effectively in it.

2. He should be a CAPABLE man. Piety alone does not equip a person for this difficult service. He should have such knowledge as will command respect and enable him to see that the Divine Word is effectively taught. And here it is well to remember that all truth is related, and that things in the natural world mirror and illustrate the great spiritual facts. Hence, a superintendent should be a reading man. Especially should he be informed concerning the Bible and his Church. He should see that no shoddy work is done in any department of the school. He who would teach any generation successfully must keep abreast with the times.

3. He should be a CONSECRATED man. His heart must be in the work. He should have a passion for it—should be as much concerned abont it as the business man is for success in his chosen calling. He should not be content with merely giving the management of the school a little thonght on the Sabbath day; he should devote to it much earnest study, mingled with prayer. He should get into touch with other workers that he may profit by their experiences and counsels.

4. He should be a TACTFUL man. A great deal depends upon this. The head of a Sunday school is certain to bump up against many difficulties, and he needs to he agreeable in disposition, patient, considerate of others, and reasonably flexible in his opinions. He shonld be approachable and willing to receive suggestions from any sonrce, whether he adopts them or not. And he should endeavor to effect the changes that need to be made in the way that will canse the least irritation. Tact may to some extent he inherited, but it is susceptible of large cultivation.

Blessed is the faithful and efficient Sunday school superintendent. In our opinion, few will in eternity wear brighter crowns than will he. Bnt great will be the condemnation of the man who, in such a position, neglects the Master's lambs and lets them stray from the fold where ruin overtakes them. Every person at the head of a Sunday school has opportunities that an angel would covet. It, therefore, certainly hehooves him to hestir himself and make the most of them.

HERE WE HAVE IT!

The following statement is part of an editorial contained in the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate of August 17, which journal is perhaps the most widely circulated weekly in the Northern Methodist Church:

"It should be remembered that the action of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Oklahoma City, did not awaken any marked degree of enthusiasm in our own Church. Many of those who greatly desire the reunion of the Churches doubted. They knew from the beginning that the tentative plan would have to be greatly modified if the Methodist Episcopal Church should seriously consider the adoption of it. In fact, the most enthusiastic advocates of unification did not urge action on the suggestions in the General Conference of 1912. The Southern brethren who are charging their "ultra-unionist" leaders with having interfered with the deliberations of our General Conference at Saratoga by suggesting that the Church, South, would be willing to accept something less or different from what is nominated in the Oklahoma bond need not greatly vex their souls over the matter; for they can rest assured that the recommendations made in the report of the Committee of Sixty were the minimum rather than the maximum of modifications necessary to secure the hearty and unanimous adoption of the report without discussion. We should not have been willing that negotiations proceed without frankly declaring our convictions on the points named, just as the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, frankly suggested an important modification of the plan as drafted by the Joint Commission.

"Of course, if there are any Southern leaders who would have preferred that we reject the proposition as submitted by their General Conference rather than provide for further consideration of it on the basis suggested, that is another matter. But even these, if there be any such, should know that the Methodist Episcopal Church is so sincerely and earnestly desirous of unification and so hopeful of its accomplishment on a just and reasonable basis that the rejection of the proposition of the Church, South, was never seriously considered, even by those who regarded it a hindrance rather than a help toward unification." (Italics ours.)

Several things in this utterance are well worth noting:

1. According to the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, the plan of the Joint Commission was ignored by the Northern General Conference at Minneapolis in 1912 because of dissatisfaction with it.

2. This plan, after being generally approved hy our General Conference at Oklahoma City, if it had been let alone, would have stood no chance whatever of receiving favorable consideration by the Northern General Conference without being "GREATLY MODIFIED." However, our contemporary says it would not have been formally rejected, hnt would have been materially changed and connter propositions made, with a view to trying to keep up the negotiations.

3. It is frankly admitted that the Saratoga enactment is very materially different from the plan matured hy the Joint Commission on Federation and adopted, with one modification, by our last General Conference. (It has been, strange to say, chiefly Southerners who have sought to belittle the important differences between these two plans.)

4. The Pittsburgh Christian Advocate declares that the paper adopted at Saratoga embodied "THE MINIMUM" of modifications necessary to get the measure past the Northern General Conference without opposition. The brethren who are indulging in dreams that the Church, North, may be expected to recede readily from the positions which it has taken as to the great issues involved in the unification movement would do well to ponder this statement. The truth is, the most outstanding thing in the proceedings of the Evanston meeting is that the Southerners indicated a willingness to do nearly all of the surrendering.

5. The union of which the Church, North, is "so sincerely and earnestly desirous" is obviously, if the Pittsburgh Advocate is to be believed, substantially the same kind of union it has been ardently anxious to effect practically ever since the Civil War—a form of union in which the Church, South, would have to make all the important concessions.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. S. L. Pope, of New Albany, Miss., recently assisted Rev. W. C. Carlisle in a successful meeting at Baldwyn, Miss.

Mrs. N. E. Cunningham, of Wilson, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, says: "I fully endorse your position on the proposed unification of Methodism."

Reports from Ruston, La., are to the effect that Dr. J. M. Henry is having a gratifyingly successful pastorate in that important charge. Dr. Henry is one of the strong men of the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer filled the pulpit of the Louisiana Avenue Church last Sunday, and was greeted by a good summer-time congregation. Pastor Gearheard was out of the city, being engaged in a meeting at Plaquemine, La.

Two pleasant callers at our office last Tuesday were Mr. L. P. Hoffpauir and Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, of Estherwood, La. The former, who is a merchant, came to New Orleans to attend the Buyers' Convention; the latter is a promising young minister.

Rev. C. A. Northington, pastor of the New Albany (Miss.) Circuit, says: "I have just closed a great meeting at Mt. Olivet. The preaching was done by Rev. J. T. Gullett, of Baldwyn, Miss., and the singing was led by Prof. T. N. Pannel, of Ellistown, Miss."

Centenary and Mansfield Colleges will soon be opening their doors for another year's work. What have you done toward helping Dr. Wynn and Prof. Bobbitt to fill their halls with students? There ought to be no vacant rooms at either of these institutions.

Beginning with next Sunday, the Editor will fill the pulpit of the Prytania Street Presbyterian Church of this city for four Sabbaths. Dr. W. McF. Alexander, the scholarly pastor of this congregation, will be out of New Orleans during this time on his annual vacation.

Rev. C. H. Strait, of Rocky Springs, Miss., writes: "On Sunday, August 6, Brother J. L. Decell began a meeting for me at Carpenter. The preaching was excellent and much good was accomplished. There were 4 accessions to the Church, and 7 infants were baptized."

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more snbscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. T. A. Ferguson, Camden, Miss., 2; Rev. W. C. Galceran, Shaw, Miss., 3; Rev. W. E. Harrison, Seminary, Miss., 2.

Rev. D. L. Cogdell, of Corinth, Miss., than whom there is no choicer spirit in the Methodist itinerancy, sends us a club of 9 subscriptions, along with a check to correspond and his love and good wishes. Referring to his charge, he says: "My work is moving upward. I am hopeful of a good year."

The Seashore Campground Training School has made a good record under the efficient administration of President H. W. Van Hook. It is ideally located, the surrounding scenery being beautiful, and the climate during the winter season being mild and delightful. Write President Van Hook (Biloxi, Miss.) for a catalogue.

Last Sunday was an interesting day at the Seashore Campground, near Biloxi, Miss., where the annual camp meeting was in progress. A large crowd was present, and the sermons of Dr. E. C. Moore, of Montgomery, Ala., are said to have been of a high order and to have produced a profound impression. We are not at this writing able to give the results of this interesting series of services.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, who is attending the Seashore Camp Meeting, of which he is one of the directors, returned to New Orleans last Friday to confer with Dr. McMurry concerning the contemplated new church in Algiers. He and the pastor, Rev. R. M. Brown, took our genial Church Extension Secretary in hand in the afternoon and chaperoned him over the across-the-river section of the city.

Dr. G. E. Cameron, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, at Lexington, Ky., recently delivered in that city a very able and eloquent address on the subject of prohibition, which was reported at great length for The Lexington Herald We thank Dr. Cameron for a copy of that paper which contained his brilliant and striking utterance. From several sources, we have heard complimentary things of his work in the Blue Grass State.

Rev. J. R. Countiss reports encouragingly of the outlook for a good opening at Grenada College. Repairs to the amount of $2500 are being made on the buildings, and everything is being made ready for a great session of this excellent school. Let the brethren help Brother Countiss to fill every room in the dormitories. Grenada College is the place for the Methodist young ladies of North Mississippi or any others who want superior educational advantages at a reasonable cost.

We acknowledge ourselves indebted to Rev. C. F. Emery, our accomplished pastor at Natchez, Miss., for two new subscriptions sent us a few days ago. This makes 5 new names that he has given us for our mailing files during the year, besides the renewals that he has forwarded. Brother Emery is a good friend of the Conference organ.

A note from Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, of Jackson, Miss., informs us that Mrs. W. G. Roberts, of Philadelphia, Miss., who recently underwent a very serious operation in Jackson at the hands of Dr. E. H. Galloway, is rapidly recovering, and that it is thought that she will soon be able to return home. It was with sorrow that we learned of the illness of this choice servant of the Master, and we are happy to know that the prospect of her restoration to health is considered so bright.

In Brother W. A. Mangum's note appearing in the Advocate last week an error occurred: It was stated that, after his illness in a sanitarium at Baton Rouge, he was "not" taken to the district parsonage, when it should have been said that he was taken there. We regret this mistake. Brother Mangum spent last Sunday with the congregation of the Keener Memorial Church of Baton Rouge, the pastor, Rev. H. W. Cudd, being away in a meeting. He reports two splendid services.

Dr. W. F. McMurry, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South, spent last Friday in New Orleans. He came to look over the situation in Algiers where our people are planning to construct a new church. It was the Editor's pleasure, in company with Dr. T. P. Bell, to lunch with him at the noon hour, and to dine with him in the evening at Fabacher's Rathskeller. Dr. McMurry was looking well and it was a genuine pleasure to see him. He left for Mobile Friday night.

We are giving a good deal of space this week to the Sunday school work of the Mississippi Conference. Brother Neill, the capable Field Secretary of that Conference, has made very little demand upon us for space during the year, and we felt it to be only just to permit the Conference organ to lend him a helping hand in the splendid service which he is rendering the great cause that he represents. Let the Methodists of South Mississippi rally to his assistance and aid him in rounding out a great year's work.

We have received the following wedding invitation: "Mrs. Edward Silas Steen requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Birdie Grey, to Rev. James Dansey Wroten on Tuesday afternoon, September 5, 1916, at 12:30 o'clock, at the First Baptist Church, Jackson, Miss." The prospective bride is a young lady of many gifts and graces, and the groom is a promising young minister in the North Mississippi Conference, who is at present serving the Benoit charge. We extend in advance our congratulations and best wishes.

Our people at Coldwater, Miss., under the consecrated leadership of Rev. H. G. Roberts, their pastor, have lately remodeled and enlarged their old house of worship, converting it into a brick veneered building, at a cost of about $8000. It now has ten well-arranged classrooms, a pastor's study, and a ladies' parlor, and the structure is heated by steam and is ornamented with art glass windows. The present value of the plant is estimated to be about $11,000. We hope to give in the Advocate a picture of this attractive edifice at an early date.

Rev. E. S. Lewis informs us of the death of Mr. W. F. Thomas, a prominent member of our Church at Durant, Miss., which occurred suddenly in the church last Sunday morning, just after the close of a prayer, which he had offered. He was a native of Louisiana, having been born at Baton Rouge 69 years ago. He had been continuously in the employment of the Illinois Central Railroad for 33 years, and for 25 years had served as an engineer on a passenger train between Durant and Aberdeen. Brother Lewis says of him: "He was a liberal supporter of every good cause, and one of the largest contributors to the new church enterprise recently carried forward in Durant." We regret to learn of the death of this useful and esteemed citizen, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Brother George D. Sanders, of Farmerville, La., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, adds the following statement concerning the question of Methodist unification: "I consider this the most important issue now before Southern Methodists, and I, therefore, think that it ought to be freely and fully discussed. Personally, I am opposed to union on any basis, and I should like to see the truth dawn upon our beloved Church before it is too late." As we have before stated, the columns of the Advocate are open to a discussion of all phases of this great question, which; from the very nature of the case, is constitutional in character, and to which the CHURCH is yet uncommitted. The General Conference is utterly without power to commit the CHURCH on an issue of this kind, though it instructed our commissioners to negotiate further, if they should feel such a proceeding to be warranted by the action of the Northern General Conference, and this they have decided to do. Such is the present status of the unification movement.

DAUGHTERS OF CLERGYMEN.

Both here and abroad the daughters of clergymen have attained to fame.

Jane Austen first saw the light in the vicarage of Steventon in Hampshire, in 1775; Mrs. Gaskell, who is famous as the author of "Cranford," was the daughter of William Stevenson, who preached at Doblane, and her intimate friend, Charlotte Bronte, who, with her sisters, Emily and Anne, took the world by storm, were the daughters of Patrick Bronte, whose church and rectory at Haworth are yearly the mecca of thousands of admirers of these immortal women.

Mrs. Lynn Linton, the Victorian novelist, John Strange Winter, the creator of "Bootle's Baby," and many another tale of the army, and Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, were all daughters of preachers.

Among the more modern brilliant women are Olive Scheiner, the daughter of a missionary who was born in Basutoland, where her father worked, and Mrs. Florence Barclay, who, as it were, sprang into fame in a night with "The Rosary," and who is the daughter of the Rev. Samuel Charlesworth, rector of Limpsfield, Surrey. Mrs. Barclay had written simply for "the joy of the job," says The Woman at Home, and it was her sister, Mrs. Ballington Booth, who induced her to send her "stuff" to a publisher.

Jane and Mary Findlater, whose individual and collaborated novels, "The Green Graves of Balgowrie," "The Rose of Joy," etc., have brought them wealth and fame, are the daughters of the late Rev. Eric Findlater, Lochearnhead, and their lifelong friend, Mrs. Nigel Robertson, author of "The Gallant Quaker," is the daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Hill, Dundee.

It is scarcely surprising, perhaps, that many of our famous hymns were written by the daughters of the vicarage. The best-known wedding hymn, "O Perfect Love," owes its origin to Mrs. Gerald Gurney, daughter of Dr. Bloomfield, Bishop of London, who penned it in a very short time at the laughing request of her sister, who asked her what was the good of having a poet for a sister if she could not write a special hymn for her wedding. The hymn was set to music by Sir Joseph Barnby and sung for the first time publicly at the marriage of Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll. Frances Ridley Havergal, too, the famous hymn writer, was the daughter of a clergyman.—The Lutheran.

HOW TO PRAY.

Phillips Brooks.

Pray. Yes, go to the God whom you but dimly see, and pray to Him in the darkness, where He seems to sit. Ask Him, as if He were, that He will give you that which, if He is, must come from Him, can come from Him alone. Pray anxiously. Pray passionately, in the simplest of all words, with the simplest of all thoughts. Pray, the manliest thing that a man can do, the fastening of his life to the eternal, the drinking of his thirsty soul out of the great fountain of life. And pray distinctly. Pray upon your knees. One grows tired sometimes of the free thought, which is yet perfectly true, that a man can pray anywhere and anyhow. But men have found it good to make the whole system pray. Kneel down, and the very bending of those obstinate and unused knees of yours will make the soul kneel down in the humility in which it can be exalted in the sight of God.

The real difference between men is energy.—Fuller.

PENSION PLAN A FAILURE.

The Carnegie Foundation has abandoned its pension system for college professors and will now undertake to accomplish the same purpose by insuring the schoolmasters for a term of years. The manager of the Foundation confesses that the pension plan was a failure and that the system itself is "unsound."

Nothing perhaps that was ever proposed has so disturbed the religious and college world as the Carnegie pension system, and its abandonment will no doubt bring a sigh of relief to the Churches that own and operate colleges in different States of the Union.

Under the pension system no professor of a denominational school was eligible to a pension. In his letter to the chancellor of Vanderbilt University offering a million dollars to that institution, Mr. Carnegie took the position that churches did not know how to educate. This idea of his antagonism to religion and its teachers was expressed with force in his pension system by making it impossible for any professor in any sectarian college to participate, and for a while there were a number of sectarian schools that threw off their sectarian control in order that their men might get in on the pension system.

This surrendering of charters and throwing out of control the churches that had founded these institutions raised a whirlwind in educational circles, and many denominational college charters were carefully scrutinized and, if weak, strengthened so as to confirm denominational control. Mr. Carnegie thus indirectly defeated the very purpose it was charged that he was seeking to achieve, for while the Churches have lost a few of their colleges the pension system, which brought about the loss, is itself a failure.—Mobile Register.

I will place no value on anything I have or may possess except in relation to the kingdom of Christ.—David Livingston.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

Mrs. LULA GOODMAN MOHLER, of Long Beach, Miss., died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Draughan, at Sumrall, Miss., on Wednesday, July 12, 1916. She was born on Nov. 28, 1846; and was a few months more than seventy years old. Uniting with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at an early age she was a consistent, loyal member thereof until her death. She was the mother of twelve children, nine of whom, with her husband, survive. Mrs. Mohler was a product of the Old South and was ever true to its traditions. Amidst the busy cares of home life, Mrs. Mohler always found time to attend to her part of the work of the Church. Hers was a life of devotion and service to her loved ones, to her community, and to her God. She has gone; but we know where to find her, and by the Grace of God we confidently expect soon to meet her in the realm where, "Beyond these voices there is peace."

ELMER C. GUNN, Pastor.

Mrs. M. A. PORTER, one of the oldest Methodists of Franklin County, died at her home in Meadville, Miss., on Jan. 3, 1916. Sister Porter lived to be about seventy-five years of age. She was twice married—the first time to Brother L. Hollinger, and the last time to Brother Ab. Porter. This first union was blessed with four children, namely Messrs. John and Louis Hollinger, Mrs. J. J. Anderson, and Robert Hollinger. Sister Porter was a devoted, self-sacrificing mother and proved as faithful and loving a mother to her four step-children as to her own children. Her self-sacrifice and faithfulness both as a wife and as a mother was as wonderful as it was beautiful. She united with the Church at an early age and was a faithful, loyal Christian until her death. She had many friends, for she was the friend of every one—always ready to serve with her sympathy, her counsel, and her substance. The parsonage knew no better friend, for as a former pastor said of her, "Surely she was the salt of the earth." May God bless and comfort the bereaved ones, for only the Holy Spirit can ease and calm the disturbed soul amidst such sorrows in life.

J. W. THOMPSON.

On Monday night, Feb. 14, 1916, at about 12 o'clock the spirit of Sister D. F. GUICE, formerly Miss Mollie Torrey, went out to meet its God. Sister Guice was the wife of Rev. D. F. Guice, of Meadville, Miss. She was a patient sufferer for several months, and, though her anxious husband and several physicians labored hard for her recovery, God saw best to take her. She was a consistent member of the Methodist Church until her death, and during the years that her husband served as an itinerant, she worked faithfully by his side, lovingly holding up his hands and making his home what a parsonage home should be. After their return to the old home, to care for Brother Guice's father and mother, she still lived her religion, proving herself a friend to all around her. The devotion and care which she showed to her aged father-in-law were both touching and beautiful. Truly, she lived for others and her life was a blessing to all within the sphere of its influence. But she has gone from us, and we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, and pray that He may guide and bless the grief-stricken husband, the aged mother, and the sorrowing brothers and sisters.

J. W. THOMPSON.

Conceit may puff a man up, but never prop him up.—Ruskin.

PERSONAL INFLUENCE.

Each individual has it. An atheist going along a country road overtook a woman poorly clad, who seemed strangely excited. He thought she was insane. A glance, however, satisfied him. She was a negress, but her face was glowing with a calm and radiant joy.

"What were you talking about, auntie, as you walked along?" he asked.

"Laws, massa, I nebber knowed I was talkin'. 'pears like I didn't notice myself. I was thinkin' as I look on de worl' an' de sky, an' took 'em all in dat dey is all mine—all mine, 'cause I is Christ's, and Christ is God's!"

Here was a living witness whom the spectator could not gainsay nor deny. He was a learned man, but this was a kind of learning he had never heard of; he was a successful man, but here was such triumph as he had never dreamed of. He listened, full of curiosity, to what the woman had to say; he went away, but the leaven worked, causing him so much thought that he never rested until he also could say, "They are all mine, for I am Christ's!"

This kind of an influence counts. God owns it. It makes its impression upon the unsaved. The results are a blessing to the one who gives and the one who receives. No apology is needed because of any adverse effects. The earthly end of such a being is peace and joy and satisfaction.—Central Christian Advocate.

BLESSED TO BE A BLESSING.

Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D.

God blesses you that you may be a blessing to others. Then he blesses you a second time in being a blessing to others. It is the talent that is used that multiplies. Receiving, unless one gives in turn, makes one full and proud and selfish. Give out the best of your life in the Master's name for the good of others. Lend a hand to every one who needs. Be ready to serve at any cost those who require your service. Seek to be a blessing to every one who comes for but a moment under your influence. This is to be angel-like. It is to be God-like. It is to be Christlike. We are in this world to be useful. God wants to pass his gifts and blessings through us to others. When we fail as his messengers we fail of our mission.

GRAY HAIRS

mean that your hair is not receiving proper attention, and yet a gray hair will do more to make you look old than anything else. Rid yourself of an aged appearance by giving the hair correct treatment and proper food. There can be no life without food, and unless you give your hair the proper attention you cannot expect it to retain its lustre and beauty. Use "La Creole," the best of all hair dressings and see your gray hairs disappear. This dressing was discovered by the Creoles of Louisiana many years ago, who were famous for their beautiful hair. Since then it has worked wonders, banishing gray hairs and restoring the hair to its original lustre. As a hair dressing it has no equal, keeping scalp in a clean, healthy condition. It has stood the test for over fifty years. Don't use strong alkaline soaps as they do more damage than good. Use "La Creole" hair dressing, the natural preservative. For sale by all dealers. Price $1.00. Manufactured by Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.—Adv.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

Calcium's Value in Tuberculosis

As a tonic and remedial agent in the treatment of tuberculosis, this element is being studied by scientists and physicians everywhere.

For more than two decades users of Eckman's Alterative have tested its efficacy in such cases, for calcium chlorid is one of the chief constituents of this preparation, which has produced beneficial results in thousands of instances. And in this form it is so combined as to be easily assimilated.

If you are thus afflicted, a trial may prove this to be just what is needed to assist Nature in bringing about a return to normal health.

It is safe to take, because it contains no poisonous or habit-forming drugs of any sort. Sold by leading druggists or sent direct. Booklet containing information of value and references sent upon request.

CONDITIONS IN MEXICO.

A Presbyterian missionary writes from Mexico:

"High prices, low wages and depreciated currency make untold suffering even to-day, and there is little hope in sight. But adversity makes the heart tender and easy of access. The Church is not yet doing anything like its share of the work to be done in Mexico."

GOVERNMENT STUDENTS IN MISSION SCHOOL.

This is a great step of recognition and this Christian school will have a great influence upon these fine young Chinese leaders, many of whom will go into government service.

FIJI ISLANDERS PRACTICALLY CHRISTIANIZED.

About ninety thousand is the present population of the Fiji Islanders. Of these, over eighty-three thousand are reported to be adherents of the Methodist Church. Their missionary contributions for the past year amounted to $53,000. Of the two hundred and fifty islands forming the Fiji group, only about eighty are inhabited. Missionary work was begun on one of the smaller islands in 1835.

ALL PRAYING AT ONCE.

A missionary, describing a recent prayer meeting in Korea, says:

"There was such a crowd to pray that we had to change the order of the meeting. We let everybody pray together. They put their hands on the floor, and prayed in one murmur, in perfect harmony. It was just like the murmuring of the waves of the sea. And their prayers were answered!" And he adds, "if those few Koreans can receive this mighty baptism, what about us?"

SOLDIERS ASCENDING THE CONGO.

From the Belgian Congo in Africa comes the word that while there has been no fighting near the missionaries and their work, many cargoes of supplies and arms and many shiploads of soldiers for the Allies have gone up the Congo to fight the Germans in East Africa. This condition of warfare in Africa makes things very unsettled in the Congo field, although the work has gone on encouragingly.

SHREWD WHITE SLAVERS.

The enormity and danger of the white slave trade is indicated in part by the following from the official report of Stanley W. Finch, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Federal Department of Justice:

"The white slave trader is able to entrap almost any woman whom he selects. No young girl is safe, especially if she be attractive and belongs to a large class who are compelled to seek work. The traffic has been so thoroughly systematized that, with a weakness among girls to begin with, and the theaters, the moving picture show, the skating rink and the dance hall as his field, the slaver is almost certain to succeed in his diabolical schemes."

THE RED MAN'S DEBT TO THE MISSIONARY.

Rev. D. McRuer, a Presbyterian missionary to the Indians of Oklahoma, telling of what the missionaries have done for the Red Men, says: "The missionaries have taken a great part in Indian history. They were the early helpers of the Indians. They translated all their books of literature and song. From the missionaries they got the Bible. They helped to hew out the first logs and gather together the first stones for the first building, built in this fair land as a place of learning and worship. The money spent in those days for this work has brought forth a thousandfold, and the money spent by the church and government to-day will bring great dividends in the coming years."

WONDERFUL PROGRESS IN CHINA.

"I have before me three issues of the minutes of the China Mission Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," writes Rev. John W. Cline of Soochow, China. "One issue is that of 1886, another that of 1897, and the third is that of 1915. Here are a few interesting items of comparison from the three: Adult baptisms: 1886, 11; 1897, 58; 1915, 1277. Infant baptisms: 1886, none; 1887, 29; 1915, 329. Entire membership: 1886, 146; 1897, 571; 1915, 6195. Gain over the previous year: 1886, 19; 1897, 38; 1915, 851. Sunday school scholars: 1886, 576; 1897, 1646; 1915, 11,107. Epworth League members: 1886, none; 1897, 292; 1915, 3153. Support of pastors: 1886, nothing; 1897, $659; 1915, $6586. Total contributions: 1886, $222; 1897, $1713; 1915, $16,318. Patients treated in hospitals: 1886, 12,096; 1897, 17,659; 1915, 36,180. Bibles, portions of Scripture, and tracts sold and distributed: 1886, 5767; 1915, 44,254."

"CHINA'S HOPE IS IN THE CHILDREN."

"The hope of China is in the rising generation," writes Baptist Missionary Sunstrom, from Kong Moon, "and it is imperative that we get the children under the transforming influence of the gospel; otherwise this hope cannot be realized. I have found that our primary and intermediate schools are among our mightiest evangelistic agencies. The pupils come under the daily influence of the Christian teacher and the Christian atmosphere of the school. We make it our primary object to get the pupils saved, not just to educate them. Our aim is not to educate heathen children, but to win them to Christ, and then select from among those who have become Christians the brightest and send them to the training school to prepare for active Christian work.

"The day school pupils are taken to the chapels on Sundays, and thus the power of the Gospel is brought to hear upon them still further. Many of these children would probably never have a chance to hear it if they could not come to Christian schools."

CHURCH NEWS.

Bishop Hoss has lately been holding some District Conferences in Virginia.

The Texas Methodists will make September a religious literature month.

We regret to note that Rev. H. M. Blair, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, has been quite ill. We wish for him a speedy and complete recovery.

Dr. H. M. DuBose is engaged in bringing McTyeire's History of Methodism down to date. The new edition of this excellent work is expected to come from the press by November 1.

Bishop J. C. Kilgo will make the address at the Anniversary of the Board of Education of the Western Virginia Conference. That body will convene at Charleston, W. Va., on September 6.

The Kwansei Gakuin is said to be the most largely attended school under the control of the Southern Methodist Church, its enrollment of students being 990. Its patronage has increased 200 per cent within the past five years, and The Sunday School Times recently pronounced it one of the most influential schools in the Orient.

From the Brooklyn Eagle of August 14, we take the following: "Work is progressing toward the union of the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a matter which consumed a good deal of time at the last General Conference in Saratoga, and in which Bishop E. R. Hendrix of the Church, South, took a prominent part."

Rev. B. G. Lowrey, who is said to be a brilliant campaigner, has been engaged to take the field in the interest of the financial needs of Mississippi College (Baptist) at Clinton, Miss. This institution is enjoying a large degree of prosperity under the presidency of Dr. J. W. Provine, who was a classmate of the Editor of the New Orleans Advocate at the University of Mississippi.

Mr. J. J. Gray, of Rockdale, Tenn., has added to his first gift of $25,000 to Emory University, another donation of the same amount, and with this $50,000 will be erected a building, to be connected with the School of Medicine, which will be known as the "J. J. Gray Clinic." Plans are in contemplation for the further equipping of this department of the University which, together with its endowment of $275,000, will make it worth about $875,000.

Rev. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, at Jacksville, Fla., has recently undergone an operation for a serious stomach trouble at the hands of Mayo brothers, at Rochester, Minn. His many friends in Mississippi will be pleased to know that he is considered out of danger and that the surgical treatment that he underwent seems to have proven a complete success. He will spend some time in Virginia before returning home.

"It is difficulties, not facilities, that nourish energy; and what pleasure there is in surmounting a difficulty. To men of determination difficulties are not obstacles, but stepping stones."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The late Maj. R. W. Millsaps remembered the Superannuate Endowment Fund of our Church with a bequest of one thousand dollars.

The Columbia Junior College, Milton, Oregon, is the only college our Church has west of the Rocky Mountains. It has property valued at $75,000, an endowment of $20,000, and the enrollment of students last session reached one hundred and eighty-six.

Southern Methodist University, Dallas, has now the following buildings: Dallas Hall, the Administration Building, erected at a cost of $300,000; the Woman's Building, a residence hall for young women students; and three dormitories for men—Rankin Hall, North Hall, and South Hall.

The August Bulletin of the Board of Education reports that the total assessment for education on the Annual Conferences of the Church last year was $376,123; and of this amount $254,273 was paid. The Conferences with the largest assessments were North Alabama, $26,200; Central Texas, $23,755; North Texas, $23,068; North Georgia, $20,907; Texas, $20,366.

According to the latest statistics, our Church has in six foreign missions 374 missionaries, 121 of these men, 145 single women, and 108 married women. Number of organized churches, 604; members, 33,553 (an increase of 3039); native preachers, 283; Bible women, 133; Sunday school officers, teachers, and pupils, 29,328; collected for all purposes on the field, $50,407.

GIVING A NECESSITY.

"We simply must give if we would have. That which is withheld it is that is wasted and lost; that which we give for Crist's sake it is that is saved unto all eternity. Luther quoted this text, 'Give, and it shall be given unto you,' as a justification of his generous giving. 'Dear Katie,' he said to his wife, 'if we've no money, the silver cups will have to go; we must give, if we wish to have anything.'"

That the People May Know

Names assist us to distinguish accurately and arrive intelligently at the true worth of things material—and otherwise.

The names of the men who are actively engaged in the management and affairs of the Tharp-Bultman-Sontheimer Co. indicate high qualification—it permits the layman to choose correctly the best that is to be had—there is a choice.

The high-class service, the exceptional facilities to render the public only the best and all that has placed this company far in advance of others is the result of the untiring efforts and enthusiasm of the men that are now at the helm.

They have welded together after many years one of the largest businesses of its kind in the country—they are the progressives.

The same high, excellent and traditional characteristics of the firm will continue. They are the precious heritages that have been handed down to us from the old firms whom we have succeeded.

Every employe of the company has remained loyal, the excellent horse-drawn and auto equipment that we are justly proud of and the personal service of gentlemen are at the command of those who have a choice and are particular.

Established Thirty-Five Years Ago.

FROM WALNUT GROVE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our revival meeting at Walnut Grove began on the fifth Sunday in July and continued five days. The preaching was done by Brother J. M. Corley, of Enterprise, Miss. Brother Corley is among our best "pastor evangelists," and his sermons are delivered with all the fervor of a man who believes in the power of the gospel to save sinners and who has upon his heart the burden of unsaved souls. The tangible results of this revival were 7 additions to the Church and the usual "warming up" within the Church which follows a good protracted meeting.

Our meeting at Zion Church began on the first Sunday in August and continued five days. Rev. J. B. King, of Bay Springs, did the preaching. There were 16 additions to the Church as a result of this meeting. Brother King's preaching is of a high order and his ringing utterances never fail to find the mark. We feel that we have been greatly helped by the visits to our charge of these two consecrated men.

E. H. COOLEY, P. C.

I AM A NON-UNION MAN.

1. Because I was born and reared in this beautiful Southland and am a full-fledged Southerner.

2. Because I believe my sainted father would be a "non-unionist." The grand old Southern Methodist Church was good enough for him. He was devoted to her doctrines, her Discipline, and loved his Church next to his Bible. What was good enough for him, is good enough for me.

3. Doctor, I agree with you in every word you have written on the subject, and think you are master of the situation.

4. I think Brother S. A. Brown, of Kosciusko, in his article in the Advocate of August 10, "hit the nail on the head" from start to finish.

5. I agree with the article in the Advocate of August 10, "The 'Border States' Not Most Involved."

6. Our Southern Methodist Church has made greater strides, and has accomplished as much, or more, than any other branch of the Christian Church. We are independent along all lines. Why should we make any change?

Tho people are reading, Doctor. Keep up your good work.

Dublin, Miss. Yours truly,
D. S. BACHMAN.

A VISIT TO PRENTISS, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: It was my great pleasure recently to spend two weeks with Brother Jas. M. Lewis, of the Prentiss charge. Revival services were conducted at Prentiss and Mt. Zion Churches. I feel free to say that I have never had more appreciative audiences. The attention was marked and often there appeared to be a spiritual wave sweeping over the congregation. Brother Lewis has wrought well and is much beloved by all denominations. He is eloquent in prayer, is a power in song, and is thoroughly consecrated. The brethren said we have Lewis and expect to keep him as our pastor. Our church at Prentiss has only a small membership, but there are three Millsaps boys on the official board, and if the training at Millsaps is dependable, the church is sure to go forward at once.

Purvis, Miss. H. MELLARD.

"You may think you see farthest in the daytime, but you don't. At midnight you see the stars. You would be dreadfully short-sighted if you had to live always in daylight."

FROM THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Dear Editor: Since I reported to you last a number of excellent meetings have been held throughout the Brookhaven District. The Monticello, Fernwood, Pleasant Grove, Meadville, Topisaw, Gailman, and Scotland charges have all reported excellent revivals. Rev. Dan Kelly conducted a most successful series of services at Caseyville on the Scotland charge, and he has lately been preaching at the Crystal Springs Camp Meeting, where a gracious spiritual awakening is said to be in progress. The Brookhaven District continues to prosper generally. Cooper has fully caught the step of a wide-awake and progressive leader. He is preaching, visiting, and looking after every interest of the Church. He is loved by all the people and they look forward to his coming among them with great pleasure.

OBSERVER.

A FINE MEETING.

Dear Dr. Meek: We closed a successful arbor meeting near the Oakland schoolhouse last night. Rev. H. T. Young did the preaching, which was instructive as well as convincing. He won the hearts of all. Backsliders were reclaimed, sinners were brought from darkness to light, and the whole church was revived. Thirty-six persons united with the Church by vows and baptism. All desire that we shall have Brother Young with us next summer, if the Lord wills it. We are greatly encouraged and give God the praise for the blessings he has bestowed upon us. May the Lord bless you and your work!

JAMES L. CADY, P. C.

TWO GOOD MEETINGS.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just closed a successful revival at Hickory Ridge, in which Rev. J. M. Smith did the preaching. The music was conducted by Rev. C. A. Massey. There were 34 accessions to the Church, and a large number who professed religion. The spiritual condition of the church was much improved.

From Hickory Ridge we went to Rocky Springs and also had a good revival there. A class of 10 was received and many pledges were made to live a better life.

Brothers Smith and Massey have done a great work in the revivals on my charge. C. H. STRAIT.

"Every shut-in may use the greatest power granted to man by taking part in the ministry of intercession."

HANNAH'S FAITH.

Hannah had had a life of sorrow and trouble of one kind and another.

"How could you bear it?" asked a friend of hers.

"I didn't bear it!" she replied. "The Lord bore it for me!"

"Yes, that's always the best way, which we are too apt to forget."

"Yes, but that's not enough. We must leave the trouble with him. If the worry comes back to me; I take it back to him. I keep on doing that until at last I forget it!"—Western Christian Advocate.

What stops my despair? This: 'Tis not what man does which exalts him, but what man would do!"—Browning.

MARRIED.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Brown, of Haynesville, La., on Wednesday morning, June 7, 1916, at 8:30 o'clock, Miss BESSIE BROWN and Mr. SAM GREEN of Shamrock, La., Rev. A. S. J. Neill officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McEachern, of Haynesville, La., gave in marriage their daughter, MABEL, to Mr. E. E. STEWART, of Vivian, La., on Wednesday morning, June 21, at 8:30 o'clock, Rev. A. S. J. Neill officiating.

On Saturday night, June 22, 1916, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dickerson, of Haynesville, La., Miss BESSIE DICKERSON and Mr. ELMER McKENZIE of Homer, Rev. A. S. J. Neill officiating.

Dist. Secretary.

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, SECOND QUARTER.

Number of adult auxiliaries, 137; new ones, 3; number of adult members, 2887; new adult members, 170; number of young People's auxiliaries, 47; new auxiliaries, 5; number of Young People's members, 590; new members, 17; junior divisions, 42; new divisions, 1; number of junior members, 865; subscribers to "Voice," 732; to "Young Christian Worker," 194.

Amount sent Conference Treasurer, $2210.27, which is itemized as follows:

Amount sent Conf. Treas.....	$1977.04
Collected for Wesley Houses.	43.20
Conference Expense Fund ...	190.03
Total.....	$2210.27

Mrs. B. F. LEWIS,
Cor. Secretary.

Mrs. Lewis writes that in spite of storm and flood conditions her report shows an increase of $165.65 over the second quarter of last year. That is an encouraging note to sound.

Notice the amount collected for the Wesley Houses. What was the sum pledged toward the support of this work? We feel sure that some of our women have forgotten the amount; and, judging from their actions, one would infer that they knew nothing at all of a pledge. We are failing to meet our responsibility right at this point. The amount was not very large—only $300. Doesn't it seem small when we compare it with all the Lord has done for us? Of course, it is only one part of the work, and you say you have so many demands made upon you. That is true, but remember, you are trying to be like Christ and follow in his steps, and he does not neglect any part of his work.

Because we have failed to do our part, it has been necessary to order the payment of $100 out of the Conference Expense Fund to relieve the immediate necessities of the Meridian Wesley House. May this not happen again! Let us be true to our trust; and let it not be said of the women of the Mississippi Conference, "They were found wanting."

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT MEETINGS.

On account of the long stretch of territory included in this district, it has been thought best to have more than one district meeting. The exact dates have not been decided upon, but the meetings will be held in the following places: Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Harriston, Gloster, and Liberty. Mrs. S. S. Harris will be present at these meetings and her messages will be full of inspiration as she vividly portrays the many phases of our work in China, where she has labored for a number of years.

MISSION STUDY.

"Half the world has never yet heard of Christ. Half the world is without any scientific medical knowledge. Half the world cannot read or write in any language. Half the world is poor, under economic conditions that offer little hope of improvement till they get a Christian basis of civilization."

When we know these facts and face them, we face a task set us by the Master himself, and we should not leave it until a decision pleasing to God has been reached. Some one has said that a narrow vision makes a narrow man, and that a vast vision makes a vast man. May the world and its needs be imprinted upon our hearts so that we shall live in the light of a world vision until the work shall be done—the task ended! Our churches are the home base of missions. We must move our churches. Our churches must catch the vision, the message, the spirit of missions.

We are looking forward to the day when our great foreign mission enterprise will not be necessary, when a native Church shall govern itself and teach its own people: then the task in each country shall become a home mission enterprise, a task of applying the principles of Jesus Christ to every institution and to all life. Every nation will be brought to Christian living by its own people—native workers who shall teach and preach with a key to the hearts of their country-men that we can never have.

Until the coming of that day, let us look upon the work of foreign and home missions as one great task—the establishing and perfecting of the kingdom of God in the world, the evangelizing and Christianizing of the nations of the earth. Oh, that every American woman would only give something of her time and her money and her prayers to this, the greatest task in the world, this task of establishing the nations of the earth upon the principles of righteousness and love and developing Christlikeness in men and women! Is not this task an appeal to every Christian woman and an answer to the question often asked: "Why study missions?"—Extract from leaflet of the Woman's Missionary Council.

DAYS OF ANXIETY FOR OUR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PRESIDENT.

We have just received a message stating that Mr. Graham, the father of our beloved President, Mrs. R. E. Johnson, had a fall last week, which resulted in a broken hip. Mr. Graham has been very frail for many months, and it is feared that this accident will result fatally. We ask our women all over the Conference to pray so earnestly for our President that she may feel that we are hourly bearing her to the throne of grace. May the Father keep her very close to him and sustain her in these hours of watchful anxiety; and may she realize as never before that God is her refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble!"

There can be nothing acceptable to God which does not begin with faith, but he who is contented with becoming a believer is like a man who expends all his strength in laying a good foundation and then ceases to build.—William Henry Green.

Along the path of life, we should be prepared to do two things: to look ahead, and to overlook. The first will guard us from loss and injury; the second will protect us from disputes and quarrels.—Schopenhauer.

Astonishing Power of Iron to Give Strength to Broken Down Nervous People

Physician Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate Folk 200 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a well known specialist who has studied widely both in this country and Europe, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue, and therefore nothing you eat does you any good you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin, another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, solid healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by all druggists.

The efficiency of Sweet Dreams has made of it the accepted standard everywhere.

It does not stain, it lasts all night long and is free from the offensive odor associated with so many similar preparations.

Kilmichael, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a fine meeting at Klimichael. Fifteen persons were received into the Church, 12 of them on profession of faith. Rev. L. P. Wasosn did the preaching after Sunday night. He is fine help. Seventy-seven members have been added to the Kilmichael Church in less than three years.—J. J. Garner, P. C.

New Albany Ct., N. Miss. Conf.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just closed a very successful meeting at Ingomar. Rev. J. H. Bell, of Columbus, Miss., did the preaching. Brother Bell preaches the gospel in the old-time way with great power. The singing was conducted by Prof. Elmer Black, of Ecru, Miss. I am now in the midst of my summer campaigns. Everything is moving along nicely.—C. A. Northington, P. C.

Pine Grove, La.

Dear Advocate: We have closed a revival at Pine Grove Church, which we feel was a great success, considering the inclemency of the weather, and also the fact that there were several persons sick and unable to attend. Through this meeting, I feel that the Church generally was revived and that its members will hereafter work with a more progressive spirit. We had two accessions by profession of faith.—B. D. Watson, P. C.

GIRDLING THE GLOBE WITH GOSPELS.

More than one thousand colporteurs—white men, brown men, yellow men, black men—are busy all over the world selling the books of the British and Foreign Bible Society. You find the colporteur with his bag of books in busy modern cities and in the wildest and least known parts of the earth. Far away from big towns and civilized regions there is often not much use for money. It might come about that if you wanted a sheepskin in order to make yourself some shoes, and if you had many cows and therefore more milk than you needed, you would make some cheeses and exchange them for the sheepskin. At times something of the sort happens to the colporteurs. In Colombia a Spanish Testament was bought from one of them last year for two tins of sardines, and another Testament for fifteen cakes of chocolate. In Cairo a Moslem gave four eggs for an Arabic Gospel. But when he met the colporteur next day he stopped him: "Your book is very good," he said, "but the eggs I gave you were not fresh. Therefore I desire to pay the price of the book;" and he did so. High up among the peaks of the Andes some miners who were washing the wet river-sand for gold, bought Gospels and Testaments for little grains of virgin gold.

ENORMOUS LAND VALUES.

There is an amazing price set upon the land of London. In the center of the English metropolis tiny lots have been sold for fortunes.

An acre there is the dearest in the world. Many a transaction over ground in the heart of the city has set the figure of $16,250,000 per acre. One square mile of London is vaued at $750,000,000. The land beneath the Bank of England at a low estimate is worth $35,000,000, and there are only three acres in that tract, too.

There are places on Queen Victoria, Upper Thames, St. Mary-at-Hill and Cannon Streets where one square inch is worth $1.25. In Lombard Street and King William Street prices have ranged from $200 to $250 per square foot.—National Real Estate Journal.

NO HEATHEN TEMPLE FOR MILES AROUND.

The influence of missionary work in the agricultural settlements of Sitiawan and Sarawak, Borneo, has put an end to practically all forms of heathen worship, even among those Chinese who are not members of any Christian church.

"On my last visit to Siriawan," writes Methodist Misionary W. G. Shellabear, "I was told that non-Christians are constantly coming to our church to be married. No heathen temple is to be seen for miles around. And there is practically no idolatry in the homes of these people.

"A Chinese Board of Education has assumed responsibility for all village schools, and appoints and controls the teachers.

"At the district conference it did one's heart good to see the fifty official members from seven quarterly conferences under the leadership of their itinerant pastor, the Rev. Lim Po Chin, all ready with written reports, each taking an active and intelligent part in the proceedings.

"The Girls' School in Malacca is rapidly attaining a high standard of efficiency. Prejudice against the education of girls is now a thing of the past, although the Chinese here have always been more conservative than those of other cities of Malaysia."

VIRILE KOREAN CHURCH.

Rev. R. A. Hardie, of Seoul, Korea, tells of a vigorous Methodist Church in Seoul: "At Chong-Kyo Church the morning congregation averages over three hundred and fifty, and the attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting is from one hundred and fifty to two hundred. A most encouraging feature in connection with this Church is that the attendance of young men is rapidly increasing. Last Sunday I baptized eight young men and twelve women. The young men formed the most promising class of candidates for baptism that it has ever been my privilege to examine. The Church is meeting all its financial obligations."

THE COMMISSIONER ON A LARK.

At my right hand stands a little five year old saying, "Grandfather, write some on the writer," and grandfather is pleading, "Oh, it's too hot;" and most certainly that is the truth, the whole truth, in this western room, with the mercury dancing among the nineties. Here I am at Coffeeville, "a long, long way from Tipperary," scouting around in another "sector"—result of recent sketch of career of "Mosby and his men." Whence the name of this "Ville" baffles inquiry, except it be from some earlier settler, for there are no indications otherwise. One of the oldest inhabitants tells me much of the history of the town; embraced in which are the traditions that Coffeeville is one of the oldest settlements in this section; that it had in an earlier day the strongest bar in North Mississippi, having such jurists as Walthall and L. C. Q. Lamar among its citizens. There is an old home near by known as the Polk farm, once the cotton plantation of President James K. Polk. Stock-raising seems to be large in the thought of this section now.

On the trip up here we had a "layover" of an hour at Grenada, which we employed very pleasantly strolling over the town. Having been the guest there, some twenty years ago, of Tom Lewis, who allowed me the privilege of his pulpit to present the claims of Millsaps College, I set out to locate the Methodist Church, which was soon done, though there have been many improvements in the progressive little city since that time. The stately old church is the same, but the parsonage is a more pretentious building. From its exterior it presented a really tempting appearance to the man from the home of many mirrors; by the way all the churches seem grouped in this "sector," and, as here in front of the Methodist Church five ways meet, we could but recall that experience of St. Paul where the two seas met and that of General Lee at five forks and that at Appomattox a few days later. But a few minutes with Tucker developed that, with Tucker to look after the flock and Countiss to run the College, our Methodism is not likely soon to share in the fate that came in those two disasters. The city government is manifesting the true spirit of "Grown in Mississippi" by paving the main streets with pine blocks sawed and creosoted in the vicinity. In these neighborhoods we hear as much complaint of the boll weevil as we do in the lower counties of the State. Query: Where does the line of the boll weevil infection cease? My conviction is that it extends just as far as the climate is congenial to the growth of cotton.

We spent several days with Storment and his good people. While there are three church buildings in the city, Storment has the field to himself—a tribute to te itinerant plan of supplying the pulpit. On Sunday evening we had the great pleasure of hearing the pastor preach a most excellent sermon to a good house of young people, recalling the good old times when the beaux and belles came together, first for the pleasure of the stroll (I speak from pleasant memories), and to encourage the preacher.

When I left the home among the mirrors, "hard by the synogogue," it was for a two weeks' leave, and I am more than ever convinced that the limit of a vacation should be extended to four. A fellow don't more than get started to get ready to begin to relax and enjoy himself before the announcement, "Time's up," calls him to the bat again. By the way, that reminds me that in almost every community in the Delta and in the hills, my trips have been enlivened by associations with Millsaps boys, old and younger. Wherever I have gone I have been favored with the Advocate and the last copy pleases me well. While Steel and Ellis with that "nighty" proposition give spice and pepper, there is from the pen of Bishop Candler that which calls for more sober consideration. With Bishops Candler and Hoss at the wheel, we may feel the more confident that there will be no running away with the wagon. If I remember correctly one of your contributors suggested a full, free, and extensive discussion of Unification in the Advocate. So far, this Southern Methodist is satisfied to rest his case with these Bishops and Judge Reeves. Meek, I'm from Missouri, and can't help it, on some questions.

To-morrow we turn our faces toward the historic city on the hills via Itta Bena, where dwell the greater part of the clan and where we have made our greatest contribution to the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference. We have given them into the hands of Shipman, satisfied that their shepherding will be safe. With apologies to whomsoever I may have poached upon, I close.

THE LEADERSHIP OF THE SPIRIT.

The Holy Spirit is the great executive agent of the Godhead in carrying forward the mighty scheme of human redemption. He convicts, regenerates, and perfects spiritually the human soul, and it is as men respond to his pleadings that they make progress in Christian growth and development. The Holy Spirit woos and entreats and warns, but He does not override the human will and compel any one to follow His directions. Though omnipotent, He may be resisted, grieved, and repulsed. And in the fact that this is so often done lies the explanation of the failures, defeats, and tragedies that are so common in the spiritual realm.

This leadership of the Spirit is indispensably necessary not only for the development of the individual Christian, but also in the work to save others and set up the Master's kingdom in the world. The fact that she undertakes to achieve apart from His guidance and empowerment accounts for much of the weakness and inefficiency of the Church in this day. When He re-enforces it, any method, even the blowing of rams' horns, will succeed; and when He is not in any plan of operation, however much it may attract and dazzle, in the end it will come to naught. A man-made and man-run Christianity can never turn back the turbulent tides of sin and lead men to the Cross, to Jesus, and to the Heavenly Home. What the twentieth century Church needs is to get on its knees and come into touch with the Holy Spirit, as the Church in the first century was. Then she will recount her triumphs more in truly spiritual terms and less in what she has wrought in the way of accumulating things of a material nature. Saved souls and not gathered dollars will be her glory, and she will care little for mere numbers unless they have the mind of Christ. May God save us from the shams of a half-heathen Christianity and help us to address ourselves to the accomplishments of tasks that will endure, when "the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is!"

"I AM THE DOOR."

These words of Jesus, which are recorded in the Gospel according to St. John, should be weighed carefully and meditated upon thoughtfully, as the meaning which they convey is a very great one. This statement is nothing short of a declaration that all who enter the kingdom of God must do so through Christ. We are here reminded that the sole condition of salvation is to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, "for there is none other name under heaven given among men wherehy we must be saved." Christ hath also said, "I am the way," and he is the only way by which one may come into the heavenly portals and be a member of the perfected and triumphant Church of God. How often have we heard it sung that "the way of the cross leads home," and how true it is! Charles Wesley voiced a great fact in his hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," when he wrote:

"Other refuge have I none;
Hangs my helpless soul on thee."

Christ hath bought us with his precious blood. We are His and He is the Father's; but in the Christian religion we deal directly with the Son, because he is the Father's ambassador, and the words that he spoke and the deeds that he did when on earth were not for his own glorification, but for the Father's. The Father and Son are one. He that rejects the Son rejects the Father also, even as he that accepts the Son accepts the Father. Saint John puts this truth thus: "Whosoever denieth the Son hath not the Father: (but) he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also." If a man believe not in the Son he hath not faith in the Father, and, though he may think that he believes in "God, the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth," there is no difference between the position he occupies with reference to God and that of the person who is an infidel. Moreover, it is reasonable to suppose that at the Judgment Day they will be put in the same class and treated alike, notwithstanding the fact that it is stylish in some circles where much worldly wisdom is affected to reject the divinity of Christ and yet to pretend to believe in God.

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

A WHOLESOME TENDENCY.

We take the following from a recent editorial in the New Orleans Times-Picayune:

"The passage of the workingmen's compensation law by Congress and by a great majority of the States, Louisiana included, is likely to be followed, in short order, by the demand for a compulsory health insurance bill that will protect and provide for the working man in the event of sickness, as he is now protected if incapacitated by accident or injury. Many hundreds of thousands of our workers are already protected, in a health way, in various insurance companies; but there are even more who are without any protection whatever and who become a heavy burden to themselves in the event of sickness or when dependent on so uncertain a thing as charity. While classified by many as socialism, compulsory health insurance is now in force, in one form or another, in most of the countries of Europe, and Canada at present has the question before it for consideration and action with every probability that it will adopt some plan to guarantee aid to such of its workers as are sick. It is not to be wondered at that under these circumstances a disposition should be shown to extend the system to the United States."

We think that this trend in legislation is wholesome. The greatest possession of any nation is not its material resources, but the men and women and children who constitute its population. Hence, the first and chiefest concern of every government should be for the welfare and improvement of the people for whom it exists. One of the greatest lessons that Jesus taught was that of the dignity and worth of man. Even the lowliest of the human race have a value in the sight of God which is beyond all computation.

This brotherhood spirit is obviously on the increase. Not long since we were talking to a big-brained New Orleans banker, and, rather to our surprise, he stated that in his opinion no person without means who has become too old to work ought to be permitted by the government to suffer for the necessities of life. As the Editor of the Times-Picayune says, in referring to the health insurance legislation, this may be "socialism," but, if so, it is a form of it which is Christian in spirit, and which cannot but tend to make the world brighter and better.

A REMARKABLE UTTERANCE.

We hope that none of our readers will overlook the article by Rev. James Weaver Moore, of Chattanooga, on "Bishop Candler and the Constitution," which appears in this issue of the Advocate. His suggestion that Bishop Candler was not familiar with the decision of the Supreme Court which he cites, is amusing. There is perhaps no man in the Nation who is better informed concerning the past history of American Methodism than our great Georgia chief pastor, and none is an abler interpreter of constitutional law.

But what we desire our readers particularly to note is our correspondent's view that our next General Conference, co-operating with the General Conference of the Northern Church, will have power to effect the unification of the two denominations, and that only such features of the unification plan as are constitutional in character will need to be passed upon by the Annual Conferences. We do not at all concur in this view, but still the question which our brother raises is one that might open the way for grave possibilities for evil. Suppose, for instance, a majority of our next General Conference should vote in favor of some plan of unification, and a band of ultra-unionists should go into court and set up the claim that a consolidation had been effected and that all our property belonged to the new Church thus constituted. It might give us serious trouble; and we Methodists have learned from sad experience that there is no telling what kind of a verdict a secular court will hand down in the case of Church litigation. Brother Moore's article ought at least have this effect: it should arouse Southern Methodists to see that the next General Conference is not made up of men who are so soft on the subject of union as to be willing to take it in almost any form. Every man should be made to declare himself unequivocally on this overshadowing question before he is named as a delegate.

CONSOLATION.

By J. G. Cronbach.

If your heart aches, and things seem to go wrong
And troubles and misfortunes around you do throng,
And the world looks gloomy and dark to you,
Take courage, my brother; brace up anew.
There's one consolation, whate'er may betide—
There'll be no more troubles on the other side!

If your friends prove false, and they despise you, too,
And fail in oft doing the right thing by you;
If they smile in your face when all goes well,
But turn their backs when your troubles you tell;
There's one consolation to look to with pride—
There'll be no false friends on the other side!

If constantly suffering from grief and despair,
Through sickness and pain, making it hard to bear,
And life becomes dreary, comfortless, too,
As your journey through life you still pursue,
There's one consolation to take as your guide—
There'll be no more suffering on the other side!

So cheer up, my brother, don't worry so much;
All will be well if you just keep in close touch
With Jesus, your Savior, and comforter, too,
Who suffered and felt the same as you do;
He is patiently waiting to be your guide.
And lead you safe over to the other side!

IS THE "OLD-TIME RELIGION" OUT OF DATE?

By Henry W. Adams.

We quote from the leading editorial of one of our greatest religious journals the following paragraphs:

"The biggest religious change of the last generation is the breakdown of ready-made rules for Christian consistency. Thirty or forty years ago, church members were perfectly sure that a Christian shouldn't play cards, dance, go to the theater, attend circuses, make visits on Sunday, and so on. There was an unquestioned code of things under taboo, for people that professed religion. But now all these taboos are questioned.

"When there rose up a generation that questioned everything and began asking, 'Why shouldn't we go to the theater?' 'What's wrong about card playing?' and so forth, parents didn't know what to answer. They ventured a lot of confused guesses that didn't hold. And the old-time manufactured rules collapsed."

"The minister cannot undertake to tell a layman imperatively that he must not go on automobile trips Sundays. There's no Bible commandment to quote concerning automobiles."

Further along in the editorial some good suggestions were given to Christians, advising them to post themselves as to what is right and wrong in conduct, so that they may the better guide their younger friends in spiritual things.

But, alas, as might be expected, our big dailies saw in the articles "great stuff" to show how the "old time religion" of our fathers and mothers had been and the easy ways of the world had taken its place. These dailies quoted what was questionable in the article and left out its wisdom. Thus, as usual, when men of God make mistakes, the fire got beyond control. How many dailies reviewed it, we don't know, but the one we saw enters some 400,000 homes and is read daily by perhaps a million and a half men, women and children.

The most scathing rebuke given by the Son of God, in His letters to the churches, was to orthodox, lukewarm and worldly Laodicea. Christ's darling bride, the true, blood-bought Church, within all the Churches, is spotless in His sight, and worthy of all praise, but alas, on our church rolls there are dancing, card-playing, theater-going, Sunday auto-riding members who make the man of the world sneer, and he says: "I'm as good as they; I'll take the chance!" So he goes on his sinful way, contented, and probably will lose his soul; and his blood will be on those members who so misrepresent Christ's Church.

Whoever knew the crowd who run the parlor-gambling places, where pretty prizes are given to the women who win, in place of vulgar dollars, or the other crowd who dance till after midnight, and whose hearts are filled with all the society events, to ever bother themselves about winning a soul? No indeed, such church members are themselves poor prodigals, far off from the Father's house, feeding their souls on swines' husks, which never satisfy. Come home, poor prodigal, come home, and it will be like the prodigal of old. "When he was a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him." And next, he gave him a great supper, and the love of the father and, the choice viands satisfied.

Another thing which is sapping the life blood of the Church is that in some of our great universities the theological schools, and occasionally in our pulpits, there are men half for God and half for Baal. A refined Bob-Ingersollism has taken the place, where a generation ago, real men of God held the reins.—Western Christian Advocate.

BISHOP CANDLER AND THE CONSTITUTION.

Bishop Candler has recently published in several Church papers an article on "Methodist Unification." That the Bishop has come to favor the "Oklahoma Plan" is gratifying to those friends of unification who had feared that the Bishop's threat (made in pleasantry) to join the Salvation Army indicated a permanent hostility to any form of union. A still further shock was given the thoughtful reader by the following remarkable utterance: "It is amazing," says the good Bishop, "for any one to suppose that the two General Conferences meeting in 1918 could consummate the matter. The constitution of our Church requires such a matter to be submitted to the Annual Conferences even if perfect agreement had been reached by all parties and the agreement approved without amendment by the General Conferences."

Coming from Bishop Candler, this is a remarkable utterance in more than one way. The Bishop is one of the judges who may finally determine the constitutionality of this enactment. It is scarcely correct for judges to prejudge a case that may come before them.

This statement is further remarkable since it betrays a lack of investigation on the part of the good Bishop and an entire ignoring of a prominent chapter in our history. The College of Bishops may decide this question in line with Bishop Candler's hasty and ill-timed deliverance; but if they do so decide, it will be in the teeth of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, by which decision we came into the possession of millions of dollars worth of property.

In the case of "Smith vs. Swormstedter," the Northern Church affirmed (and Bishop Candler's argument seems to range him on their side) that "the General Conference was a delegated or representative body with limited constitutional powers." On the contrary, our Church affirmed: "That the General Conference had supreme and unlimited control over the Church in all cases in which the exercise of their power is not expressly limited." We argued that in 1806 Bishop Asbury submitted a paper to the Annual Conferences in which he urged that we "provide for a more permanent mode of Church government and, also, provide for a future delegated General Conference whose powers should be defined and limited by constitutional restrictions." Before this, the General Conference, which was in fact a mass meeting of all the preachers, possessed "unlimited powers over our entire economy." To-day the General Conference by right inherits the powers of the mass meeting Conferences, except as these are circumscribed and limited by the Restrictive Rules.

Let us hear the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States:

"It is insisted, however, that the General Conference of 1844 possessed no power to divide the Methodist Episcopal Church as then organized or to consent to such division, and, hence, the organization of the Church, South, was without authority and the traveling preachers within it separated from an ecclesiastical connection which is essential to enable them to participate as beneficiaries.

"But we do not agree that this division was made without the proper authority. On the contrary, we entertain no doubt that the General Conference of 1844 was competent to make it and that each division of the Church, under the separate organizations, is just as legitimate and can lay claim to as high sanction, both ecclesiastically and temporally, as the Methodist Episcopal Church first founded in the United States. The same authority which founded that Church in 1784 has divided it and established two separate and independent organizations occupying the place of the old one.

"In 1784, when this Church was first established, and down until 1808, the General Conference was composed of all the traveling preachers of that Connection. * * * * * * * * *

"It cannot, therefore, be denied, indeed, it has scarcely been denied, that this body whilst composed of all the traveling preachers possessed the power to divide it and authorize the organization and establishment of two separate and independent Churches. The power must necessarily be regarded as inherent in the General Conference, as they might have constructed two ecclesiastical organizations over the territory of the United States originally, if deemed expedient, in the place of one; so they might, at any subsequent period, the power remaining unchanged.

"But it is insisted that this power has been taken away or given up by the action of the General Conference of 1808. In that year the constitution of that body was changed so as to be composed thereafter of traveling preachers, to be elected by the Annual Conferences in the ratio of one for every five members. This has been altered from time to time, so that in 1844 the representation was one for every twenty-one members. At the time of this change and as a part of it certain limitations were imposed upon the powers of this General Conference called the six Restrictive Articles. Subject to these restrictions, the delegated Conference possessed the same powers as when composed of the entire body of preachers. It will be seen that these relate only to the doctrines of the Church, its representation in the General Conference, the episcopacy, discipline of its preachers and members, the Book Concern, and the Charter Fund. In all other respects and in everything that concerns the welfare of the hurch, the General Conference represents the sovereign power the same as before. This is the view as taken by the General Conference itself, exemplified by the usage and practice of that body. In 1820 they set off to the British Conference of Wesleyan Methodists several circuits and societies in lower Canada. In 1828 they separated the Annual Conference of upper Canada from this jurisdiction and erected the same into a distinct and independent Church."

Surely the power that separated can unite. If Bishop Candler's view be true, we owe the Northern Methodists several million of dollars. The General Conference divided the Church and the General Conferences can unite the Churches.

Again, we should request that our bishops, in keeping with this ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States, strictly construe the law in the light of the Restrictive Rules. When a veto is exercised, a definite statement ought to be made as to which Restrictive Rule is violated by the proposed enactment. The General Conference of 1860 sent down to the Annual Conferences the question of lay representation, just as to-day we are sending the proposition of the Conference membership of the lay leaders to the same tribunal. Neither of these enactments violated any of the Restrictive Rules, and it was competent, in the humble judgment of this writer, for the General Conference to finally deal with them. We ought to remember the dictum of Cooley, who says: "Nor are courts at liberty to declare an act void, because in their opinion it is opposed to a spirit supposed to pervade the constitution, but not expressed in words."

Again, I would observe that the Church should at once organize a movement looking to the separation of the judicial and executive functions of our government. Justice Hughes refused to say anything on matters political as long as he was a member of the Supreme Court of the nation. Some of our bishops are leaders of the forces opposed to unification, and more trustworthy or valiant soldiers never drew blades. When interested, they are indefatigable workers and can touch more springs of influence than other men in the Church. All of us are proud of their splendid ability and their prowess as warriors. But the advocates ought not to expect to mount to the wool sack and decide the constitutionality of the case in which they have been such brilliant lawyers. But to decide a case before they have heard any but their own arguments is scarcely allowable. When the judicial functions were bestowed, first by General Conference action and afterwards were riveted by placing their episcopal exercise in the constitution, a great mistake was made. To have three powers of government in the hands of the General Conference is poor policy, but to place two functions in as small a body as the episcopacy is almost equally unwise.

The Northern and Southern Churches are going to unite. It is high time that both Churches cured their deficiencies in government, and no better opportunity was ever offered to ecclesiastical bodies to perfect themselves than now presents itself to both Churches. How would a scheme like this work? Let each Quadrennial Conference elect a judge. The judges thus elected shall constitute a court, to which shall be referred all judicial questions. This court shall review the judicial opinions of the bishops, shall hear all appeals and shall decide all constitutional questions, after these shall have been presented to the court and argument heard. Members of this court will not be permitted to be members of the General Conference. It seems that some such scheme would cure the anomalies presented in the government of both Churches.

It is a matter of congratulation that our good friend Bishop Candler has come as far along the road of unification as he has now already trod. It is to be earnestly hoped that he will soon get the "second blessing" and then proceed on the way to perfection. Maybe the Bishop may yet be assigned to a residence in Boston.

Quite a delegation would go to hear him deliver a lecture on the "Pilgrim Fathers" to a Boston audience on Forefathers' Day.

"BISHOP CANDLER AND THE CONSTITUTION"—ANOTHER VIEW.

The Rev. J. W. Moore has recently published in the Midland Methodist an article under the words quoted above, using as his text two sentences from Bishop Candler's recent utterance on "Calm and Careful Consideration Called For," as follows: "It is amazing for any one to suppose that the General Conferences meeting simultaneously in 1918 could consummate the whole matter (unification). The Constitution of our Church requires such a matter to be submitted to the Annual Conferences even if perfect agreement had been reached by all parties and the agreement approved without amendment by the General Conference." Brother Moore differs radically from the Bishop on the question of the General Conferences being able to consummate unification, for he states that "the General Conference divided the Church and the General Conferences can unite the Churches." The discussion involves constitutional law and precedents recognized in the organizing of the Church and developed in its history. In the premises it may be well to state the definition of the word "constitution" that the mater be clearly in the mind's eye. A worthy authority defines it as "the principles or fundamental laws which govern a State or other organized body of men, and are embodied in written documents, or implied in the institutions and usages of the country or society." In the case where every member of an organization may be present and vote on any question that may arise from time to time the constitution is at its minimum of importance; but when the organization delegates a body to act for it in a judicial, or executive, or legislative sense, the constitution becomes of maximum significance, for it is the protection of the real components of the organization. In the former instance the constitution may be modified or swept away at a single sitting of the body, no matter what may be the restrictive regulations agreed upon at any preceding time. Every organization has an inherent right, which is never stated in its written constitution, but nevertheless constitutional, to divide itself, to dissolve itself, or to unite with other organizations, when the majority of its members so agree. In the case of organizations being largely controlled by delegated bodies working under constitutional limitations, past usages and practices are followed as the true lines of interpretation of the constitution. In the instance before us a minister of the Southern Methodist Church has advanced ideas in conflict with the past accepted construction of the Church's constitution. Let us proceed, therefore, to consider some of the problems that concern us, relative to our constitutional law and otherwise, presented in the paper of Brother Moore.

1. He states: "The Bishop is one of the judges who may finally determine the constitutionality of this enactment. It is scarcely correct form for judges to prejudge a case that may come before them." Brother Moore desires by this deliverance to make the impression that "unification" may not be a constitutional matter, that the General Conference may leave the question for the Bishops to decide, and that Bishop Candler, since he might help determine the case, is overstepping the bounds of propriety in saying that the constitution demands that this matter be submitted to the Annual Conferences. But since there can be no possible doubt of the constitutionality of the question of unification confronting us, the Bishop's declaration cannot be called a judicial opinion and he is not guilty of any impropriety. Unification involves a change of name of the Church, a reconstruction of the General Conference, and the establishment of Jurisdictional Conferences with large powers; it is so inherently and necessarily constitutional in its nature that it takes a stretch of the imagination to even link it loosely with the idea of an episcopal decision to so determine it. Doubtless the Southern Church would be amazed and astonished should the General Conference even attempt to assume such undue authority as to try to bring about union without submitting the question to the Conferences. To suggest that the Southern Church would ever stand having itself linked with another organization, its General Conference to frame Rules restated to suit a reorganized and enlarged Church, without the Conferences voting on the question is to advise overstepping the mark of equity and fairness indeed. When the old Church was divided in 1841 the different views on the constitution caused the trouble. In the Northern Church the majority action of the General Conference may at any time "alter the tenure of the episcopal office from life to a term of years, confine the administration of a Bishop by law to a given episcopal district; or enervate the episcopacy by a refusal to elect additional Bishops as their ranks are thinned by death. Similarly, the presiding eldership might, by a majority vote, be essentially modified or abolished." But "in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, if any of these changes become desirable there would be no question that they must be effected by the constitutional process." The Southern General Conference always decides, when proper, that a matter is constitutional and must be submitted to the Annual Conferences. The Bishops are never officially concerned with legislation unless the General Conference fails in its duty, and to even suppose that it might do so in this matter of unification, which evidently involves many constitutional modifications, is an assumption too preposterous to imagine. The General Conference in 1866 submitted Lay Representation to the Conferences, and also in 1886 it sent down the matter of the change of name; and now the General Conference resolution for increased lay representation is on the round of the Conferences. Now Bishop Candler affirms that if unification (which involves complete reorganization and new constitutional foundations) is considered that the General Conference will submit the matter, as the constitution would require it, to the Conferences. Brother Moore can scarcely sustain his ground for labelling Bishop Candler's mere affirmation of an evident fact as a "hasty and ill-timed deliverance," or for accusing him of "prejudging" a case before it comes to him.

2. Brother Moore further remarks: "The College of Bishops may decide this question in line with Bishop Candler's deliverance, but if they so decide, it will be in the teeth of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, by which decision we came into the possession of millions of dollars worth of property." Our friend herein contends that it would be inconsistent for the Southern Church to refer the matter of unification to the Annual Conferences as a constitutional question, because when the Church was divided seventy-two years ago the Supreme Court decided, and in which decision the Southern Church concurred, that the division was constitutional and binding without the matter having been referred to the Annual Conferences. Brother Moore has stumbled in not being able to discern what Church it was that was divided. Neither the Southern Church nor the Northern Church can lay claim to being the original Methodist Church which was divided into the two branches. The General Conference of the original Church which effected the division had assumed, before the division, by a majority vote, supreme executive, legislative, and judicial authority with power to pass upon the constitutionality of its own acts. When this General Conference consented to the division it did so without referring the matter to the Annual Conferences, as it was competent to do from its own construction of the law. This procedure was not in accord with the minority of that General Conference, which was composed of that element representing the territory which afterward made the Southern Methodist Church. This minority had always insisted upon a broad interpretation of the constitution and demanded that any question of organic law be approached in a constitutional way; and when the Southern Church was instituted as a distinct autonomy this position was the foundation upon which it rested so far as the organic law was concerned. What an idle statement, therefore, it appears to be when one says that if a question of unification be submitted to the Annual Conferences "it will be in the teeth of a decision of the Supreme Court," which decision dealt with the division of another organization than that of the Southern Church entirely, that was governed by a supreme General Conference agreeing to a division of the Church without submitting the question to the Annual Conferences. Certainly the Southern Church plead before the Supreme Court that the division was constitutional, but according to the constitution of the Church the division of which was in question; and the Southern Church accepted the findings of the Court because the property morally and equitably belonged to it. It should be borne in mind that the Court did not hold that this division was constitutional according to the Southern Church's construction of its constitution; and its rulings, which the Southern Church held to be constitutional according to the ideas of the supreme General Conference, in the case of the division of the former Church, can have no bearing upon what is constitutional, or upon constitutional procedures, in the Southern Methodist Church. Let Brother Moore get in mind that it was the former Methodist Church that was divided, and that it was done according to the interpretation of the law by its supreme General Conference. The manner in which this division was effected can furnish no precedent for the Southern Methodist Church to go about the matter of unification. It may be noticed that the Court, in its decision, insisted upon a literal interpretation of the constitution of the Church that was divided, to harmonize with its findings upholding the actions of the supreme General Conference in determining upon the division; but this interpretation, being made to fit the cause of equity in a special instance, was not in accord with the Church's own past conception of its constitution, and certainly could never construe the attitude of the Southern Methodist Church, represented in that Conference by the constitutional minority, toward its constitution. A Church could never afford to leave the construction of its constitution to a civil court.

Again, Brother Moore states: "Surely the power that separated can unite. * * * The General Conference divided the Church and the General Conferences can unite the Churches." But, suppose that one of the branches of Methodism, in the seventy-two years of its history, had done away with its General Conference entirely and was operating under some other legislative organization with an altogether different constitution? What would Brother Moore say to General Conference power in uniting the Churches then? This is a possible supposition which only carries the case in hand to an extreme to show the inconsistency of the suggestion. In fact the Southern Church has curbed its General Conference until it is not a body of the same powers as the Northern Conference which followed after the precedents of the supreme General Conference. Our Conference has never assumed them. Had the old organization been governed by a General Conference with the constitution of the Southern Church the matter of division would have gone to the Conferences beyond a doubt. Brother Moore ought not to expect the General Conference to assume more than its rightful power.

3. Brother Moore affirms: "If Bishop Candler's view be true we owe to the Northern Church several million dollars." The claim here is that if unification is a constitutional matter and is to be submitted to the Annual Conferences, we owe the Northern Church several million dollars won from it at law on our argument that the division of the Church was constitutional without submission to the Conferences. It has already been shown that the Southern Methodist Church won this money equitably and according to the constitution of the old organization without inconsistency in its plan of submitting constitutional questions to the Annual Conferences; but it remains to call attention especially to Brother Moore's insistence that unification be passed upon and settled by the General Conference without reference to the Conferences, and to his desire to have the Bishops leave the matter alone without adjudging it a constitutional one. His earnestness is so great to effect this procedure that he resorts to the raising of a question which may cause much discussion, and, perchance, some dissatisfaction. The question is: If the Southern General Conference passes a resolution on unification and judges it to be a constitutional matter to be referred to the Conferences, will the Northern Church demand the money and property on the principle of equity which the Southern Church won at law in the division, upon the contention that the division was constitutional when the matter was not submitted to the Conferences at large? Or, will the pro-unionists of the Southern Methodist Church demand that, for consistency's sake, the General Conference itself settle the whole matter of unification? If Brother Moore is successful in getting his suggestion favorably accepted by very many people there will be much trouble for the Southern Methodist Church in the near future. We would like to ask if it is entirely consistent to advance such an idea as is now before us, which, if followed out, would create great confusion? If Brother Moore succeeds in his propaganda, on the one hand, we will have a General Conference trying to bring a great Church into a unification which, if of the liberal type, would very probably mean a large secession from the Church; and, on the other hand, we may have a discontented pro-union aggregation demanding that we turn over to the Northern Methodist Church several million dollars and complaining that the constitution was over-reached in carrying out the broader interpretation. This question is left to the reader, but with the assertion that if the Southern Methodist people will insist on following the dictates of the constitution, both written and implied, as our Church has done since its beginning, there will be no danger.

4. Let us notice for a moment this remark: "The Church should at once organize a movement looking to the separation of the judicial and executive functions of our government." This, of course, is a mere matter of opinion at which Brother Moore arrives because, he says, Bishop Candler stated the necessary fact of the constitutionality of the matter of unification. Our Bishops are not only officers of the General Conference, but they are general superintendents, executive officers, of the Church at large, who are "to oversee the spiritual and temporal affairs of the Church." If it is in accord with expediency and necessity, as in the case of Bishop Candler's utterance, very few Southern Methodists will resent one of its Bishops, or all of them for that matter, speaking out upon any question, whether it involves constitutional law or not. This, as is evident from past history, is the spirit of Southern Methodism; and, more than that, the Church has always looked to its Chief Pastors for guidance and leadership in all important matters. This matter of the Bishops having power to check the General Conference upon constitutional legislation is in direct liue with their duty as overseers of the spiritual and temporal affairs of the Church. Deprived of this inherent right, the episcopacy itself would be limited as construed in Southern Methodism. This question involves the very principles upon which our Church is established. The College of Bishops has never abused the powers accorded it; it has never exercised what is called the veto power but twice in the whole career of the Church, and those incidents were in cases of necessity where great service was rendered the Church. Suppose that the General Conference of the Northern Church, with its view of the episcopacy and with its power to construe the constitution, should decide that unification was a matter for the General onference to settle, and accordingly treat with other bodies and ostensibly unite with them on a plan that would not be acceptable to the Church at large; there would be no authority within the Church to save it from disruption. Such a proceeding would be impossible with the Southern Church, for the General Conference well knows its constitutional restrictions and recognizes the power of the episcopacy behind them. In the present organization of the Southern Church it is impossible to lodge constitutional interpretations with any body that would be as safe and sane as is now the case with this prerogative resting upon the episcopacy. Until some fault can be found with our system worthy of mention, and until a suitable scheme is presented with virtues surpassing the one now in operation, Southern Methodism will not only be content, but will demand that our Bishops serve as its judiciary committee and as its Chief Pastors.

5. A few other remarks in Brother Moore's paper may now be considered in this last instance. Let us quote his words: "It is a matter of congratulation that our good friend, Bishop Candler, has come as far along the road of unification as he has now already trod. It is to be earnestly hoped that he will soon get the 'second blessing' and then proceed on the way to perfection. Maybe the Bishop may yet be assigned to a residence in Boston. Quite a delegation would go to hear him deliver a lecture on the 'Pilgrim Fathers' to a Boston audience on Forefathers' Day." In the beginning of his paper Brother Moore represents the Bishop as having come out for the Oklahoma plan of unification: he now hopes the Bishop will proceed on to perfection. This is a little light into the more serious nature of Brother Moore. He seems to favor a plan of judging one's religion by his attitude toward the unification question—a little Jesuitical, but perhaps characteristic. To love the Southern Methodist Church as it now stands must mean an ordinary religious experience; to favor the Oklahoma plan of unification entitles one to being near having the "second blessing;" and to desire the Saratoga plan brings upon one the whole of perfection. But when we think of that Saratoga plan (representing, as Brother Moore intimates, the "second blessing" doctrine of perfection), with its Supreme General Conference, dominated by Northern sentiment—truly Christian but not understanding the South's social problems—and embracing a large Negro element, we do not wonder that many people fight shy of what is called the "second blessing" religion and are willing to take just the ordinary blessings of a common religious experience—as many as possible, and do on them.

Again, should any such move as unification be consummated, and it be possible for the Bostonians to do so, it might be that they would lay hands on Bishop Candler and appropriate him to their own selves—the addition of a few great citizens from the South would probably be to their benefit. For them to try to effect such an end would not be beyond the realm of possibility. And if they did succeed in getting the Bishop, or any other section of the North for that matter, we agree to the intimation of our brother, who seems to be an ingenius prophet, that "quite a delegation" would go to hear him whenever he spoke in public. But still, there is another way of looking at Brother Moore's words. A Southern Methodist preacher of eminence was heard to say not long ago that he desired union very much: that it would do good; and that he himself would be greatly pleased to preach from the pulpit of some big church in New York City. Now, maybe Brother Moore hopes in the shifting that would follow unification that Bishop Candler, or some other member of our distinguished College, in being appropriated by some Northern episcopal district, might find for him a great church in cultured Boston, in mighty New York, or in up-to-date Chicago. One never can tell, you know, what may happen when a general shaking up takes place and the wheel of fortune is set a spinning to bring about new thrills.

Just one more word: we do not know a single Southern Methodist preacher in his section of the country—there may be one but we do not know it—who has come out for the Northern (Saratoga) plan of unification—the third and highest degree of what seems to be Brother Moore's scheme of classification.

Our annual "WORK DAY" for the benefit of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, will be SATURDAY, OCTOBER 14, followed by HARVEST DAY, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 15. We sincerely trust that all the people of our Church will keep this date in mind, and that we will have unusually fine returns from our "Work Day" efforts. We especially urge the Sunday school superintendents to keep this matter before their schools, and our preachers to remind their congregations of the day and its importance to our work. I would again remind you that we are wholly dependent on this day and its faithful observance for the means necessary to carry on our work for the coming winter months. It will be necessary to raise at least $8000 during this fall and winter to carry us through the winter until next Easter, and meet the obligations already incurred, if we are to do the work and keep out of debt.

Remember "Work Day." Prepare to observe it! Let none fail us, for it is very vital to our great cause. If our people have money to give, give it to your own Orphanage, not some other institution that may ask for it. We need every dollar you can give. We are doing a great work. But it is impossible to do it without your help.

Faithfully,

THE LEGAL STEPS FOR UNIFICATION.

By Rev. J. E. Harrison, D.D.

Now that a Commission of twenty-five has been appointed to consider with a like Commission of the M. E. Church the question of the Unification of Methodism, it is exceedingly important that the membership of the M. E. Church, South, bear in mind that no agreements this joint Commission may reach and promulgate have any authority or force until the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, shall have given it a two-thirds majority vote of endorsement, and then it will also have to have the aproval of three-fourths of the members of all the Annual Conferences of the M. E. Church, South, who may be present and vote on the matter.

It should be borne in mind that while the Commission authorized in 1902 to confer with a like Commission of the M. E. Church on a common Hymnal and other matters announced its agreements directly to the Church and never made a report to the General Conference, the General Conference of 1914, in providing for the said Commission of twenty-five, ordered "Such Commission on Unification as may be appointed shall report to the next General Conference the full details of the plan of unification which may be agreed upon—for its consideration and final determination."

So that no announcement by this Commission should be taken as a basis of action until it has been finally determined upon by the General Conference and the members of the several Annual Conferences.

MINISTERIAL EDUCATIONAL FUND.

Mississippi Conference.

The subscriptions made at Laurel last winter, and which have not been paid, will be very much needed by the young men who need the fund at the opening of school this fall.

Quite a number of the brethren have paid their amounts, but there is a balance of $328 still due. This is distributed by districts as follows:

Brookhaven	$75.00
Jackson	45.00
Hattiesburg	75.00
Meridian	65.00
Newton	25.00
Port Gibson	25.00
Seashore	18.00
	$328.00

The brethren who owe anything on this fund will do a great deal of service to the beneficiaries of the same by sending their subscriptions to me as soon as is convenient. Remember, we are proposing to provide a better prepared ministry by this contribution.

THE JUNALUSKA UNION RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Editor:

According to the daily papers, strong resolutions on Methodist unification WERE ADOPTED ON SUNDAY, AUGUST 20, by the Laymen's Missionary Conference, which was in session at Junaluska, N. C. The Nashville Christian Advocate of last week thus refers to the size of that body: "About 500 were in regular attendance, and at the Sunday service the audience was very large. At the morning service 26 States, 6 foreign countries, and 175 cities and towns were represented."

These figures sound imposing, but it should be remembered that, at best, they are a very small percentage of the nearly 2,000,000 laity of the Church, South. These brethren had a perfect right to express themselves on this subject, though we think it would have been better to do it on some other day than the Holy Sabbath—our Church is not given to concerning itself with governmental questions on that day. They seem to have presumed to speak as the representatives of the laymen of the Church, South, but who elected them to act in that capacity I do not know. In my opinion, when two great General Conferences and several hundred Annual Conferences, North and South, will have a part in determining the final outcome of the unification proceedings, anybody's "definite convictions" as to results are largely in the nature of mere conjectures. Moreover, it should be remembered that the Laymen's Missionary Movement is largely under the control of our General Board of Missions, which has been standing sponsor for all the unification program in Mexico, where our Church is being dug up and transplanted. I do not mean by this satement that all the men connected with the Laymen's Misionary Movement are dominated by the Board of Missions. Doubtless many of them are not, and I presume that there are not a few of them who are against union on any basis that will not practically preserve the integrity and autonomy of the Church, South. Still it is true that the Board of Mission shapes to a great extent the doings of this organization.

The Missionary Voice in a recent issue took an optimistic view of the Saratoga action, and virtually impeached the motives of those who have ventured to point out the weak spot of union, by suggesting that "there is nothing to the thought" in such cases. I know that the weight of our General Board of Missions can be expected to be thrown against the extreme advocates of union in the event of a test. This, however, is neither here nor there. We should have anticipated in the last General Conference actions.

The Board of Missions needs to have its power curbed and to be made responsive to the will of the Church more than any other organization in it, and as soon as the union shall have gone into its force, a campaign should be inaugurated throughout the Church looking to the accomplishment of this end at the next General Conference.

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

By Rev. W. W. Holmes

It is after the dark and dreary night that the beautiful day is most appreciated. It was rather a dark night that preceded the Seashore Camp Meeting this year. The camp meeting last year was brought to an early close because of the plague of mosquitoes. On September 29 came the awful storm that destroyed so much of the camp ground property. And just a few days before the camp meeting of this year was to begin another storm came that destroyed more property and put all our railroads out of commission. This necessitated a postponement of the meeting for more than a month; and yet, we had a good meeting. The attendance was good, the interest was good and the preaching was very good. All of the preaching was done by Dr. E. C. Moore, of Montgomery, Ala., and it was of an exceptional order. It was doctrinal, Scriptural, evangelistic, and scholarly.

The music was under the direction of Rev. H. W. Van Hook. He organized a large chorus choir and the old-time hymns were sung with spirit and enthusiasm. The music was especially good on Sunday.

The meeting was a great spiritual feast and the many churches represented in the congregations will no doubt be profited. Great numbers consecrated themselves to God for a larger service.

It was the consensus of opinion that the meeting had done incalculable good and we will have a greater meeting next year.

The Seashore Camp Ground, the most beautiful spot on the Gulf, is an heritage that we are just beginning to appreciate. Extensive plans are being made for great things next year. The Divinity School will have the best program it has ever had. The Camp Meeting will be made better as far as the human can go. Probably other things will be undertaken to make the Camp Ground the most desirable summer place to be found anywhere for our Methodist people.

The Seashore Campground School, for boys and girls, will open Wednesday, September 6. Catalog and further information can be secured from the President of the school, Rev. H. W. Van Hook, Biloxi, Miss.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING FOR ME?

By George DePuy.

I raised the dead and healed the sick,
And made the blind to see,
To you I brought the "Light" and truth.
What have you done for me?

Denied myself and bore the shame
Of death on Calvary,
Of what have you denied yourselves—
What have you borne for me?

Look at my hands—behold the marks,
Feel of my side and see—
These are the scars I bear for you—
What do you bear for me?

I suffered death upon the cross,
That sinners might be free,
I've pleaded long, am pleading still—
What have you done for me?

I gave to you sweet rays of hope,
Of life's eternity—
The greatest gift man can receive.
What are you giving me?

A FEW WORDS CONCERNING WATER BAPTISM.

Rev. Payton A. Sowell.

I have been thinking lately, and so far as I can recall. I have never seen emphasized the particular line of thought, which I hope to present in this communication. However, I have not read the whole of the vast amount of literature on water baptism.

One thing seems never to have been settled—the date and authority, for the practice: When did it first occur—or begin as a religious rite?

I think I am correct, and fair in saying that those who stickle, for a particular mode, especially for immersion, are urgent in their claim, that to meet the Scriptural standard, to make the performance valid, it is necessary that the administrator himself must have received the rite, by the same mode, and of the same kind of baptism. That is, if a man administers Christian baptism, in water, he must himself have received the same, in mode and nature, before his administration of it to others can be Scripturally valid. If their theory is, that the kingdom (or Church) was set up through the ministry of John Baptist, then it became necessary for John himself to have received the same rite in mode and nature. This seems fair reasoning. And that being the argument, then he who baptized John, must have received the same, and thus on and on back to the first man who baptized—to make it valid.

We have the record to show that John was a great baptizer, none equaling him in the history of the Church, yet it seems impossible to find any proof that John himself was ever baptized. He asked it at the hands of Jesus, at Jordan, but the request was not granted. There is no proof—not even an intimation, that any of John's disciples ever returned the compliment—that is, after they had been baptized by him, they baptized their master. Therefore, in this instance, the test set up, cannot hold true concerning the mode and nature.

Second: Coming to the consideration of what is known as Christian baptism, the same claim is made concerning its validity, especially by people who are sticklers for a specific mode, and also that all the proof must be found in the Scriptures. They claim, that the administrator must himself have received it in the same mode and nature. Otherwise its validity is destroyed.

There are people, who lay much store by water baptism—in mode and nature, as it affects the entrance into the kingdom (or the Church), and even as it affects the fitness and possibility of securing eternal life. I have heard that perhaps it has occurred that men who have been founders of some specific mode of baptism, in order to make the baptism valid, have baptized each other, to complete the circle of fact, so that administrator and subject would receive a valid baptism.

If this is a real view of the subject, let us ask for the proof that a single one of the original twelve apostles ever received Christian baptism in water? One thing is certain, Christ did not baptize them. It is plainly written, that "Jesus baptized not." There is no proof that they baptized each other, and if they did, the first administrator had not himself been baptized—thus destroying the validity of the ordinance.

But, suppose we attempt to answer this by saying they were baptized of John in Jordan. If so, then they were inducted into the kingdom (or Church), before they had even known or become followers of Jesus. And they had entered, not through Christian baptism, but the baptism of repentance. Therefore, the kingdom was set up by John and not by Christ.

One apostle, did receive Christian baptism—Paul. Will this not meet the emergency? We are met on the very threshold, with the fact, that Paul was baptized a number of years after Pentecost—the period in which all the sticklers for a particular mode of baptism contend that the kingdom (or Church) was set up. At that time, many thousands received baptism at the hands of men, who had never been baptized, so far as the proof shows. So Paul came into the kingdom too late to save this theory. Moreover, we have his own words that he took very little part in water baptism—in its administration. Read, 1st Corin. 1: 14-17. He says he had no recollection of baptizing more than two men, and one family. And he emphasized his attitude to water baptism when he said: "Christ sent me not to baptize."

The contrast of this the greatest of all Christ's apostles, and one of the most remarkable men in the history of the world, in the disposition not to magnify a mode of water baptism, with many of our day, and of other days of the Church's history, who in many instances represent such mediocrity of intellect and learning, is the astonishment of the ages.

At Pentecost—the eleven apostles did receive a baptism which qualified them to disciple and baptize thousands, and to set up a kingdom, and make valid the administration of all their successors in the Christian ministry throughout all the after ages of the world. But that baptism was not water baptism. It was the baptism of the Holy Spirit, enduing them with authority and power. Here is the lesson of the essential—rather than the less essential.

MUCH NEED FOR CAUTION.

R. W. Adams,
Presiding Elder of the Houston (Texas) District.

Concerning Methodist Unification, I will say that, with proper safe-guards, I favor it, but without complete protection for the minority it would be an unsafe move for us.

I am willing for the plan of our last General Conference to be worked out if it proves, upon thorough investigation, to be wise and well, but I do not favor the plan suggested by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal brethren in their late General Conference. I am afraid that some of our brethren are too hasty in their desire to get together and are allowing sound judgment to be set aside. This is too serious a matter to take the turn of sentiment and to be hastened with a whoop and hurrah. We had better go a "little mite" slow. I can see the possibility of the whole matter resulting in disaster to us, for we have no authority nor have we the ability to deliver our membership into a new ecclesiastical camp.

The Negro question MUST be settled first of all and I think that we can refer with some degree of pride to our action in setting apart the "brother in black," and if those brethren of the North, want to help him to the greatest degree, let them fall in line with us and we can better care for the Negroes in their own Church than we can to be mixed up with them and have the contention that would surely follow.

Then comes the matter of Church government, and that is no small item. We have grown apart in this more than a half-century in our notions of Church government, and both sides have no doubt developed along the line best suited for them.

Church property is another item that must be looked into carefully. This will have to be done on the ground of justice to all and also to prevent overlapping and the building altar against altar.

I am here speaking of the plan outlined at Oklahoma City with divisional Conferences or sections. We had as well see that there is a North, and a West, and an East, and a South, for no act of any body of men will change the points of the compass. For these sections it may be that the same rule will not apply to all to the best advantage. For instance, take the time limit. For the Church, South, I am of the opinion that the time limit is best. For others it may not be best.

I doubt whether it would be wise for a long time to come to transfer a Southerner (with his flat English) to New England and I also doubt whether it would be wise to send the Yankee (with his choppy English) to Georgia.

If we cannot arrive at some basis where we will be united in HEART, it would be folly to have the wedding and then discover that we were mismated. No modern affinity affair will go here.

I pray our Father in Heaven that what is best may be accomplished, and that what is not best may be defeated.

A RECIPE FOR A DAY.

Take a dash of water cold
And a little leaven of prayer,
A little bit of sunshine gold,
Dissolved in the morning air.
Add to your meal some merriment
And a thought for kith and kin,
And then, as a prime ingredient,
A plenty of work thrown in.
But spice it all with the essence of love
And a little whiff of play;
Let a wise old Book and a glance above
Complete a well-spent day.

ARE WE RICH?

By Anna D. Walker.

Yes, we are rich, we have a boy,
A merry little fellow,
With heart and face all filled with joy,
And hair of golden yellow:
We would not give this boy away
For all the riches you could pay!

Aye, we are rich, we have a girl
A little charming creature.
Her hair is twined with many a curl,
And fair is every feature,
We would not sell this girl e'en while,
For gold and silver in a pile!

Yes, we are rich, we have a home,
'Tis bounded by a garden,
Where fruits and flowers they bud and bloom,
Without a guard or warden!
For love has east his spell around
This little cot and plot of ground.

We have the music of the birds,
The arching sky all over,
The constant flow from love's deep hoard,
A plot of scented clover!
How rich we are in those dear things
So seldom owned by crown'd kings.

INDIAN CHILDREN AND ANIMALS.

By Alice Jean Cleator, in Our Dumb Animals.

Animals have a great attraction for Indian boys and girls, although, I regret to say, they are not always kind to them. However, they have an affectionate disposition and easily respond to humane teaching.

"Our Indian boys seem especially fond of squirrels," said a reservation teacher to me. "They often bring them from the woods in their pockets to school. They seem to understand all the 'Kerchucks' of squirrel dialect. The boys have even been caught cutting a hole in their dormitory floors where they could place their strange pets, such as gophers, snakes and owls. Owls seem to be a close 'second' to the squirrels in the regard of indian children.

"The statement of Wm. J. Long, the nature writer, is certainly correct that the Indian boys, knowing the squirrels seldom jump from a high distance unless they must, love to strike the trunk of a tree to see the squirrels make their downward leap.

"I cannot account for the fact that indian boys seem to dislike cats. They would tease and even torture a cat if they had the chance. It takes some correcting to show them that 'poor pussy' is as much entitled to kindness as any other animal. When the fact is impressed upon them that cats are of great value in catching rats and mice, they soon gain quite a reverence for them."

Some teachers have told me that they object to encouraging anything in the children's play which cherishes the instincts of the wild life of their ancestors, but this is not so in all schools. On some of the play-grounds you will see the little "tepees" which the Indian boys and girls are so clever at constructing, even with a few rude sticks and an old shawl. With a few quick motions a tepee, with flap thrown back for doorway, is made before one scarcely has time to wonder how it was done.

In studying the Indian boys and girls one is reminded of the words of Longfellow in "Hiawatha":

"Then the little Hiawatha
Learned of every bird its language,
Learned their names and all their secrets:
How they built their nests in summer,
Where they hid themselves in winter.
Talked with them when'er he met them,
Called them 'Hiawatha's chickens.'
Of all beasts he learned the language,
Learned their names and all their secrets:
How the beavers built their lodges,
Where the squirrels hid their acorns.
How the reindeer ran so swiftly,
Why the rabbits were so timid."

"FOR OTHERS."

Ida Clark Mowry.

"Mother, can I wear my new dress this afternoon?"

"No, my dear, you certainly can not."

Fifteen-year-old Betty Graham looked as though an April shower was imminent. Betty's tears were never more than little showers that made the sunshine smiles all the brighter afterward. But she was now a truly disappointed girl. Visions of herself in that lovely Copenhagen satin charmeuse dress aunt Sue had sent her on her recent birthday had been dancing before her mind all the morning. She did so want all the girls to see it on her. So she had not shown it to one of them. Now there wouldn't be another chance, dear knows when, she thought.

It was rather a tearful voice that asked "Why can't I wear it, mother?"

"In the first place, dearie, it is a most unsuitable gown for an afternoon missionary meeting. I want my daughter to be always neatly, tastefully dressed in harmony with the occasion. Remember, dear, that appropriateness is the secret of being 'well-dressed.'"

"But, mother, Jennie Gale and Bertha Baird both had on their party dresses at the last meeting."

"Yes, girlie, and as a result of this tendency to 'dress up' Vinnie Brown doesn't want to go to-day. Mrs. Brown came over yesterday while you girls were at school. She told me about their financial difficulties. I suspected, but was not sure, that their means were quite limited. The loss of Jay's wages during that month he was ill, and the unusually heavy coal bills during the severe winter made it necessary to use the strictest economy. Each one made personal sacrifices, almost to the limit, in order to keep within their income. Vinnie's way was to wear her old clothes. Her uncle John offered her a place as clerk in his store, but she felt so anxious to get ready as soon as possible for her real work that she could not think of giving up school. Her mother was a very successful teacher, and undoubtedly Vinnie will make one. So she has bravely gone on, wearing her fixed-over things without a word of complaint."

"Why mother! I never dreamed that Vinnie Brown cared a snap for "finery." She always carries herself so kind of 'queeny' that I don't believe any of the girls ever thought she cared much about her dress. You know we call her 'high-brow.' She surely is the 'brains' of the class, and the leader in our missionary circle, too. She just must go. We can't get along without her."

"Well, Betty dear, I have thought of a plan. If it carries I am sure you will all be glad you made a little sacrifice. All the girls have simple, plain white dresses, haven't they? Vinnie has one, I know. Now call up each girl and see how many will agree to wear such a dress this afternoon. Keep the real reason to yourself. Vinnie is a proud-spirited, sensitive girl in spite of her pretended indifference. Never let her know how the plan originated."

Betty fairly flew to the telephone. As she called each girl in turn, an answered the "why's and "what-fors" with a merry "Oh, just for fun," she found no difficulty in making "mother's plan" work.

What a dear, happy bunch they are, was the thought in the mind of the minister's wife, as the girls came into the parsonage that afternoon. What she said was: "How sweet you all look. I do so like to see young girls in simple white dresses. I pray God may keep your precious young hearts as pure, clean and spotless as the gowns you wear."

"Say, girls"—it was Betty who spoke—"why not make this our regulation missionary-meeting dress!"

"Let's do it!" said Jennie Gale.

"Sure we will," and "All right," came from others.

"And flowers for jewels—that is when we can get them"—added Bertha Baird.—Western Christian Advocate.

My boyhood days were spent there. I had an hour or two at Brother Hall at Greenwood how refreshing to meet him once more! To my agreeable surprise [illegible] Lula, they had not had quite enough rain. The crops in the lowlands of the Delta, many of which I had traveled had been flooded and washed away. The farming section of Mississippi is blessed with the finest crops of cotton and corn I have seen in years. The people [illegible] ing with their crops—grateful and [illegible] ready to receive me with that hospitality characteristic of the Delta folks. Brother Jones put me in his library of the latest and best selections of books I have ever seen on the shelves of any preacher. There I slept, read and preached in his church near by for two weeks. Sister Jones, a model preachers wife, knows how to prepare food for a preacher. Not once did I fail or grow tired. Both the pastor and his wife are in high esteem among their members.

Jones and I talked Scripture and [illegible] folks and things—what a thinker he [illegible] It was a pasture green for me, into which the Lord led me for the refreshing of soul, body, mind, and spirit—a happy spot in my life to which I can ever look back, and take courage. The treatment toward me of pastor and people was royal indeed.

The best I can say of the meeting is when Brother Jones and I said good-bye he said to me, "It was all we wished for and more besides."

The old New Orleans Advocate I read again with a great deal of relish. Bishop Hoss said to me once, that your English equaled Dr. Galloway's, and I can add that, you are a thought builder.

Editorial

NOT INVERTEBRATES.

Two or three years ago we reprinted a brilliant editorial, "On the Uses of Controversy," from the pen of Bishop John C. Keener when he was editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and later another equally vigorous one on the same line entitled "Contending for the Faith," by Bishop Galloway, when the Advocate was in his charge. Both of these distinguished ministers believed that one should have convictions and the courage to try to maintain them.

When, because of the financial disasters that overtook the Publisher, Dr. C. W. Carter, after a career on the tripod that had attracted the attention of the entire Church and also other denominations, resigned and wrote his valedictory, among other things, he said: "I appreciate the facts which my connection with the paper have disclosed to me. I have made some of the best and truest friends and some as determined foes as any poor editor ever made. Both have been serviceable to me, and I trust that the blessings of God will rest abundantly on both."

When he was elected editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate by the General Conference of 1858, Bishop McTyeire, in taking leave of the readers of the New Orleans Advocate, which he had founded and had edited for several years, wrote a farewell message which contained the following statement: "Better patrons never editor had. They have been patient, forbearing, magnanimous. Often have we penned articles, well knowing that our views and convictions were not, at the time, shared by many readers. But they belong to the class who first hear and then strike. Indeed, they have not struck at all. Where they did not agree, they awarded, with characteristic liberality, the right to differ."

Nor does this conception that a conscientious editor, as a watchman on the wall, has responsibilities which he dares not shirk, pleasant though it might be for him to do so, by any means belong wholly to the past. There has lately been established in Philadelphia, Penn., by Dr. Wm. Downey, formerly editor of The Philadelphia Methodist, and Dr. L. W. Munhall, the noted evangelist, a paper called The Eastern Methodist, which has declared that it proposes to speak out boldly concerning the things that are wrecking Methodism and hindering the coming of the true spiritual kingdom of Christ. From the issue of that publication of August 10, we take the following:

"Many religious persons have a dread of controversy, and wish truth to be stated without any reference to those who hold the opposite errors. Controversy and a bad spirit are in their estimation synonymous terms; and strenuously to oppose what is wrong, is considered as contrary to Christian meekness. Those who hold this opinion seem to overlook what every page of the New Testament lays before us. In all the history of our Lord Jesus Christ, we never find Him out of controversy. From the moment He entered on the discharge of His office in the synagogue of Nazareth till He expired on the cross, it was an uninterrupted scene of controversy. Nor did He, with all the heavenly meekness which in Him shone so brightly, treat truth and error without a reference to those who held them, or study to avoid giving its proper appellation to those corruptions in doctrine or practice that endangered the interests of immortal souls. His censures were not confined to doctrine, but included the abettors of false principles themselves.

"And as to the Apostles, their epistles are generally controversial. Most of them were directly written for the express purpose of vindicating truth and opposing error, and the authors of heresies do not escape with an abstract condemnation of their false doctrine. Paul again and again most indignantly denounces the conduct of the opposers of the Gospel, and by name points out those against whom he cautions his brethren. When Hymenaeus and Alexander erred concerning the faith, and when he delivered them unto Satan, that they might learn not to blaspheme, he did not compliment them as amiable and learned persons. Even that Apostle who treats most of love, and who possessed so much of that spirit which was so eminently manifested in his Divine Master, does not avoid controversy; nor in controversy does he study to avoid severity of censure on the opposers of the truth."

THE EVIDENCE MULTIPLIES.

Last week we quoted from an editorial in the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate an extract in which it was stated that the action of our General Conference had awakened little enthusiasm in the Church, North; that it "was recognized from the beginning that the tentative plan would have to be greatly modified if the Methodist Episcopal Church should seriously consider the adoption of it; that "the most enthusiastic advocates of unification did not urge action on the suggestions in the General Conference of 1912," and that some "regarded it as a HINDRANCE RATHER THAN A HELP TOWARD UNIFICATION."

And in the Northwestern Christian Advocate of August 23, there appeared the following statement: "IF OUR SOUTHERN EDITORS ARE GOING TO PERSIST IN THEIR DEMAND THAT WE ACCEPT THE FINDING OF THE OKLAHOMA CONFERENCE, AND THAT INSISTENCE IS SUSTAINED BY THEIR CHURCH, THE DELIBERATIONS OF THE COMMISSION WILL BE FUTILE."

All the indications, so far as we are able to judge, point to a determined effort to unite the two Churches very largely on the Saratoga basis. The Northern brethren, so far as they have spoken in public, are a unit for that plan, and some of the Southern Commissioners have also declared for some of its most salient features. Some of our own men are talking in favor of splitting the Southern Methodist Church wide open, with the Mississippi River as the dividing line, and of a General, instead of a Regional, episcopacy, which would be liable to place our Southern Conferences under Northern Bishops. Little seems to be in mind concerning the legislative, executive, and judicial autonomy of the Quadrennial Conferences. We have received within the past few days information which fully justifies these statements. Southern Methodists may as well recognize the fact that they are face to face with the question as to whether they will submit to a largely obliterating form of organic union. True, there is some talk about protecting minorities, but nobody is telling us how this is going to be done; and if other things that are obviously in contemplation are carried out, we do not believe it can be done.

Our faith in this crucial hour is in the plain preachers and people of Southern Methodism. They really at all times constitute the only adequate safeguard of both the State and Church, and when a government, whether civil or ecclesiastical, becomes too far removed from them, it is almost certain to cease to be representative and to need an exertion of power on their part to control it and correct its wrong tendencies. What our beloved Church now needs is for the great body of its membership to wake up to the true significance of the present situation and make their influence felt. They can save Southern Methodism from disintegration and absorption if they will.

We have offered the Church, North, a fair and reasonable plan of unification, which would remove all overlapping and give concert of effort where it is needed, and which their own Joint Commissioners helped to formulate, except as to a single point. So let us stand by that plan, and if they wish to defeat it, the responsibility for so doing will be theirs.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

At the late Laymen's Conference at Lake Junaluska $103,000 was raised for the future development of the Assembly and its work.

"We are having success in our meetings; the spiritual state of our charge is good." So writes Rev. L. H. Floyd, of Smithville, Miss., in a letter bringing us two subscriptions.

Rev. H. C. Murphy, of Springfield, La., reports that he is having good meetings in his charge. His letter brought us 6 subscriptions to the Advocate, for which we extend to him our thanks.

A card from Rev. M. L. Burton, written on August 23, stated that he was at Marion, Va., and would be there for some time. May the richest blessings of heaven abide with him as he seeks to recuperate in the Old Dominion!

Rev. S. H. Caffey, of Victoria, Miss., in a business letter to our office, says: "Our work is progressing in a very gratifying manner." His presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Felts, also speaks appreciatingly of the service which Brother Caffey is rendering.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the past few days: Rev. H. N. McKibben, Harperville, Miss., 6; Rev. A. C. Searcy, Hornbeck, La., 2.

Bishop W. B. Murrah was in New Orleans last Monday, having come to the city from Hattiesburg, Miss., where he had spent the Sabbath. He was well, and was in his usual cheerful frame of mind. We scarcely need to say that we were glad to see him.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, who is rounding out his fourth year on the Ruston (La.) District, has reason to be pleased with the progress that the work of the Church has made under his administration. He is a wide-awake and forceful leader of the hosts of Israel.

From Heidelberg, Miss., under date of August 23, Rev. John W. Ramsey writes us as follows: "I have just closed a fine revival meeting for Rev. Chas. E. Downer, of the Eucutta charge, resulting in 11 accessions to the Church. This meeting was held at Boyles Chapel."

Rev. R. I. Collins, of Courtland, Miss., sends us some subscriptions to the Advocate, and in a business letter appends the following note: "Things are moving along nicely in this charge. I appreciate the stand that you have taken concerning the unification of the two Methodisms."

Under date of August 23, Mrs. H. G. Henderson, of Holly Springs, Miss., writes as follows from Georgetown, Ky.: "We will return home this week. Dr. Henderson is greatly improved." We are glad to have this good news concerning this gifted minister. It will greatly delight his many friends and admirers.

Dr. John T. Sawyer preached at 11 a.m. last Sunday to the congregation of the Carrollton Presbyterian Church, this city, of which Dr. John W. Caldwell, Jr., is pastor. Dr. Sawyer reports that a good audience was present, and that close attention was given his message. He enjoyed being with the Presbyterian brethren.

Dr. Franklin N. Parker, the accomplished Professor of Systematic Theology in the Biblical Department of Emory University, has been at his post nearly all the summer, as that school now has summer terms. Dr. Parker's family, however, have spent much of what is commonly known as the vacation period at Baton Rouge, La.

The Louisiana Conference has a number of very choice men among those who have been long in the itinerant ranks within its bounds. Among these are Rev. Robert Randle, of Harrisonburg, and Rev. J. D. Harper, of Opelousas, both of whom have made a fine record in the Master's service, and who are yet vigorous and largely useful.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Winona District, reports that the work is progressing favorably in his "diocese." This gifted leader of our forces in the eastern half of the Mississippi Delta is not yet ready to see the identity of Southern Methodism wiped out. Brother Lipscomb seldom fails to size up correctly any situation that arises.

From the Holly Springs (Miss.) Reporter of August 24, we take the following: "Rev. W. R. Lott, the assistant pastor of the Methodist Church, arrived in Holly Springs last Friday. He occupied the pulpit Sunday night and was greeted with a very good congregation, despite the rainy weather. Those who heard him were highly pleased with his sermon."

Brother H. B. Vandenburg, of Pineville, La., has lately been remembering the Advocate in his rounds, with some degree of success. He says: "I tell the people that Bishop Candler's article on the unification of American Methodism is alone worth the cost of a year's subscription to your paper." Brother Vandenburg is right—that was, indeed, a great utterance.

Mrs. M. R. James, in a business communication to our office, writes as follows: "The Advocate has been a welcome visitor to our home for a number of years and would be sadly missed if it should fail to arrive. It is always full of good things. We are proud of our pastor, Rev. W. W. Perry, and his good work for our paper." Such words of encouragement are appreciated.

Rev. W. W. Drake, of Minden, La., writes: "On Sunday afternoon, August 21, I had the pleasure of participating in the organization of a Methodist Church of 16 members nine miles west of Minden, at the close of a week's services conducted by Rev. George D. Anders, whose home is not many miles from the home of the new congregation. The work at Minden is moving along nicely."

Rev. Robert Selby, of Jackson, Miss., the Commissioner for Emory University, is putting his heart into his work, and has, so far, made an excellent record in his new field of service. The fall months are now at hand, and the brethren should open the way for him to come to their charges, that this important campaign may be made to yield fruitful results. Let him hear from you, brother pastor.

Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Vancleave, Miss., writes: "We have lately had an excellent meeting at Shiloh Church, on this charge. Brother F. Fayard, of the Wolf River Mission, did the preaching. He gives forth no uncertain sound in his message—he does not spare sin. There were 5 accessions on profession of faith, and the church was greatly revived. I endorse your position on the unification question."

Rev. W. L. Duren, of Columbus, Miss., in a personal note to the Editor, says: "I am just home from Franklin County, Miss., where, with my family, I spent a week. We licensed three young men to preach in this district last Thursday. Two will go to Millsaps, and one will join the Conference." Brother Duren is in his third year at Columbus, and he enters upon the work of the approaching autumn with an encouraging outlook.

In forwarding his appointments for the fourth round, Rev. Albert S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Monroe (La.) District, adds the following note: "The Monroe District is forging to the front on all lines. We have had some great revivals, with large accessions to the membership. The preachers are all hard at work and are bringing things to pass." Brother Lutz seems to be winning high praise on every side as a district superintendent.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Laurel, Miss., who some weeks ago was severely injured in a railroad accident, is now said to be able to get about on crutches, the use of which it is thought he will soon be able to dispense with. It is feared, however, that he may lose the sight of one eye and his hearing in one ear. Brother Hogg is now recuperating at Stafford Springs, Miss. Let the brethren continue to remember him at the throne of grace.

After a visit to the Holston Conference, where he held an interesting District Conference, Bishop Hoss is again at home at Muskogee, Oklahoma. A note from him last week stated he was somewhat tired upon his return, but that he was in pretty good shape physically. It seems well-nigh impossible to get this lion-hearted leader of Southern Methodism to rest. Thousands all over the Church are praying that his valuable life may be long spared to the Church.

From Flint Hill, Va., on August 21, Rev. W. J. Ferguson, of Mt. Olive, Miss., writes as follows: "We have just closed here (Flint Hill) a great meeting—the best in the history of the church, according to the statements of the oldest members. I will conduct a meeting at Amissville, Va., this week. I am assisting Rev. A. P. Williams, one of our Mississippi boys, who is winding up his fourth year in his present charge. I will return home early in September."

See Rev. R. W. Vaughan's siatement concerning "Work Day" for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. This is the institution to which the Methodists of the State should give their money. It is reported that some of our people in Louisiana have been assisting a nondescript orphanage enterprise, of very doubtful standing. It is wise for one when he donates money to any cause to know that it is deserving. The Ruston Orphanage has a record second to none in the South.

From Waterproof, La., Rev. H. W. May, of the Alexandria District, sends us the following note: "I am spending a few days with my son, H. W. May, Jr., trying to get ready for my final rounds of conferences. The third round ends well. The prospect is for the best year of my quadrennium on this district." Brother May has made a most superior record as a presiding elder, as is attested by the fine progress which the work of the Church has made in the territory under his supervision.

Dr. T. J. Bailey, the Superintendent of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League, informs us that the injunction that has been secured against the referendum designed to nullify the new liquor laws in that State will hold until the Supreme Court of Mississippi hands down an opinion on the subject. He is alert, however, and does not want the temperance forces to be unprepared if an adverse decision is rendered. Let the brethren give Dr. Bailey their prompt and hearty co-operation in his important work.

We desire to state again that we cannot publish articles the authorship of which is unknown to us. The name of the writer need not appear in all cases, but we must have his name in the office. We have within the past few days received two such communications: one concerning Y. W. C. A. work in the Mississippi Industrial Institute and College at Columbus, and the other an obituary of Mr. R. C. Lipe. Unless the names of the writers are forwarded to us, these pieces of copy cannot be printed.

Rev. R. T. Nolen, pastor of the Williamsburg (Miss.) charge, has sent us since Conference 28 subscriptions to the Advocate, 23 of which were new. In addition to this, he has sent us $1.25 for our "Helping Fund," which is designed to give the Conference organ to deserving persons who are themselves unable to take it. We scarcely need to say that we appreciate this service which our friend has rendered our paper. We formerly knew Brother and Sister Nolen in the good old County of Holmes, where the former was licensed to preach and began his useful career in the ministry.

Note the statement appearing elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate concerning the opening of Port Gibson Female College. We are pleased to learn that the outlook is considered very bright for this historic institution. A correspondent, in referring to it, says: "The attendance is increasing, having improved nearly 100 per cent within the last two years. The moral and religious influence of the College cannot be excelled. The buildings are commodious, well ventilated, and are supplied with electric lights and artesian water." Rev. T. J. O'Neil, the resourceful president of this well known school, has reason to be gratified at the progress it has made under his leadership.

We glean the following items from a letter to the Publisher by Rev. P. O. Lowrey, our pastor at Donaldsonville, La.: "I have sent in my 65th subscription to the Missionary Voice this year. Only 6 copies were taken when I began the campaign to extend its circulation. Our Knights of Ezelah, with some invited guests, totaling twelve, are spending a week near Hope Villa on a camp outing. Mr. J. G. Suttles, the Y. M. C. A. Secretary from Vacherie, has them in charge. Our fourth son, and seventh child, was born Sunday, August 20, at 5 o'clock p. m. He is about a five-pounder." We congratulate Brother and Sister Lowrey on this addition to their family circle, and pray God's blessings on the little one.

Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Park, of Sardis, Miss., have announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Leonese, to Mr. William H. Robinson, of Meridian, Miss. The wedding will take place in the Methodist Church at Sardis in September. Commenting upon this announcement, the Southern Reporter says: "The fair bride-to-be is a most charming young lady, and since her residence in Sardis she has made a host of friends, who join in wishing her all the happiness that her heart has craved, and which she so richly deserves. Professor Robinson is a prominent young educator, who is steadily rising in his profession." The Advocate extends in advance to the prospective bride and groom hearty congratulations and all good wishes.

MORALS FIRST.

It is not wise for parents to ignore the moral problems which will be associated with their son's or daughter's education. If they send that son or daughter to an institution which is large and pretentious and wonderfully well equipped, but where the very multitude will make temptations, and harm come of it, they will be responsible. If they choose the smaller college, where the moral life is more carefully guarded, where the temptations are fewer, where the equipment is plainer but the personal training and oversight are better, they will be doing their duty and some day will be gladder. And one day that son or daughter will rise up and call them blessed for their faithfulness.—Presbyterian Journal.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

The seventy-fifth session of Port Gibson Female College will open September 13, 1916. The indications are that the enrollment will be the largest in several years. Already more have applied for rooms than were enrolled last year. The College buildings are being painted, repaired, and made ready for the comfort of the pupils.

Dr. T. B. Holloman will preach the opening sermon at 11 a. m., Sunday, September 17.

We have revised the curriculum, so that we require ten entrance units and sixty-seven college units.

We have fourteen teachers—all thorough Christians, and all adepts in their several departments.

T. J. O'NEILL, President.

A GOOD ONE.

The pupils in an Alabama school were asked to construct a sentence containing the word "amphibious." As quick as a flash the son of a local preacher gave out the following: "Most fish stories am fibious."—The Friend for Boys and Girls.

"When truth is in the heart it is always manifested in the life."

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

MRS. GERTRUDE LEA KIMBLE.

In the death of Mrs. Gertrude Lea Kimble, daughter of the late Luke Lea, and Mrs. M. A. Lea, who survives her, which sad event occurred at her home near Mt. Zion Church on May 29, 1916, Lincoln County has lost a good woman of honor and worth, while the City of Paradise and the ranks of the Angelic Host have gained a member whose joy in the transfer to these realms above was assured.

Mrs. Kimble was born in the proud old County of Lincoln, on April 1, 1862. On March 1, 1881, she was married to Mr. S. T. Kimble, who is left to mourn her death, as are also five children, all of whom are married except one, little Elsie, only ten years of age, who was her mother's pride, love, and comfort.

Early in life she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and remained a faithful worker until the day of her death. She has gone, but has left behind a host of friends, who mourn her going, and she was in every way worthy of the highest esteem. When but a young lady, she was marked out as an unusual character, possessing so many of the beautiful graces and virtues of womanhood. She was meek and unpretending, and lived a simple, natural life. You could not think of her in terms of deceit and hypocrisy. A true woman, a faithful mother, a devoted wife were terms applied to her. Popular among her associates, esteemed by her friends, respected by her Church connections, and beloved within her home, this woman enjoyed the full measure of happiness while living the life below, and now that she has answered the call and passed over the river into the rest of the shades of the trees, those who knew her best are assured of her final victory and her eternal rest in the "Land that is fairer than day."

If ever there was a paradise, her home was one, but she is there no longer, and the home is desolate; she has gone to that eternal home. Death will never knock at the door of that mansion, and in all that land there will not be a single grave. Parted at the door of the tomb, thank God, we shall meet again at the door of Immortality, where she awaits with harp in hand for her aged mother, who will not be long in answering the call, we fear.

Her death occurred at five o'clock on the evening of May 29, 1916, and on the second day her body was tenderly borne by loved ones' hands to the last place of rest, "the old family graveyard," at Mt. Zion Church, and there sorrowfully left by them to await the echoing notes of the resurrection Angel's call.

Tell me not in mournful numbers,
That the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem.
Life is real, life is earnest,
And the grave is not the goal,
Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not written of the soul.

But, dear loved ones, let us cheer up and brush back our tears and press forward with a bright anticipation of one day seeing our dear ones in all the brightness and beauty of our transfigured Lord.

BEULAH MAY FOSTER.

CAMPTI CHARGE (LA. CONF.)

Dear Dr. Meek: Please give me a little space in the Advocate in which to give some acount of my work. I have held all of my revival meetings with some degree of success.

The first meeting was held at Montgomery, with Rev. J. M. Alford doing the preaching, which was quite satisfactory to all. He is a good revivalist and is fine help in a meeting. There were a few accessions to the Church and the membership was considerably revived. The people of Montgomery were very thoughtful, kind, and generous towards Brother Alford's material interests.

The second meeting was held in Campti. My brother, Rev. E. C. Cargill, did the preaching. Brother R. H. Oliver, of Fortworth, Texas, had charge of the music. The people of Campti do not hesitate to say that my brother is a great preacher. Of course, it goes without saying that we enjoyed very much having him with us. The people also were highly pleased with the efficient service that Brother Oliver rendered. He is not only a good singer, but is also fine help in revival work. While there were no accessions to the Church, there were some reclaimed and many believers were made stronger in faith, and expressed a determiuation to live for God. Therefore, we believe the meeting was very helpful to the churches and people of the town. The people of Campti, as they usually are, were very generous in helping to take care of the finances of the meeting.

The third, and last meeting was held at Davis Springs. Rev. D. C. Barr did the preaching, and it was well done. He is a plain, practical, and forceful preacher of the gospel. He holds his congregation well: in fact, he is splendid help in revival work. As a result of this meeting, some were reclaimed and the spiritual life of the church was quickened, and I think some accessions to the Church will follow. The people of Davis Springs Church and community were not forgetful of the material interest of the visiting pastor.

In conclusion, I wish to say that I think upon the whole we will make a better showing at Conference this year than was made last year. We are hoping to round out a good year's work.

THE ADVANTAGE OF WEALTH.

The Aerial Age tells of discovering a tired little boy who sat on the curb with his chin resting in his hands. "I wish I was rich," he exclamed. "What would you do with your money if you were rich?" asked a playmate. "I'd buy a great, big motor car," answered the little chap. "so I could fly my kite out of the back of it without running my legs off."—Presbyterian.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it." —Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 525 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

depends largely on the sufferer's ability to upbuild a weakened system, and thus hasten a return of normal body functions.

In this effort much depends on fresh air—night and day—and rest and good food. The patient should refrain from work that overtaxes, and all sanitary precautions should be taken. These commonsense measures do not always achieve the desired results unless aided by proper medication.

W. F. McMURRY,
Cor. Sec'y.

WHY SO MANY ARE MISLED.

How does it come that Mormon elders are able to come into a respectable city and gather a body of misled people and organize a congregation who acept their abominable doctrines? How is it that "Pastor" Russell or his emissaries can gather up classes of people to believe his erroneous teachings that are dead set in opposition to real Christian truth? How does it happen that Mrs. Eddy's teachers and followers have misled people here and there to accept her pernicious and unchristian views, setting at defiance the facts of the Gospel and trampling the truths of true religion and of true science into the mire? Is it not because so many people even in our own nominally Christian land, are not thoroughly educated to know what is essential in order to sound faith and healthful life? The Church needs to be all the time alert and diligent.—Herald and Presbyter.

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

(The following resolutions were adopted at the Laymen's Missionary Conference lately in session at Lake Junaluska, N. C.)

We hail with great joy the prospect of a real unification of American Methodism, the way to which has been so auspiciously prepared by unanimous action of the General Conferences of the two Episcopal Methodisms. We rejoice most of all in the impress and guidance of the Holy Spirit evidenced by the enthusiastic approval of the rank and file of both Churches. Therefore, we declare:

First—That as a movement and representing the Laymen of Southern Methodism, we accept unqualifiedly the principle of unification promulgated by both General Conferenees, believing it to be the will of our common Master and Lord.

Second—That we hereby register the definite conviction that a plan for unifying the two Churches can be found which, unjust to neither, will contribute to the fullest development and largest efficiency of both, at home and abroad.

Third—That while we welcome the fullest discussion in press and on platform, and would not hinder the freest expression of honest conviction upon a matter so vital to the future usefulness of the Church, we do strongly deprecate any disposition to obscure the issues of the living present by reviving those of the past.

Fourth—We hereby pledge ourselves and our best efforts for the realization of the proposed unification on such a basis of courage, sacrifice, and Christian good will as shall minister to the spread of the Kingdom on earth, and which shall be for His glory.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT NOTES.

This is the vacation period and some of the preachers are taking advantage of the same. The pulpit of First Church was filled on the first Sunday of this month by Rev. A. W. Turner, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Sexton being away. This church has cancelled its debt, and is now enjoying the distinction of having solved one of the largest financial problems confronting any church in the State. The pastor, people, and friends have wrought well in this work.

Our pastor at Texas Avenue was relieved of pulpit duties last Sunday and the Sunday preceding by Rev. J. W. Faulk, of the Glenmora charge Good reports have reached the ears of your scribe as to Brother Faulk's ministrations. Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, as the pastor of this congregation, is always alert and busy, looking after the interests of his flock.

Rev. R. W. Tucker is in demand for revival work. He has lost none of his zeal and qualification for such work, as is sometimes the case with ministers. His church is well organized and can afford to spare him occasionally to assist others.

The Cedar Grove and Queensborough pastors exchanged pulpits on the 30th of July. I heard good reports from Brother Henderson's work among our people. The Cedar Grove people have been considerate enough not to complain so that I have heard of it.

Our churches are better prepared to do good work than ever before. Our church debt is now where we can handle it—I refer to the Queensborough Church. I. T. REAMES.

THE WRITING OF A HYMN.

The late Rev. Robert J. Lowry of Plainfield, N. J., was the writer of the well-known hymn "Shall We Gather at the River?"

The Christian Herald gives in Dr. Lowry's own words an account of the way this hymn came to be written:

"One afternoon in July, 1864, when I was pastor of Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., the weather was oppressively hot, and I was lying on a lounge in a state of physical exhaustion. I was almost incapable of bodily exertion, and my imagination began to take to itself wings. Visions of the future passed before me with startling vividness. The imagery of the Apocalypse took the form of a tableau. Brightest of all were the throne, the heavenly river, and the gathering of the saints. My soul seemed to take new life from that celestial outlook. I began to wonder why the hymn-writers had said so much about the 'river of death,' and so little about 'the pure water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.' As I mused the words began to construct themselves. They came first as a question of Christian inquiry, 'Shall we gather?' Then they broke out in chorus, as an answer of Christian faith, 'Yes, we'll gather.' On this question and answer the hymn developed itself. The music came with the hymn."

The Christian Herald adds: "In the following spring forty thousand children sang it on their May anniversary parade and in their churches. Then it went everywhere. It was sung in conventions, in churches, in Sunday schools, and at the bedside of the dying. It crossed the ocean and became known in Great Britain and on the continent. At some of the most distant missionary stations in Asia it was translated and sung. It found its way to the Sandwich Islands and soon encircled the globe." Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Incontestable proof of time.

The fact that Gray's Ointment has been used in thousands of homes during the past ninety-six years is incontestable proof of its merit. All who have ever used Gray's Ointment will testify that it is a most effective remedy for allaying pain and healing sores, boils, carbuncles, skin abrasions, cuts, burns, bruises, etc. It is a positive protection against blood poison. N. B. Hoofman, Stewart, Miss., writes: "My father used it in his family fifty years ago. For the purpose you recommend it, it has no equal." Only 25c a box at drug stores. For FREE sample, write W. PHILLIPS BROOKS AND THE GOLDEN RULE.

A lady was traveling from Providence to Boston with her weak-minded father, who became possessed of a fancy that he must get off the train while it was still in motion.

His daughter endeavored to quiet him, but found it difficult, and she was about to give up in despair when she noticed a very large man watching the proceedings intent over the top of his newspaper.

Of course, this man might have kept on reading. He might have said to himself, "This is no affair of mine." He might have thought, "I need every minute of this journey for to-night's preparation." But he was a Good Samaritan, who thought of others first, and so, as soon as he caught the lady's eye, he rose and crossed quickly to her.

"I beg your pardon," he said; "you are in trouble. May I help you?"

She explained the situation to him.

"What is your father's name?" he asked.

She told him, and the large man, leaning toward the troubled old man, had addressed him by name, shaken hands cordially, and engaged him in a conversation so interesting and so cleverly arranged to keep his mind occupied that he forgot his need to leave the train, and did not think of it again until they were in Boston. Here the stranger put the lady and her charge into a carriage, received her assurance that she felt perfectly safe, had cordially shaken her hand, and was about to close the carriage door when she remembered that she had felt so safe in the keeping of this noble-looking man that she had not even asked his name. Hastily putting her hand against the door, she said:

"Pardon me, but you have rendered me such a service—may I not know whom I am thanking?"

The big man smiled as he answered, "Phillips Brooks," and then turned away.—Christian Advocate.

JULY TEACHER-TRAINING ENROLLMENT.

As it was to be expected the enrollment of teacher-training classes for the summer would fall to a low point, the enrollment for July justifies that expectation, there being but 23 classes and 243 students (including five individual students) enrolled from the whole Church during that month. The enrollment from the Gulf Division Conferences were four classes, 32 students, as follows:

Louisiana—Two classes, with 21 students, at Gilbert and Patterson.

Mississippi—One class, with seven students, at Magee.

North Alabama—One class, with four students, at Oxmoor.

During the month diplomas were issued to Gulf Division students as follows:

Louisiana Conference—Four First Course diplomas at New Iberia.

North Alabama Conference—One First Course diploma at Sweetwater.

North Arkansas Conference—Three Advanced Course diplomas at Piggott.

North Mississippi Conference—Four Advanced Course diplomas at Booneville.

WESLEY BIBLE CLASS DEPARTMENT.

The following paragraphs are taken from the report of Dr. Bulla, Superintendent of the Wesley Bible Class Department, to the General Sunday School Board at its meeting at Lake Junaluska on July 11:

The past year has been the most successful period in the history of our Wesley Bible Class work; 2000 classes with an approximate membership of 60,000 enrolled during the year. There are now 7650 Wesley Classes—5330 adult, 70 senior, and 1350 intermediate—with a membership approximating 230,000.

What does this mean? It means: 1. That these classes are organized. They have officers and committees, systematically working out the purposes of the movement. 2. These classes are closely related to our Church, and their loyalty counteracts the tendency toward that class independence which has embarrassed other denominations. This commends the movement to our leaders. 3. Emphasis is being placed on Christian activity. The class reports show a varied activity in the class, in the local church, in the home, and in the community. 4. These classes are at once the evangelistic opportunity of the Church, having many unconverted members enrolled, with an evangelistic agency, the class leaders being influential men and women with an eager desire to lead the members to Christ.

The response of our Bible classes to the appeal of the Church to organize and enroll created a need for a clearing-house meeting where representatives of classes might meet for fellowship and conference. Wesley Bible Class Federations are being formed to meet this need, and they have succeeded beyond the enthusiastic expectation of the leaders. The following Federation meetings have been held during the year: Florida Conference, Orlando, October 26, 27, attendance 300; North Carolina Conference, Fayetteville, January 19-21, attendance 350; Central Texas Conference, Fort Worth, May 10-12, attendance 350; North Alabama Conference, Birmingham, June 13-15, attendance 308; South Carolina State, Sumter, July 3-5, attendance 1000. There is no confusion or loss of motion in our Federation meetings. Wesley Classes are members of one household. They discuss the Bible class organization and work in the tongue wherein they were born, and return each to its home Church to work in accordance with the plans of the Southern Methodist Church.

Our Program.—We shall carry on this work of recruiting from the non-church-going population; we shall drill in the manual of arms, in strategy and tactics; we shall mobilize our class companies in church regiments, our regiments in district brigades, our brigades in Conference divisions, and our divisions in a Southern Methodist Army Corps, and fall into our designated position in the world-wide Bible class army, to give a good account of ourselves.

CHURCH NEWS.

Dr. John R. Mott has been named as one of the United States Commissioners to adjust matters with Mexico.

The Pacific Methodist Advocate, our Pacific Coast paper, has reduced its size from twenty-four to sixteen pages.

A monument to Rev. Thomas Lorente, a popular Catholic priest, was unveiled at Rosaryville, La., on Thursday morning, August 24.

Hon. Asa Candler, of Atlanta, has lately visited Michigan, in company with his wife, whose health, we regret to state, has not been good lately.

Rev. A. R. Berkeley, of Philadelphia, has been called to St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church of New Orleans. Mr. Berkeley is a Southerner. He was born in Tennessee and was educated in North Carolina and Virginia.

Dr. R. E. Jones, editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate (New Orleans), who is on the Unification Committee of the Northern Methodist Church, has stated that the Northern and Southern Commissioners will probably first hold separate meetings.

Dr. W. C. Lovett, the able Editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, is standing firmly for a "safe and sane" union of American Methodism, as distinguished from a whoop-and-hurrah amalgamation at any price. Dr. Lovett's head is generally level.

Some of the preachers at Los Angeles, Calif., made much ado over the recent visit of the Hon. Charles E. Hughes, the Republican nominee for the Presidency, to that city. Mr. Hughes is undoubtedly a worthy man, but why a minister or a congregation should become "fitified" because a distinguished candidate for a high office comes in to worship, is somewhat beyond us. The dignity of the ministry and Church is too little appreciated in this day.

At the coming round of Annual Conferences the question of making the District and Conference Lay Leaders ex-officio members will be voted on, having been handed down by the last General Conference to be passed upon. We should like to see more laymen in the Annual Conferences, but we should much prefer to see the additional membership truly representative instead of ex-officio. Our General Board of Missions already has too much power in the Church, and the Laymen's Movement is largely under its control.

SECULAR NEWS AND COMMENT.

A town in Canada which was settled by Germans and named Berlin will hereafter be known as Kitchener.

The Negro National Educational Congress, which met in Washington City last week, endorsed the candidacy of Mr. Charles E. Hughes for the Presidency.

Mr. Asa Candler was nominated for Mayor of Atlanta in the Democratic primary held in that city on August 24 over his opponent, Mr. Jesse Armistead, by a vote of about two to one.

The Commissioners on Uniform State Laws held their twenty-sixth annual conference in Chicago on August 24. Mr. W. O. Hart, of New Orleans, was elected Treasurer of this organization.

Congress passed a bill last week permitting the postmaster at Gulfport, Miss., to use a special stamp cancelling dye in connection with the Mississippi Centennial Exposition to be held there from October 1, 1917 to April 1, 1918.

Of the 1,135,000,000 pounds of wood pulp used for making paper in the United States last year, 70 per cent came from Canada, and the other 30 per cent came from Norway and Sweden. The importations of this valuable product last year were 180,000,000 pounds less than those of the preceding twelve months.

Mr. Lloyd George, the able British Statesman, is quoted as having said that the end of the great European War can now be dimly seen. To us, however, but one thing seems to be settled, namely, that Germany's chance of winning has passed. We rather look for the great horror to protract itself into another year.

Nearly 15,000,000 bales of American cotton were consumed by the world last year, while the crop of that year (exclusive of linters) was about 13,000,000 bales. A good surplus, however, had been brought over from the preceding year. Middling cotton is now worth more than 15 cents a pound in New Orleans, and cotton seed are worth about $40 a ton. But in Louisiana and Mississippi the cotton crop is very poor, having been greatly injured by the wet weather and boll weevils.

JASPER CIRCUIT, MISS. CONFERENCE.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just closed a series of meetings which resulted in the accomplishment of great good. At each church where services were held the membership was revived, and we had in all 4 additions. The preaching was done by Rev. G. L. McNeece, an evangelist and student at the Mississippi Conference Training School. He is an able revivalist and his sermons profoundly impressed all who heard them. He has had about eight years' experience in the itinerancy as an evangelist, which makes him very effective in his work. I consider him above an average preacher.

B. H. WILLIAMS, P. C.

HORNBECK, LA.

Dear Brother Meek: We are getting along well on this circuit. We have some very fine people on the work here and we are very much in love with them. Rev. C. K. Spell, of Willmore, Ky., has just closed a good meeting at the Holly Grove Church with about 12 or 14 conversions or reclamations. Our meeting at Prospect Church was very good. Brother Lee Harper, of Sibley, La., preached there for us. We had a good meeting. I have held two good meetings outside of my regular charge—one with Brother Dring at Castor, La., and the other with Brother Vandenburg, at Clarence, La. God gave us a revival at each place, and many prayed through at the altar. We have one of the best men on earth for our presiding elder, and that is where the most of one's success as a Methodist preacher lies, that is in Christ.

EVANGELINE MISSION, LA. CONFERENCE.

Dear Dr. Meek: The Evangeline Mission, consisting of four appointments, Ville Platte, Chicot, White's Chapel, and Bethel, is in a fairly good condition, taking all things into consideration.

On the second Sunday in July I began a meeting at Bethel and we had good attendance, and in many ways we feel that the Lord blessed our efforts. The church members were revived and made strong resolutions to live closer to God and be more faithful to his cause. There was only one conversion evident, but we expect to receive several into the Church there before the close of the year. I began a meeting at Chicot on the third Sunday in July but had to postpone it on account of the continued rains. I will hold that meeting later in the year, at a time when the harvest will not interfere.

Our meeting at Gold Dust, or White's Chapel, was the best that has been held here in years, judging it from any standpoint you may choose. We had larger crowds, so the members say, better attendance, and greater interest. Brother Hebert, of Houma, came to us on Tuesday after the fourth Sunday in July and he was at his best. He struck some mighty blows at Satan, and as a result we received seventeen into the Church on the last night of the meeting and several others contemplate joining at the next preaching service. Although Satan tried in various ways to defeat our purpose, we feel safe in saying that the church is upon a fair road to recover from it lethargy, and though much has been done to hinder the progress here this year, there is a strong probability of a better report from this particular point, from a standpoint of spirituality and attendance, as well as a financial increase. The entire work may not pay out in full, having been overestimated perhaps, but we are going to make a strong effort to report two or three hundred per cent increase in Conference collections.

Just here I wish to say that while the little church at Ville Platte is struggling under a heavy debt, according to the size of the Church, we are going to try our best to reduce the indebtedness as much as possible before Conference. We are sure to remove at least $100, and if our plans carry we will even do better. Considering the fact that our church there has only eighteen or twenty members and only two men included therein, and that it is a town that has one of the strongest Roman Catholic organizations in the State, we do not see how we can possibly meet our obligations without receiving outside help. It is absolutely impossible to raise the money in the town of Ville Platte. We have had no revival there so far and I am unable to get any one to volunteer to help me. There are some good, loyal workers there, but they sometimes become discouraged. Pray for us, brethren, and remember us by a contribution on our "white elephant," if you will.

With best wishes for a good year throughout the Conference,

CONCERNING CHILDREN'S MISSIONARY WORK.

"The lark is up to meet the sun,
The bee is on the wing,
The ant its labors has begun,
The woods with music ring."

These little old lines have always made me feel like I wanted to be busy, and to-day they speak for the Children's Missionary Work of Louisiana. We are in all reality up-reaching for the light. Our labors for Jesus' sake have begun, and we intend to have our share in making all Louisiana, yea, even unto the utter most parts of the earth, ring with the music of his love.

We are growing in wisdom, because we are studying the Young Christian Worker, Year Book, Leaflets, and Study Books; and in stature, because we have learned through the splendid lessons prepared for us that a healthy body is better for the indwelling of the soul; and in favor with God and man, because we are about our Father's business. The fact is, we are able to give below a report showing a great improvement along all lines. Since the close of this report, three new Children's Auxiliaries have been organized. Won't you come to our ranks and join in this song of praise to Christ, the Children's King?

Dear Children: We have just closed our report for the second quarter, showing: 60 Junior Divislons, 1491 Junior members; 25 Baby Divislons, 208 Baby members; 22 Mission Study classes, 600 members; 275 subscribers to The Young Christian Worker; $61.74 paid on Pledge this quarter. We have paid in all on our Pledge this year, $101.65.

When you have seen these figures, please refer to your own report, and see just what your part has been. Now, please take the Minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society, Louisiana Conference, for 1915, turn to pages 31-37, find your name, and see what is written there. Are you satisfied with what you have been doing?

Turn to page 61 of the Minutes, and see tbis GOAL set for us—75 Junior Divisions, 50 Baby Divisions, 500 subscribers to The Young Christian Worker, and $300, our Pledge. To reach this GOAL by December 31, 1916, we will have to organize, during the next six months, 15 Junior Divisions, 25 Baby Divisions, secure 225 subscribers to The Young Christian Worker, and give $199 on our Pledge.

A letter has just come from our Comanding Officer, Mrs. Albright. Read a little of what she has to say: "This is a year of great undertakings, because the opportunities, the needs and demands are the greatest in the history of our work, and the Children's Department must press forward to make its contribution to the whole. We have assumed a pledge of $30,000. To meet this pledge, we will have to specialize this year on finances."

Children, shall we rally to the call? Only two Junior Divislons responded to the request in my last letter that each child give $1 to the pledge.

Children, I love Jesus, and I love you, because you are his most precions possessions. And I want to help you. Won't you read tbis letter carefully, and write me, telling me your problems?

Some of you have done excellent work this year, and I want to congratulate you. I appreciate very much the responses to the last Quiz. First Church, Shreveport, Oak Ridge, Greenwood, and Parker Memorial, New Orleans, answered every question.

I sent every Divislon a Standard of Excellence. Will you please mark the points you have attained, and return to me at once.

With my sincere love,
Mrs. R. H. HARPER.

MISSION STUDY TEXTBOOKS FOR 1916-17.

For Adults.

World Missions and World Peace. By Caroline Atwater Mason. Price—paper, 37 cents; cloth, 57 cents.

In this book Mrs. Mason effectively answers the time-worn argument that without war the heroic and sacrificial in men will not be developed and shows that the work of foreign missions furnishes a Christian equivalent for war and supplies the motives of self-sacrifice and heroism. "World Missions and World Peace" should be read by all women who realize the sorrow in that cry of agony that is voiced by the countless women whose light and joy are blotted out by war. The book is strong, and a careful reading gives one a new conception of our duty as Christians toward world misslons and world peace.

South American Neighbors. By Homer C. Stuntz. Price—paper, 40 cents; cloth, 60 cents.

This new mission study text book on South America contains a complete survey of commerce, society, government, religion, and educatlon in South America. The book was written after the close of the Panama Congress and includes the investigatlons and recommendations of that historic gathering.

The South To-Day. By John M. Moore. Price—paper, 40 cents; cloth, 60 cents.

This book was written by a Southern man and gives illuminating facts regarding the South and conditions in the Southern States. In "The South To-Day" Dr. Moore discusses agriculture, industry, and education in relation to the religious life of the South.

Old Spain in New America. By Robert McLean and Grace Petrie Williams. Price—paper, 40 cents; cloth, 60 cents. This book is directly in line with the theme of mission study for 1916-17, "The Two Americas." It tells how, since the early period of Spanish exploration and colonization, Old Spain has left her impress upon much of the territory of North America. A study of the book will give the reader a glimpse of the early beginnings of missionary endeavor, present-day conditions, and needs of these Spanish-speaking Americans, and will tell of the effects of the Protestant Church through its devoted missionaries to release these peoples from the superstition and ignorance of more than three centuries.

New Posters. Price—25 cents a set. Order from Home Base Secretary.

Leaders and members of mission study classes will welcome the appearance of a splendid set of posters to be used in connection with "World Missions and World Peace." This set includes twelve pictorial charts or posters, with directions for use.

PASSING UNDER THE ROD.

The shadows have fallen across the pathway of our dear Mrs. Johnson, president of the Mississippi Conference Society. Last week we noted the accident which had befallen her father and ere the Advocate came out, he had passed to his eternal reward.

Mr. Graham passed away Friday evening, August 18, at the age of eighty years. The remains were taken to his old home, Louisville, Ky., to be placed by the side of his beloved companion, who preceded him some years ago. Mr. Graham was a man with a rare, sweet Christian spirit, just such a father as one would expect Mrs. Johnson to have. He was only waiting at the portals to be told to enter in, and when the summons came it was such a simple transition.

What words of comfort can we offer the bruised and broken hearts in that home? The healing balm of consolation is found in God's Holy Word. Does he not say, "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come unto you;" and again, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid?" So closely to the Father's side have this daughter and son lived that we feel they are constantly being supplied with love and strength from on high. In this hour of deep distress his loving arms are placed closely around them, and 'neath their shadow are they finding comfort for their sorrow. "The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart."

Middleton Church (Mississippi.)

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed one of the best meetings in the history of this church. Our meeting began on the second Sunday in this month and continued for seven days. The preaching was done by our pastor, Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, and was of high order. He preached with the old time power, and the effects were telling. The visible results were 22 addition to the Church on profession of faith, two infants baptized, 2 subscriptions secured to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, 5 to the Missionary Voice, and a general awakening of the church. The church here is well pleased with its pastor, and, being a young man, he has great things ahead of him. We are expecting great things of our Church this year. A MEMBER.

Prentiss, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: On the second Sunday in July we began our revival campaign on the Prentiss charge. Rev. W. A. Terry helped us at Bassfield, Rev. J. W. Chambers at Carson's, and Rev. H. Mellard at Prentiss and Mt. Zion. These brethren did some very strong, forceful preaching, and are very sound in the doctrines of the Methodist Church. The sermons of Brother Mellard were eloquent, forceful, and convincing. Many were brought to Christ and several joined the Church through his preaching.

The same can be said of the other brethren, and we feel that our Church in the charge is much stronger—more united and wide-awake to her responsibility of saving souls. There is much yet to be done and our churches are still a long way from the ideal.

You talk about the problem of the "country church," and many are the articles from learned and wise sages on that subject. Some speak as if they know all about it, but do you want to know the problem confronting the Methodist Church in the country today? It is the lack of trained college-bred preachers, who have the old-time Methodist fire burning in their bosoms, who are willing to preach the old-time Gospel in the old-time way as the old-time fathers did years ago, and who are willing to adjust themselves to the machinery of the modern Methodist Church and live within the means of a small salary. Fill our country pulpits to-day with just such preachers, and you can imagine what our Church will be to-morrow.

Yours in the work,

JAS. M. LEWIS.

The Caseyville Camp Meeting.

Dear Dr. Meek: We should like to have you print a word concerning our meeting that has just closed at the Caseyville Camp Ground. The meeting was conducted during the first few days by Rev. J. M. Morse, of Brookhaven, Miss., with the preacher in charge, Rev. H. K. McKee, assisting him. Brother Morse did some strong preaching and had the meeting in full headway when Rev. D. E. Kelly, who had been selected to hold the meeting, arrived. Brother Kelley was not a stranger to the Caseyville people; so we were all very glad to welcome him into our midst. He preached the gospel in such a way that crowds came to every service to hear him and were helped by listening to his instructive words. Another helpful feature of the meeting was the gospel singing, conducted by Rev. J. S. Duke, with Miss Minnie Davis as pianist. Brother Duke did his best for the meeting and we are sure that association with him helped each member of the camp. We are glad to state that we had the hearty endorsement of our Baptist and Presbyterian friends. Dr. C. E. Grafton was with us for several days and made a number of instructive talks. He is one of the greatest men in the Presbyterian Church to-day and has been associated with this people for more than thirty years. Young Brother Miller, pastor of the Baptist Church in an adjoining community, was with us also. The meeting in every way was a success. There were a number of accessions to the churches of the community, and every church member was helped. Our prayers will continue to follow Brother Kelly and Brother Duke in their work.

REPORTER.

At Prairie.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just finished a meeting at Prairie on the M. and O. Railroad which in all respects was successful. The congregations were good day and night. Nine new names were announced for Church membership, 1 of whom were received by profession and baptism, and the others by certificate and transfer. These very important additions give increased strength to the Prairie Church and will greatly aid the movement there. The general good to the congregation and community was fine—above common—as a result of the meeting. Rev. J. M. Bradley, of Aberdeen, joined me in the most earnest and cheerful effort for 5 days and in his ministrations fully met all anticipations, even going very much beyond what was expected in generous and useful service. The people, too, "had a mind to work" and God came to the town. So much so that the sequel they said was "best of any meeting of latest years." These railroad churches—Prairie, Strongs, and Muldon—are in a most magnificent section of territory and benedictions, more or less, are realized hereabouts by reason of the fact that Aberdeen and West Point are suburban to this charming and well developed location.

The Methodist parsonage at Strongs has lately taken on a more finished appearance. Touches have been given in new fencing, a new barn, and in roof improvements with some incidentals otherwise, which add much to the property value and to the convenience of the situation. Some other slight finishings will put things O. K. for present occupants and for any who should follow. The Strongs people—some of whom grade with the best in Mississippi—are considerate and generous with the pastors sent and many times have rendered sublime service in the work of the Church.

Mrs. Alice Watson, long a triumphant Christian example and supporter of this church, has entered heaven since my assignment here; and "Mr. Wheeler," her son, went also during this midsummer in the unfortunate "auto" accident. The church, however, so many times preached to by Bishop Paine and others of great merit has heeded the Master's orders to "close up the ranks," and they are doing valiantly in service for God.

THE COMMISSIONER RUMINATES.

Home from a fourteen days' VACATION! Thermometer ranging around 94 degrees; and an accumulation of letters—more than a score in number. Inasmuch as this was an improvised outing—a kind of French leave—it is probahly better that no comment should be made. By the way, how in the world did that phrase come to be applied to the most thoughtfully polite of peoples?

My very limited experience in vacation-taking confirms the more the conclusion that unless it be for at least a month or a season, it were better at home behind closed doors and in close proximity to the hathtub. It might be that a time upon the Great Lakes or among the Thousand Islands would compensate; hut then who, with the reduced stipend of the summer season, can afford such trips? But there is no use ruminating further on that point; and why should the pastor take a vacation and leave the flock as sheep scattered upon the hills without a shepherd? So it's a balanced account after all.

Now as to those letters, including every character of communication from that of helping to find a suitable house for rent for a family of six, to that of hunting up a young man recently come to the city, and a request for a visit to the charity hospital in the interest of a friend from a long-ago pastorate. No that's not the half, Doctor (you may be Pastor, Meek, again, some day, so I mention it, "lest you forget, lest you forget"); there was also one large, fat envelope ("IMPORTANT") calling attention to an early coming of the Sunday school hosts of the district, for which provision must be made, no matter what the thermometer registers. Then, there are reminders that sorrow has come into some home and the absent friends must have a line—I wonder if it was such pressure as this that brought from St. Paul that depressing cry, "And who is sufficient for these things?"

Remember, whosoever reads this communication, that these are ruminations, not complainings. All sorts of circular letters, from evangelists "and my singer," from candidates for office, book advertisements, etc., but with a little these are hrushed aside that attention may be given o hè Advocates—what's the church world been doing these weeks? Well, you have given two most excellent issues of the New Orleans Advocate to your readers, with those communications from Bishops Candler and Hoss, Sam Steel, S. A. Brown, Woollard, Davies, and others; and the Nashville is equally rich in letters and communications suggestive of the great interest the watchmen in the different quarters of our great Church are taking in the living issues which pertain to the kingdom of the Master.

As a result of rumination upon these mighty questions, the conclusion is that fair debate and cool heads are much to be sought; for certainly there is a division among us which should not be allowed to result in "envying and strife." If this all important question is to be settled hy the Church at large, it seems to me that the two sides should be represened in a pamphlet gotten out by our Publishing House and sent for free distribution to our people. So much for this meditation.

Before me lies the statement that "of the 4832 students of the Ohio State University during the past session, 1577 were from Methodist homes;" practically one-third of the student body. This recalls a statement made in my presence by Dr. R. W. Jones, while connected with the University of Mississippi, that the largest percentage of boys at that institution were Methodists. A study of the Catalogue of Millsaps College for the session of 1915-1916 shows an enrollment in the literary department of 229, having behind it a membership of 120,000 Methodists in the State of Mississippi. This would not seem so bad a showing were it not that 84 (more than one-third) were from the city of Jackson, leaving a net of only 145 from the State at large. Now, while Millsaps gladly welcomes every matriculate from the Capital City, as a Methodist institution it covets the loyalty of every Methodist in the State, and our ruminatings come to this conclusion, that we need more loyalty to our institutions of learning if we would make them the power they ought to be in our Church and civic life, and that without this loyalty all the writing and shouting over a proposed unification of our Churches will mean very litle. The morning press contains a lengthy account of a great "Catholic Federation of Catholic Societies" in session in New York City, presided over by Professor James Hagerty of the Ohio State University. After dealing with the question of minimum wage, public morals, Mexico and the administration of Mr. Wilson (radically adverse), it calls upon the Directors of American universities and colleges not to permit the contamination of the youth of our country, who are to make and execute the laws. I'll tell you, Doctor, it looks to this Methodist as if we have even graver questions before us than unification.

News Methodistic—what have I? Roberts loaded up his Ford two weeks ago, bag and baggage, and has not been heard from since. I suppose that Chapman is still in the land of high morals, isms and schisms, learning at first hand all about the "error" committed by Mother Eddy when she forgot herself and died. The last from Wells was that he was off to help in a meeting, Foreman writes that he will be down with a delegation to attend the Sunday school convention on September 8 and 9, and "the Beloved." O, where is he? Lost, strayed, or stolen, and not advertised.

But I've ruminated long enough—I must be up and off on a pastoral hike.

When I may come again depends—till then be good.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1916. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

"The wise man, says the Bible, walks with God,
Surveys far on the endless line of life:
Values his soul, thinks of eternity;
Both worlds considers and provides for both."

All the steps toward God are soul movements, such as penitence, faith, and self-surrender. Never did pious talk or religious speculation lead a human spirit into conscious touch with the great Divine Spirit. It is when the heart seeks that the Heavenly Father is found.

Paul's thorn in the flesh was a necessity, lest he should be exalted above measure. And it was because of the lofty privileges that had been given him that it became needful. How weak are the greatest of men! And what a subtle danger is unholy pride! If St. Paul had to have a constant corrective at this point, well may we strive to be on our guard against this insidious peril. How rare a virtue is true humility of spirit! And what is more beautiful?

The work in our charges is now on the home stretch. Unfortunately, many churches leave a very large share of their finances to be raised during the last quarter, and this causes a tremendous strain in the closing months of the Conference year. It is very important for every congregation to meet its assessments and no pains should be spared to do this; but in looking after the material interests of the Church, let us not forget during the coming autumn days that her noblest ministries are to the souls of men.

When a preacher loses faith in the efficacy of the Gospel of Christ to reach and save men he usually becomes an inventor of new fads and expedients. And these must be constantly changing, because none of them are adequate to do what is expected of them. Every minister should lay himself out to learn how to present the great truths of the Divine Word in all their appealing and moving force. This requires both hard thinking and high living. There is no other path to true power in the pulpit.

The Editor has worshiped for the past two Sundays with the Prytania Street Presbyterian congregation of this city, occupying the pulpit in the absence of the pastor, Dr. Alexander. This is one of the strongest Protestant churches in New Orleans, and we have been much impressed with the simple yet stately dignity of its order of service. There is no recitation of creeds, no operatic music, though the organ is a fine one and the singing is of a very superior kind, and everything seems to be arranged with the recognition that the sermon is the chief thing of the hour. After the benediction, the congregation is expected to remain standing in silence for a minute before proceeding to depart. We very much doubt whether the trend toward more ritualism in our form of worship has been helpful to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

INCONSPICUOUS HELPERS.

Great achievements are seldom due to the genius of a single man. Electricity is named for the Greek word for amber, the substance in which it was first discovered, and back of the many wonderful appliances for its utilization lie the thoughts and accumulations of many investigators. The steam engine was a growth of centuries and not a sudden creation. All the credit for bringing it into existence should not be given to him who happened to put the finishing touches upon it and set it to going successfully. A large number of other persons contributed to its making.

In like manner, in religious work there are not a few unobserved silent helpers who are entitled to a large share of the credit for what is accomplished. As an illustration of this, we quote the following from a volume lying on our desk: "The legend is told of a monk who went into the pulpit and preached so that the people were moved. After he went home God told him—

"Thy word had been naught
But for the prayer
Of the poor beggar
Who sat on the stair."

The humble, quiet disciple who keeps in touch with the Master and who prays and works unostentatiously, as best he can, may contribute largely to the spiritual prosperity of the church of which he is a member. And our discerning Lord will not overlook a single such follower either in this life or that which is to come.

THE SCARRITT BIBLE AND TRAINING SCHOOL.

This excellent institution is due to open Thursday of this week. This session will mark the close of the 25th year of its splendid history, and its friends hope to make it one of the best that it has had since it came into existence. In view of the great disaster that overtook this school in the loss of the major portion of its endowment fund about a year ago, the following statement by Miss M. L. Gibson, its accomplished Principal, will doubtless be read with interest:

"Our Outlook.

"Notwithstanding encompassing shadows, our outlook 'is as bright as the promises of God.' Our preparations for the next session are being made in faith and our course of instruction will be enlarged. Two Six Weeks' Courses have been arranged for the benefit of women, especially Christian workers, who cannot leave home to take the entire course and the tours of inspection and visits to institutions included in this course are of special value to students of social service. To meet the growing needs of service to Latin-America and its people the Department of Foreign Language study has been introduced, and Spanish and Portuguese will hereafter be taught, adding to the already able faculty two valuable teachers, Miss Esther [illegible] and Miss Ida Shaffer.

"Our Present Needs.

"1. Educated, well poised Christian women, dowered with health and means for self-support, who will give themselves to Christ and the Church, and who will enter here to receive inspiration and technical training for their work.

"2. Large-hearted men and women who will invest their means in training young women who have surrendered their lives to God for service, but who lack the means to enter here. We trust that many friends will aid the school and the cause of God by helping such young women to be trained for service.

"3. Unceasing prayer, generous sympathy, and loving, loyal zeal from members of 'the household of faith;' appreciation of the school by all Methodists and evidence that they rejoice that the school is enrolled among the institutions of the M. E. Church, South, and that they wish to advance its interests and insure its highest success.

"Our Support.

"This has been guaranteed by the Woman's Missionary Council, which has made an appropriation for its maintenance, expecting that the receipts from self-supporting students, income from students supported by individuals and churches, and gifts from friends who seek to extend the work of the school, will supply the remainder needed for support and enlargement.

NOT RESPONSIBLE.

We are disposed to allow considerable latitude in the discussion of the proposed unification of the Methodisms of the United States, believing that in a matter of such vast importance men of all shades of opinions should have a chance to be heard. We desire, however, to disclaim responsibility for the views set forth in any article except those which we ourself write. Even persons on the same side of a great issue do not always see things precisely alike and some are much more extreme in their forms of expression than others. Clearness of discrimination and moderation of statement are not by any means universal gifts; yet it sometimes happens that in more or less movements of a revolutionary character the intuitions of the man of deep feeling more nearly approximate the truth as to the final outcome than the cold reasoning of the [illegible]. Our advice, however, to all our contributors is to try to keep themselves in hand and, while expressing themselves frankly, to endeavor to do so in language that is least offensive. The strength of a cause is seldom helped by a lack of consideration for others. We do not mean by this that one is to be commended for affecting great admiration for one's opponents and saying complimentary things about them which one does not really feel. Insincerity is never a virtue—not even when it seeks to masquerade in the guise of courtesy.

REGENERATION.

G. S. W.

Through desert lands our weary feet are treading,
Each faltering step would seem to be the last;
Our spirits fail, the ghastly future dreading.
Nor dare recall the past.
No palm trees here their welcome shade to lend us,
No springing fount to quench our parching thirst,
No angel voice Hope's message sweet to send us,
In all this land accurst.

But near, so near, a mighty Rock is throwing
Its deep, cool shadow o'er the burning sands,
And from its side a crystal stream is flowing
To meet the outstretched hands.
O blinded eyes! At last comes full revealing,
The Rock and Stream their mystic work begin;
We lave and drink—and power, divinely healing,
Renews without, within.

Still, still the desert journey lies before us.
But now no lagging feet refuse the trail;
Wings! wings! and that blest healing Shadow o'er us—
What fears can now prevail?
Beyond the sands the city fair is shining,
What matter weary miles that lie between?
Our souls no longer know the old repining,
Within springs life unseen.

OUR FATHER.

The best name by which we can think of God is Father. It is a loving, deep, sweet, heart-touching name, for the name of father is in its nature full of inborn sweetness and comfort. Therefore, also, we must confess ourselves children of God, since there is not a sweeter sound to the father than the voice of the child.—Martin Luther.

THE GOOD PART.

The good part which Mary found is not a perfect intellectual grasp of the contents of revelation—correct doctrine. It is simply the inclination to sit at the Savior's feet. It is the understanding that one best honors and serves the Lord and at the same time serves his own development by holding himself always to the Lord's influence. The many things may easily be lost and forgotten, but the Godward habit will by and by grow to a fixed attitude of soul that cannot be altered.—The Lutheran.

TRANSFORMING DIAMONDS.

When in the city of Amsterdam, in Holland, I was very much interested in a visit we made to a place there famous for polishing diamonds. We saw the men as they were engaged in this work. When a diamond is first found, it has a rough dark outside, and looks just like a common pebble. The outside must be ground off and the diamond be polished before it is fit for use. It takes a long time to do this, and it is very hard work. The diamond has to be fixed very firmly in the end of a piece of hard wood or metal. Then it is held close to the surface of a large metal wheel which is kept going around. Fine diamond dust is put on the wheel, because nothing else is hard enough to polish the diamond. And this work is kept on for days and weeks and months, and sometimes for several years, before it is finished. And if a diamond is intended to be used in the crown of a king, then a longer time and greater pains are spent upon it, so as to make it look as brilliant and beautiful as can be. Now, Jesus calls his people his jewels. He intends them to shine like jewels in the crown he will wear in heaven. To fit them for this they must be polished like the diamond. And God makes use of the troubles he sends on his people in this world to polish his jewels. And when we get to heaven and see how beautiful they look, we shall see that it was indeed good for them that they were troubled. It has fitted them for greater happiness there.—Dr. Richard Newton.

FRENZIED FEAR OF UNION.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Mr. Editor: I have carefully read every editorial on Methodist Union in the Advocate, and have re-read several of them; and the title I have placed above seems to be indicated. After pondering well these strong utterances of yours three pictures come before me.

The first, and by all odds the most important, is of the Christ in the room of "the Last Supper," shadowed by Gethsemane and Calvary; and He is saying: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word (the apostles.) That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one."

I really think that He meant just what He said.

The next picture is of the mighty army of the sons of Wesley, more than eight millions strong—more than six millions of these in America; and they are divided into various bodies antagonistic often to bitterness—distrustful and jealous of each other. Oh the shame of it! the bitter shame of it!

The last—and of least importance, but very personal to myself—is of seven years of my life burdened with heartaches and hardships, spent in California doing my best to aid Southern Methodism in an unseemly race with Northern Methodism; where I heard things too bitter and unrighteous to repeat, and where I saw these two factions of Wesley's sons building altar against altar before a cynical infidelity, whose ironical taunt was: "See how these Christians love each other!" And I saw many thousands of dollars of God's money wasted in this unholy rivalry, money that should have gone to our needy foreign mission fields. And I saw something worse than this: some of the finest spirits that ever blessed our Methodist ministry were crushed by the battling of these factions with each other—such were Butler and M. J. Law of the Los Angeles Conference, and W. H. Mason of the Pacific: and there were many more—some on the other side of the conflict. Oh, the shame of it all! the bitter shame of it!

I cannot blame Bishop Hendrix for his outburst at Saratoga; for he has seen and felt much of this. He lives on the border, and has served the Church in the far West. I do not have to endorse just what he said.

Why is the Editor so fearful of Union? He tells in a late issue: "The Editor of the New Orleans Advocate expects to stand resolutely for the plan of union endorsed by our General Conference at Oklahoma City, as it has generally been construed, namely, as leaving the South proper in a largely autonomous Jurisdictional, or Quadrennial, Conference, holding its own property and electing the Bishops who are to serve it, with our colored brethren in a separate Church of their own. If this plan of union, in its essential particulars, is defeated in the negotiations before the Joint Commission, he proposes, then, to stand for no union at all, but for such a plan of federation as would do away with overlapping and wasteful competition, and secure co-operation between the two Churches where it is needed." (The thing we have had for forty years, that does not keep us out of Illinois and Montana, and does not keep them out of Mississippi and Georgia, Texas and Tennessee). In other editorials he indicates a fear that we might have forced into our polity the Northern concept of the episcopacy so different from ours. Let in be known that I am just as much in love with our concept of Episcopacy as is my Brother Meek; but continued disunion is a fearful price to pay for it. But are we in danger of losing it? Is not my Brother losing sight of some very striking facts? Neither the suggestions made at Saratoga nor those made at Oklahoma are in any sense ultimata. In Zion's Herald of July 19 is the following very explicit statement:

"In the first place, this should be kept in mind by all who attempt to discuss this very vital matter: that the propositions made by both the Southern Church and our own are tentative. There is nothing in the nature of an ultimatum. We did not understand that our brethren of the South were serving an ultimatum upon us at Oklahoma. We certainly were doing nothing of the kind as far as they are concerned at Saratoga. These are propositions North and South, which are offered as a basis of negotiation. That ought not to be forgotten." (Italics are mine.)

In defending their suggestion of "a supreme General Conference" he says:

"Those who have written most severely on the question have done so on the basis, evidently that the word "supreme" means "absolute." Nothing could be further from the facts. The General Conference is not intended to be an irresponsible body—that is to say, a body responsible to no other body. Not at all. It is proposed that it be the supreme body, but not the absolute; that it be constitutionally supreme as a legislative, executive, and judicial body. In explanation of that, in the third place, it should be kept in mind that the proposition is conditioned by these words, "under constitutional provisions and restrictions." Here is the opportunity to bring the two Churches together, and in this is the contribution of this paragraph to unification. * * * No one believes, for instance, but that a body will need to be created or some method found to pass on the constitutionality of legislation if we adopt the system of Jurisdictional Conferences. Anything else would lead to virtual anarchy. There must be unity throughout the Church."

I have thus understood the matter from the time of the action at Saratoga; and have been surprised that my Brother Meek and a few others have seen it otherwise. Bishop Hoss has wisely said: "Nothing is yet settled." Let us not get so excited over tentative propositions.

What you say, my Dear Doctor, about the Negro question reminds me very unpleasantly of a set of politicians in our State, who have sought office (only you are not seeking office) by exploiting a sort of negrophobia, as cruel as it is unjust. To a man born and reared in "the black belt of Mississippi "before the War," this fear of having the Negroes belong to the same Church as we do, is difficult to understand. This man preaches every Sunday in a Church built "before the War," where the gallery made for the Negroes faces him. In that gallery they heard the sermon preached to them and "the white folks;" and from it they descended after their masters and mistresses had communed, and knelt at the same altar, and received the same sacrament from the same minister's hands. We feared no trouble from the Negro members then. None ever came. Southern white people know how to lead the Negro. In Church life they have ever led him right—they can still do so. Somehow I am too much of an old-time Southern Democrat to be afraid of him. In 1875 I helped to straighten him out in his politics, and am sure he will not have to be thus straightened again. No Doctor, I cannot altogether sympathize with you in your Negrophobia.

Passing over several things you have said which have saddened me—and I speak for others, and write this by request—one thing must be met with my most earnest protest: "Has there been at work a secret clique in the Church, South, that has not dared to come into the open, and have some of our Northern brethren been in league with it? Was our Oklahoma City plan of union reached around by these Southern leaders (under cover) and virtually nullified before it had even been considered by the Northern General Conference?" While these sentences are in the form of questions, they are really statements; and are so understood. The charge involves deception. The words "a secret clique * * that has not dared to come into the open," mean by all the canons of interpretation a low political trick using chicanery and other forms of the basest deceit. "Reached around under cover." The words shock me. Do you really mean to make this charge? Your words carry this meaning.

Against whom is this awful charge made? In your Editorial of July 27 you indicate that Bishop Hendrix, Drs. F. S. Parker, F. M. Thomas, Jno. M. Moore, J. W. Lee, W. F. Tillett and some others. I hold no brief for these brethren. I have disagreed strongly with some of them, notably Bishop Hendrix; but all of them are my beloved brethren, and Bishop Hendrix is Senior Bishop of our Church. You have presumed but have not proved that something improper was said or done at the Evanston meeting. Where does the secrecy come in? You seem to know what was said by Drs. Moore, Ivey and Christian. Was there really any secrecy? These men did not claim, as I understand, to represent anybody—any board, or conference, or brotherhood. Each spoke for himself. You are not representing the Mississippi Conference in your editorials just now; and I do not challenge your right to speak as you have done, so long as you do not go beyond the bounds of charity. These men, speaking their minds for themselves at Evanston, were within their rights altogether. Doctor, you have in this erred egregiously; and you will see it some day.

You say: "What is the significance of these statements from these three high sources that there are leaders in our Church who have been giving the Church, North, to understand that we need and desire some plan of union different from that outlined in the paper adopted by our great law-making assembly at Oklahoma City?" (which you cite.) Just what did these leaders say? These deductions drawn by other men, who have a different thought of the matter, are not really evidences of wrong things said by these leaders. I cannot see any basis whatever for your charge. It is too grave, too awful, to be made without the most unquestionable evidence. Such evidence you have not produced. The things you quote do not prove your charge.

In the Advocate of August 17 you cite some instances of "higher criticism" taught in the Sunday school literature of the M. E. Church, and ask: "Would Southern Methodism be helped by a complete amalgamation with a denomination which stands for such instruction of its youth?" Do you mean to charge that our sister of the North "stands for" the higher criticism? You read from the Bibliotheca Sacra—so did I—did you give the other side a chance to be heard? Audi alteram partem! was a heathen demand for justice. We Christians ought to be at least that fair. I heard at a Summer School for young Methodist preachers, "higher criticism" as rank as that you cite, taught by a Southern Methodist preacher. Does our Church "stand for" that? Shall our Northern brethren so charge us?

You also cite some declarations of the General Conference at Saratoga relative to Woman Suffrage as proof that the M. E. Church is dangerously political. The same charge is made against our Church because of our attitude to prohibition. Have you forgotten some history we made in "the 80s and 90s"—notably the Hargrove-Kelly affair? I have known a Southern Methodist preacher to bitterly oppose prohibition because it was, as he supposed, a political attack on personal liberty. Does our Church "stand for" that preacher's vagaries? Justice Hughes has lately waved again the long-discarded "bloody-shirt:" my dear Doctor Meek has come perilously near doing something of the kind.

The resurrection of long-buried history, and the galvanizing of dead issues, and the stirring up the old antagonisms, and the rekindling of the long-extinguished fires of hate have been painfully evident in the discussions of this question by some who seem to have a frenzied fear of union.

It is all wrong. Our Northern brethren are not bad at all. I have lived among them, and know that what I say is true. They do not at all deserve these suspicious expressed, these charges inferred, nor even the delinquences of thinking which are more than suggested. They will meet us fairly, and deal with us in a brotherly fashion. They are the sons of Wesley—aye of Christ.

The commissioners we have appointed are good true men. We can trust Hoss and Candler and Denny and certainly Wilson—yes and Thomas and Moore and Chappell, and even Ivey, and our own Watkins and Du Bose and Reeves and all the rest. There is absolutely no reason for all this fear.

Do not understand me to oppose discussion of the question. I only protest against these uncharitable things that are said, and this foreboding evil as the outcome of the movement—these dolorous prophecies—this worrying about evil things that will never happen.

Of my fine friend, Dr. Meek, I have nothing to say but that he is mistaken. In his mistaken zeal he has trangressed the bounds of charity; but he has not intended to do so. His heart is right—only his head is wrong. Let us all be brotherly! Let us be specially brotherly to all the sons of Wesley! Let us love them! Let us pray!

A QUESTION OF COMPETENCY.

By Rev. J. E. Harrison, D.D.

The twenty-five men announced to serve on the Commission that shall represent the M. E. Church, South, in the consideration of the unification of Methodism are all worthy and capable. Without exception they are careful students of all modern tendencies and influences and seek the best interests of the Kingdom of Christ on earth.

But the ablest judges sometimes have to stand aside while a less competent man occupies his judicial chair; hence the most competent judge may be made incompetent to sit on a certain case.

The question of competency, then, is to be considered from another standpoint besides that of personal qualification; the other being that of relation. A competent judge, who has expressed an opinion concerning a case, renders himself incompetent to sit on that case.

This rule ought, with double force, to apply to so important a case as that which will engage the attention and require the judgment of the twenty-five men above referred to.

These men are to represent the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in their work and are to report the results of their labors to the General Conference of 1918 at Atlanta.

The Joint Commission, representing the M. E. Church, the M. E. Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, formulated a plan for the unification of Methodism in America, and reported it to the three bodies.

That plan, as represented to our General Conference, embodied the following "basic principles" for unification by re-organization:

1. Name. Methodist Episcopal or Methodist. (Our General Conference chose the latter.)

2. Faith, etc. (Accepted).

3. Governing Power. (a) A General Conference with two houses. (Accepted). (b) Three or four Quadrennial Conferences. (Accepted, with request that all colored Methodists be in a distinct Church). (c) Quadrennial Conferences elect own Bishops, subject to approval of General Conference Upper House. (Accepted).

4. Limitation. Neither the General Conference nor the Quadrennial Conference to have power to interpret the constitutionality of its own acts. (Accepted).

These recommendations were unanimously and enthusiastically adopted by our General Conference at Oklahoma in 1914; and, therefore, they are the basic principles on which our General Conference stood when it provided for the appointment of this Commission of Twenty-five, and this Commission, to properly represent the General Conference of our Church, must be composed of men who stand with the General Conference fully and heartily.

Any man who has formed and expressed an opinion contrary to the action of our General Conference on that matter is incompetent to serve on the Commission of Twenty-five.

The word "tentative" means that our Commission is to stand on the action of our General Conference and try to work out a completion of the unification desired by us all. The man who does not stand on the Oklahoma platform is not competent to try for this [illegible]. From the composition of that Commission [illegible] are reported such public utterances as these:

"I see no need of two houses in the General Conference—such a system [illegible] cumbersome, bunglesome."

"We want one supreme law-making body for the entire Church and no legislative powers in any jurisdictional conference."

"No synodical conference would elect its own Bishops."

"I do not think we should set the Negroes aside by themselves."

Can men who have publicly expressed such opinions properly represent our General Conference on the Commission"

San Antonio, Texas.

ORGANIC UNION MEANS RUIN.

Dear Mr. Editor: The discussion of the question of the union of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has aroused many laymen in the South. No matter how shrewdly the advocates of union may evade and "whip the devil 'round the stump," the true aim of the ultra unionists is easily discernible by some. Others are asleep. The union of the Northern and Southern Churches apparently mean nothing less than the annihilation of the Southern Church. Much the same spirit and many of the same crowd that took from the Church its Vanderbilt University are behind the union movement. Not satisfied with confiscating the university, they are now imperiling all our church property—our houses of worship and our parsonages. The act of unification would give to the Northern Church domination over our property, because they would have a large majority in the dominating legislative body of the Church.

Our Church membership is not giving to this most vital question the attention that they should give to it. They are busily occupied with their own work and are looking to the leaders to carry them over the breakers. They usually leave to the Conferences, General and Annual, the solving of the problems of the Church as they come up. But we must wake up. We must speak out. The Conferences are only the creatures of the people and the creator must not succumb to the dictates of the creature, unless the creature is right. True, the Conferences are the institutions through which the Church is governed, but must the Church sit idly by and allow those in authority to lead them into ruin? And unionism of the Saratoga kind would amount to nothing less than ruin and dissolution to the Southern Church.

It is high time our people were waking up. If we continue in our indifferent state of mind, the worst may come. Some of our churches may be closed; many of our pastors may be relegated to the shades of private life and their places filled by men who are not in sympathy with our methods of local church government and worship. Northern pastors may be sent to preside over our flocks and may attempt to instill into the youth of our land their ideas and ideals. They will attempt to "change the atmosphere" of the South, which means the participation of the colored brother in the government of the Church on an equality with the Southern white. Northern notions are not compatible with our notions and we could not dwell together in peace. We do not need union, and we must not have it. I call upon the Methodist people of the South to stand firm against the unification of the Churches, North and South. Read and inform yourselves on the proposition. Listen to and follow your true and tried leaders. Study it out. Remember Vanderbilt—how it was taken from us by an over trustfulness!

Now, some unionist may call this "waving the bloody shirt." Call it what you will. Something must be done to stem the storm. If it requires the bloody shirt, then let us "wave the banner high."

THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AT LAKE JUNALUSKA

The fourth biennial Conference of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the M. E. Church South, which was held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., during July, 1916, was one of the most notable and helpful missionary gatherings it was ever the privilege of this writer to attend. Partly because of the postponement of the Conference two years, and partly perhaps because of the threatened strife and the heavy losses due to the floods, the number of laymen in attendance fell short of the attendance at a similar Conference in 1914. The Conference was, however, in every other respect a signal success, and will no doubt make an epoch in the lives of all who were present and also in the missionary activities of the Church. The spiritual power there generated, the new visions imparted, and the missionary consecration and spirit there aroused are sure to bring forth gratifying results in the near future. About five hundred were in regular attendance upon the Conference. A goodly number of elect women were present and enjoyed the program to the fullest extent. At the Sunday morning service, twenty-two States, six foreign countries, and one hundred and seventy-five cities and towns were represented.

It would be impossible in the space at my command to do full justice to all the speeches delivered and all the exercises of the Conference, the program being of a high order throughout. Three addresses were delivered by Mr. S. D. Gordon, of New York City, the well-known author, religious writer, and devotional speaker. His messages, clothed in simple language, were deeply impressive, and made the hearers realize as never before the presence of the Master, and the sacredness of our obligation to make him known to a perishing world. In speaking of "The Prodigal World," he said: "If the Church has failed of its mission it is you and I who have failed; for we are the Church. If we would be true to our Lord, we must either go or send; and in any case we must pray that the message may be sent." Mr. W. E. Doughty, Educational Secretary of the Laymen's Movement of the M. E. Church, was one of the most forceful and eloquent speakers who appeared on the platform. In his address on "The Man for the Hour," he said: "The call of God to the men of to-day is to recognize that this is America's day. The call to America is to world service. America is the only world power that is not entangled in war. Primacy in missionary enterprise and offerings has passed from the white people of Europe to the English-speaking people of America. This is America's hour for world reconciliation. Missions or militarism is the alternative before us. Hence we must make America Christian to the utmost limit."

The money question in its relation to the Church and the kingdom of God was presented in a masterful way by Rev. Harvey Reeves Calkins, Stewardship Secretary of the M. E. Church, author of the volume, "A Man and His Money," who spoke on "Stewardship and Property," "Stewardship and Life," and "Stewardship and the Time." Dr. Calkins showed that stewardship goes down to the fundamental meaning of property. "The whole question of Christian stewardship," he said, "is not a matter of more 'pep,' or of new financial plans, but a revolution in our whole thinking about property. The popular conception of ownership is in no sense Christian, but distinctly pagan."

It was worth a trip to Lake Junaluska just to get to hear the thrilling, humorous, and instructive addresses delivered by that eminent traveller, author, and scientist, Dr. W. E. Geil, Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society. Dr. Geil has traveled all over the world, investigating the native races of Asia and Africa and the islands of the Pacific at first hand, and hence he is able to speak with authority. He stated that in his travels he had met, not hundreds, but thousands of missionaries, and that he had not found a single one who was a coward, or an unworthy representative of the gospel. He made it clear that the day of miracles has not passed, and that marvels are being achieved to-day by heroes of the Cross in Africa and elsewhere. Dr. Geil asserted that for four years he and his companions had done their best to find a human being without a religion, but had utterly failed in this search. The startling conclusion he reached is this: "Since man then is ineradicably religious, it is the plain duty of those who have the best religion to supply it to those who have inferior forms of worship, who are in bondage to superstition. In paying his respects to the Darwinian theory of evolution Dr. Geil said: "I have never seen a monkey become a man, but I have seen the opposite often in the destructive Bible critics who insist on making monkeys of themselves. I get utterly out of patience with these bantam rooster infidels who crow like all forty, and never lay anything."

One of the most impressive and inspiring services of the whole Conference was the farewell service for the missionaries to the Congo who are to sail on September 1. Dr. Ira T. Chase, our foreign Secretary, made a brief and heart-stirring talk, and then introduced the departing missionaries, each of whom made a short statement regarding his purpose and how he or she came to be led thereto. Following are the names of the missionaries who are to reinforce the force of six already in Africa, who were consecrated on the same platform in 1914: Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Anker (but Mr. Anker is still an alumnus of Vanderbilt, where he is to specialize in anthropology); Dr. High G. White, and Rev. T. E. Beets. On account of the danger from submarines, it has been thought best to detain in the home land for several months longer the three lady missionaries who have been selected for service in the same field. Miss Ella V. Mills was the only one of these present. Dr. White and Brother Anker were ordained deacons by Bishop James Atkins at the close of the service.

Among the numerous topics discussed, none was of more vital importance than "The Job of the Country Church," which was handled in an able and interesting manner by Mr. W. H. Tate, Professor of Rural Education in Peabody College, Nashville. Prof. Tate made a strong plea for larger attention to be given to the development of the church in the country, from which our city churches are constantly being recruited. He made it clear that the decadence of the church in the country means the inevitable decadence of the church in the city.

The Conference reached its climax on Sunday morning, at which time two thousand or possibly twenty-five hundred people were present. First came a stirring and stimulating address by Mr. S. D. Gordon. Next Dr. C. B. Ball spoke forcefully on "The Laymen's Movement and the Organized Bible Class." Then, at 11 a.m., Bishop E. D. Mouzon delivered a great and uplifting sermon on "The Temptation of Christ." The Bishop was at his best, and truly met the expectation of the hour. After the sermon, a statement having been made regarding the needs of the Lake Junaluska enterprise, considerable indebtedness having been incurred, a spontaneous offering took place which amounted before the close of the service to $100,000. The immortable George R. Stuart was called upon to take charge of the service, and well did he perform his task, keeping everybody alert and in a good humor by his greatest sallies of wit. Subscriptions large and small kept coming in for two hours and a quarter, and the great audience was not dismissed till 1:15 p.m. Wonderful to tell, comparatively few left before the service closed. On Sunday night $8,000 more was subscribed, making the total subscribed for the Lake Junaluska Assembly $108,000. This is second only to the phenomenal offering of $165,000 for missions subscribed at Lake Junaluska three years ago. On Sunday night Dr. H. Clay Lilly, Field Secretary of the Laymen's Movement of the United States and Canada, spoke with force and fervor on "The World Crisis and Its Challenge to America," and was followed by Dr. W. W. Pinson, who delivered his noteworthy address on "America the Big Brother Among the Nations." The closing feature of the Conference was the report of the Committee on Resolutions, which embodied a number of important items, among them being a resolution heartily endorsing the movement looking toward the reunion of the two great Methodisms in the United States. The reading of this resolution elicited loud and long-continued applause. It was noticeable that similar applause greeted the mention of the subject of unification by any of the platform speakers. After sundry announcements, the great Laymen's Conference of 1916 came to a close.

The Conference was presided over from start to finish by that princely layman, Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, President of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, Dr. E. H. Rawlins, our Educational Secretary, being the chief director of the program. Bishop James Atkins, one of the originators and chief promoters of the Lake Junaluska Assembly, was on the platform at nearly every service. One of the most enjoyable features of the Conference was the music furnished by the Emory Quartet and the duets by Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Stem. With singular unanimity the speakers from first to last stressed the vital importance of intercession in the prayer life of the individual and in the progress of the kingdom, and also gave strong emphasis to America's opportunity and responsibility in the present world crisis.

Lake Junaluska, which is located among the mountains of western North Carolina, twenty-five miles southwest of Asheville, is one of the loveliest spots in all eastern America. I had heard much about its attractiveness beforehand, but the half had not been told. Surpassing beauty of scenery, invigorating atmosphere, splendid fellowship, excellent accommodations, and accessibility combine to make Lake Junaluska an ideal place for the holding of Bible institutes, missionary and Sunday-school conferences, and other religious gatherings during the summer. No layman or preacher can find a more inviting spot for an outing for himself and family than Lake Junaluska, which is destined to become the Northfield of Southern Methodism.

While en route to Lake Junaluska, this scribe had the good fortune to make the trip from Jackson, Miss., in company with Rev. Briscoe Carter, of the Louisiana Conference. Revs. J. T. Leggett and W. L. Layfield were already on hand enjoying the Conference, and as full of life as two colts. I caught a glimpse of that splendid layman, Brother J. W. Beeson, of Meridian, but did not have the opportunity to grasp his hand. We Mississippians exchanged cordial greetings with our beloved Bishop W. B. Murrah, who spent two or three days at the Conference. Mrs. J. L. Neill, wife of our Sunday-School Field Agent, and their little daughter, Nellie, were so charmed with Lake Junaluska that they have spent several weeks there.

One lovely afternoon several of us made the circuit of the Lake (seven miles in circumference) on foot in a little over two hours. The trip did not tire us any more than a two-mile walk would have done at home. A splendid driveway extends entirely around the lake, at the lower end of which is a beautiful waterfall. The finest fields of corn I have seen anywhere I observed growing in the fertile valleys around Lake Junaluska. A great variety of plants and flowers and fruits abounds in that whole region, making it a veritable paradise to the lover of Nature.

GOOD FOR CLARKSDALE.

Dear Dr. Meek: Last night we opened bids and let the contract for building our new church at Clarksdale. The cost of building, with the heating plant, is $51,500. The old church has been torn down and work will soon begin on the new structure. In the meantime, we are worshiping in the Opera House. This enterprise marks a new era in the history of our Church in this section, and our church, when completed, will rank second to none in the Conference.

This has been a busy year for me, and I have been compelled to take a four weeks' vacation, the first in many years. I am now rested and improved in health. No more loyal and courageous set of men can be found than our committee who have this building enterprise in hand.

Best wishes to you and the Advocate. We are "with you" in your stand on the great questions involving the future of our beloved Church.

Cordially yours,

Clarksdale, Miss. R. O. BROWN.

The Christian ideal is not freedom from work, but strength to do it; not freedom from temptation, but power to overcome it; not freedom from suffering, but joy in an abiding sense of the Father's love.—H. W. Watkins, D.D.

DR. FEATHERSTUN'S CRITICISMS.

By the Editor.

We are publishing on another page an article from Dr. H. W. Featherstun, in which he seeks to arraign us for practically all that we have had to say on the question of the union of the American Methodisms since that great issue has come to the front. There is practically nothing new in his discussion and we dislike to give so much space to the threshing over of matters which have already been largely dealt with, but we did not deem it best to refuse our friend a hearing, as our action in so doing might be misunderstood. We do not wish to place ourself above the plane of public criticism, but necessarily the Editor cannot debate the same issues with one champion after another in succession, and hereafter when he has discussed any question fully with one party, it will be his policy not to reopen it for further disputation unless there is some adequate reason for such a course.

Our brother parades a quotation from our Lord's intercessory prayer to show that it is incumbent upon the two Episcopal Methodisms to get together in one visible organization. Scripture can be quoted to bolster up any cause, but the weight that should be attached to it in any case depends upon its applicability. As to the pertinence of the Doctor's citation in the present instance, we will let Bishops Candler and Hoss, perhaps the two ablest exegetes in our Church, speak.

Bishop Candler: "Equally irrelevant, and more improper, is an exhortation to 'union at any price' based on our Lord's intercessory prayer, in which he prayed for his disciples, saying, 'Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that they may be one; as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou has sent me.' The unity for which our Lord prayed is that spiritual unity of believers with the Father and the Son to which reference is made in another Scripture, in which it is said, 'He that is joined to the Lord is one spirit.' As Dean Alford says most truly, 'This unity has its true ground in faith in Christ through the Word of God as delivered by the Apostles; and is therefore not mere outward uniformity, nor can such uniformity produce it.' It is such vital unity as subsists between the Father and the Son; for so the very words of the prayer declare. Will any sane and serious mind entertain the impossible, if not blasphemous, conception that the ineffable relations of the Godhead are expressed by any form of organic union or mechanical sameness of earthly organizations? This unity of believers with the Father and the Son may be even hindered by mechanical pressure to force Christians into one organization. Such has been the case with the Roman Catholic Church."

Bishop Hoss: "To begin with, there are not a few sensible men who doubt whether the gathering of 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 members into one ecclesiastical organization is, after all, a desirable thing. To assure them that the continued maintenance of separate Churches is a sin, is to tell them what they do not believe to be true; what they know, in fact, is not true. Protestants, at any rate, cannot consistently maintain any such position. In endeavoring to do so, they cut the ground from underneath their own feet, and discredit the work of all the great reformers. When Methodists insist that all the distinct forms of Methodism except their own are schismatical they put a club into the hands of the High Church Episcopalians, who declare that Wesley made a terrible blunder in venturing to ordain Dr. Coke and to countenance the creation of a new body of believers; and the same High Church Episcopalians likewise furnish a weapon to the Roman Catholics, who are honestly certain that the Church of England went astray in daring to cast off the obedience of Rome. If OUTWARD AND VISIBLE UNION IS AN OBLIGATION WHICH CANNOT BE PUT OFF WITHOUT SIN, then Protestantism is an offense against God of the first magnitude."

According to Dr. Featherstun's present position, it seems to us that he has been very remiss in his duty in the past. If Christ prayed that all believers should be in one visible ecclesiastical body, then it behooves all the denominations to unite; yet we have never seen a line of public exhortation from him to that effect. Surely, in view of his present contention, he ought to join the Campbellites in maintaining and circulating The Christian Union Quarterly, or start up some other kind of propaganda along the same line. Otherwise, in thus ignoring what he affirms to be the significance of our Lord's prayer, he may be adjudged an unprofitable servant in the last great day.

As to the Doctor's experience in the West, we shall have little to say; as he says it is "a shame" for the two Methodisms to operate in the same territory, we are hap[illegible] to know that the ultimate responsibility for that condition of things does not lie at the door of Southern Methodism. For, if the Methodist Episcopal Church had kept out of the territory of the Church, South, according to the agreement embodied in the Plan of Separation, there would have been no erection of "altar against altar." And since that time a plan to correct this evil by federation was formulated, and it is well known who has been chiefly responsible for its failure to work. It strikes us as rather a queer course of procedure, if two denominations cannot get along and obviate hurtful friction AS NEIGHBORS, to have them, without any change of spirit, to take up their abode and try to live together in the same household. Our brother's gallant defense of Bishop Hendrix in this connection will ardly avail him, in view of the fact that the Bishop belittled the importance of doing away with this overlapping in his famous Saratoga interview. Here is what he said upon that occasion: "Yes, it will save an overlapping, although that does not exist to any great extent. Our greatest benefit will be in being able to MIX THE UNIQUE GIFTS OF EACH BRANCH OF THE CHURCH." If our good friend would read the Advocate more carefully, he would not fall into such mistakes as this.

The Doctor quotes our statement to the effect that we intend to stand resolutely for he Oklahoma City plan of union, and if that fails before the Joint Commission, for such a plan of federation as will do away with overlapping and wasteful competition, and finds fault with it. Is it to be inferred from this that he considers the success of the plan endorsed by our General Conference a matter of little moment, and that he is willing to take it on the Saratoga basis? It certainly seems so.

We are quite as well aware as is Dr. Featherstun that up to the present time "federation" has been largely a failure; but, according to some distinguished Northern leaders, their Church has not taken to that policy because they preferred union and believed that the only way to bring it about was to continue to plant and maintain their work in the South. Who knows but that with the hope of union destroyed the federation idea might take on new life and yield large and gracious results. It has worked to good advantage in some sections between denominations that have little in common, and there is no logical reason why it should not do so among the Methodisms of this country. In his article on "The Unification of American Methodism" which appeared in the Advocate of July 6, Dr. A. F. Watkins said: "If no satisfactory terms (of union) can be reached, we can abide the result, consoling ourselves with the thought that an honest effort to provide union, even though it fail in that, will probably bring about the adoption of a thorough-going and practical federation that will in a large measure cure the conditions that now vex and humiliate the Church." Yet our brother extols Dr. Watkins as a wise leader, and ridicules the Editor for mentioning the subject of federation. Bishop Candler also spoke of "federation" as a possible outcome of the negotiations in his recent great utterance concerning the unification issue.

Moreover, our good friend ought to be one of the last men in the world to denounce a measure as absurd because it does not quickly win. We remember a few years ago when a State woman suffrage meeting was held in a Delta town that the Doctor was the only person present who wore trousers, except the local pastor, who had, out of courtesy, to be there. That cause then seemed to be a forlorn hope, but to-day its success in the Nation seems to be practically assured. And a not unfitting epitaph to be chiseled on the tomb of our worthy friend when he goes hence (we hope the day will be long deferred) would be, "He was the pioneer male woman suffragist in Mississippi, who cheered the sisters in their aspirations when no other gentleman ventured to go about their meeting-places." No, no; in view of his own conspicuous example, Dr. Featherstun should not decry the sound advice contained in the familiar words:

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

The Doctor adverts to what he is pleased to term our "fear of the Northern concept of the episcopacy." As a matter of fact, we have had very little to say about that as a condition of union. In passing, however, we will observe that his conception of the difference between the Northern Methodist idea of the episcopacy and ours appears to be very superficial. The chief difference therein does not lie in the so-called veto power of our College of Bishops: it lies in the fact that our Church holds that a Bishop is an officer of the whole Church who cannot be deposed after his election except by process of trial, whereas in the Church, North, he is held to be a mere creature of the General Conference, completely subject to its will.

We have not at our disposal the space to discuss the suggestions of Zion's Herald that the recommendations of neither their General Conference nor ours are in any sense [illegible] there has been a great deal of loose writing at this point. We submit that conditions which have been carefully considered by a Sub Committee of the Joint Commission of three Churches by the Joint Commission itself, and by a Commission of the General Conference, and finally passed upon by the great law-making assembly are entitled to more than mere vapid proposals which have been put forward without any notion what [illegible] for them. The language of our General Conference enactment when carefully examined admits of no such view. Our brother quotes Bishop Hoss in this connection: he did not say that nothing was settled, meaning thereby that neither Church had reached any definite conclusion as to its own views. He affirmed that nothing was yet settled in the way of an agreement between the TWO CHURCHES. All that the Bishop has written shows that he does not expect either denomination to recede much from the position that it has taken. The term "tentative" does not mean that our General Conference did not regard its declarations as of but little permanence, but merely that they are open to some further consideration. There is no good reason to believe that the Church, North, is going to give in readily at the points that are considered most vital, most of their papers are talking the other way when it comes to the specific propositions. Even Zion's Herald is insisting that our colored brethren must be in the Church.

Doctor Featherstun's declaration that our position concerning the Negro reminds him of certain Mississippi politicians is somewhat amusing, and his suggestion that we have written anything cruel or unjust with reference to our colored population is wholly unwarranted. In one of our first editorials bearing on the union issue (in the Advocate of June 8), we made the following declaration and have stood squarely by it ever since: "The white people of the South feel kindly toward the Negroes. We believe that they are really the best friends that the colored people have. The best element among them want the Negroes Christianized and they desire them to have opportunities for moral, intellectual, and material advancement. They believe in giving them security of life and property, but they desire to have them understand clearly that they need not hope to intermingle socially with the white people of the South. And they believe it is best, both for them and the white people, for them to refrain from participation in politics." What more than this does Dr. Featherstun want for the Negroes in the Southern States? Does he want social intermingling, or does he want them to vote? We hardly think so. Does he want them in the reorganized Church—1,750,000 strong—with proportionate representation in the General Conference? His talk about them sitting in Church galleries before the Civil War, communing, etc., has no relevancy to the present issue. They were then slaves. They had never cast a ballot; such a thing as social equality had scarcely been conceived of even by the wildest abolition fanatics. There are now more than twice as many of them as there were then, and their relations to the body politic are entirely different. If our esteemed friend thinks he can now repeat what went on in our churches in the era to which he refers, he needs only to attempt it upon any considerable scale to be speedily disillusioned. Whether we would have them so or not, facts are facts, and there is no use trying to hide them from view. At such a time as this nothing could be more unwise than to attempt to do this. In meeting a great problem such as now confronts us, a little candor and common sense are worth vastly more than any amount of gushy sentimentality.

Before leaving this point, there is one other thing we wish to say: Never at any time have the true interests of the Negro been menaced in any respect that the whole weight of our influence has not been openly and fearlessly exerted in his behalf, and we have suffered more by the antagonisms created as a result of our efforts to befriend him than perhaps any other minister in Mississippi since the lamented Charles B. Galloway passed to his eternal reward. Not because we have the slightest feeling of prejudice or ill will toward our colored people have we spoken plainly concerning their position in the proposed reorganized Church and as to the character of teaching they should have, but because we know the temper of the great masses of the white people of the South and the extreme delicacy of the situation. Last year the Legislature of Florida passed a bill forbidding white teachers to instruct Negro youths in any kind of school, and similar measures were introduced in the Legislatures of Georgia and Mississippi, and required earnest work to defeat their passage. The latter [illegible] with Bishop Bratton and others, encouraged and helped to thwart this movement in the Legislature; but if Dr. Featherstun so much as lifted his hand to aid in effecting this result we have never heard of it. REMINISCENT.

Dear Advocate: On this day, August 30, the temperature is even ninety. I am sitting in my little room in Olla, La., thinking of my former home up in Arkansas where I toiled in the seventies and eighties. In 1879 the Little Rock Conference, with which I was identified at that time, assembled in the town of Camden on the Ouachita River. It was a nice place for the Conference. The great Bishop Pierce presided, and we had a delightful time. The Bishop was suffering with his throat (his last illness) and looked lean and weak, yet the Conference business was up to time, and on Sunday he preached a sermon which was characteristic of the man. The congregation listened, it seemed, with breathless silence, until near the close of the sermon, when the stillness was broken and the great preacher's voice was drowned in the uproar. We had but few visitors at that session, but a stranger looked in on us who afterwards became well known and much esteemed. On the second day two or three other preachers and I were passing out through the vestibule when one asked the question, "Who is that young black-headed man sitting up at the front of the church and making himself at home?" Some one replied, "They say his name is 'Horse.'" Another spoke and said, "I think you are mistaken. I am told that his name is not 'Horse' but 'Hoss.'" "Well," the first speaker said, "I prefer a horse to a hoss. My horse is indispensable on my circuit, but a 'hoss' I think would be superfluous."

The Committee on Public Worship raised the question whether or not to invite the young man to preach, but upon being introduced to the Conference it was learned that the young man was a college president. He was announced to preach the following night and gave us a strong Methodist sermon (Text, Romans 5:1). Dr. Hoss attended our Conference again at Arkadelphia in 1885. He took part in the love feast on Sunday morning. Harvey May, a converted Jew, recommended to us for admission by the M. E. Church, was present. The Jew gave a full account of his conversion to Christianity and his final remarks were deeply spiritual, affecting many, and, as he closed, Dr. Hoss walked across the house to him, threw his arms around him, and gave him a hearty hug. At 11 o'clock Dr. Hoss preached in the Presbyterian Church on "Our Father who art in heaven."

Now he is coming to the Louisiana Conference, and we bid him welcome.

God bless our Advocate.

"GOOD INTENTIONS DRAW NO INTEREST."

These words are taken from a newspaper advertisement of a banking concern, but they happen to constitute a first-class proverb in the moral or religious realm, as well as in the business world. Of course, we do not fail to realize that the author of these words intended that they should be interpreted in a material sense and literally, but despite this fact a figurative and ethical meaning may also be attached to them. It is well that we should look at things from a moral standpoint rather than from a pecuniary point of view whenever we can do so, and we nearly always can. At least, it is always wisest to try to do this. Good intentions are common among all people who have aspirations to strive after the goal which Christ Jesus has set before them. The man, woman, or child without them is beyond the pale of help, so long as they are absent from the heart. They are worthy of any righteous man, and the man that is without them is unworthy of consideration as a Christian. But one must not stop at the point of intending to do good, though it is very praiseworthy for a person to say in his heart, I will do better; or I will do this or that. However, in itself this will profit nothing. It will draw no interest; it will bring no rich return; but it will be like blasted and withered hopes if it is unredeemed by action. Dead intentions belong to the things which might have been, and here we are forced to call to mind the fact that the poet has said:

Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are—"It might have been."

The good intentions of the man who does not fulfill them will not only be absolutely worthless to him in the Day of Judgment, but they will be a sad reminder to him of the fact that what he could have done and thought to do, he neglected to do through carelessness, and that therefore he must suffer the fatal consequences that follow as a result in an eternity of regret.

To-day many are the things which we intend to do; many are the good deeds which we purpose in our hearts to perform; many are the bad habits which we mean to break; but for some worthless reason our very commendable resolutions never amount to anything. If good intentions do not draw interest, it is often doubtless because we do not really mean them when we make them, for if we stand back of them as we ought to, we shall make them of value even as the Government does paper money. There is much truth in this. Good intentions occupy about the same relation to us as paper money, which is but a promissory note redeemable at any time in gold or silver, does to the Government. If one has a good intention he must, as the advertisement says, "Obey the impulse," for action is noble, sublime, and godlike, as Webster says. We evolve the following moral: Carry out a good intention the instant it is made.

ROBERT EDWIN MEEK.

AS AN ITINERANT SEES IT.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been reading with a good deal of interest the discussion on the union of the two Methodisms and I heartily approve of practically all you have said on the question. I think you are in the right, and that time will prove it. I am sure the rank and file of the church are with you, both as to the laity and ministers. I would like to know, after all, what there is in all this ado about union that some of our leaders are pleading for. Could we do more than we are now doing for the civil, social and moral interests of the South if merged with the Northern Methodists? We are growing in numbers and influence faster than the Church, North, both in the cities and in the country districts, and I can't see what there is in this union business for us.

They talk of the mighty influence of a united Methodism in America. As I see it, this is all moonshine except to a few fellows who are up in the air, and if they would get down to where the people live and where they are needed, they would, in my judgment, soon view things in a different light.

I would like for some of these would-be leaders among us to tell us what has come to the kingdom of Christ by the union of any two Churches in the United States except lawsuits and bitterness and divisions never to be reconciled. The union of the Northern Presbyterian and Cumberland Churches a few years ago has added little of consequence to either, and still we have the two Churches. To my mind, the cause of Christ has not been helped but hindered in this Southland, and these were but a drop in the bucket compared to the two Methodisms.

I am sorry that some of the leaders of our Church have gone off on this question; and in my opinion, it indicates that they have lost interest and sympathy with the great body of the Southern Church, and they have no right to be dictating to the rest of us what we ought to do. The thing they ought to do is to pick up and go on over, if the Suthern Methodist Church does not suit them. I, for one, will never admit that we have played the fool, and if I have read the history of the two Churches correctly the Southern Church has always been in the right. Did we not send, back in the forties, the first fraternal delegate to the Northern General Conference, and was he not treated with silent contempt? Then did we not have a distinct understanding at the Cape May meeting and was not an agreement entered into, and did not the Church, North, positively refuse to abide by it? And did we not again have a Federal Council to adjust certain matters and have they not refused to this good day to do what they solemnly promised?

And still after all this some of our would-be leaders tell us we must not be so suspicious and should let the most important question ever before us drift along. I think the thing we ought to do is to withdraw fraternal relations with the Church, North, unless they show more disposition to comply with the solemn agreements which they make. If this had been done by our brethren of the North, the union of the two Churches would have been possible ere this. In view of the situation, we must contend for the plan, in the main, made at Oklahoma City or hands off, and give the Northern brethren time to think soberly over the matter. However, I must say that I do not see what we of the South are to gain by this proposed union even upon the Oklahoma City plan. Are we not doing more for the South than the Church, North, is doing for the people in their territory? We have better social and moral conditions than they have and less of rum and rationalism among us. We are increasing, as I have already said, in numbers and influence, in the South faster than they are in the North.

This tendency to union everywhere is a blow at denominationalism, and is the first step toward a creedless Church, which means a Church with Christ largely outside of it.

I will never submit to any plan that even suggests the absorption of our blessed Zion. We have too much at stake now to throw it away for a little sentiment hatched up by some persons with a spirit much like that of the Millennial Dawnists. If these brethren will get down where the majority of the people live, they will find out we are along way from that blessed day, and if they will go to preaching the good old Gospel instead of hatching schemes and fads, they will soon get their eyes opened. I could cure the last one of them if I could make their appointments for them in less than a year. W. S. LAGRONE.

On noiseless hinges night and day.
One enters through the open door;
One leaveth to return no more.
And which is happier, which more blest—

THE BOY THAT WAS BIG.

"Of course we shouldn't have done it," Jeffrey Criddle admitted; "but it was enough to make any fellow laugh to see Peter in those funny-looking clothes. I—I guess it wasn't exactly right, though."

Wherever Jeff was, you didn't have to look far to find Tom Blakely and the Moreland boys, Bob and Billy. The four were walking home from church.

Quite suddenly a mild voice spoke directly behind them: "What isn't exactly right is often exactly wrong. Did you know that, Jeff?"

The four friends wheeled about.

"Why, you—you startled us, Mr. Winston," Jeff laughed good-naturedly.

Rev. Joseph Winston, a short, stout little man, with the gentlest brown eyes a boy ever looked into and the kindest heart a boy ever confided in, ran his arm affectionately through Jeff's. "What is it, Jeff, that isn't exactly right?"

Jeffrey hesitated a moment. It wasn't pleasant to tell of a thing he had done when deep down in the bottom of his heart and away in the back of his head there was something that kept telling him that thing was wrong. But it wasn't often that one of these four boys hesitated long when the minister of their church invited a confidence. Before they knew it he had them seeing a thing his way, which always turned out to be the straight way; and they found themselves wondering how they ever could have seen it their way, which, more often than not, was the crooked way. "I—I was talking about laughing at a fellow's clothes, Mr. Winston—not exactly ridiculing them or intending to be mean, you know, but laughing just because they looked funny."

"Well, Jeff," the little minister said in his placid voice, "it all depends upon what you mean by 'funny.' A clown, now, wears funny clothes because he wishes you to laugh at him. Did this boy you were talking of wish you to laugh?"

Jeff gave an embarrassed grin, without replying.

Tom, the oldest and the most impulsive of the four, spoke up: "No, sir. He certainly did not. His face got awfully red, Mr. Winston. But Jeff isn't the only one to blame. All of us laughed."

The little minister's kind, brown eyes looked as hurt as if some one had been laughing at him instead of at the boy. Perhaps they looked even more so. "Then I'm afraid you were correct, Jeff," he said very gently; "and it wasn't exactly right. So it must have been exactly wrong."

"But I think there was some excuse for us, Mr. Winston," Jeff responded. "It was Peter King, sir. He hasn't been to Sunday school for a long time, and when he came back this morning with his big brother's old clothes on he looked too funny for anything. Jim is big and fat, and Peter is a thin little fellow. I reckon you didn't see him, sir."

"Oh, yes, Jeff, I saw him."

"And—and didn't you think he looked funny, sir?"

"No, Jeff; I didn't feel the least bit like laughing. And I don't believe any of you will, either, when I tell you what I know."

"We'd like to hear it, sir. Maybe we would see it differently."

Mr. Winston's eyes were very soft as they regarded the four eager faces. They never had failed to "see things differently" when he pointed out to them a mistake. "There isn't much to tell, boys. Peter and his brother have no father, you know. Or, maybe, you don't know. Their mother has been sick for a long time, and these two boys have taken care of her and done all the work of the family. The church has helped them, of course; but the boys are plucky fellows and wanted to do for themselves. But it took all they could rake and scrape, and by the time their mother got well enough for them to come back to Sunday school there wasn't much money left for clothes."

"But Jim had on a new suit to-day, sir," Bob Moreland interrupted. "I saw him."

"Yes, Bob; that was Peter's idea. Both boys had outgrown their clothes, so Peter told Jim to take what money could be spared and buy himself a suit. Probably Peter knew he wasn't as well dressed as the rest of you, but he wasn't willing to stay from Sunday school on that account."

Billy, the tender-hearted, gulped right out loud. "And—and so Peter wore Jim's old clothes. That's it, isn't it, Mr. Winston?"

"That's it, Billy." The little minister's voice was very, very gentle. "Yet you boys thought the clothes were too big. Strange how we can make such mistakes, isn't it?"

As Jeffrey replied his eyes opened wide with surprise, as if he were asking the minister to explain what he meant. "But I don't think we did make a mistake about that, Mr. Winston," he insisted. "Anybody can see that the clothes really are a lot too big for him."

They had reached the little minister's gate now, and he lifted the latch and looked at Jeff with his kind brown eyes. "Oh, no, Jeff," he said mildly; "I think—I may be wrong, Jeff—but I think Peter is much bigger than his clothes. Think about that, boys, and see if you don't, too."

Four very thoughtful boys walked home from the minister's gate. But perhaps Jeff was the most thoughtful of them all. Now everybody knows that Jeff wasn't easily convinced about anything—not that he was stubborn, but he simply had to see a thing before he admitted it. But once he did see it, he showed the biggest heart a boy ever had.

Mr. Winston was walking about his yard that afternoon when Jeff came up the walk. "We—we fellows know now what you meant, sir," he told the minister frankly, "when you said that Peter was bigger than his clothes. And we've about come to the conclusion, Mr. Winston, that Peter King is a lot too big to let his clothes get the best of him."

"Yes, Jeff. So he got the best of his clothes, didn't he?" the little minister smiled.

"That's just what he did, sir," Jeff said admiringly. "And he's just about the biggest fellow I know."

"Well, I don't know about that, Jeff," Mr. Winston replied, because the kind little minister found good in everybody. "I know four other boys that are pretty big fellows, too, when it comes to owning that they've been wrong about something."

Jeffrey understood what the minister meant, and flushed with pleasure. "That's mighty good of you to say so, Mr. Winston, but we've been feeling like pretty little fellows since this morning."

Jeff fumbled in his pocket a moment and shyly brought forth a little roll of bills. "We've been talking it over on the wood-pile, Mr. Winston," he went on eagerly, "and we want to do something for Peter. Each of us fellows had a little money to spare; so if you don't mind, sir, we'd like for you to take it and buy him a suit of clothes."

It would be hard to tell which face shone the brightest, the minister's or Jeff's. Mr. Winston smiled as happily as if some one had given him a present.

Then, very gently, he lifted Jeff's cap as if to let the soft summer sun shine down in blessing on the bared head. And as he laid his hand on the dark curls, there was something more than the sunlight shining in the kind brown eyes.—Lucy Hill Cannon, in "Baptist Boys and Girls."

A WORD OF COMMENDATION.

Dear Doctor Meek: I write a few lines to commend you most heartily for your bold stand for the Church, for truth, and for righteousness. Truth bears upon its front unmistakable evidence of its divine origin in its philosophic consistency, fitness, and beauty.

Why organic union at all? We are doing very well. Why not let well enough alone? God is graciously blessing us. If we must have union, let's have it right. May God bless you!

DR. FEATHERSTUN'S CRITICISMS.

Church, South, cannot now any more afford to place herself in opposition to the deep-seated convictions of the white people of the South concerning the fundamental aspects of the race issue than she could in 1844. And if a few academic and impracticable leaders commit her to a wrong course in this particular, they will simply wreck her future, just as would have been done if the Northern view had been adopted in the memorable decade that witnessed the "bisection" of American Methodism.'

Dr. Featherstun brings forward again our paragraph, written some weeks ago, in which we asked if a "secret clique" had been at work in the Church, South, and insists that we charged there was such a thing. We did nothing of the kind. Zion's Herald, and the Pittsburgh and Central Christian Advocate were representing that there were Southern leaders who were giving assurances that the action of our General Conference was not in accord with the mind of the Church, South. We felt that these statements were discrediting the action of our General Conference and we at first tried by both a private communication and an open published letter to ascertain who these parties were, but our requests thus made were ignored. These gentlemen, whoever they were, were being kept under cover and yet they were being quoted to the detriment of the plan of unification approved by our General Conference. It was under these circumstances that, after citing the statements of these journals, carefully giving their exact words, we inquired if there had been at work in the Church, South, a "secret clique?" The very next sentence showed that we did not intend to make a definite charge, and that we had no positive information on the subject. It was as follows: "The language of these distinguished editors certainly seems to imply something of the kind."

We do not think, however, that if we had thought the evidence to be such as to warrant it and we had made the charge that such a clique existed, the offense would have been unprecedented and of a kind to have made us a sinner above all others. Clique and ring are synonymous terms. Has the Doctor never heard of a Conference ring? It is ridiculous to contend that of the thousands of ministers in Southern Methodism, all of them invariably move upon the highest lines and that none of them ever put their heads quietly together to accomplish ends that they have in view. Such talk does very well for idealism, but not for truth. Moreover, the word clique is not necessarily a vicious term—then why put upon it the very worst construction? Since he prates of charity, would it not be well for our esteemed friend himself to try to practice it a little?

As we have before stated, the passage in which we inquired if there was a "secret clique" in existence had no reference whatever to the brethren who figured at Evanston, but to unknown parties referred to by the aforementioned Northern Methodist journals. There is not the slightest justification for trying to make it apply to the former, as the editorial in which it had occurred, in no part of it, had the remotest reference to the Evanston Conference.

We did say, however, in our editorial of July 27 that certain brethren virtually reached around and nullified the enactment of our General Conference at the Evanston meeting by taking issue with it in the presence of Northern leeaders who shaped the Saratoga action. We gave their names and exact words and proved this so conclusively that no one of them has tried to controvert what we said. Dr. Featherstun's language, "I am told," etc., shows that he has not even looked into the matter, and we must be excused from discussing the question with a brother who is obviously uninformed on the subject. It is not true that these men spoke only for themselves, since as we showed before some of them ventured to tell what they believed to be the sentiment of the Church, South, etc. The book to which our friend refers did not appear until the eve of the Saratoga Conference, and the more objectionable things that were said at Evanston were not printed in any of our Southern Methodist papers, while other utterances were. There is not the slightest doubt that if our people had known that these things in criticism of the Oklahoma plan had been said at Evanston, there would have been a racket in the land. Dr. Featherstun may think it was entirely proper for high officials of the Church, South, some of whom had helped to frame the measure adopted by our General Conference, to go to a meeting in a Northern city and give assurance to the very men who were to handle the union question at Saratoga that the official action of our law-making body was not to be taken at its face value, but we cannot at all agree with him in that view. And he is about the only man that we have heard of who has unqualifiedly declared that this procedure was entirely within the bounds of propriety.

We will say in this connection, however, that we did not in our former discussion involve all the men whom he mentions, as for instance, Bishop Hendrix, Dr. Parker, Dr. Thomas, Dr. Lee, and Dr. Tillett, as expressly saying things at variance with our General Conference enactment. In quoting those against whom we made this allegation we were careful to give their names and precise statements. We did not take the position that the Evanston meeting could not have been held without discrediting the scheme of union that had been sanctioned by our General Conference. On the contrary, in referring to Bishop Denny we plainly indicated that if all had acted with his commendable discretion no harm would have resulted from that gathering. Of some of the brethren that Dr. Featherstun charges us with having connected with this nullifying procedure we did not say a word except that they were at Evanston. Our brother ought to learn to be more accurate in his statements, especially when he is making accusations.

The Doctor's effort to break the force of what we had to say about higher criticism and unsound teaching in the Northern Church is very weak. We rather think that there is some difference between officially issued Sunday school literature and the statements of a single preacher speaking only for himself. Nor did we rest our case alone on what The Bibliotheca Sacra said; we stated that Dr. J. Benson Hamilton in The Bible Champion had for months been devoting a large part of that splendid publication to pointing out the extent to which the Sunday school literature of the Church, North, is thus infected. No effort, so far as our knowledge extends, has been made to controvert his representations; so the Doctor's special pleading about giving the other side a chance to be heard is scarcely in order here. They have had months, and even years, in which to speak and have not effectively done so. We wonder if our brother knows, that in view of the existing situation, an effort was made to have the last General Conference of the Northern Church make a declaration in favor of orthodoxy and sound teaching and that it most signally failed.

Our correspondent's effort to place the question of woman suffrage on a parity with prohibition as a moral issue is laughable. We said nothing against woman suffrage in our former discussion, and we will not do so now. We have come to regard it as inevitable, and as one of the things that we may as well accept. But it is purely a political question. If it was a proper thing for the Northern General Conference to deal with, the question of Negro suffrage would be equally so. There is no getting around this fact. But its action with reference to woman suffrage was not the only thing that we cited to show that the Northern Church is political in spirit. We spoke of the great demonstration made at the mere mention of the name of Mr. Charles E. Hughes, but the Doctor saw fit to pass that over. He ought to have illuminated that point also.

Dr. Featherstun pays an enthusiastic tribute to the twenty-five Commissioners of the Church, South, and intimates that nobody need henceforth give himself any further concern about the matter of Church union. It is easy to make such sweeping declaration. But, as a matter of fact, the very greatest of the leaders whose adequacy to cope with the situation he stresses do not by any means share his confidence and do not desire to see the Church lulled into a state of fancied security. There are undoubtedly some very fine men on our Commission, but the extreme unionists are claiming a decided majority of its members. We will not now permit ourself to be drawn into a discussion of its personnel, but the Editor may later issue a pamphlet on his own personal responsibility in which he shall have some very plain things to say concerning several phases of this great issue, including this one. Of one thing the readers of the Advocate may feel assured, namely, that the Editor will work in constant harmony with the conservative advocates of unification upon the basis of the Oklahoma City plan, both on and off the Commission. He has done nothing in a haphazard way and will not do so. He has not claimed to be representing any particular Conference, though he knows that a host of our preachers and people are with him in his views. But neither in this, nor in any other matter, has he ever for one moment in determining his course stopped to consider whether he had the majority with him or not. He has simply sought to stand for what he conceived to be the truth and the highest and best interests of the Church and Kingdom, without regard to the popularity or unpopularity of his utterances. We wonder if Dr. Featherstun thinks he has represented the whole of the Mississippi Conference in his present deliverance.

What our correspondent says about raking up past issues does not apply to us—we have had, so far, but little occasion to discuss the occurrences of bygone decades. But we fully agree with Bishop Candler that no worthy planning can be done for the future by disregarding the past, and if at any time we should feel there is a reason to review the former transactions of the two Churches, we shall do so without the slightest hesitancy. In the handling of a vast issue like this, which involves the very life of great denominations, nobody has a right to put padlocks on the lips of his brethren and say, "This discussion must be carried on in my way." The right of free speech belongs to all.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. V. Breithaupt will assist Rev. J. M. Boykin in a series of revival services at Covington, La., early in October.

"My work is making progress. Truly, the Lord is with us." So writes Rev. H. T. Young, our capable pastor at Amite City, La.

Rev. G. P. McKeown, of Edwards, Miss., says: "Things are moving along very nicely in this charge. Crops are short, but the people are hopeful."

Bishop Murrah left the latter part of last week for points in Kentucky. He has charge of the Louisville Conference and is getting his work in hand in that territory.

Rev. W. C. Lewis, of Hermitage, Arkansas, writes as follows: "I should like to hear from any Lewis, or any one connected with the Lewis family. In writing, please tell about ancestors."

In a personal letter to the Editor, Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, says: "Brother Coleman, our pastor, is much loved and respected by our people, and I think our church is doing well."

After a remarkably strenuous year, Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Columbus District (North Miss.), is taking a brief respite from his labors this month. He has made a fine record in his present field of service.

From Butte, Montana, Rev. S. R. Steele writes: "Please change my paper to Helena, Montana, which is my new charge. I appreciate your stand on the union question, as I do also the articles of Dr. S. A. Steel and Bishop Candler."

Rev. Paul H. Grice, pastor of the Mentorum charge, requests us to state that, owing to a rearrangement of postal routes, his post-office will hereafter be Perkinston, Miss., Route No. 1. The Mentorum post-office has been discontinued.

After a pleasant visit to New York, Dr S. H. Werlein, the brilliant pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of this city, has returned to New Orleans. Dr. Werlein occupied his pulpit last Sunday and delivered two forceful and impressive sermons.

After an extended trip to the Pacific Coast, which included visits to Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, Mr. Edmond Taylor and Mr. J. D. Barbee have returned to Greenville, Miss., where they reside. Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Barbee are still in Colorado.

After a delightful stay of several weeks in Chicago and other Northern points, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Jones have returned to their home at Greenwood, Miss. They are among the stanchest members of our Church in that live and growing center of commercial activity.

Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the Parker Memorial Church of New Orleans, has been steadily at his post nearly all summer. He is one of the choicest young men of the Louisiana Conference and never fails to give a good account of himself in the field in which he labors.

We are indebted to the following friends, to whom acknowledgment has not been made elsewhere, for two or more subscriptions sent in within the last few days: Rev. C. E. Downer, Eucutta,

Miss., 4; Rev. Sam Q. Bass, Corinth, Miss., 2; Brother J. A. Patterson, Tyro, Miss., 2.

On account of ill health, Rev. T. V. Peters, pastor of our church in McDonoghville, has been relieved of his charge, and will go to Tennessee to recuperate. He will be succeeded by Rev. L. I. McCain, who is one of the most promising young ministers in the Louisiana Conference.

Pastor R. O. Brown and the Methodists of Clarksdale, Miss., are to be congratulated upon having let the contract for a new church in that progressive city which is to cost more than $50,000. See Brother Brown's statement which appears on another page in this issue of the Advocate.

The overhauling of our attractive house of worship at Biloxi, Miss., is nearing completion, and the congregation, which for some time has been worshiping in the Sunday school room, is expected to occupy the main auditorium next Sunday. Dr. H. F. Tolle serves an interesting and active flock and is in high favor with them.

This issue of the Advocate has been brought out amid many difficulties. Last Monday (Labor Day) was a legal holiday, and Henry Leon, our colored factotum in the office, had a fall at his home last Friday night, which has incapacitated him for work. He is about the most indispensable man connected with the publication of the Advocate.

Rev. D. W. Babb, our pastor at Crawford, Miss., reports that excellent progress is being made on the construction of our new church at that place. Crawford is one of the choice communities in East Mississippi, and Methodism has always been strongly represented there. Brother Babb says: "I am with you in your stand on the union issue."

Mrs. R. P. Neblett and her fine quartet of sons, who have been summering at Monteagle, Tenn., were due to return to their home at Ripley, Miss., this week. Writing from there, Brother Neblett, who naturally had strayed to the highlands where they were tarrying, says: "They have had a most pleasant sojourn here, and will go home fat, well and strong."

The Editor's residence address will henceforth be 2627 Baronne Street, instead of 5911 Coliseum Street. He passed through the ordeal of moving last week, being at the same time annoyed with a mild attack of appendicitis, from which malady he has long been an occasional sufferer. Moving when one has no parishioners to lend him a helping hand is far from being an easy task.

In sending in his fourth round of appointments, Rev. H. S. Spragins, presiding elder of the Greenville District, says: "It now looks as if we shall round out the year's work in fairly good shape. In the southern part of the district, the continued rains, with the ravages of the boll weevil, have cut the crops short, but in the northern section of our territory the crops are very good."

Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Drew, Miss., says: "Our recent meeting at Drew was one of the best I have ever held. The Wisdom Sisters were with us to lead the singing and we had great crowds. The moral and religious sentiment here is good. We have received 27 members into the Church, 12 family altars have been erected, and there is an upward trend in all the departments of our Church work."

In a recent issue of the Bolivar County Commercial the work of our pastor at Cleveland, Miss., Rev. E. R. Smoot, was highly commended, the writer speaking in enthusiastic terms of him both as a preacher and pastor. His Sunday school is said to have gone above 165 for several Sabbaths in succession. We are pleased to learn that so large a measure of success is crowning the labors of this gifted young minister.

Writing on August 28, Rev. W. W. Perry, of Boyce, La., sends us a subscription to the Advocate, and the following note: "This is my 75th subscription sent this year. Yesterday was a good day with us at Boyce, as we had 80 in the Sunday school. We received 6 new members into the Church, making 75 additions that we have had this year, and there are others in sight. Our people greatly appreciate the Advocate."

Rev. J. D. Simpson, our efficient pastor at Louisville, Miss., says: "We are pulling down our old church in Louisville and hope to begin work on a new house of worship at an early date. We have a beautiful lot, well located, and about $10,000 in cash and good subscriptions, with more to follow. Our people have a mind to build." We are pleased to have this good news from the county-seat of the fine old county of Winston.

Under date of August 29, Rev. E. J. Coker sends us the following note from McComb, Miss.: "Mrs. R. H. Felder, one of the oldest and most highly esteemed members of the Topisaw (Miss.) charge, died on August 28. Sister Felder was the mother of Mrs. W. M. Sullivan, the wife of our pastor at Yazoo City. A suitable memoir will be sent you later." We regret to learn of the death of this faithful servant of the Master, and we extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Rev. I. H. Felts, the able leader of our forces in the Holly Springs District, sends the following items of interest: "Dr. H. G. Henderson has returned home much improved. His people are delighted. Rev. W. R. Lott, of Kilmichael, his assistant pastor, has made an excellent impression. The wife of Rev. J. R. James, of Abbeville, is seriously ill. Many friends will remember her at the throne of grace. Some good meetings have been held, which ought to be reported in the Advocate."

Rev. W. V. Shearer, of Shannon, Miss., sends us the following note, under date of August 28: "I have just closed two great meetings in my charge, each continuing five days. Both communities were generally revived, a number of family altars were erected, and 44 members were added to the Church. Evangelist J. H. Bell, of Columbus, Miss., was with me in these two meetings, and he is now here at Shannon, where he is doing some very fine gospel preaching. Open your pulpits to Brother Bell, brethren, and he will help your people and you, too."

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, of Donaldsonville, forwards to us the following message: "Baby Lowrey seems to be holding it against you, that in the Advocate of last week you said he was a 'five-pounder,' when it should have been a 'nine-pounder.' While he says it is all right since you knew no better, he expects to show you how much you missed it when he sees you." We regret to have done the "young man" this injustice, but we followed the text of Brother Lowrey's former letter closely in this instance and "have the goods on him." It is strange how one can sometimes write what one does not mean to say.

Rev. H. G. Roberts, of Coldwater, Miss., writes: "We are in a position to help some young man who may wish to begin preparing for the work of the ministry, or some other worthy boy, who may desire to work his way through an eleventh-grade school. The churches and the public school here have combined and are ready to employ a janitor at a salary of $25 a month. A young man could easily do this work and attend school. We have a faculty of six excellent teachers. I should be glad to represent the right young man desiring this position who will write me at once. He should enclose a recommendation from his pastor or presiding elder."

We take the following from a recent issue of the Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative: "Rev. J. H. Smith met with a painful accident on Wednesday night, August 30, when he was thrown from his buggy and had his arm broken. The accident occurred when Mr. Smith was returning from Long View, where he had been conducting a meeting that had lasted about a week. The entire community, irrespective of church membership, regrets this unfortunate occurrence and wishes for this beloved friend and pastor a speedy recovery." A letter from Brother Smith on September 5 brought the good news that he is improving rapidly. He has our sympathy in the misfortune which has befallen him.

A pretty home wedding was celebrated at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Pate, 1454 St. Mary Street, this city, on the evening of August 30, when their daughter, Miss Sue Ellen Yongue, and Mr. Howard Tarbett Reese, of Birmingham, Ala., were united in marriage, the Editor of the Advocate officiating. The bride was the only child of the late Ernest V. Yongue, who was well known in North Mississippi, and her mother, Mrs. Pate, before her first marriage was Miss Florence Oury, a daughter of Mr. T. H. Oury, of Carrollton, Miss. Mrs. Reese is a most attractive and charming young woman, and is a worthy representative of her excellent ancestry. After the ceremony, delightful refreshments were served. The happy young couple will probably reside for a time at Greenwood, Miss.

We have on our desk a card which reads as follows: "You are cordially invited to attend the opening of the Sunday school rooms of the Bunkie Methodist Church on Sunday, September 3, at 3:30 p.m. Building Committee—Mrs. W. M. Mantiply, Mrs. B. S. Randol, Mrs. H. T. Finnell, Mr. C. P. Taliaferro, Mr. J. E. Williams, Mrs. S. S. Thomas, Mr. W. M. Mantiply; R. S. Walton, pastor." We congratulate Brother Walton and his worthy associate workers upon this substantial achievement. The sermon on this occasion was preached by Rev. W. H. Coleman.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Within two weeks the twenty-fifth session of Millsaps College will begin. At the present writing the outlook is the brightest for several years. This should be made the best year in the history of the College and thus close the first quarter-century with the largest attendance of any previous year. The members of the faculty have all been busy during the summer in teaching or studying in the universities of the North and East. Those who are away are returning that they may be here and ready for the opening.

Professor Noble, the head of the newly established Department of Education, has returned from Columbia University, and is getting ready for the initial work of his department. The Department of Physics and Astronomy has installed a wireless receiving outfit during the summer. It will be used in getting the time signals from Washington and in demonstrating the principles of wireless telegraphy to the students of the advanced course in Physics.

The Summer School this year was conducted on a more extensive plan than heretofore and the attendance was much larger. The prospect is that in a few years the Summer School will be developed to large proportions.

The writer has for a long time held the view that there is much economic waste of time in connection with our educational institutions, especially of the college and university grade. Why should there be such a long time of idleness of buildings and workers? Why not continue the session throughout the year, with, say, four weeks for vacation? There are few enterprises with their plants idle so long as our educational institutions. The remedy for this would be to establish regular summer terms, and thus allow the students to finish in a shorter time. Lack of space prevents a more extended discussion of this most vital question.

Professor Huddleston has about finished rebuilding his house, which was destroyed by the tornado on the morning of June 6.

The writer was obliged to give up his work in the Summer School for a portion of the time in August, as he underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Baptist Hospital on July 30.

The senior class of the approaching session will probably be the second largest in the history of the college. There will probably be 21 or 22 members of this class to return. The largest class to be graduated was that of 1910 with 25 members. These figures do not include the members of the Law class. With them, the class of 1910 consists of 39 members.

Sept. 1, 1916. G. C. HARRELL.

TO OUR PREACHERS.

The management of this Advocate has decided to let our preachers and agents offer six months trial subscriptions at 50 cents during August, September and October. This offer will be withdrawn on the 10th of November, 1916. Subscriptions must be sent in in clubs and money orders used in making remittances so as to save expense.

In soliciting new subscribers, please explain to them that the six months' subscriptions are taken with the understanding that, after their expiration, the regular rate of $1.50 will be charged for annual subscriptions unless they are ordered canceled.

We are making this offer for a three-fold purpose:

First—To build up our subscription list before the annual meeting of the Publishing Committee.

Second—To get funds to help tide us over the summer and fall months.

Third—To induce our Methodist people to take the Conference Organ and read it.

The hearts of Mr. L. W. and Mrs. Mabel Goodwin, of near Goodwater, Miss., were made happy by the advent on April 27, 1914, of little RALPH CARLTON into tbeir home. While his life's mission was brief, his winsome and cunning ways caused him to be loved by all who knew him. After a brief illness with colitis, and when medical skill witb train nursing had been exhausted, his spirit wafted its way heavenward on May 12, 1916. The interment was made in Pleasant Grove Cemetery, the service being conducted by the writer.

As we read in God's Word, "A little child shall lead them," may this truth be demonstrated in the lives of the parents and loved ones by their so living as to meet this little lamb of His fold in that home over there, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

"There is no flock however watched and tended,
But one dead lamb is there;
There is no fireside, howe'er defended
But has one vacant chair."

CHAS. E. DOWNER.

Mrs. E. C. THOMAS was born in Georgia sixty-three years ago. Her father was a prominent Methodist, being a steward in his church for fifty-two years. She joined the Church when quite young and was an earnest, faithful member to the end of her life. In 1867, she was married to W. F. Thomas, whom she preceded to the glory land just one month. She bad seen three of her children come to maturity, but four had died of scarlet fever. Her life was full of good deeds, and there were many who felt at her death that tbeir best friend was gone. The poor and the friendless, tbe sick and the suffering, were the special objects of her sympathy. Multitudes in that day will rise up to call her blessed, just as tbere were scores at her funeral who felt impelled to render silent yet eloquent praise to her useful life. The nigbt was never too dark, nor the way too lonely, for her to respond to the call of need and suffering. Like her Lord, she went about doing good, drying the tear of the penitent by a word of encouragement, and giving hope to the despairing by her presence and ber faith. The world is poorer since she went away, but heaven is richer because she is there. E. S. LEWIS.

W. F. THOMAS was born on Feb. 8, 1846, at Baton Rouge, La., and died at Durant, Miss., on Sunday, Aug. 20, 1916. At an early age be went with his father's family to Georgia, where he grew to manhood. When but a boy he enlisted in the 63rd Georgia regiment and served for some time in the army under General John B. Gordon. He was at the battle of Gettysburg. Immediately after the war, he entered the service of one of the railroads in Georgia, and at twenty-one years of age he was put in charge of an engine. For almost fifty years he continued at the throttle, being for thirty-three years in the employ of tbe Illinois Central Railroad. He was married on Sept. 24, 1867, to Mrs. E. C. Thomas, who died just one month prior to the death of her husband. In 1883 he came to Mississippi and for the past twenty-five years bad lived at Durant. He was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith. Years ago he joined the Church and ever since he had been an earnest, consecrated member. He was liberal, charitable and kind. His spirit was devout in the worship of God. From the altar in his home church, while leading the congregation in the closing prayer, he was called into the presence of God. His end was peace.

ACTION OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES CONCERNING EMORY UNIVERSITY.

(Minutes of a Joint Meeting of the Boards of Education, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, in the interest of Emory University.)

The Joint Meeting of the Boards of Education of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, called to meet at Jackson, Miss., March 17, 1916, assembled in the Galloway Memorial Church at the time set, 2:30 p. m., and was called to order by Rev. W. H. Lewis, President of the Board of Education of the Mississippi Conference. After singing "A Charge to Keep I Have," and a prayer by Bishop Candler, permanent organization was effected by the election of N. B. Harmon, Chairman, and T. H. Lipscomb, Secretary.

The Secretary read the report of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Education relative to tbe subject before the meeting, as follows:

"Inasmuch as it is proposed to name the Law Department of Emory University the Lamar Law School, after Mississippi's great lawyer and statesman, your Board recommends that the suggestion be endorsed with appreciation by our Conference; and that jointly with the Mississippi Conference a campaign be launched to erect a building for this department bearing this name. It recommends that the Executive Committee of the Board of Education, assisted by the Conference Secretary of Education, and in conjunction with a like committee from the Mississippi Conference be authorized to inaugurate a campaign to this end."

Representatives of the Mississippi Conference Board agreed that the official representation of the Mississippi Conference should be vested in the Executive Committee of the Board of Education, it being authorized by the Conference to transact all such business in the interim of the Conference sessions. On motion the visiting brethren present were invited to take part in the discussions.

Bishop Warren A. Candler was invited to address the body, and in an informal address set forth the necessity and need of a University by the Church and the present status of Emory University. Following the address by tbe Bishop, a report from the Committee on Recommendations appointed at an informal morning session was read, as follows:

"Your Committee on Recommendations, appointed at the informal session of the morning, presents the following suggestions for your consideration:

1. That a Campaign be inaugurated on behalf of Emory University, as provided for in the report of its Board of Education at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference.

2. That a Commissioner be selected at once to prosecute this campaign, with the hearty co-operation of the Boards of Education of the two Conferences.

On motion the report was considered item by item. The first item was read by the Secretary, recommending the inaugurating of a campaign. It was spoken to favorably by H. S. Spragins, R. A. Meek, T. H. Lipscomb, J. R. Countiss, and I. W. Cooper. On motion it was declared to be the sense of the meeting that the proposed campaign be inaugurated.

The second item was read by the Secretary, calling for the appointment of a Commissioner at once to inaugurate and carry forward the campaign. It was approved as read.

The third item was read, discussed, and approved.

The fourth item was read and approved.

It was suggested by Dr. Meek that the Committee to be named prepare a ringing address to the Church within our bounds on the campaign enterprised; after which the general session adjourned.

Executive Session.

On adjournment, the official representatives of the two Conferences met to formulate the plans outlined and approved at the Joint Session; W. H. Lewis, Chairman; T. H. Lipscomb, Secretary.

Bishop Candler expressed a desire that Rev. Robert Selby of the Mississippi Conference be named as Commissioner for Emory University for Mississippi, his expenses to be met by the University.

The recommendations of the Committee of the morning, concurred in by the general meeting in the afternoon, were unanimously adopted as read.

On motion, the Executive Committees recommended Robert Selby as the man needed for Commissioner; and ordered the following telegram sent Bishop Atkins, in charge, by the Secretary:

We request that you appoint at once Robert Selby Commissioner for Emory University for Mississippi Methodism.

H. S. Spragins (later changed to T. H. Lipscomb) and W. W. Woollard were named as campaign committeemen from the North Mississippi Conference. I. W. Cooper and J. T. Leggett were named as Campaign Committeemen from the Mississippi Conference.

W. H. LEWIS, Chairman.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER GRAVES.

Dear Doctor: During the week ending August 19, I was with Rev. W. B. Baker, the popular pastor of Sherman Circuit, in a revival. We had a fine meeting at Liberty. More than 30 members were added to the various Churches.

Last week I held my own meeting at Prospect, on the Monpelier Circuit. There were over 50 conversions and reclamations and 25 persons united with our church there. Several will join elsewhere. W. L. GRAVES.

FILIPINOS ACTIVE IN SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION.

Filipinos in the island of Iloilo are doing Sunday school extension work. After teaching at the children's Sunday school from 7 to 8 in the morning and attending the adult Sunday school, the pastor and some eight or ten others go to the houses of different members, where they hold Sunday school classes for both children and adults who can not be reached by the central school. This is where the picture post-cards from America come in as a means of attracting attendance and carrying the gospel message.

HOW I CURED MY CATARRH

TOLD IN A SIMPLE WAY

Without Apparatus, Inhalers, Salves, Lotions, Harmful Drugs, Smoke or Electricity.

HEALS DAY AND NIGHT

It is a new way. It is something absolutely different. No lotions, sprays or sickly smelling salves or creams. No atomizer or any apparatus of any kind. Nothing to smoke or inhale. No steaming or rubbing or injections. No electricity or vibration or massage. No powder; no plasters; no keeping in the house. Nothing of that kind at all. Something new and different, something delightful and healthful, something instantly successful. You do not have to wait, and linger and pay out a lot of money. You can stop it overnight—and I will gladly tell you how FREE. I am not a doctor and this is not a so-called doctor's prescription—but I am cured and my friends are cured, and you can be cured. Your sufferings will stop at once like magic.

I AM FREE -- YOU CAN BE FREE

My catarrh was filthy and loathsome. It made me ill. It dulled my mind. It undermined my health and was weakening my will. The hawking, coughing, spitting made me obnoxious to all, and my foul breath and disgusting habits made even my loved ones avoid me secretly. My delight in life was dulled and my faculties impaired. I knew that in time it would bring me to an untimely grave, because every moment of the day and night it was slowly yet surely sapping my vitality.

But I found a cure, and I am ready to tell you about it FREE. Write me promptly.

RISK JUST ONE CENT

Send no money, just your name and address on a postal card. Say: "Dear Sam Katz: Please tell me how you cured your catarrh and how I can cure mine." That's all you need to say, I will understand, and I will write to you with complete information, FREE at once. Do not delay. Send postal card or write me a letter today. Don't think of turning this page until you have asked for this wonderful treatment that can do for you what it has done for me.

THE NEW COURSES OF STUDY AND THE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL.

The Correspondence School sends affectionate greetings to its many students and alumni throughout our land from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The great majority of our itinerant preachers have passed through its doors and thus largely increased their equipment for life. We crave for all our young brethren the great benefits of this method of study. Shall we not as preachers of the gospel use every means to qualify ourselves for the most delicate and responsible work on earth in this most critical and exacting age?

It is a great joy to our faculty to note the steady improvement in the papers of most of our students. The School has had one of its best years. Never to our knowledge have more numerous and cordial and unsolicited testimonials been received from our students as to their pleasure and profit in their studies. The work of instruction is done by the Faculty of the Candler School of Theology of Emory University. This fact guarantees the high grade of supervision which our pupils enjoy. We conduct not only the courses of study for Admission on Trial and for the four years of Conference study, but also Graduate Courses for mature ministers and also courses for local preachers. Sunday School workers and teachers will find these stimulating and helpful. Our theological seminaries give credit on their degrees for a certain amount of this correspondence study.

Our faculty has prepared the Instructions for the new and improved Course of Study as announced by the College of Bishops to take effect at the beginning of the Conference year, and we invite all interested, whether or not they have taken the old courses of study, to enroll for these new ones. These new courses of study will be found exceedingly interesting and helpful.

Write for catalogue, brethren (or sisters—we have several lady students), and send in your name promptly for enrollment. Address Correspondence School, Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Ga.

THE CREOLES OF LOUISIANA, the descendants of the original Spanish and French settlers, prided themselves upon their hair—and rightly they should—for it was they who first knew the secret of beautiful hair, the one great successful remedy for hair diseases and the greatest of all hair foods: La Creole Hair Dressing. The recipe was kept a profound secret by the race until about fifty years ago, but now you can reap the benefits of their early discoveries by using "La Creole" hair dressing, the very best dressing for keeping the hair fluffy, light and beautiful.

This wonderful preparation of the Creole race not only cleanses the scalp from all disease and filth, but also renews the life of the hair; makes it light and fluffy; restores to the hair its natural color and original lustre and supplies the hair with oil, food which it requires. No house should be without it. Ask your dealer for it. Price $1.00. Manufactured by VAN VLEET-MANSFIELD DRUG CO., Memphis, Tenn.

Arrange to be alone with God, heart to heart, ten minutes in the morning, and again for as many every evening. Surely this is not too much to give up to secure eternal life.—Fenelon.

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE ARAB REVOLT.

What is the meaning of the revolt of the Arabs against Turkish domination and the passing of the sacred Moslem shrines of Mecca and Medina out of Turkish into Arab hands? Many are asking this significant question. Does it mean that the unity and cohesion of the Moslem world is on the wane and that the military power of Turkey, which has given the drive to the Moslem propaganda, can no longer be relied upon? And with the breaking of the Turkish military power, will not the pride of Islam be so humbled that a day of new opportunity may dawn for Christianity in Moslem lands?

READY RESPONSE OF AFRICAN BOYS.

"Without exception, my recent visit to the Bodine Training School for Boys, at Kambini, covered the best week of my missionary experience," writes Superintendent W. C. Tervil of Inhambane District. "We held services every evening and found the students remarkably responsive. From the first meeting a spirit of deep heart-searching was evident. Many came to the altar each night, some asking forgiveness for sin and others a larger blessing. Not a few pledged themselves definitely to the work of soul-winning, and scores sought the Holy Spirit's power to equip them for service. We devoted the afternoons to personal work with the boys, who came confessing their sins and seeking advice."

"WHY HAS NO ONE COME BEFORE?"

Dr. G. W. Chamberlain, one of the greatest missionaries in Brazil, was preaching in the interior. When the sermon was over an old man approached the missionary and asked: "Young man, is what you say true, that Jesus Christ came into this world to save sinners?" "That is the gospel," replied the missionary. "Let me ask you a question; was your father a Christian?" "Yes," replied the missionary. "Then why did he not come and tell us?"

Commenting on the above, Rev. E. C. Taylor, a veteran Baptist missionary to Brazil, asks this searching question: "How can we, who have the light, withhold it from those who have it not? People who sit in darkness are surprised to know we possess the truth and fail to pass it on. We are drinking of the water of life and neighboring nations are perishing for lack of it."

There must be moments of solitary communion if there are to be hours of strenuous service and a life of continual consecration.—Alexander Maclaren.

Might Have Saved Hundreds of Dollars.

Hundreds of dollars are wasted by individuals on meritless rheumatism remedies. Such a one was Joseph L. Boehmer of Nashville, Tenn. In fact, Mr. Boehmer wrote: "Renwar Rheumatic Salts is priceless. Had I known about "RENWAR" several years ago, I would have saved hundreds of dollars. One 50-cent bottle did more good than all sanitarium treatment. I am certain it cured me." We have many original letters like Mr. Boehmer wrote on file in our office. If you suffer from rheumatism or constipation, get a bottle of RENWAR, 50c, at your druggist. Money refunded if it fails to relieve. Prepared and guaranteed by Warner Drug Co., Nashville, Tenn.

"Never lose your temper. Nobody wants it; all have enough of their own."

In no former war have the animals played so large a part as they have in this now raging. Besides the horses, mules, and oxen, there are the dogs serving in many ways, the cats ridding the trenches of rats and mice, the carrier pigeons, and even the white mice of the submarines which are taken aboard to give warning of any escape of gas. Well did Everett say, "We are all in the same boat, animals and men." —Our Dumb Animals.

ELDERLY WOMEN SAFEGUARDED

Tell Others How They Were Carried Safely Through Change of Life.

Durand, Wis.—"I am the mother of fourteen children and I owe my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I was 45 and had the Change of Life, a friend recommended it and it gave me such relief from my bad feelings that I took several bottles. I am now well and healthy and recommend your Compound to other ladies." —Mrs. MARY RIDGWAY, Durand, Wis.

A Massachusetts Woman Writes:

Blackstone, Mass. — "My troubles were from my age, and I felt awfully sick for three years. I had hot flashes often and frequently suffered from pains. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now am well." —Mrs. PIERRE COURNOYER, Box 239, Blackstone, Mass.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness, should be heeded by middle-aged women. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has carried many women safely through this crisis.

you must pay proper attention to diet and living conditions, and get plenty of rest and fresh air and good food. Many a life claimed by this affection might have been saved by timely attention to these matters. In many cases, however a rundown system needs assistance. NORTH MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney,
Sardis, Miss.

Some reasons for using the graded lessons (taken from the Pupil, the Teacher, and the School, by Barclay):

1. Only graded lessons meet the needs of a developing life.

2. Only graded lessons can make the most of the special religious opportunities in the life.

3. Only graded lessons can give to the pupil a sense of progression from year to year.

4. Only graded lessons can be correlated with the education of the public schools.

5. Only graded lessons enables the teacher to be a specialist. There are other reasons, but these are sufficient to all interested in the religious education of the child to use nothing else. These lessons begin the first of October. Send to Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., for an order blank and order the complete lessons. Teacher's Text Book, large pictures for the Beginners. The little picture card we have used for years is almost valueless.

The General Sunday School Board has agreed to let our Conference have the services of Miss Minnie Kennedy, elementary specialist, for the first ten days in November to hold district institutes for our elementary workers, provided we pay her traveling expenses to and from Nashville. Two districts have applied for her services—the Aberdeen and Sardis Districts. It is in order for the other districts to write me at once. Miss Kennedy knows her business and can do the work we want done.

The following is a report from the treasurer of our Sunday School Board: The Aberdeen District has reported $107 from Children's Day. Thirteen charges have made no report. On assessment for Sunday School Board, $25. The largest amount reported from Children's Day is $17.35 from Verona.

Corinth District, $161 from Children's Day; ten charges no report. The largest amount is from New Albany Circuit, $27.20. On assessment, $33.

Columbus District, $79 from Children's Day; twelve charges no report. The largest amount from Children's Day is $24 from Columbus, First Church. On assessment, $29.

Durant District, $154 from Children's Day; twelve charges no report. The largest amount reported is from Black Hawk, $23.75. On assessment, $54.

Greenville District, $112 from Children's Day; eleven charges no report. Raised on assessment, nothing. The largest amount raised on Children's Day, $18.85 from Shelby and Duncan.

Holly Springs District, $233 from Children's Day; nine charges no report. The largest amount is from Water Valley, First Church, $39. Nothing on assessment.

Sardis District, $158 from Children's Day; ten charges no report. The largest amount raised is $26.45 by Courtland Circuit. On assessment, $81.

Winona District, $74 from Children's Day; fifteen charges no report. The largest amount reported is $17.05 by Moorhead. On assessment, $2.18.

Add these figures up and see what we have got to do in the next 90 days.

THE SOUTH TO-DAY.

Mr. H. W. Hicks, General Secretary of the Missionary Education Movement, in a recent letter to the Educational Secretary, says:

"May I add a word about Dr. Moore's book, "The South To-day?" I have read it with the very greatest interest since it came from the press and have coveted for it the largest possible use among the denominations in the South this year. I feel sure that any effort which may be put forth to introduce the use of this book widely in the churches of your denomination will yield splendid results. In addition to use as a book for reading and a book for study in Mission Study classes, could it not be used in many churches in a series of eight consecutive weekly prayer meetings? We are finding that ministers who are keeping abreast of the times are increasingly ready to base their remarks in prayer meetings on the contents of books like this, always reserving, of course, time for brief discussion and considerable prayer. Is it not true that many prayer meetings are without power because they have no specific objective such as would be involved if the study of such a book as Dr. Moore's were to be carried on in a series of mid-week prayer meetings for the purpose of stimulating prayer?"

HELPFUL BOOKS FOR OUTSIDE READING.

Because our theme of mission study for 1916-17 is one of such absorbing interest to the world to-day, we are fortunate in having many books on the subject of Latin America which will be most helpful in pursuing our course of study this year. We note a few of these: "South American Problems," by Robert E. Speer, 75 cts.; "The Continent of Opportunity," by Francis E. Clark, $1:50; "The Two Americas," by Gen. Raphael Reyes, $2.50; "Reports of Congress on Christian Work in Latin America," three volumes, containing reports in full of eight commissions, with discussions, $2.50; "Report of Regional Conferences," one volume, cloth, $1.

In addition to the many books which have been published on the subject, the current secular and religious magazines contain articles on Latin America.

WITH THE JUNIORS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Booneville comes to the front for a prominent place on the Honor Roll this quarter (second). Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, who is in charge of this society, brings things to pass.

Miss Linnie Barcroft does a most beautiful work in her Mission Study Classes in Tupelo. There are four classes arranged according to ages and conditions and they work through, enjoying every moment of time. Miss Barcroft has many original and charming methods for the children. If some of our women will write to Miss Barcroft and adopt some of her suggestions the Mission Study hour would be less of a problem.

In Durant the Young People take charge of the Junior work. This is fine.

The Brooksville Juniors are fortunate, indeed, to have Mrs. M. Perry in charge of their work, and it is needless to say that they are the proud possessors of a beautiful Honor Roll certificate. The other Honor Roll Juniors of 1915 are Macon, Eupora, Grenada, Winona, and Starkville. We are looking for a long list this year.

The Aberdeen Juniors are being looked after by the pastor's wife and our Conference First Vice President—Mrs. L. W. Baker, both very busy women—until one of those good women up there can feel called upon to take up the work.

The Ackerman Juniors have greatly enjoyed the "Illustrated Lectures" on Missionary and Bible subjects, which their progressive young pastor, Rev. Chas. McGehee gives from time to time.

The Starkville Juniors will have a Mite Box opening and experience meeting at the residence of Mrs. T. W. Woodward the latter part of the month. The "experience" telling will be on "How We Made Our Money." Try one with your children.

Mrs. Clara Thompson, of Macon, keeps her young workers busy and interested in many ways—making little booklets upon different subjects, posters and other things. This is splendid, and an idea well worth trying.

There are 69 Junior societies recorded in the Second Vice President's Book, and only 23 reported this last quarter. Nineteen have not reported this year. What are the Second Vice Presidents doing all this time? One Bible Study class is reported. Three Junior Divisions have been organized this quarter: one in Water Valley, one at Dublin, and one at Tutwiler.

Grenada reports 33 members in their Junior Society and 21 subscribers to the Young Christian Worker. Let all who think that this is perfectly splendid, hold up your hand. Thank you! Every hand was up.

So, now let every Society get busy, and we can soon double our subscription list.

There are 18 Mission Study Classes reported. This is good, and we could have a better report if you would start a mission study class with YOUR Juniors.

Mrs. S. F. RILEY.

NEW AUXILIARY AT HIAWANEE.

Mrs. C. R. McQueen, District Secretary of the Meridian District, neither "slumbers nor sleeps," but despite the hot weather keeps about her Father's business. She has recently organized an auxiliary at Hiawanee with 11 members and reports 8 subscribers to The Voice. Isn't that a fine showing?

INTERESTING ITEMS ABOUT LATIN AMERICA.

Latin America, as considered in the Panama Congress, consists of Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico, and Central and South America. Its population is about 80,000,000, distributed as follows: Whites, 18,000,000; Indians, 17,000,000; Negroes, 6,000,000; mixed (white and Indian), 30,000,000; mixed (white and Negro), 8,000,000; mixed (Negro and Indian), 700,000; East Indian, Japanese and Chinese, 300,000. These people may roughly be divided into four groups:

1. A violent anti-clerical party, many of whom oppose any religion.

2. The atheists and skeptics, who think religion is comfortable for women and children and profitable for priests.

3. The dissatisfied, groping ones, who will pass on to cynicism and hardness of heart.

4. Those who are in a period of honest doubt, and the small group of Protestant Christians.

A social grouping divides the population into three classes: the Indians, the lower, or peon, class, and the aristocracy, or languid, class. Generally speaking, there is only a small middle class.

From the Field

Fernwood, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been trying to get a little time to write a note to the Advocate for several weeks, but have been so much on the go that I have not had an opportunity to do so. Two weeks in my own meetings, one at the Topisaw Camp Ground, and one with Brother Thomas, of the Summit charge, have kept me husy. As was formally announced, Bishop Murrah came to us and dedicated our new church at Knoxo on the fifth Sunday in July. The congregation that came to that place on that occasion more than filled the house. The Bishop preached a great sermon on the Kingdom. The idea was that of the leaven and he more than measured up to his usual high standard. He demonstrated the fact that he is a great thinker and a great preacher.

We went over to Tylertown that evening and the Bishop preached for Brother Cottrell and his people. As a popular discourse, the one at the evening service would reach a higher mark. The theme of it was "True Prosperity." It was based on the First Psalm. This was a masterly effort and a great sermon. As one whose pleasure it has been to know and be associated with the Bishop, as it has been mine in the past, I can say that he is still adding to his already great stock of information and that he is a growing preacher still. Surely he promises many years of great service to the Church in the future. Mississippi Methodism is fortunate in having her own Bishop to supervise and plan for the Kingdom within its bounds during this year, and maybe more. He knows the work and his heart is it, and that renders him eminently the man to do the work.

Brother J. L. Sells, our pastor at Wiggins, came to us on Monday after the fifth Sunday in July and remained with us at Knoxo till Saturday evening, and he then went over to Kokomo Sunday morning and preached twice a day till Thursday evening of the first week in August. Brother Sells is a preacher of unusual ability. The preaching he does is of the teaching kind and might not bring a revival as quick as some, but it would come, and when it did come, it would last, for he lays a good foundation. The churches at both places were much revived and the spirit of Christianity was much improved. The seed sown by him will long remain and the people will love him ever hereafter.

The week I spent at Topisaw with Brother Coker and his good people, in company with Brother Harmon and Brother J. T. Lewis, will long remain a pleasant memory with me. They are royal-souled men and we had a good time. The hot weather was the only thing that marred the occasion. Brothers Thomas and Guinn of Summit and McComb came out and spent some time with us.

Our presiding elder, Dr. I. W. Cooper, was with us at Knoxo on the third Sunday and preached a great sermon, pleasing and edifying our people. Our people are always delighted when Dr. Cooper is among us. We are sorry that his term is to be so short. We wish that he could serve us in that place for the next four years. The Doctor is a popular man throughout the State, and especially so within the bounds of the Brookhaven district, where he is best known.

I spent last week with Brother Thomas at Pisgah, west of Summit, and we had a really good time and a good meeting. On Wednesday night I had the time of my life with one of my wisdom teeth. Dr. Steel and Dr. Holloman must speak softly. Just ask Brother Thomas. If this tooth brought wisdom, I paid a big price for what little I got. It surely costs dear, at that. Brother Thomas is a royal fellow and you can just keep an eye on him.

Well, you did not do as I asked you, to come and see us when the Bishop was with us. I think you have your hands full though keeping some of the brethren straight on the Union question. With the men who have been put on the commission to handle our end of the question, no one need lose a moment's sleep over the outcome. Not even Dr. S. A. Steel. He can just go hunting or off on a summer vacation and forbid any of the papers or other mails to be forwarded, and when he gets back things will be O. K. and the Church will be safe and sound. He will, too, provided he does not take sciatica or the toothache in the wisdom tooth.

I am to spend ten days, beginning next Sunday (Sept. 3), with Brother J. L. Decell, at Waynesboro in a meeting.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

FROM BROTHER BASS.

Dear Brother Meek: It has been some time since you had a line from me relative to my work, and I feel sure that you will give me room to make a short report of my labors for the past three weeks with Brother T. E. Yancey, on the Greenwood Springs charge. I assisted him in three meetings and held services for three days at another church. We found Brother Yancey a fine man to work with, and he has on his charge some excellent people. I believe that the pastor and people will bear me out in saying that there was a great work done in the church, which was very much needed.

My son, S. P. Bass, was with us two weeks, leading the singing to the satisfaction of all. He is now with Brother Bell and our pastor at Shannon.

I am ready to help any pastor who may need my help. May the Lord bless you and our great Church!

HOW SHIVAR MINERAL WATER RELIEVES RHEUMATISM.

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate lining of the joints, the heart and other organs. To cure Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of the physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, gall stones, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-M, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith two dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if it fails to benefit my case you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return promptly.
